Expansion Aids U of T Smith Says

A university building program involving the expenditure of $16,000,000 was outlined by President Sidney Smith in his opening address in Convocation Hall yesterday.

Denying that the University is cold and impersonal because of its size, Dr. Smith said the new increase in facilities will help students and professors to work together more efficiently.

Plan Unparalleled

The president commented on the building plans: "In all modesty we can declare that this programme is unmatched in the life of the University and indeed unparalleled in any Canadian university. These increased facilities will better enable the University to serve youth and truth."

Buildings for which plans have been made but on which construction has not yet started are: one for the School of Nursing, an addition to the heating plant, a men's residence for University College, a new library building, the Charles H. Best Institute for medical research, a women's building and an Arts building.

The Wallberg Memorial Building, the Burton Wing of the Physics Buildings, and the addition to the Mechanical Engineering Building have already have been completed. Construction has already begun on a new building for the Ontario College of Education, an Archives Building and the war memorial in the Soldiers' Tower.

Freshmen Cautioned

The freshmen among the audience of 1,300 were called by the president "the next link in the University's life." He said, "Today if you get off to a wrong start or if you get a distorted impression of the University, the chain will be thereby weakened."

Dr. Smith urged the new students to use the facilities and staff of the University to answer the question "why" as well as "what" and "how."

More specifically, he asked them to study the question "How Strong Are Ideas?" He said material progress has not led to greater happiness and security. Rather, he added, we seem to have lost our way.

"Modern times had seen the development of totalitarianism, with only one commandment: 'Thou shalt have no other gods before the state, the State Almighty.'"

President Sidney Smith welcomed incoming Freshmen in Convocation Hall yesterday. In his address he outlined building plans for the University unparalleled in any other Canadian university.

Campus Bagpipes Practise Skirling For Busy Year

Announcement of an organizational meeting of the University Pipe Band in the C.O.T.C. Drill Hall, September 27 at 7:30 p.m., was made by the band's executive recently.

The executive expected to carry through an even larger range of activities than it did last year. Last season the band's program included all rugby games, "pep rallies", the Armistice Day services and the C.O.T.C. Ball.

As usual, training classes in piping, drumming and highland dances would be held. The executive said coeds will be welcomed into the organization.

STUDENT HOUSING

The Student's Administrative Council Housing Service has greatly expanded its housing service this year and every effort is being made to provide accomodation for both married and single students. Information can be obtained at the Housing Service office in Hart House, phone MI. 5840, or at the Women's SAC Office in UC basement, phone MI. 8226.

Second War Honor Roll At The Soldiers' Tower To Be Completed Soon

Workmen in the arch of the Soldiers Tower are completing Varsity's War Memorial. It will be dedicated in the November 11th Remembrance Day services.

Carved in concrete blocks, an Honour Roll, designed and lettered to harmonize with the names in the First War memorial arcade, will commemorate those who died in the Second World War.

The smooth finish stone blocks of the arch were removed, the walls trued, then smoothed. The blocks have been waterproofed with asphalt to guard against damp and seepage. They are now being lowered into their sockets and cemented in place.

The Honour Roll will occupy both sides of the arch. A quotation from Milton's "Samson Agonistes" will be placed in the space above the lists.

Dr. Brown Of Victoria Resigns

President of the Victoria College since 1941, Dr. Walter T. Brown has retired, it was announced recently. Dean H. Bennet has been named temporary president until a successor will be appointed.

Originally scheduled to retire at the end of the current term, Dr. Brown suffered a slight stroke during the summer and was unable to resume duties.

Varsity Graduate

He joined the staff of Victoria College in 1911 as a professor in the department of philosophy and transferred to Yale in 1928 assuming the post of professor of religious philosophy. He returned as principal of Victoria College in 1932, a position he held until 1941 when Dr. Wallace, then president, died. Dr. Brown is a graduate of the University of Toronto.

Dean Bennet, a Victoria College graduate of 1915, obtained his Ph.D. in classics at the University of Chicago. He taught in the U.S. until 1932 when he came to Victoria College as professor of Latin. He was named registrar in 1934 and was appointed dean in 1944.

A committee appointed by the college Board of Regents will select a candidate for the presidential office, subject to the board's approval.

Press Management Shake-up Produces New Policy Change

The University Press has a new manager.

With the change in management, the University bookstore has adopted a new policy, publicized by blotters, placards and a streamer sign, which includes a 10 per cent discount to all students, new charge account plans and a uniform markup on American texts.

Rankin Replaces Burns

The Board of Governors has appointed Mr. Alec Rankin to replace Mr. A. G. Burns who was head of the University Press for 17 years. In an effort to reduce the cost of texts to University students, Rankin has instituted a 10 per cent discount on all text books sold to students for cash. Previously the only discount was one of 10 per cent on medical books.

Another innovation is the granting of credit to duly registered students. However, those using a charge account will not be given any discount on texts. After the end of February no further credit will be given until the following September.

Uniform Markup

This year American texts will be sold at the bookstore with a uniform markup of 10 per cent above the publishers' list price to cover shipping and handling costs. A further markup has been made necessary by the difference in exchange rates. Since, however, the 10 per cent discount offered to students also applies to textbooks imported from the U.S.A., the price of American books at the bookstore will approximate the list price.

In order to avoid misunderstanding, Mr. Rankin has pointed out that some books brought in from the States are not considered textbooks by customs authorities. Such books (dictionaries, for example) rise in price because of duties and sales tax as well as the 10 per cent markup to cover handling costs.

Criticism Unwarranted

Rankin said the new policy of the Press is a sincere effort on the part of the President and the Board of Governors to reduce the high cost of books to the student, since "the cost of texts has risen out of all proportion to fees."

"A great deal of The Varsity's criticism of the Press was unwarranted," Rankin said. "It implied that the Press was making profit at the expense of the students.

"Many students have lost view of the divisions and purposes of the Press. Its three main departments are the bookstore, the printing plant, and publishing. Any profits from the bookstore and printing plant are used to subsidize scholarly publications that would never be printed unless they were published by the University of Toronto Press."

Only University Press

Rankin also emphasized that the Press here is the only university press in Canada and for that reason its publications are of nationwide scope and interest. It is also the only publishing company in Canada which will print books that, although they may never be best sellers or even pay for themselves, are of undoubted interest and merit. McIlwraith's "The Bella Coola Indians" and Dorothy Thompson's "Swans and Amber" are recent examples of works which otherwise might never have been published and which have already brought added prestige to the University of Toronto.

Other changes introduced by Rankin include a whole new advertising and goodwill campaign. Blotters telling of the discount and charge accounts are being circulated, a number system assures that

Mustang Rah Rah Pro Promoted Claims Registrar

London, Ont., Sept. 21—(CUP)—University registrar Helen Allison today charged that there had been "professional" promotion of school spirit at the University of Western Ontario last fall. She was speaking to more than 450 freshman students.

She warned the frosh to "guard against professional promoters of school spirit." She explained that last year, while the dean and president were both ill, "some professional promoters of school spirit organized a whole week of activity around the Toronto game". It was a week of work lost and not regained, she declared.

Legal Society Recognizes Varsity's New Law Course

The three-year course leading to the degree of LL.B. recently established by the University of Toronto has been recognized by the Law Society of Upper Canada. U of T President Sidney Smith told the press last week graduates of this course will be admitted, under the new arrangement, to third year of the newly instituted four-year course at Osgoode Hall.

University undergraduates who wish to be called to the bar in Ontario are now faced with two alternatives. As graduates in arts or equivalent courses, they may choose either the Osgoode Hall course or the LL.B. degree plus two years' further study. Time required from Senior Matriculation now varies from seven to nine years before admission to the bar.

President Smith declared this step to be "one of the most significant ever taken in legal education in Canada". The U of T School of Law will have the three-fold function of

1. Providing university training in law that will lead to practice.
2. Preparing students for admission to the bars of other common-law provinces (i.e. all provinces except Quebec).
3. Allowing the University to develop "an outstanding graduate school in the field of law".

Present requirements at the Law Society-operated Osgoode Hall Law School demand that university graduates spend two years in full-time attendance there followed by a third year spent in a law office. The fourth and final year is occu-

CONVOCATION ADDRESS

Reveals Plans For UC Residence

Architects have been commissioned to draw plans and specifications for a University College Men's Residence to cost $1,000,000, President Sidney Smith announced at the University College Convocation held in Hart House on Tuesday night.

Smith Lauds College

Dr. Smith paid tribute to the distinguished principalship of Dr. Taylor and to the industry and devotion of the staff. Under their guidance, the Royal College holds high the banner of liberal education under which students should not be misled by slogans, shibboleths and labels, Dr. Smith continued. The president urged the freshman class to learn the traditions and aspirations of their college, to resolve to be worthy of it, and work for it.

Addressing convocation, Principal W. R. Taylor told the students that while failure in some cases might be due to a bad selection of course or poor preparation for university study, in most cases it could be traced to faults of study and frivolous waste of time. Dr. Taylor pointed out that students who had fled from Europe during the last ten years adopted a more mature attitude to the disciplines of higher education than American students.

"Adolescence is more prolonged because of the easier conditions of life here," Dr. Taylor said. Emphasizing this adolescence, obvious in North American Society, the principal described a Shriners' parade he had seen in Los Angeles. "They all drove past in cars, the Grand Wizard, the Potentate, and the Past Potentate," he said. "There was one adult man in the crowd. He pinned a placard on his car reading 'Past Participle.'"

Dr. Taylor explained to the students the difference between maturity and adolescence. Emotional stability is achieved, he said, when students stand up under pressure of examinations without "blowing up" and when they outgrow the habitual search for thrills.

"Intellectual poise is the power to make personal decisions without bolstering-up by friends. Intellectually poised students look at themselves objectively and know the difference between deduced convictions and opinions."

Help Wanted

With the resumption of publication this week, The Varsity is in need of staff reporters, both experienced and inexperienced. Those interested in doing news reporting, features, sports, movie and book reviewing, photography, and make-up, should report as soon as possible to The Varsity News Room, Room 78, in the basement of University College.

A special invitation is extended to first year students who are interested in learning fundamentals of newspaper work. Previous experience is not necessary, since The Varsity will train staff members during the fall term.

Once Again

Most good newspapers live to a very active old age, In journalistic circles the human life-span of three-score and ten is considered merely the passing of a newspaper's adolescence.

During this year of publication The Varsity celebrates its seventieth birthday. And so it is with something of the feeling of a young man just turned twenty-one that it makes its plans for the coming year.

Though it has, so to speak, just attained its majority, The Varsity has led a lusty life. It has led student strikes and campaigned for great changes in the University administration that were eventually realized.

But throughout its chequered career there runs at least one thread of continuity—it has always tried to the best of its ability to be of service to the University and the students.

And again at the beginning of a new year, The Varsity re-dedicates itself to continued service to the students.

For The Varsity is published by and for the students of this University through the Students' Administrative Council and represents the largest single activity of the Council. The columns of this paper are entrusted to an undergraduate staff which holds office by appointment from the S.A.C.. And the policy of this staff is governed by the reminder that "as students of this University, they owe loyalty to its traditions, reputation and future development, and that they should evidence a desire to stimulate such loyalty."

There is a lot of meaning implied in that pledge that is not said outright. It implies co-operation between The Varsity on the one hand and the faculty and students on the other. As in previous years, The Varsity is working with inadequate facilities and an overburdened staff. If it is to fulfill its purpose as an organ of student opinion it must have the co-operation of the student body and the faculty.

And the SAC reminder implies further that The Varsity should keep its columns open for any news or announcements that would promote "loyalty to University traditions." But that is not to say that The Varsity will become a publicity outlet for any one campus organization. If it is to retain its editorial freedom it must be servant to all the slave to none.

The primary function of any newspaper is to keep its readers informed about events in which they may be interested. In addition to this, most newspapers have their own special axes to grind. Too often this axe-grinding slips out of its proper place on the editorial page.

The Varsity, too, has axes to grind. But let it be clearly understood that this grinding will be done on the editorial page and not in the news columns. And it should be further understood that the opinions expressed in the editorial columns are those of the students entrusted with the publication of The Varsity.

But because of its responsibility to the University and the students, The Varsity will espouse no cause that it does not sincerely believe to be in the best interest of the University as a whole.

The Varsity is your newspaper and is pledged to serve you. It can serve you best only with your active co-operation and intelligent support.

Read it critically. Criticize and suggest. That is the only way the staff can determine if it is serving you in the best possible manner.

Press Policy Explained

The following is the text of a statement issued by Mr. Alec Rankin, recently appointed manager of The University of Toronto Press, on the new policy of The University Press Bookstore. (Story on page 1.)

Yes, there is a new policy at the University Bookstore. This new policy has been instituted in a sincere effort to reduce the cost of texts to the university students. Text-books costs for all courses have risen to the point where they are a serious financial strain on the average student, and indeed may even deter attendance. The policy now in force is to give ten per cent discount on all text-books purchased for cash by the students of this university.

Last year, a great deal of criticism was directed at the University Bookstore, the general tone of which implied that the Bookstore was making unwarranted profit at the expense of the students. In my opinion, this criticism was not based on sound facts, and a great deal of it was entirely unjustified. I should like the student body to know that the normal discount to the bookseller on text-books is twenty per cent. Text-books carry the lowest discount of any class of books, because it is understood that they do not require any promotion by the bookseller. This twenty per cent margin allows the bookstore to cover operational costs, and yields over and above this a modest profit. Now that we are giving a ten per cent cash discount to the students, we are in effect sharing our mark-up with them, and as one can readily appreciate, the margin on which the Bookstore is now operating will not yield a profit at all. In sanctioning this new policy, the Board of Governors fully realizes the Bookstore will do well to break even, but they felt that some drastic measure was required if we were to give any real relief to the students.

I do feel that in the discussion which took place in Varsity last year the over-all picture of the University Press was lost sight of. We cannot consider the Bookstore as a separate unit. Its operation must be coupled with that of the printing plant and the publishing house, since it is these three units which comprise the University Press. The modest profit which the Bookstore and the printing plant have produced has in the past gone to pay the cost of our plant and to subsidize the publication of scholarly works entirely on their merits and without regard to probable sales. In doing this it is making a contribution to the whole country, by fostering Canadian scholarship and Canadian letters, and assisting Canadian scholars. It must be remembered that the three-fold

Football News Could Be Fine Says Big Bob

By BOB DNIEPER

Bob (Coach of the Year) Masterson won't go out on a limb with predictions about this year's edition of the Senior Blues, but from this pew it looks like Johnny Metras et al will have a hard time heisting the Yates Silverware from Hart House. The team lost eighteen of last year's champion stalwarts, but their places were taken at training by thirty-two hopefuls.

Veterans Missed

Noticeably absent were half-back Ted Toogood and quarter Tommy Waldon, who will be very hard to replace. Both those boys had more years of senior ball under their belts than you could count on two hands. Veteran linemen Dave Copp and Johnny Williams are also gone, along with two very capable defensive backfielders, Ed Huycke and Nick Volpe.

Cummings Back

One very strong ray of sunshine is Bruce Cummings, who will carry the kicking and passing burden again. Shifty little Bill Danylchuk decided after a wavering summer to take a year at O.C.E. and put in another year with Varsity. Jack Gray, who many claim is the best end in intercollegiate ball will again be paired with lanky veteran Alec Lawson.

The line looks better than last year with a weight average of between 205 and 210, including ends. Mainstays of the front wall staying over are Archie Jones, "Moose" Mustard, Bill Lloyd, Ed Fisher, and Ian Clark.

Intermeds Up

To replace the holes left by departing members, Bob Masterson has raided the ranks of the inter-mediates very heavily. Bill Brewer is slated to work with Bill Danylchuk in Toogood's spot. The concensus of opinion is that although Brewer hasn't Toogood's experience, he is a little faster. Bill hails from Bermuda, where he played a lot of soccer but no football. He played his first game two years ago for Trinity College School at Port Hope, and it looks like he will become a valuable Masterson chattel with a few senior games in his system. There is no one at present who will fill Tommy Waldon's job at the quarterback slot, but the coach intends to distribute the work among the veteran backs.

Few Injuries

Other backs up from the middies are Al Stevenson, Gregg McFadden, Hubie Sinclair, and Jack Kelly. Roy Harbin, who showed plenty of promise is unfortunately sidelined for possibly the rest of the season with a torn knee tendon. A newcomer from Vaughan Road Collegiate—Murray Hadlow, looks like valuable material for the seniors. Big Bob Bazos, the terror of Upper Canada College's opposition, spent three days at the Training Camp but had to return home because of an injured toe. Nick Purdue (that bashin- defence man) and Wally London are adding some needed defensive strength to the team.

Masterson Mum

Coach Masterson is satisfied with the workouts so far but refuses to commit himself on his chances of retaining the cup. He won't even say whether the team is stronger than before until their three exhibition games are played. However, to this observer, the tackling now looks as good as it did at mid-season in '48.

Still Champs

Whatever may come, the Varsity Blues will come out snarling, and it's going to take a good team to beat them. They play Sarnia Imperials this Saturday, move to O.A.C. Wednesday, and return home for a game with the Balmy Beaches on the first. And don't forget, they're still the reigning champs.

VARSITY ADS

All organizations and clubs wishing to advertise in The Varsity are requested to take their copy to the S. A. C. office in Hart House. Please do not bring it to the News Room. Copy should be in the S. A. C. office by noon on the day previous to its appearance in The Varsity.

Big Book Bargain

SAC-Backed Book Mart Solves Old Text Problem

By HERB WOOD

Don't bother your friends with those old texts from last year, kiddies. You might gyp a pal and regret it all your life. Simply load your arms with those millstones and trot over to the new SAC Book Exchange at the rear of 119 George Street—that's the Drill Hall.

New System

The Book Exchange's manager, Al Burnes, III C&F, pats his huge National cash register lovingly and proudly explains that the details of the new buying and selling system are the result of SAC planning and his own two-years' experience with the original Horner and Bowes book exchange. This time, the Exchange is both owned and operated by students.

Manager Burnes says books are in great demand. The procedure is simply this: List authors and titles of your books on a personal card. The Exchange does the rest. All you have to do is drop in the next Saturday and collect your money. Quick payment is made possible by Burnes' perpetual inventory system.

Save 25 Per Cent

Selling,—the other side of Book Exchange activities,—works on the assumption that a book becomes worn-out or obsolete within four years. For that reason, no book is sold for more than three-quarters of what it cost the student. Cost of running the Exchange includes wages of the staff of four, rent of cash register, and other essentials. The deduction on book transactions to cover these expenses comes to about ten percent.

The Book Exchange is open 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. weekdays, and till noon on Saturdays. Staff members Jim Fullerton, IV C&F, Jim McGuigan, IV C&F, and Ian Outerbridge, III General, work a six to eight hour day now but expect to keep going the full twelve hours apiece during the busiest week.

One last reminder. You can save money this year by taking your old books to your own SAC Book Exchange. It's in the COTC Drill Hall, about 150 feet from Bloor St. Drop the books in and have the Exchange staff replenish your stock with book bargains for this year's courses. All books are neatly catalogued; prices are clearly marked on every one.

TRANSPORTATION ASSISTANCE

Regulations providing for transportation assistance to University students residing in the Territorial Districts of Ontario have been announced by the Ontario Department of Education.

The Assistance shall be the amount of the special student coach-fare from the railway station nearest the applicant's residence to the eligible institution, less the sum of $10.00, to be paid for only one round trip in any school year.

Application forms are available at the offices of College Registrars and Faculty Secretaries, and must be turned in before November 1st.

Confusion Reigns

FROSH FRESH AFTER WEEK-END

Men with red ties, yellow ties, strips of coloured ribbon, name cards, and women with rosettes, ribbons, and placards swarmed over the campus of the University last weekend as the freshies and freshmen of the university arrived in force. This group of students was celebrating Freshman Weekend, started by Victoria College and taken up in the past two years by U.C. and Trinity.

Frosh Confused

What do the freshmen and the freshies think of the University of Toronto, their own colleges, and the system of having Freshmen Weekend? Confusion upon arriving at the campus is the predominant feeling of the members of 5T3. "I was thoroughly confused when I first arrived." "My first impression of the campus was one of confusion, however orderly." Such were the comments of students coming to the University for the first time.

The confusion was rapidly dispersed under the influence of the upper-classmen appointed, either individually or to groups, to take the confused freshmen around and show them the ropes. "My early confusion was cleared up by my senior who made me feel at home and guided me through the intricacies of registering and getting settled," answered one Wymilwood freshie. "The seniors helped us get settled. They were very friendly to us and assisted us in any difficulties," said a UC freshman.

Had Serious Side Too

The highlights of the Freshman Weekend on the serious side were the addresses of the various deans to the freshmen classes of their respective colleges. Dean Bennet Principal Taylor, and Provost Seeley gave addresses advising the newcomers to work hard but not to neglect extra-curricular activities insofar as they did not interfere with their work.

Highlighting the lighter activities of the men from UC and those from Vic were reciprocal raids made by the boys from Holwood and the boys from Burwash last Sunday evening. The raids culminated in numerous splashings on both sides and the acquisition of a pair of UC pants and a banner saying "Welcome UC Frosh" which were part of the decorations of Burwash Hall at the Freshman dance held Monday evening.

Dance Disrupts Traffic

A tremendous snake-dance took place Saturday evening at Vic. The line wound rom Vic along Charles St. up St. Thomas to Bloor where traffic was halted at times and was moving very slowly at others on Bloor and Bay Sts. The seniors led the snake dance and the frosh entered into the spirit of things by chanting the Vic song and yell as well as the University song and yelling at the tops of their voices as the line moved down Bay and back across Charles to Vic. Here it broke up and the freshmen, after quenching hunger and thirst, serenaded the freshies in their residences.

Pyjama parties and tea parties were the entertainment for the girls of Vic and UC. At these parties the freshies met the seniors, other freshies, and members of the staff. These parties were the means of introducing the girls to the college routine.

Trinity Improves

Trinity College had its weekend, the second in its history and the first in which the freshies were active participants. As a matter of fact, one of the Sophomores at Trinity said, "This is far better than the one last year. Maybe it's because we've got the girls here this year."

Dances were held at the three

$5 Million Federal Scholarship Grant NFCUS Objective

An attempt to secure scholarships for university students from the federal government to the tune of $5,000,000 a year emerged as the prime objective of The National Federation of Canadian University Students at their annual conference held in Otawa early in September.

Fifty-seven delegates from nineteen universities unanimously approved plans to send the NFCUS brief on federal aid to higher education to the Royal Commission Arts, Letters and Sciences, currently conducting hearings across Canada under the chairmanship of The Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, Chancellor of The University of Toronto.

The brief, which grew out of investigations made by The Toronto Students' Administrative Council, and nationwide information on student finances gathered by NFCUS, outlines two methods by which the federal government could aid higher education. It recommends that a system of university scholarships be provided to needy students "who are industrious and capable of using their education." It further recomends that some way be found to make direct grants to universities on a per student basis.

The brief will be presented to the Massey Commission when they hold hearings in Halifax late in January by the Federation's newly elected president, Richey Love of Dalhousie University. Love prepared the final draft of the brief this summer, which points out that at least 10,000 scholarships of approximately $500 a year are needed. Delegates to the conference made it clear that in the brief they are asking the government to agree on the principle of such scholarships to put Canadian education on a democratic basis. The original proposal to ask the government for student loans was turned down as impractical, as was a suggestion by a Laval delegate that a loan-bursary recommendation be considered.

THE NFCUS also made a move to investigate the possibility of using money owed to Canada by foreign countries for the education of Canadian students in the countries concerned. American legislation of this type has recently come into effect in The United States. Several countries, including Belgium, France and Great Britain currently owe Canada money which could be used in this way. This proposal will be embodied in the brief on federal aid to higher education.

During the conference delegates were presented to Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent who assured them that within the limits of federal jurisdiction, the government would lend a sympathetic ear to their request for a national scholarship system. He explained some of the problems involved in such a scheme, since education is a matter to be handled by the provinces. But, he said, he was optimistic about finding a solution to the educational problem facing the country because it was absolutely essential that a right proportion of the people should be able to get a university education.

"The things that concern you, concern us all" he told the delegates, "for the universities must remain in a sound condition to take care of the needs of the expanding population of Canada."

The conference was strong in its resolve to push plans for securing federal aid for university education as their prime project for the coming year. Efforts are being made to acquaint every Canadian university student with the plans and program, in an effort to bring N.F.C.U.S. closer to the students on the campus and make Canadian students more aware of The Federation's aim and purpose.

Noted Statesman, English Surgeon Will Be Honored

The Marquess of Salisbury, opposition leader in the House of Lords, and Baron Webb-Johnson, president of the Royal College of Surgeons, will be awarded honorary degrees of Doctor of Laws by the University of Toronto, Dr. Sidney Smith announced last night. The degrees will be conferred at an afternoon convocation Monday, October 3.

Tuesday and Wednesday of the same week, at 8:30 p.m., Lord Salisbury will give this year's Sir Rober Falconer lecture in Convocation Hall, speaking on "Liberty and Authority — A Re-examination."

Dr. Smith referred to Salisbury as an expert on "the problems facing the western powers in their dealings with the Soviet bloc." The President cited Salisbury's resignation from the Chamberlain cabinet "in protest against appeasement." "He is a brilliant and courageous parliamentarian and one of the leaders for Western Union," Dr. Smith said.

Baron Webb-Johnson, elevated to the peerage in 1945 after being created in rapid succession a Knight Bachelor, a Commander of the Order of the British Empire, and Baronet, has climaxed his career with his work during and after the war. As president of the Royal College of Surgeons, he succeeded in maintaining the college's program intact despite bombing and special demands as a centre of military medicine.

Who's Who

As the curtains part on the New Play Society's first venture of the season, written, directed and produced by J. Mavor Moore, now at the Museum, family barrister Gilbert Williams, K.C., is reading the last will and testament of the late Robert P. Murray to the latter's family in their sedate Forest Hill living room. Lawyer Murray eulogizes the deceased, things move at a slow pace, but begin to pop when son Bill Murray (Don Harron) disputes dad's morality, daughter Judy (Toby Robins) sticks up for dad, and the wife (Margot Christie) admits her husband had some faults.

A first-rate dogfight ensues over the deceased's virtues as a huckster, from which emerge (1) the play's theme, a satire of the advertising world; (2) a gossipy characterization of the late Mr. Murray, on which the play's action depends, and (3) a fast-moving, sparkling dialogue well-sprinkled with colour words, strongly reminiscent of Bernard Shaw.

A member of the audience (Alex McKee) then enters the action by jaunting onstage to extol the advertising business, and deplores this indecent play. In the confusion the author (Hedley Rainnie) and the director (Robert Christie) come running onstage to remove the kibitzer, but the players step out of character to tear at their roles and at the play. They finally resolve to have the director, the kibitzer, and the son each produce his own version of the play.

A bizarre ballet sequence follows

SIR ERNEST MACMILLAN | CONCERTMASTER HYMAN GOODMAN | PAUL SCHERMAN

Forty-three years ago in 1906 sixty musicians banded together in Toronto to play symphonic works. They received a charter as the Toronto Symphony Orchestra and presented but two concerts that year. Dr. Luigi von Kunits became conductor in 1923 and presented just three concerts at Massey Hall. They were known as "Twilights" as their length was limited to one hour, due to the majority of musicians playing in theatre bands, and were available only between shows.

The orchestra now presents more than 80 concerts, and the members have increased to eighty-five. Dr. von Kunits died in 1931, and was succeeded by Dr. MacMillan (now Sir Ernest) who will conduct eleven of this season's twelve pair subscription events.

Guest artists will be Bela Boszormenyi-Nagy, Benno Moiseivitsch, Dame Myra Hess, William Kapell and Claudio Arrau,—pianists, Yehudi Menuhin, Mischa Elman and Ginette Neveu—violinists, Pierre Fournier—cellist, and tenor Brian Sullivan with contralto Herta Glaz in Mahler's Song of the Earth. Assistant conductor Paul Scherman will again direct the Pops concerts each Friday night.

U.C., it's this way...

Well, here we are again, tanned, fit and (hack, hack) ready to bring you news of another year's activities around old University College.

Right now the spotlight is on the Frosh and Freshies. Tonight at 8 o'clock comes the climax of their three-day celebration on entering university. The Fun Fest and Barn Dance, in West Hall and the Junior Common Room, will feature a pie-eating contest and the choosing of Miss Freshie and Mr. Freshman. Dancing in West Hall starts at nine o'clock and novice barn dancers will be glad to hear we will have on hand an ambidextrous orchestra which can also play round music. A note, too, about Costume for the dance. Prize of a free evening at Vanity Fair, King Edward Hotel, for two will go to the best dressed Farm-hand. For the best outfit among the ladies, a free sitting at Ashley and Crippen (worth $14, no less) will be awarded.

We had also hoped to draft Elsie, the Borden Cow, but on a visit to the company, learned that she is dry as a bone and will be of little use for a proposed Milking Contest. Other means have been resorted to, however, as the show must go on! Admission for the Frosh is by red ties And Admit-to-lectures on women, with regard to the Mr. Freshman and Miss Freshie contest, the Frosh and Freshies have been under constant scrutiny for the past four days (although they may not know it). Such experienced eyes as those of Dave Rose, Lit Secretary, have perused the crowd and promise us a hot contest among the six finalists who will be on the stage tonight. A Thornton Agency model, (phone number unavailable—John Christenson won't hand it over) and Hal Rosenthal, Lit Publicity Director last year and a leading authority on women, will be the judges. Judging is based largely on personality, but appearance has been known to influence the judges.

This, combined with the chance to meet campus clubs through the booths in the Rotunda and the Junior Common Room, makes for a big evening. Bob Sutherland and Karol Hollis, Fun Fest chairman, tell us they have 15 clubs lined up in competition for Best-Booth prizes of $10 and $5. John Christenson and Mary Kitchen, chairmen of the Barn Dance, are to be congratulated for the program and the long list of prizes they have lined up. They tell us also that the Lit P.A. system (with the Wheezing Turntable) will play for dancing in the J.C.R.. The Snack Bar will also celebrate its grand opening tonight.

Other active groups around the college, led by the Follies committee and the Music Club, are getting underway next week.

John Bull and Jane Young, Social Directors, respectively, of the Lit and the W.U.A. will, we believe, get this year's Follies off to a grand start with a Mass Meeting next Monday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock in the Women's Union Theatre, St. George Street. Everyone with the slightest interest in the Follies should make it a point to be there. On the list of needs for the production are script writers, musicians, dancers, costume designers and fitters, make-up men and women, prop handlers, ushers and usherettes, business manager and jokesters. Remember that date, Monday, Sept. 26, 4-6 p.m., Women's Union Theatre. No experience is needed for most of the jobs.

The Music Club, originated in the college last year, is to be congratulated for their fine start this Fall. Ward McAdam, director of this year's production of Victor Herbert's Red Mill (Remember "Moonbeams" and "When You're Pretty and the World is Fair"?) has called two auditions for soloists and chorus, next week, Friday, Sept. 30, 4-6 p.m. and Saturday, Oct. 1, 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Both will be held in the Women's Union Theatre. Of more immediate note is the first meeting of the Music Club slated for next Thursday night at 8 o'clock in the union theatre. The Red Mill will be showing in Hart House Theatre Dec. 5, 6 and 7. A special invitation has been extended to Frosh and Freshies to join the club.

The U.C. Players' Guild, a thriving unit last year when they won the Inter-Varsity Drama Festival, will start this season off next Wednesday night, Sept. 28, at 8 p.m. with an Open Meeting in the Women's Union. Work for the first part of the year will centre around one-act plays and all interested students are invited to attend. Congratulations should go here to Don Davis, on the executive of the guild this year, for the splendid reception given "There Goes Yesterday", a revue produced by Don and brother Murray. The new All-Canadian revue opened this week at the Brant Inn.

Sportsters please note—Rugby Practices opened yesterday with a general meeting of all interested bruisers. Soon the boys will get outdoors and then the fun will start. George Wallace, Athletic Director, and "Big Phil" Downie, Coach, urge everyone with any stuff to strut to turn out. Intramural tennis starts next Wednesday, Sept. 28, and entries will be accepted at the Intramural Office, Hart House Athletic Wing.

All for now. See you again next week, same time, same place.

Bill Francis,
LIT Publicity Director.

New Things Are Added At Mustang Home

Coach John Metras, of Western fame in his attempts to regain the Yates hardware which Varsity had the audacity to take away from him last fall, has hired two new coaches from south of the border. They are Earle Zeigler, line coach from Yale, and Jack Hollister, an end coach, also from the New Haven university.

Another new feature down at the home of the Purple Horde is an addition to Little Stadium that will be able to accommodate 2,500 more souls than previously. Varsity fans who have been crowded into the rightly named Little Stadium will appreciate this addition as much as the students at Western. Now they can squeeze in around 10,000 people.

As usual the MacFarlanes will give their collective alls for their alma mammy as will Jack Parry, George Wearring, Reg Ort, etc. Those guys simply refuse to graduate.

The team has been in training since the first part of September and are all in fighting trim. Coach Metras has also introduced some new plays which he will institute against OAC and Sarnia Imperials on the next two Saturdays before tangling with the McGill Redmen in the league opener on Oct. 8.

The Colts also appear to be in fine shape and promise to give the Intermediate Blues a run for their money. One story from the Western camp is that Mr. Metras has the Colts shine the boots of the Mustangs in their spare time. Take it for what it's worth.

UC Won't Be Door Mat Pre-Season Opinion

Coach Phil Downie expects University College will have a bigger and better team, come kick-off time, in the fight for the Mulock Cup. Several of U.C.'s stars of last year will be back including Grasser, Wilson and Smith. Bill Walker of T.S.S.A.A. fame and Bill Davis of last year's Intermediate Blues are expected to turn out for the first practice. The first game is with Niagara Falls at the border city on October 1st.

Ass't Varsity Coach Appendicitis Victim

Dick Mitchell, assistant coach of the Senior Blues, is recovering in hospital from an emergency appendix operation. Mitchell, a University of British Columbia grad, was appointed to the P. and H.E. staff this year.

Mitchell took sick at Couchiching last Thursday but was unable to see a doctor until the team returned to Toronto. At 3:00 p.m. Tuesday he was rushed to hospital. It is believed he will be able to be at Sarnia with the Blues on Saturday.

Hi Ya Freshies!

Sports at the university are run in quite a different way than they are at collegiates.

Here it's much more 'sport for sport's sake.' The object of sports here is to get everyone playing.

Did you just say that you've never played baseball? . . . Doesn't mean a thing. Each college forms as many teams as it can. In fact, they go on forming teams until they run out of people who want to play.

Trinity is one of the smallest colleges in the campus and yet they usually manage to turn out four teams of ball players . . . and they're supposed to be the saints on the campus.

All we are trying to point out by all this patter is that you don't have to be terrific in order to play sports around here.

No,—all you need is enthusiasm.

If you should decide to play baseball lacrosse or hockey, when you sign your Josephine Henry on that list you're signing onto a bagwagon of fun, fresh air and new friends.

If you should happen to slide into first base backwards, who knows?—You might get your name mentioned in the illustrious columns of the sports page of Ye Olde Varsity.

Look at all the advantages of this amazing trial offer, only your name down and five weeks to pay . . . I mean play.

No Stranger

This program of increased efficiency and added service to students is being led by a man who is no stranger to the sampus. Alec Rankin graduated from Commerce and Finance in 1938 with the Moss Scholarship and the Maurice Cody prize in public speaking. As an undergraduate he was president of the U.C. Lit., vice-president of the S.A.C. and of N.F.C.U.S., and a member of the Historical Club. He also won his first colours by his achievements on the Senior Intercollegiate track team. After he left the University, Rankin became a chartered accountant and during the war was a captain in the army.

His job at the Press is not permanent. He is there only to get things running smoothly until someone else is appointed to fill the position permanently.

"Our aim is to help the students," Rankin said.

Students in honour courses may thus complete the B.A., LL.B. and admission to the bar in nine years.

Dr. Smith stated that meetings of a joint committee composed of representatives of the Law Society and the University would continue. The purpose of these meetings, he added, was to settle details of the arrangement for recognition of the LL.B. course and matters relating to the length of time required for holders of the LL.B. degree to qualify for call to the bar.

with a deodorant-brassiere salesman (Robert Christie) shouting his wares to a dancing crowd. They clamor for his goods until he offers them his loneliness, when they disappear. This fantasy stood in sharp contrast to the first scene's realism, offered brilliant lighting, and some serious reflections by way of the salesman's monologue.

Son Bill's version of the play set forth a series of character sketches between the late Robert Murray allowed Don Harron full rein in hi portrayel of advertiser Murray, ir youth and in old age. He played both roles with an extreme reserve and people he knew. This sequenc carried them off well except fo some technical difficulties in removing his grey hair. Rober Christie's Presbyterian minister wa without reserve a masterpiece, as was Joe Carr's army officer sketch. The fine work of Messrs. Christie, Carr and Harron undoubtedly took top honours in the play.

In "Who's Who" Mavor Moore combines a simple but novel action, realism and fantasy with a well-spiced, well-paced dialogue. What his purposes were I don't know, but he does call it a comedy, and if his aim was to cause laughter, it was entirely fulfilled.

Morley Callaghan's "Going Home" is the next Canadian play in the NPS series this fall.

Storm Centre

The University's new bookstore, completed last year, is now the centre of the discussion on text book prices. Alex. Rankin, newly appointed manager of the Press and Bookstore, has reduced text prices by 10 percent. He has been accused by a downtown book seller of cutting prices to meet competition. The dealer added that Rankin had no true interest in student needs.

Announce Discount To Cash Customers At Two Bookstores

By JOAN EDDIS

Students will be able to make a substantial saving on new text books this year. The University bookstore is offering students a 10 per cent discount on all new texts and Coles are making a 20 per cent discount on the price of new texts to Varsity students.

Two Sides Of Book Prices

(The following are charges made by Mr. Jack Cole of Cole's Brothers against the University Press and its new manager—as of September 1—Mr. Alex Rankin, and the statements made by Rankin regarding the various charges.)

COLE: "In setting up a new discount policy he (Rankin) is no more interested in helping the students than the man in the moon."

RANKIN: "The man in the moon or any bookseller who is thinking only of his own profit would logically have done everything in his power to eliminate the cut-rate artist before selling books at cost. But I developed a policy which was not and will not be dictated by the cut-rate artist. The policy of the bookstore is only concerned with serving the interests of student clientele. If we sell texts at a price that just covers our cost as we are doing, we are providing the maximum amount of service and no student has any cause for complaint."

COLE: "At the end of August of this year Mr. Rankin sent a letter to Mr. Gray of the MacMillan Co. stating that as of July, 1949, the University bookstore was selling all texts at full list prices and also that he trusted that Cole's would be asked to do the same. We refused to raise our prices. By so doing we forced the University Press to sell books at a 10 per cent discount. He (Rankin) is not interested in the students' welfare otherwise he would not have tried to make us sell at list prices."

RANKIN: "I have never written to Mr. Gray or to the firm to which Mr. Gray is connected. A letter was written by my predecessor in office in which he outlined a policy of selling at list prices. What my predecessor did has nothing to do with me."

COLE: "We are selling American texts at 30 per cent less than the Press. They raised the price of the

Lucky Student

Commenting on the discounts offered to undergrads at both bookstores, Mr. Alex Rankin, the new manager of the University Press, said "It's a swell year for the student."

Rankin went on to say the University bookstore did not intend to fight a price battle with other booksellers by changing the new policy just initiated by the Press even though he had anticipated the increased discount now offered by another bookstore. "We are operating at less than cost," Rankin said, "so I wonder how others are able to offer a greater discount."

No Profit

Speaking for Cole's bookstore on the 20 per cent discount on new texts offered to university students, Mr. Jack Cole said that Cole's were making no profit on new texts—"In fact, we're losing money."

He said Cole's hoped to make up their losses by "additional sales in stationery and used books." Referring to the differences between their discount rates and those offered by the University bookstore, Cole asserted: "It's a better buy at Cole's, obviously."

Man In Moon

He charged that the University bookstore was forced to offer a 10 per cent discount in order to compete with Cole's and that Rankin "is no more interested in helping students than the man in the moon." Cole also pointed out that the campus bookstore had raised the prices of American texts as soon as devaluation was announced while his policy was to maintain the same prices as before until his present stock of new texts was exhausted.

Yesterday The Varsity picked out at random a list of about a dozen well known texts from various faculties in order to check on comparative prices at the University bookstore and at Cole's. These books included Grant's "Method of Anatomy," Boulding's "Economic Analysis" (an American text), Timoshenko and Young's "Engineering Mechanics," "Representative Poetry Vol. I," and McCallum's "Mill On Liberty and Rrepresentative Government."

All these books were available in quantities at the University bookstore with the 10 per cent discount allowed for new texts.

When a sales girl at Cole's was asked about these texts the first books she brought out were used ones. In a large number of cases, notably in the case of American texts, the books were not available at all at Cole's in unused form, and in many other cases the clerk was able to find only one or two new copies of a text after a search.

Cole's also pointed out to a third year student from Trinity that the 20 per cent discount applied only to books worth one dollar or more.

Cole also charged that since September, 1948, the University Press had refused to sell him texts that they published.

Rankin said that he had invoices for an order of books sent to Cole's in 1949. He said that at times in the past the Press had refused to sell Cole books because they had had trouble clearing up accounts on books obtained by Cole on credit. Within a week after he had come to the Press on September 1, Rankin notified Cole that he would fill his orders for Press texts on a C.O.D. basis.

UC Frosh Milk Ruminant Eat Pie and Dance at Fete

University College freshmen and women were given a rousing welcome last night at the UC Freshie Fun Frolic. Highlights of the evening included square dancing in West Hall, a cow-milking contest, a pie-eating contest, and the choosing of Mr. and Miss Freshie '49.

The walls of the rotunda were lined with booths advertising the ISS, COTC, the all-Varsity Revue and many other college organizations and clubs.

Lil, the black and white Holstein who made history on the steps of the City Hall this summer when she gave her milk for the Milk Fund, repeated her performance in West Hall. She was the target of four eager freshmen in the milking contest. After the starting gun, she was rushed at from four corners of the Hall, but it was the caressing touch of Bob Muckle, I MP&C, which coaxed the winning glass of milk from the none-too-willing bovine. Lil has the distinction of being the first cow admitted to UC since the fateful summer of 1908 when another cow was trapped in the tower for two days. In spite of her indiscretions in the rotunda and on the main stairs, Lil was giving a rousing send-off.

The square dance practice which started the evening proved an excellent means of introducing the freshmen to this form of the terpsichorean art, with which most appeared to be totally unfamiliar. After the practice session, however, they were Halleman Lefting and Grand Promenading with the precision of a drill squad. Fortunately, no serious injuries were sustained by any of the participants.

See More Jobs For Undergrads As Housing Found

Over twelve thousand positions were filled by the SAC Employment Service during the 1948-49 session, it was reported yesterday. Summer jobs, which accounted for approximately half of the total, were supplied by the SAC while working in close conjunction and part-time as well as summer employment.

Although there are few part-time positions available at the moment, Miss Madgett, who is in charge of the men's office in Hart House, said that there would be more when the present housing rush is over.

Miss Parkes of the women's SAC office reported a scarcity of openings due to lack of training and unwillingness on the part of women students to live in and work during meal hours. Baby sitting positions are limited due to competition of commercial agencies. Selling jobs are the most popular with women students but there are few openings for this type of work available now.

Mud to Music

Settlement House Aids Kids

By HERB WOOD

A dirty faced little boy scooped up a handful of mud and threw it accurately through the open window of the Settlement House. Another ran up the front steps to give the doorbell a push then disappeared down the street.

That was three years ago. Today, thanks to the patience and coaxing of the University Settlement staff, that gang has become a club and their energy is directed along more useful channels. They call themselves the "Snakehounds." "Goodness only knows where they got that name," said Mrs Mary King, acting head of the Settlement.

The Settlement was founded by Sir Robert Falconer and a group of interested graduates and members of the staff of the University in 1910. Money came originally from a fund set aside for a new Y.M.C.A., but the timely gift of Hart Massey diverted the money to the establishment of a Settlement House. The Settlement has twice moved from its original location on Adelaide St. and is now located in a huge double house on Grange Road, directly behind the Toronto Art Gallery. The Settlement area is defined as that area bounded by Front, College, University, and Spadina.

This area is the centre of the new-Canadian population and includes some thirty-eight different nationalties. English classes at the Settlement were busy until the Department of Education took over this work. Now the classes are attended only by those older people who would not progress in a large class. The age group from two—twenty is mainly represented at the Settlement.

The original idea of the Settlement as envisaged by Sir Robert Falconer was to provide a place for discussion and an opportunity for university students to mingle with the people in the Settlement area. The plan was patterned after the English Community centres where doctors and lawyers gave their services free.

Since 1918, when the University Settlement House joined the Federation of Community Services and later in 1944, the United Welfare Chest, the University has not been directly responsible for it financially.

The board of directors is composed of University professors and members of the Alumnae Club. The Woman's Auxiliary, composed of faculty members, provides assistance for the eight people who live in the Settlement House. This is a continuation of the old idea that the workers should live in the district.

Clubs among the eight-twelve age group are very popular and range in variety from Music to Cooking clases for boys. Clubs are formed on the basis of similar likes, or when a group of friends get together. Membership is held to eight members.

One particular group of eight girls and one boy amazed the workers by their club rules: There should be no gambling, no smoking, no talking, and no talking back to the teacher. This group also couldn't decide on who should be secretary, so they all brought books and took notes.

A summer camp is maintained on Gull Lake, oft Gravenhurst, which is partly supported by the Star Fresh Air Fund. The camp is separated into three groups; one for girls, one for boys and one for mothers and children.

Every year around this time the kids begin to ring the Settlement House doorbell and explain they want to start a club. Around this time too the Settlement needs all the volunteers possible—for without the leaders there can be no clubs. Have you any spare time?

Battle Of The Books

Books and book prices are again important topics of conversation.

The problem of buying texts is an important one for students for it represents a considerable expense.

In past years there has been a good deal of criticism of the University Press and its principal outlet, the Bookstore. Students have complained that texts in certain courses lost their resale value when the faculties changed texts after using them for only a year or so.

Downtown book dealers were underselling the Press on its own books. In many cases the texts for some courses were not announced in the calendar and students were left till well into the fall term without specified texts.

Last term the Toronto committee of NFCUS drew up a report on the text book problems. At the same time, The Varsity ran a series of articles on the same subject. Then the SAC submitted to the Board of Governors a brief on the apparent discrepancies in the handling of books on the Toronto campus.

Acting on the recommendation of the SAC brief, the Board reorganized the Press and appointed Mr. Alex Rankin as new manager.

Yesterday The Varsity carried the new policy of the Bookstore and Press management. Briefly this policy calls for a 10 percent discount on all texts, a reinstitution of a charge account system, and a uniform mark-up on American texts.

Formulated by Mr. Rankin and approved by the board of Governors, this policy seems the best plan for putting the Press and the Bookstore on a paying basis while reducing the cost of books to the students.

The plan is explicit and if it remains consistent, as Mr. Rankin promises, it should be an appreciable benefit to the students.

It should be pointed out here that the downtown dealer who offers to undersell the Press does not offer any mark-down on books costing less than one dollar. This same dealer has not been able to supply all texts in new condition. Some titles are stocked only as used copies on which no discount is allowed.

The Press' management is to be congratulated on its refusal to engage in a "price war.".

That decision gives added hope that the reorganized Press will stand for "real relief for the student."

U.C. Professors On Year's Leave With Fellowships

A year's leave of absence has been granted to three University College professors.

Professor F. E. L. Priestley of the English Department has been awarded the first Nuffield Fellowship for Canada in the Humanities. Professor H. S. Wilson also of the English Department has been awarded a Huntington Fellowship and Professor J. G. Andison of the French Department has accepted a position as acting head of the French Department at the University of British Columbia.

The Nuffield and Huntington Fellowships are both of the highest rank," said Professor A. S. Woodhouse, head of the Department of English, in an interview on Wednesday. The Nuffield Fellowships, of which three are available each year in Canada, give one year's work in England on any research project. Professor Priestley will be working at the British Museum on the "Origins of English Romanticism". He graduated from the University of Alberta and obtained his PhD. from the University of Toronto.

Professor H. S. Wilson has been awarded a Senior Research Fellowship at the Huntington Library at Pasadena, California. The Huntington Liberary has a rare collection of 16th and 17th century books. Only two Huntington Fellowships are available each year in North America. Professor Wilson, a graduate of Dalhousie University and a PhD. of Harvard, will work on a book entitled "Humanism in the 16th Centuryq in England".

Both Professor Priestley and Professor Wilson will return to the College next September.

Student Exchange To Canada, States May Be Expanded

The entire program of student exchanges under sponsorship of The National Federation of Canadian University Students came under review at the NFCUS Confernec held recently in Ottawa.

The whole process of administration of the Regional Exchange plan, under which students from Canadian universities may spend a year of study at other Canadian universities tuition free, was simplified. Application forms will be standardized for all universities, and will be made available to students across Canada this month. These application forms must be into local NFCUS committees next March.

The whole program of publicity for the NFCUS exchanges is to be enlarged and intensified in order that all students who are eligible to participate in exchange plans will be able to secure information on these schemes.

Move U.S. Exchanges

Canadian-American exchange came in for special consideration. Last year many proposed exchanges did not take place because students who had originally signified their intention of participating dropped out at the last moment. Plans to tighten the regulations in such a way that these failures to compete proposed exchanges do not occur so often were discussed and adopted.

At present Toronto students, other than those girls who wish to go to Smith College, are not eligible to participate in the Canadian-American exchange plan. Efforts will be made by the Toronto NFCUS Committee this year to secure the necessary approval of the university administration so that Toronto students may take part in the plan next year.

The question of European exchanges was also investigated, and delegates decided to leave work in this field to The International Student Service. Plans are currently being formulated in the ISS to organize such exchanges, as part of an expanded program of services to Canadian students. At Toronto, an ISS committee is this week suggesting to the Toronto ISS committee that such a program of international student exchanges be definitely undertaken by ISS.

Heavy Eater

Bruce Cummings, triple-threat back from last year's championship Blues, is back with the team this year. It's doubtful if Bruce will be dressed for the game with Sarnia Imperials at Sarnia this Saturday because of an injured shoulder. Described by Coach Masterson as "a sweet little ball player", Cummings is reputed to be the heaviest eater at the training table, thinking nothing of regularly demolishing a double order of everything on the menu.

Opinions Vary on Freshies' Legs, Styles, Manners

Suggestion for a Hart House debate: Resolved that the only justification for freshies on the campus is that they eventually become sophomores. Be that as it may, the first day of school inevitably brings a new crop of feminine freshmen. The second day breaks out in a rash of comments.

Giving the youngun's first chance, we approached a pretty little blonde appropriately topped by a halo and covered by placards indicating her name as Ann Blake, St. Hilda's, Honour Science. With stars shining in her eyes and displaying the proper respect for an older undergrad ... Ann tugged on her red and black ribbons and whispered, "It's just wonderful ... wonderful, that's all I can say ... even the initiation."

Most of the professors were reluctant to make a statement on the question. But Dean Bissell and Professor Bagnani ventured an opinion. The Dean sagely stated, "I refuse to comment." Professor Bagnani, using some horse-sense, stated, "From what I can see they seem a good crop of fillies ... nice shapely withers and mighty sturdy legs."

This approval was seconded by Irwin Pasternak, III Pass, who claims that when the freshies were high school students, the mighty undergrad wouldn't give them a second look. Now, quoth Irwin hopefully, even a third look might lead to something.

A slightly different opinion was expressed by a second year man, Jack Geller. "The freshies impress me as being almost as obnoxious as last year's crop."

Sidling up to Mark Tanz, I Pass, we innocently asked, "And how do you find this crop of young Canadian womanhood?" Looking around twice and then checking his watch he said, "Nice girls."

Another freshman must have been whammied, too, as all he could say was "Geez, there's nice grass around here ..."

Jack Hoolihan, president of the U.C. Lit., stated, "As usual University College has the pick of the crop. And as so often happened in the past, Providence has been cruel to Victoria."

Evan Scott, co-director of the U. C. Follies, struck right to business. "Can they sing, can they dance? We want them for the Follies."

'Canadian Unity' At NFCUS Seminar To Be Debate Topic

The National Federation of Canadian University Students will hold a summer seminar in the Province of Quebec during 1950 on the subject of "Canadian Unity", delegates to the national conference held in Ottawa early in September decided. The Federation has originally hoped to hold a summer seminar during the summer of 1949, but last spring abandoned this plan in favour of a 1950 meeting.

A committee of students from the University of Montreal are taking care of the plans for this year's seminar.

The Ottawa conference also took steps to arrange for a Nation Student Day to be held on January 28, 1950. The delegates have left the organization of activities for this day in the hands of the local committees and student councils of the various universities, but will undertake to handle national publicity from the NFCUS central office. The move is part of the NFCUS plan to bring the Federation closer to the students on Canadian campuses.

ISS Seminar Delegates At Convention Abroad Gain New Friendships

"I learned to appreciate your country, I hope sometimes you will think of mine."

This sentiment was written in the autograph book of Ruth Comfort, one of six students from the University of Toronto present at this summer's Canadian seminar near Breda, Holland. Its author was Rolf Schoeder from Hamburg, Germany.

It apparently expresses, the feeling of each of the students who met at the Kastell Bouvigne for five weeks. Students from every province in Canada, and many countries of Europe met to discuss a general theme of "The Individual and Society", but even more to learn to know and appreciate the ideas and beliefs of people from many countries and many cultures.

Impact was Emotional

"In many ways the impact of the seminar was an emotional one," said Ed Eberle, one of the U. of T. students. "One hundred and twenty students of fifteen nationalities were brought together, and studied, read, talked, sang, wrote articles, played tennis and drank beer—together." Ed spoke of one night which illustrated the unbreakable bond built up between these young people. The Breda city soccer team played against "the world," a team from the seminar, in the only sane kind of "world war." "We went away from the seminar feeling that we had made the best friends of our lives".

The experience was not entirely emotional, the delegates agreed. The lectures, the seminars, and the "bull sessions," attended by a group of top-notch students, all possessing a high degree of personal intellectual drive, gave all a tremendous intellectual stimulus. The opportunity to speak to the professors at any time during the day, and to question a student from the country itself on points concerning a hitherto unknown land, gave them a revitalized interest, they said.

Tolerance was learned

"It was a tremendous experience thrashing out the basic differences in view," Jack Tinker said. "A great many lessons in tolerance, and broadmindedness were an important result of these discussions."

The main impressions these students reported were a greatly increased appreciation of the reality and importance of European problems and a first hand knowledge of the European point of view. "We began to realize fully the forces working against international amity—the nationalism, jealousy, hate, economic conflicts, mistrust and pessimism which seemed to be a sapping poison," said Tinker.

Close Contacts Made

"Besides the wonderful thrill of meeting people from all over Europe, we had the opportunity to know Canadians from all over the country. We now have close contacts in every part of Canada, and can understand its different groups so much better. And think of the fun at rugby week-ends, meeting with other seminar students," said Ruth Comfort.

Besides the opportunities to learn there was the thrill of a summer in Europe—in doing things for the first time—the sights to be seen, the sidewalk cafes, strange dishes like poffertjes in Holland, the wonderful works of art and architecture, the delegates reported. "It all adds up to the best possible summer from every angle—education, pleasure and excitement," said one.

(This is the first of a series of two reports on the ISS Seminar.)

University College Makes Additions To Teaching Staff

Six appointments to the University College teaching staff have been announced recently.

Professor Rene Bray of Lausanne, Switzerland, will join the French staff in January. An experienced teacher of French literature, he has refused an appointment to Harvard University.

Three additions have been made to the English Department's staff. Mr. R. Watters, an honour graduate of Philosophy, English and History in University College, M.A. of Toronto and PhD. of Wisconsin, will replace Professor H. S. Wilson, absent on leave. Professor Watters is visiting from the University of British Columbia. He is a specialist in American and Canadian literature.

Mr. H. M. Maclean and Mr. Edmund Rhodes have received lectureships in the English Department. Mr. Maclean is a graduate of Princeton, and is doing postgraduate work at the School of Graduate Studies. Mr. Rhodes graduated from the University of London, England.

The Department of Ethics has added Mr. F. M. Doan and Mr. J. C. S. Wernham to its staff. Mr. Doan got his M.A. in 1947 at the University of Western Ontario.

Mr. Wernham, a graduate of the University of Aberdeen and Cambridge, obtained his Mastership of Sacred Theology from the Union Theological Seminary, of New York, in 1947.

Gill Rehearses 'Crime'; Opens Season Oct. 22

The first play of the new season to be given by the Hart House Players is Dostoievsky's classic detective story "Crime and Punishment." The version to be used is the one by Rodney Ackland which was made famous by John Gielgud in both London and New York. The story, according to Mr. Gill, director of the Hart House Players, is a deep psychological study of a brilliant student. In rebellion against society which has rejected him, the student, Raskolnikoff, commits a brutal double murder in order to prove to himself that he has the courage to perform such a deed. The setting is a lodging house in which the principal characters live, and in which the audience can view action in several rooms simultaneously.

In the forthcoming production, which opens October 22, there will be approximately forty in the cast, including many veterans of the Theatre. The part of Raskolnikoff will be taken by Evan Scott who appeared last year in "The Sea Gull." His mother and sister will be portrayed by Elizabeth Cormack and Diana Fishleigh. Kate Reid, winner of the best actor's prize given by the C.O.D.L., will be seen as Katerina, a lodger who has been reduced to penury.

Porfiri, the police chief with whom Raskolnikoff comes into conflict, will be played by Alvin Shaw, who has already performed with the Players on numerous occasions.

Although most of the casting was done last spring, any first year students interested in acting will have a chance to prove their talents in the small parts which are still to be filled.

CALLING WOMEN

The woman's sports staff needs writers. No experience is needed but a knowledge of sports would be an asset. The sports department gives a reporter an all round training in journalism as it includes interviews, the writing of columns and make-up as well as covering games.

At present the position of women's sports editor is also open. Any woman interested in this should apply to The Varsity office as soon as possible.

the caller, has been active in the profession for the last thirty-five years. "When I was their age", he said, "we took to square-dance calling as naturally as these young people take to jiving."

In keeping with the rustic theme, West Hall was decorated with old apple trees, birds and bees, and large jugs filled with a refreshing cider. Even a shady nook was supplied with a bench on which the new Mr. and Miss Freshie were crowned. The evening ended with a pie-eating contest which proved to be as messy as these things usually are.

Movie Review

My Friend Irma

As good movie entertainment, this film has about as much punch as an aspirin tablet in the Pacific Ocean. The movie follows the same general pattern as the notorious radio effort of the same name, with Irma played by Marie Wilson and Jane played by Diana Lynn. Neither is much better or worse than her radio counterpart. An arsenic-and-poison ivy sandwich should be awarded, however, to John Lund for the most revolting performance ever to come out of a movie projector. True, he certainly had poor material but—after all!

If you are an avid "Irma" fan, you may be interested in meeting Mrs. O'Reilly and Professor Kropotkin on the screen. Don Defore is also around to fulfill his half of the Paramount contract.

The movie consists of Jane's attempts to land a millionaire husband and the assistance she is given by Irma and her fiance Al (Lund). Al, as he ALWAYS does over CBS, "ruins everything", and Jane, as they ALWAYS do in Movies, falls in love with a poor but handsome and honestasthedayislong boy who loves her truly.

The film is redeemed slightly by a telephone which rings every time the story lags. As you can imagine, it plays a most important part. Martin and Lewis, one of the newer radio comedy teams, make their debut with Martin singing the new tune, "Just For Fun". He waved his arms so much that the net result was pretty air bubbles fighting their way through a mass of Sargasso seaweed. Even with this amazing effect, the air bubbles sounded just a little too much like Perry Como. Lewis proves himself an excellent comedian and should have a long stay in Hollywood. Watch for his name in another.

Prior to September 1 this year there were periods when orders from Cole's were not filled for reasons of credit and policy. Art Gallery

The Art Gallery's winter session opens on October 1, with an exhibition called "50 Years of Canadian Painting." This should be a most stimulating and controversial show, since it will give the painting-minded public a chance to decide whether Canadian art is progressing or stagnating.

Probably the most entertaining part of the Gallery's winter program is the Wednesday "Open Night," which is back again. The Open Nights provide tours for discussion and study of the shows which are at the moment hanging, a demonstration by some established artist in artistic method, and also a chance to try one's hand at working in one or other of the artistic media. Admission to the Open Nights and also to the Gallery at any taime is free to all students upon the presentation of their A.T.L. cards.

The Gallery presents either a concert or a lecture every Sunday. The first one, on October 2, will present Doreen Hulme, soprano, accompanied by Marjorie Lea. There is a large reference library in the Gallery, devoted to the collection of books on art. This library is open from ten in the morning to four in the afternoon. The Gallery provides, for a nominal sum, slides and individual reproductions of well known paintings and sculpture. The Gallery also provides a series of circulating exhibitions of both original paintings and reproductions for the use of schools, societies and colleges.

If any person wants to learn to paint, the Art Gallery provides both evening and afternoon classes for his instruction.

Philip Creighton.

Hart House Events

Hart House Concerts: Four events comprise the Sunday evening series this fall, with the Royal Conservatory Opera School presenting the first on October 23rd. The concerts will be on alternate Sundays, tickets available from your college representative or from the hall porter at Hart House. Guest artists on November 6th are the Parlow String Quartet, and on November 20th Robert Graham, violinist, will appear.

A new feature this season is the Sunday afternoon recitals, commencing September 25th with pianist Earle Moss. Two weeks later Professor Leo Smith's viol ensemble will be the guests, followed by duo-pianists John Beckwith and Ray Dudley November 27th, and Muriel Kilby, marimbist, on December 11th to close the Michaelmas group. After Christmas these recitals will occur weekly on Wednesday afternoons.

At Hart House Theatre: Robert Gill announces four plays for the coming season, the first of which will be the Rodney Ackland version of Dostoevsky's "Crime and Punishment," from October 20th to 29th. Robertson Davies' award-winning comedy, "Fortune, My Foe," will run from November 26th to December 5th, followed by "The Guardsman," by Ferenc Molnar, on January 21st. Shakespeare's "Othello" will be the season's closing play, commencing February 25th. Mr. Gill's general criteria in choosing the plays were literary merit and theatrical interest, to provide a programme of balance and contrast. "Crime and Punishment" is a period tragedy with a detective theme. "Fortune, My Foe" is a satirical comedy about university people, and a comment on the Canadian scene. "The Guardsman" is a period comedy at the close of World War I.

Prom Concert

Canadian-born dramatic soprano Mary Henderson turned in a performance last night that was at once pleasing and annoying. She has a quality of voice that is very easy to listen to. Her style of delivery showed a flamboyancy which we found rather distressing. That statement must be qualified: "Air de Lia" from Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" was sung with a profound understanding and restraint, displaying a musical and dramatic insight. Of the rather formless selection of short songs, "Be Still, My Heart" by Giannini seemed the most successful. As usual Simeon Joyce accompanied sympathetically and intelligently.

Loci Critici

If only by nature of his task a critic of the arts is himself the most criticized of men. To criticize a performance means to create an issue, and an issue leads to a division of the house into opposing sides, for no one concert, play or painting can possibly impress all its subjects in precisely the same way.

Readers of The Varsity, however, have in the past thought otherwise. Letters received last year stated in eloquent terms that certain outspoken reviews had no business in print, or in an argumentum ad hominem, that an ulterior motive moved the critic to be so frank. Thus we are moved to set forth our aims for the coming year.

Basic to these readers' argument is the assumption that a performance in art will affect its audience as Newton's Law of Gravity draws all things to earth. They assume their ears are atune to a standard infallible and absolute, and the critic's ears are not. To those who so believe we say in defense that Varsity critics are biased, prejudiced individuals who know exactly what Picasso painted, how Shakespeare should be acted, how Mozart should be played. In short they have a mind and judgment of their own.

Nevertheless we shall endeavor to enter the theatre and concert hall with both humility and authority, to ever strive to temper judgment with mercy, believing the middle way between the two extremes of raillery and praise will lead to the best critique.

William Glenesk.

(f) Pre-Medical Students shall be entered as Ordinary Seaman, U.N.T.D. until they have been accepted by a medical school.

Before February 1, 1950, all first year men will have appeared before a selection board for promotion to Cadet in a field allied to their course.

For further particulars regarding engagement, training programme, pay, etc., students interested should contact the Resident Staff Officer, U.N.T.D., 119 St. George Street.

Distaff Side

By ANNE BURTON and MARGOT MURRAY

Women's Residence,
University of Toronto,
Second Day of College.

Dear Mom and Dad:

Why didn't I come to Varsity sooner? This is the life? By now I'm all settled in my room, and have met at least a million people—probably more. Yesterday was the first day of class and really! my course is a cinch! All the professors do is hand out reading lists and dismiss the class. But I wouldn't mind staying in lectures all day cuz I met the ka-utest fella in Psych.—la, he's going to come over and go over the reading list with me tonight.

By the way, I've discovered that I brought all the wrong kind of clothes with me. The sophisticated look is passé—you should see the way the seniors and juniors dress here! So please rescue all those sweaters I gave you for the church rummage sale; also that old skirt I was going to rip up for mittens. It doesn't matter about the moth holes—it's rumoured that patches are going to be the vogue this fall.

This college life is really the cat's meow though. I'm so excited about it that I can't understand why so many people look so glum. Ever since I found out the little school work I have to do I've been getting into as many activities as I can. All the seniors were so nice to me and so encouraging that I just couldn't resist joining the Spanish Club, the Philosophy Club, the Political Science Club and two or three others. The only one I felt I shouldn't join was the M. & P. Club—after all I never did take Maths, or Sciences.

Well I must go now and address some envelopes for the French Club. Wasn't it nice of them to let me do it?

Will write soon.

Love,
Susie Q.

P.S.: A boy I met sold me a $5.00 subscription to The Varsity, which he says is a cut rate for freshies. Wasn't I lucky to meet him while I still had the chance?

University Health Service Urges Freshman Medicals

All new undergraduate students, all students taking part in organized athletics, any graduates or undergraduates whose home is not in Canada and all other students for whom it is considered necessary must take a medical examination from the Health Service.

Regulations regarding times are as follows: First year students must make their appointments at once and should complete their examinations by October 15th. Other students, before October 15th, but until their examination, they may use their previous categories, if they have had neither serious injuries or illness in the interim. Women students who wish to play basketball or baseball must make their appointments before the end of September and students of other years who wish a medical examination should make their appointments after November 1st, unless there is some urgency.

All appointments for examinations must be made either by telephone or in person at 43 St. George St. Telephone numbers are, for men, MI. 9644, and for women, MI. 2646.

If you are unable to keep your appointment, notify the Health Service in advance.

The Health Service also provides chest X-rays, which are compulsory for the following students: All new students, all final year students, all medical and nursing students, dental students in their first year and last two years, and all students who do not live in Canada.

Appointments for all male students not in Arts are made through their class presidents during the week of September 26th.

Arts students and all women make their appointments during the same week at the Health Service unless they have already done so while having their health examination.

All other students and staff members may have a chest X-ray if they wish to do so. Everyone in these last categories is urged by the Health Service to take this opportunity of a free chest X-ray.

COTC To Train 180 As Officers

The Canadian Officers Training Corps will this year accept 180 cadets from Arts, Dentistry, Medicine and Engineering for training as officers. During the three summer months students interested in Active or Reserve Army careers in the COTC are sent to training schools from Quebec to British Columbia. They are given the rank and privileges of a second lieutenant, free board, lodging, transportation and a monthly salary of $153.

Third year students in Medicine, Dentistry and Applied Science receive practical experience in their respective lines through the summer course. The Faculty of Applied Science accepts training received in this course by its students in place of the time required to be spent in industry.

The COTC gives a series of ten lectures during the first term and forty during the second in military science. These are arranged so that they do not clash with regular timetables.

Anyone interested in the COTC may obtain further information from headquarters at 119 St. George Street.

piano by Chopin is transcribed for a full orchestra, it loses much of its fragility and crystal-like quality. It is disturbing to hear bows sliding up reluctant violin strings instead of the clean-cut precision of piano keys. The overall result of the orchestration was to dramatize and, in the case of the Polonaise, to make almost ponderous what was originally lyrical yet dignified. The Prelude, opus 28, suffered the least from transcription. The famous orchestration styled by Andre Kostelanetz showed up to advantage in the selection from Jerome Kerne's "Show Boat."

Mr. Kostelanetz is nothing if not precise in his conducting. The delightful Mozart Serenade was treated a little less romantically and hence less sentimentally than it usually is; and it gained by this treatment. The allegro movement was classical in its precision.

On the whole the orchestra, if a little breathless sometimes, turned in an adequate performance, especially when accompanying the arias.

Mr. Kostelanetz will be conducting in the final prom concert of the season with George Hadded as guest artist.

• SKULESPOTS •

Hya, you 2900 odd pointed-headed little slide-rule sluggers! Got your slipsticks and selves oiled up properly for a long and interesting tilt with the knowledge of the world? Nice to see you all together in T.O., so close to the K.C.R. and the Mocambo, where the trials of a heavy day can be so easily and pleasantly forgotten.

This, gedinkus, in case you didn't know, is a new column dedicated to the heroic deeds of our own athletic types—it will appear (hope the budget lasts) every Thursday, simply loaded with gen dope, scores, schedules, heroes, times, and all the required disa and data. All merely part of a scheme to rebuild Skule's slightly depreciated athletic structure. We're going to win back all those cups that have gone by the wayside in the past couple of years.

To start things off on the right foot, rugby practises start immediately, as of last Wednesday, on the back campus. The junior team really looks loaded, and the senior squad just might be destined for great thing this year, that is if they get enough material—that's your job. If things this year, that is, if they get enough material—that's your job. If out there at 5 of the pee emma today and every day.

Activities on the Track side of things started Thursday up at Varsity Stadium on the cinders at 4:00 p.m. Coach Brown will welcome you heartily.

By the way, a wee point of interest—intercollegiate rugby tickets go on sale Monday and Tuesday of next week from 10 until 6, I believe; so make your plans to buy now or you'll be missing out on a Big Blue and White season.

An important point: all those in first, second, and third years who have not filled out an Athletic card at registration, please do so at the Eng. Soc. stores now. Don't delay, it'll save time and worry later on. Remember, this applies to everyone. To impress you—remember that you do not get your results in June unless you are cleared by the Athletic Exec., so act now.

As for this ticklish locker situation. For goodness sakes, don't go asking questions at the office. Wait till you turn out for a team and then see your manager. School only has 50 lockers for over 2900 characters who need them. Players will be allowed to hold lockers only as long as their sport lasts. My advice is to get a Tote Box or Lockerette now, while you can, so you will be assured of something.

W cubed, he of the sterling character, faultless morals, imposing mien, (in case you don't recognize him by the description, it's Whistlin' Willie Walker, of whom we sing) has asked me to remind all you lucky frosh of the giant reception in your honour, today. For the slight fee of 30c about .106 of a sterling pound, at the new rates, you get not only a free meal, not only a guided tour around the U., but, no BUT also a rootin' tootin', come one, come all, bang up dance with 300 guaranteed to please pulchritudinous, scrumptious, durable, etc. etc. spooks to keep you stepping on the waxed floor of the C.O.T.C. drill hall.

SO . . . hurry, hurry, see the sights, enjoy the meal, trip the light fantastic with a luscious wench—all for only the slightest of pittances.

Arevederci,
Benny

Important!

The Varsity sports department needs help bad. We do not consider it in the least essential that the forthcoming applicants be enrolled in English Language and Literature. In fact Pass Arts students are usually the best bet as they have perhaps more time at their disposal than those in some other courses. The work is usually interesting and no experience is required as we will be willing to train any new reporters. The big topic at present is rugby and it would help if applicants did know something about that fascinating game.

Will all youse guys who figure on replying to this free ad please drop down to the news room of The Varsity and contact the sports editor or leave your names on the sports bulletin board. Oh yes, one more thing, you must be able to throw around the old trite cliches in true sports reporter form.

Speaking OF SPORT

By BOB DNIEPER

As the venerable Jim Coleman is so fond of saying—"just fifteen more days till the opening of the races". In just fifteen short days the Big Blues open the intercollegiate football races by playing host to Frank Tindall's horde from Queen's.

Of course all football fans are wondering whether Varsity will retain their hard won championship. Unfortunately all the intercollegiate coaches (except Mr. J. Metras) refuse to comment so early in the season. Metras has no qualms about predictions, if they're favorable to Western. In fact, as early as last March 9th he made a public statement in front of a large gathering of alumni to the effect that Western will definitely deprive the U of T of the Yates cup. Might be a good idea to publish his statement the day before the Varsity-Western game. A phone call to a well known Toronto book (excuse the expression) maker ascertained that Varsity is favored to keep their glory at odds of seven or six to five. The very fact that they are the champs would put them in as favorites until indicated otherwise.

Bob Masterson has sixteen of last year's boys back in the fold, and seems to be filling up the rest of the berths with some very commendable material. This Bill Brewer lad looks sharp in practices and if he plays the ball he showed with the intermediates this past season, he will in some measure make up for the loss of Ted Toogood to the Church Street Technicians.

Tommy Waldon will be harder to replace, but Masterson will probably give Dany Dannylchuk the calling duties, The coach has reduced the number and complexity of the plays, dropping some and adding others. Good old number thirty-five, the fake and buck, will still be with us though. That play has been around Varsity so long it's grown a beard. The double reverse has been getting plenty of polishing, but the other coaches may be wise to it this year.

Everybody seems to be in good physical shape with surprisingly few broken bones considering the hard scrimmages the boys went through. This conditioning is bound to keep early season injuries to a minimum. Masterson didn't risk an injury to Bruce Cummings, so kept him out of the scrimmages most of the time. Even so, Bruce bruised his shoulder and will be a doubtful starter in this Saturday's game with Sarnia. Even if he is dressed it is unlikely that he will play very much of the game.

Metras had 85 aspirants to his senior club in training, but has the squad cut to working poportions now. He must be out for Varsity's blood this year, since the team was being driven so hard that the practices had to be suspended because of injuries. Parry and the two McFarlanes are back with most of the line intact, which promises to give Masterson a headache or two. But Varsity's heavier line is capable of taking care of any improvement in the Mustang congregation. And that takes care of the Labatt entry.

At the other end of the circuit we find Vic (import) Obeck with a much stronger team than in former years. He has been accused of everything from mopery and gawk to highway robbery but he probably has just found the secret of getting a good ready-made team without too much hard labor. If the alumni association shells out a handful of scratch, and pays a star's way through, the coach is set. The beauty of this system is that since the actions of the individual alumni are their own bnsiness, neither the University nor the league ruling body can say boo about the money changing hands.

Obeck has several ex-Edmonton Eskimos on his roster, and is expecting one or two Americans to sign up. This will give Ed Mierkowicz and Rocky Robillard some help, but unfortunately you can't build a contender in one year. Varsity should have little trouble with McGill, but they won't repeat last year's 41-0 win.

Frank Tindall's Gold-Plated Gaels have Al Leonard teamed up with Ross McKelvey again, and are reported to have a stronger team. From all appearances their line isn't much, and championships are not won with weak lines. Guess we can go to the Queen's game without the usual supply of morphine tablets.

So there you have it, dear readers; Varsity keeps the championship, and wash our mouth out with soap if they don't.

Ex-Champs At Various Occupations

No doubt many fans of the great Autumn pastime will be interested in hearing what has become of the members of last season's championship football team. Some of them are continuing to display their gridiron skill for various Big Four and ORFU teams, others are interested in the game from the coaching stand-point only, while the rest are willing to take their rugby from a sitting position high in the wind-swept stands of Varsity Stadium.

Large, likeable John Shore is not content to be part of the latter congregation; in addition to his salesman job at a well-known local meat packing firm, John is doing very well indeed for the mighty Argonauts, and has not even been spoken to harshly by an official yet.

Tall Ernie Jeans, defensive ace last year is not playing any ball but is a school teacher and no doubt does some coaching on the side.

Dave Copp, line stalwart, is not smashing holes for the backs this year but is working for the Dominion Oxygen Co. of this city.

John Williams, inside of last year, is still filling up holes, but now he does his filling from the business end of a drill. He is a dentist in Aldershot.

Jack (Curly) Daly is playing for Teddy Reeve's mob. It is to be hoped that the giant crowds for which the ORFU is noted will not cause Jack any undue nervousness.

Frank Peppiat is working for his father as is Bill Petrie. Art Hardman is a full-fledged doctor and is working as a captain in the Medical Corp, stationed at Chorley Park in Toronto. No information is available on Cliff Beatty.

Bill (Smiley) Stockman is reputed to be holding down an end position for the Ottawa Roughriders. This newspaper will miss his authentic sports reports.

Ends Nick Volpe and Eric McMillan are both teaching high school out of town but Nick still finds time to commute in from Port Credit and team up with Shore on the Argos.

Popular Teddy Toogood is not doing any playing but is the Physical Director of the Ryerson Institute of Technology. Len McIntyre is convalescing from an attack of polio and is here in town.

Another defensive star is Ed Huyke, who although requested by the Argos to try out with the team is instead devoting all his time to the study of justice at Osgood.

And last but certainly not least, is Tommy Waldon, Johnny Copp Memorial winner of last season. Tom is a PHE teacher at Western Tech here in the city, but is giving his best for the Tigers of the Mountain City. He also takes time out to coach the footballers at Tech.

And there you have it—our football alumni.

By JOHN ELLIS

At this early point in the interfaculty rugby campaign there is not much activity. However it was noticed that Victoria, last year's runners-up in the Mulock Cup race, were out in great numbers and seemed very enthusiastic about the coming season. Of course this is usual at the beginning of the term, with everyone being very optimistic. Bob Ralph, team manager, remarked that the largest part of the team is made up of freshmen as was the case last year.

Help Needed

However last year the Crimson and Gold had a coaching staff. Such is not the case as yet this semester, in fact Ralph would like to meet any men who are interested in gaining some line-coaching experience. They could see him any afternoon over at Little Vic.

Back from last year's Crimson Tide we find such standouts as Chuck Fick, Lorne Lodge, quarters, and Gerry Hill and Brad Colbert, linesmen. Starry half-line ace Harry Boyd will not be back nor will Blake Ashford. Rob Dowsett, Stu Howard, Bill Sherwood and Tom Dryden all Vic veterans, are at present out with the Intermediates and of course it is not known as yet which team they will finally wind up with.

Best Dressed

Vic promise to gain all the votes in the best dressed team contest as they have complete new, and just as gaudy uniforms. Last night, being the first time that a practice was called the boys only ran through a light training but Ralph promised the hopefuls that the heavy going will commence at the beginning of the week.

St. Michael's College

Coach Lew Barnes' Mulock defenders are the pre-season favorites. Lew will have a fast, experienced team with better than average strength in the backfield. Last night was the first practise and already St. Mike's are running off plays. Among the stars of last year that are back are Jerry Washington, Tony Adams, Jerry Timmins, Dick Brown, and Jim Kite. Keep your eyes on this team.

University College

Coach Phil Downie's red and white squad may prove to be the proverbial dark-horse of the league this year. The team lacks experience on the line but this is not the fact in the backfield. Bill Davis of last year's Intermediates and Bob Walker the ten second man from Lawrence Park will line up for U.C. this year. It is also expected that a good portion of Humberside's T.S.S.A.A. champion backfielders attending P.H.E. this year will also turn out. Names of last year that will also appear on Phil's present roster are Bev Grasser, Ian Smith and Bill Wilson. An import from Queen's, Tarry Stott is expected to fill an important slot on the red and white line.

S.P.S.

The little red skule house will provide the unknown quantity this year. Dave Munroe of Argo fame and Ted Weaver had 82 turn out to the first practise Wednesday last. High school rugby is making more than its fair contribution to the Junior team with Lorne Slattery and Dave Pullman up from Parkdale, Bob Wiliamson and Ken Cumming from Jarvis and, Doug Campbell, Keith Mowat, Dave Brown and Jack Grinton from Lawrence Park. This should provide a good junior team and also a nucleus for next year's senior squad. Hold overs from last year include Eli Bernstein, Walt Gibson and all star John Gordon. Condition is the quality Dave is working for now.

Medicine

Meds are expected to have that new look this year including a new coach, identity as yet unknown. First practise for the future doctors is Monday. John Stalker of last year's team is expected to add experience to their line.

Up to press time. Dents and Trinity were not heard from but it is expected practises will start next week. All things being equal it will be a great race come kick-off time.

Scarlet Repeat; Annex Camp Cup

The Red team took the University of Toronto Training Camp Rugby Championship by defeating the Whites 17-5. Two quick touches in the dying minutes of the game broke the five point tie and won the Masterson Trophy for the Reds. This is the second year that the Whites have been bested.

The trophy, painted blue and white, with suitable engraving, has a marked resemblance to an adult size pot of the chamber variety. For the next year it will repose in the camp trophy room.

Bill Danylchuk played a fine game, both offensively and defensively. Coach Masterson explained it with: "I told Dany that each winning player was to get the trophy filled with home-brew. They fought their hearts out."

Needless to say, the ale was not forthcoming.

Sportswoman

URGENT

A frantic call from Dr. Stewart of the University Health Service urges women students to make appointments for medical examinations at once. Monday and Tuesday of next week have been reserved for softball examinations with basketball following for the rest of the week. After that there will be time only for first year students.

Not only are health examinations made compulsory by the Women's Health Service for all those who wish to play sports at the university, but any player who has not had a health check-up this year will automatically disqualitfy her team.

It is the job of the manager of each team to see that every girl who turns out to practices has had a medical exam and that she is in high enough category. After a student has had her medical, her card is sent to the SAC office in the UC basement where it should be checked by the manager.

UMPIRES WANTED

Girls interested in umpiring softball games during lunch hour and who are well acquainted with the rules are asked to contact the head of the Softball Club, Norma Pinnock, III Phys. Ed.

The umpires and base umps are badly needed by the baseball club as the first game of the schedule will begin about October 3. Previous experience in actual umping is not absolutely necessary but any woman who wishes to ump must have a sound working knowledge of women's softball rules and be willing to study their rulebooks in order to understand thoroughly the minor technicalities. Umpires receive moderate remuneration for the lunch hour time they donate.

There's going to be an Aqua Show at Varsity this Fall.

Yes, the first production of synchronized swimming will be held in Hart House on October 20. Although synchronized swimming has been seen in the Intercollegiate League for the last three years and shows have been put on by Western and Queen's, this is a new event on our Sports Program.

And it's going to be good.

The Water Show will be entitled "From Dawn to Darkness". The choreography is almost completed and Miss Winnifred Baxter up at the L. M. will be testing all those who are interested in entering today and tomorrow. There will be 12 different numbers and therefore lots of opportunity for everyone to participate.

Not only swimmers will be needed. Like every other show there will be those behind the scenes making costumes, doing lighting and helping with the training.

The show is under the direction of Miss Winnifred Baxter with the able assistance of Marg Fleming, II UC, Zi Murray, III UC and Inna Chuhaldon, III Vic. In case any of you freshies do not know where the L.M. is, it is on the corner of Bloor and Avenue Rd.

It is still not too late to get into the swim if you act right away. Miss Baxter will be in the L. M. testing on Friday from 9-10 in the morning and from 2-5 in the afternoon and on Saturday from 9-12. Rehearsals start next week, so don't delay.

Let's all support the swimming staff and make Varsity's first Aqua Show a smashing success.

Returning Student Held In New York By US Immigration

A statement from The United States government which in effect admits the United States made a mistake in holding Ruth Comfort, III Occupational Therapy, at Ellis Island on an alleged charge that she had made an "inflamatory speech" while returning to North America from the International Student Service Seminar, has been received by the Canadian government it was reliably learned late last night.

Ruth, who is Students' Administrative Council representative for O.T. and Vice-President of this year's SAC was held on Ellis Island for twenty-four hours on her recent return from the International Student Service, seminar held this summer in Holland. The United States statement, which constitutes an "admission of error and an expression of regret" is in Ottawa and will probably be officially released today or tomorrow after consultation between Canadian and American officials. The statement reportedly clears Ruth of all alleged charges which were responsible for her being detained at Ellis Island.

Ruth returned to New York on the Dutch liner "Vollendam" along with 1450 other students who had been to Europe this summer. She was the only one detained from the entire passenger list, and spent twenty-four hours on Ellis Island before efforts to secure her release were successful. According to a statement she released yesterday the reason for her detention was "an inflamatory impromptu speech" she was supposed to have given on the "Vollendam" during the voyage home. "I think it was a case of mistaken identity", Ruth said yesterday.

She was quizzed by American officials, first on the ship, and later at Ellis Island, about her political affiliations and learnings. She was

Bold Young Thief Robs Fraternity In Broad Daylight

The Phi Chi fraternity members are beginning to suspect that they have become steady "clients" of the coolest nerved robber in the city.

For the second time in three months the fraternity house at 116 St. George St. was burgled last Friday afternoon. Eight dollars were taken this time, as compared to eleven dollars at the time of the previous break-in.

The thief apparently entered by the front door, went upstairs, removed eight dollars from the housekeeper's purse, and proceeded to the room of fraternity member Fred Eggleton, III Meds.

When Eggleton looked up at the sound of his door opening, a youth of about 20 asked for the correct time and quickly backed out of the room.

Although he was accustomed to seeing strangers about the house, Eggleton soon followed to see what the youth wanted.

The hall was empty, but the man almost immediately came out of a room opposite. His suspicions aroused, Eggleton asked the youth what he was doing. With no sign of excitement nor fright, the young man replied that he was checking in the other room to make sure of the correct time, and walked unhurriedly downstairs and outside.

Eggleton followed him, but further queries only resulted in a story of visiting a friend. "He even demanded to know whether I had Separated since their days as seventh grade classmates, Lyall Moran, I MP&C, and Kay McNeil, Household Economics, met again Thursday night as Mr. Freshman and Miss Freshie at the U.C. Freshie Frolic, in West Hall.

"It was a little strange posing cheek to cheek with Kay for the photographer," Lyall exclaimed. "I haven't seen her since I went to Runneymede Rd. public school with her. Soon after our year in seventh grade together I moved from the west end of the city to the north end. You know, I think maybe I had a slight crush on her!"

The choosing of University College's "most representative freshman and freshie" was only one incident in an evening of hilarity that included square dancing in West Hall, a pie eating contest and a cow milking contest.

Of six contestants, Ben Weinstein, Commerce and Finance, proved himself to be the freshman most efficient at demolishing a blueberry meringue pie.

Two of Weinstein's opponents, Bill Tiber and Murray Gazluk, were disqualified when some difference arose between them and they decided to change the contest into a pie fight.

Lil, the Holstein who did her all for the Milk Fund on the City Hall steps this summer, maintained her equanimity with some difficulty as our freshmen tried all at one time to fill cups with her milk. Bob Muckle, (MP&C, finally squeezed out the winning cupful.

Judges of the competition for the titles of Mr. Freshman and Miss Freshie were: Vickie Mills of the Thornton Model Agency, Ken MacFadden of The Telegram, and Hal Rosenthal, publicity director of the U.C. Lit. last year.

They made their decisions on the basis of talent, personality and extra-curricular activities.

The winners were given gift certificates from Eaton's and Simpson's for clothes ensembles worth $125.

Moran said he had won because he had "smiled pretty" at Judge Vickie Mills. Miss McNeill's reaction to her victory: "I can really sing tonight!"

The new king and queen of U.C. freshmen and freshies were presented with their prizes by last year's winners, John Christensen, II Poli. Sci., and Pat Murdoch, II Hist. and Languages.

In the pie eating contest when Eddie Harris, C&F, and Ben Weinstein were brought forward as victors over their opponents, they were surprised to learn they had only won their way into the finals.

The M.C. instructed them that this time they must eat the filling of the pies — without harming the crust. By quickly developing a highly efficient scoop-and-slurp process, Weinstein finally managed to win.

Weinstein and Harris received three dollars and two dollars respectively.

Frank Perry's orchestra alternated popular music with square dance tunes, not allowing an empty moment in the long, full evening. By the end of the evening, Freddy Townshend, the caller, had the freshman and freshies performing

Registration Down 2,000 As Fewer Vets Enrol, Expected Total: 14,000

This year registration at the University of Toronto is expected to reach fourteen thousand, 2,000 fewer than last year, officials at Simcoe Hall reported Saturday. The decrease is due to the large reduction in the numbers of veterans reported by every faculty.

The largest group is again in the Faculty of Arts. University College reported 1,650 students, a reduction of 700 from last year's total. Victoria has registered 1,590, about 600 less, and Saint Michael's has signed up approximately 600. Figures from Trinity were not available.

S.P.S. has a large drop this year with only 2,798 registered as against 3,794 for last year. The other faculties also report smaller numbers in registration.

ISS Seminar

Lays Pattern of Understanding

On June 30, the S.S. Vollendam left Quebec City with 1,500 students on board. Forty-nine of these young people were students of Canadian universities across the country. They were heading for the Kastell Bouvigne near Breda in Holland to join 70 students representing fifteen countries of Europe.

Second of Seminar

This was the second seminar run by the International Students Service to bring together youth from many countries. The formal theme of the seminar was "The Individual and Society". The informal topic was a frank discussion of the ideas, customs, beliefs and hopes of different cultures and different environments.

The Kastell Bouvigne, formerly the hunting castle of the Orange family, and now a girls' school, had been rented by the ISS for the seminar. Surrounded by a large moat and beautiful gardens, the castle is near a wood, and provides recreational facilities such as a tennis court and swimming area. The group arrived from Amsterdam and separated to their living quarters, the girls to the "nunnery", the boys to the monastery, and the professors to the so-called "professory". However, separation was not to last long.

The session was divided into seven seminars. Each student chose two which were closest to his primary interests. Lectures and small group get-togethers provided ample scope for the airing out of problems.

"Value Intellectual Freedom"

"We are trying to do something concrete about laying a pattern of general understanding, and demonstrating in practice the value of intellectual freedom", stated Dr. Long, professor of philosophy at the seminar. Professors from universities across Canada led the various departments such as political science, economics and philosophy.

The seminar was not entirely academic, however. Evenings were spent around a piano or a campfire, singing, talking, and laughing, each a universal language. The library was filled with books loaned by the students for the duration of the seminar.

A daily newspaper called "The Bouvigne Star", with the apt slogan "all the news that fits", carried seminar and world news.

Puzzling Customs

The Canadian students discovered that many things taken for granted here are frowned upon in many countries of Europe. For instance, men and women in Holland are not allowed to swim on the same beach. There is no wearing of shorts and slacks, and flowers in the hair are the mark of a loose woman. According to one student, there was many a mix-up before this was explained.

The seminar lasted for five weeks, with three week-ends free for the students to go where they wished. Several U. of T. students spent their first week-end in Belgium, visiting Bruges, Brussels, Antwerp and Ghent. The second was spent in Holland, driving a rented car through Utrecht, Amsterdam and Vollendam. On the final free week-end these students travelled through Germany.

War Question Horrifies

"I wish we had gone there earlier," said Ruth Comfort, "We understood the German students so

How Come?

The attitude of cautious watchfulness generated by the "cold war" has affected many habits. Not in the least of these is a pastime indulged in by many Canadian citizens—that of crossing the border into the United States. The unobstructed practice of this habit has been greatly curtailed in the past few months by an increasingly vigilant American Immigration Department.

Newspapers have carried numerous accounts of Canadians being refused admission to the United States because of suspected political affiliations or sympathies.

We are unable to judge the actions of the U.S. Immigration Department in most of these cases. Undoubtedly the Department has information about the activities of certain of the people concerned but it is not disclosing the facts to the press.

We are able to judge in the latest case of border detention involving a Canadian and the judgement is a condemnation of the U.S. immigration policy. We hope the department has had more grounds for detention in other cases than it has had in this.

Miss Comfort says she had never belonged to any political organization or its campus affiliate. Her friends corroborate this statement. There is a complete lack of evidence to support any suspicion of Miss Comfort's activities.

The Department has made a mistake. An apology would relieve matters to a certain extent but it would not absolve the U.S. government.

In the first place, a Canadian citizen has been acutely embarrassed by American indiscretion. Gratuitous insults are never appreciated and seldom forgotten.

Secondly, the affair has cast reflections upon an organization which was at the time and is still engaged in a program of international understanding.

The American attitude of travellers across its borders betrays a peculiar uneasiness of mind for the self proclaimed "greatest nation in the world."

The American government has every right to stop at its borders whom it will but an indiscriminate policy such as seems to have been followed in the present case produces nothing but strained relations.

In A Pig's Eye

By FAGU

With a ship burning down hereabouts and somebody setting off a bomb elsewhere, the local papers haven't gotten around to reporting about what I did last week.

So I guess I'll just have to tell you myself.

Maybe if I hadn't had to register Wednesday, it wouldn't have happened.

You know how it was in that Simcoe hall fees lineup. You must have been there. Everybody else on the campus was.

Three and a half hours of shifting from one bleeding foot to the other was broken only by a brisk game of Ring-Around-the-Rosie in which two lovelies from II Pass Arts and a Skuleman needing a haircut joined in. When we ran out of breath, the Engineer brought out his Tiddleywink set which he kept in the same pocket as his sliderule. I'm not much for Tiddleywinks and I told him so. He looked hurt.

Finally I got in, got half my fees form back, and the wickets got all my money.

That would be enough, you would think. But the afternoon was spent from College to Bloor and back again, running up my courses and running down my heels.

When I pulled myself on the overflow westbound street car on College at five, I felt fine. Except my rubber soles were smoking and my nerves were all for going off on a private jag.

All I needed was food, aspirin, peace and quiet. I was carefully reading the blue cover of my calendar as we joggled along. Once in a while the guy next to me would flip a page of his Star and some smoking views of the Noronic would jab me fiercely in the eye. But otherwise it was peaceful. Until the alarm started ringing.

Now I don't mind admitting I've a phobia about alarm clocks. Only thing worse waking you in the morning is the phony cheer of a wake-up program announcer. And this alarm clock was jangling away six seats back in the street car—at 5:13 p.m. (Always look at my watch when I hear the alarm.)

A young untidy urchin in grey shortpants held the hideous machine. A tinny old-style Big Ben with a nice shrill clang. It amused the grub to set this alarm off—feverishly rewinding it whenever the spring gave out.

You know how Toronto people are on street cars. They sit in aloof dignity, doing their darndest not to notice their neighbors, refusing to admit that anything out of ordinary is going on. Would anyone of them bellow: "Sherrap! Cut that racket!"?

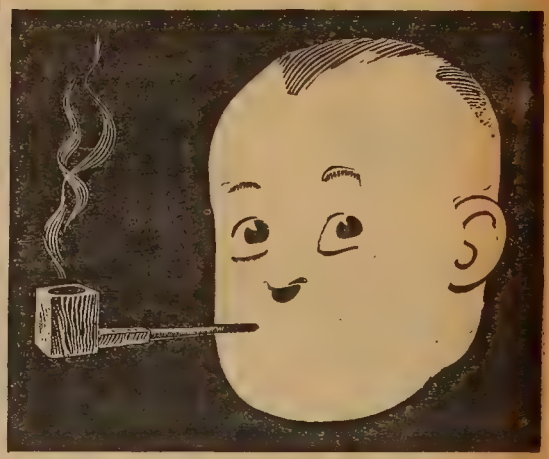
The ringing wasn't too bad at Spadina—the car was bulging with TTC cash customers muffling the sound. But at Bathurst, the congestion eased and the resonance increased.

By Ossington, the car was half-empty and the alarm clanged like a singing commercial in CBC Wednesday Night. The echoes bounced back and forth in the car jabbing at my raw nerve ends in their volleying.

There was a dull thud. My calendar had slipped from my nerveless fingers.

Beads of hot salty sweat were dripping off my forehead. My fingers were flexing in involuntary frenzy. Without realizing what I was doing I got up. Nobody paid any attention to me. They figured I was going to get off. Me, I didn't know what I was going to do.

Walking down the center aisle in a red haze, I stopped in front of the kid with the alarm clock. A woman behind him was feebly suggesting that Johnny should stop that noise. Johnny said what for, I'm just having fun.



Saliva dripped from my grey lips as I grabbed Johnny by his sweater. I twisted the clanging clock out of his dirty little hands. He watched in tongue-tied shock as I smashed the clock with my heel. Heck of a tough clock—took me all of three minutes to stamp out the infernal ringing.

As the ringing stopped, Johnny started yelling his fool head off. So I pulled Johnny out of his seat, twisting his neck in the process. There was a sharp snap. I had broken his chicken-thin neck. His eyeballs fell out and his head made a pretty bloody mess.

I was well in my stride now. With a tearing wrench I ripped off his left arm. Without looking, I flung it away. I heard a irritated snort. A citizen was picking up the bleeding arm from his lap where it had landed. Looking away from it with a wrinkled nose of distaste, he

Germans Think Blame For War Not Their Own

The German people have no guilt complex as a result of the war, said Mr. David N. S. Robertson, Senior Control Officer in Braunschweig, Germany, for the British Foreign Office. Mr. Robertson will be speaking on the administration of Germany at 1:15 p.m. today in the Debates Room, Hart House.

The people do feel a slight sense of guilt but believe the war was waged as a result of the German attack on Poland. The Germans think that the Allies started the war as a counter-attack to drive the Germans out of Poland, and then involved the nation in a world-wide war.

The attitude of the Western Powers toward the German nation immediately following the war was one of harsh peace, he said. This has changed, stated Mr. Robertson, to an attempt to teach the Germans the meaning and workings of Democracy.

Though deprived of actual National Socialism, the attitude of the German nation is still nationalistic. The younger Germans, he said, are changing to the world citizenship plan of Garry Davis, the American who tore up his passport and pronounced himself a citizen of the world.

Mr. Robertson was born in Scotland and came to Ontario, receiving his primary and secondary education at Stratford. He graduated from Queen's in 1934 and went to England where he taught for a year. He has travelled extensively in Italy, France, Germany and Austria, and has visited Russia, China and Japan. He served five years in the R.C.A.F. and joined the British Foreign Service following his discharge.

Vic Student-Run Tuck Shop Proves Good Resting Place

By HERB WOOD

The other afternoon we ducked into good Old Vic.—but just to get out of the rain, mind you. And after our eyes got accustomed to the gloom we started to explore and eventually stumbled downstairs into the tuck shop.

Well bless my soul. Who would have guessed it? Here, surrounded by hoary walls of learning, was a room set aside for comfort and relaxation and as modern as the new bookstore. What a delicious smell of coffee! Our olfactory nerves started to vibrate like crazy.

Room is Empty

The room happened to be empty at that particular moment or else we would never have dared to enter. Following that siren aroma we walked to the counter as if in a trance "A noseful er..I mean a cupa coffee please."

We took a seat and stretched out our legs. Now why hadn't I found this watering place before? Imagine that, coffee only five cents. Hum, just like a Vic. man to keep a thing like this to himself.

The only other person in the room was a man behind the counter, as you no doubt have guessed by now. As it turned out, he was the manager, Bill Annis, II Phil. & History.

Shop is Unique

According to Bill, the tuck shop is unique on the campus in being student managed, "I'm chosen by the V.C.U. and work on a salary basis", he said. "I organize and hire my own staff of boys. We employ about fifteen chaps who work two or three hours a week".

Stevenson House, co-operative student residence apparently has the monopoly for supplying the labour used at the tuck shop. The fellows in the house are all church students. The boys don't spend their money, but put it into a fund to pay for their room and board.

Gives No Credit

On the outside chance you might be interested, Bill gives no credit. Yes siree, it's strictly cash and carry officially anyway. And another thing, they don't allow gum chewing or tobacco smooking. Least ways, you can't buy it in the tuck shop. But what do you want with those things when there're delicious honey-dipped donuts and date cookies to occupy your mind and fill your stomach. Oh yes .bring your girl friend, if you like, but use the outside entrance and come between 2 and 5 in the afternoon.

Our gaze happened to fall on a nearby table loaded with empty bottles. Bill caught our glance. "The executive of V.C.U. was just in here," he explained.

We happened to get on the subject of chocolate bars—I happened to be eating one at the time which made it more of a coincidence—when Bill confided in me. "You know we had a few bars, about 20 boxes, perfectly good, but the guys didn't care for them. So when the price dropped a cent we put them out first. Believe it or not, the same fellows bought them like hotcakes."

Well what do you know about that ..?

A favourite hour for the men in residence is the 9:15 to 10:00 session in the evening. Everything is informal, particularly the dress of the day. People have been seen in pyjamas. During exam. time, books are everywhere, even under the eyes. "So far this year." said Bill, 'I haven't seen one book." "And that's just the way it should be," I added.

Library Extensions To Be Ultra-Modern, Plans Still Budding

Increased facilities and efficiency will be the keynote of the proposed extensions to the University library.

Although plans at present are very much in the formative stage, the new library buildings will assure greater comfort and less wasted time, according to Chief Librarian W. S. Wallace.

Something Definite

The $1,500,000 allocated this summer by the Board of Governors for construction of the new building has given the library committee of the Senate something definite to work on, Wallace said.

"I must emphasize the undeveloped nature of all our plans," the librarian explained.

W. H. Bonus, Assistant Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, supported this opinion. "There is still a lot of spade-work to do," he said.

Wallace said the Board of Governors passed the funds after receiving a report from the library committee. The committee's recommentation had been that the new building should house books for the humanities and the social sciences.

The present library would be for law and the sciences, including medicine. A public passageway and a service passageway were to connect the two structures.

Now that a definite sum of money has been allocated the library committee has been reconvened to develop further its recommendations, Wallace stated. "If necessary," he said, "they will have to revise their recommendations to tally with the funds available.

While making it clear that specific nature of the new library cannot be foreseen until further work is done by the library committee and the architects, the chief librarian described the latest theory on library design, which will probably affect plans for the building.

"The new theory of library architecture is the modular theory," Wallace said. "It is based on the idea of a warehouse with pillars at certain fixed points. This gives the utmost flexibility."

More Space Planned

The chief themes of the Library would be flexibility and an increased number of outlets. As many cubicles as possible were to be available for the use of graduate students in the stacks. (Now there are ten for 1000 graduate students.)

The humanities and the social sciences would probably have separate reading rooms.

The librarian said one of the chief aims is to improve facilities for students of the humanities and of the social sciences. Library facilities are not of such prime importance to science students, who spend much of their time in laboratories, Wallace stated.

Wallace said there will be no return this year to the pre-war policy of group tours to familiarize new students with library procedure. This policy has been dropped when the great increase in registration after the war made it impractical.

"But any student who asks at the desk will be helped to whatever extent he requires," he said.

Wallace said he could see no tendency for text book prices to decrease but said European publications are becoming more easily available.

First Broadcast For Next Month Says SAC Radio

Two-year-old radio experiment under the SAC Radio Committee will continue this year with musical and variety programs and discussion groups, as well as dramatic shows. Radio Director Larry Bouchier said in an interview last week.

Bouchier expressed the hope that enough interest will be taken by the student body in the possibilities of radio activity to form a radio club.

Plans are that the first program will get underway in mid-October.

Bouchier said that the radio workshop, which supplied most of the talent for the show, is without quarters at present. A search was under way for permanent facilities to house the recording machine and to hold interviews.

Last year such authorities as Lister Sinclair, Andrew Allan and Mavor Moore lectured to students on radio technique. Bouchier said the practice may be continued this year if enough interest is shown, especially among freshmen.

Although all types of talent are are needed there is an especially great shortage of playwrights, Bouchier explained, suggesting applicants get in touch with him at HO. 0380.

Berkeley Student Group Pickets and Sues Hotel For Barring Negroes

Berkeley, California, Sept. 23 — (Exchange)— Negro students were refused rooms in a hotel here, in spite of vacancies, according to the University chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Coloured People. As a result, the Association has lodged a civil suit against the hotel, charging the hotel with discrimination because of race.

NAACP campus president James W. Clark charged that the hotel rented rooms to white students after turning away Negroes who applied for admittance. Since California law provides a minimum fine of $100 for discrimination because of race by a public place, the Association decided to file a law suit.

Seminar Aftermath

Twenty-Four Hours at Ellis Island

By RUTH COMFORT

The following statement released yesterday by Ruth Comfort, III Occupational Therapy, which tells in detail the events surrounding her recent detention on Ellis Island on an alleged charge of having given "an inflamatory impromptu speech (presumably on communism)" on the boat which brought her back to North America. Ruth attended the ISS Seminar held in Europe this summer.

The business began when Olga and Evelyn came to me and said the man at the desk in the library was asking for Ruth Comfort and he had a note for me. Thinking it was a communication from my mother, who was on the pier, I inquired of this man about the note. He said he would take me next although there were several people in line ahead of me. The officer then asked me my name, my address, then whether I had ever been connected with the Labour Progressive party in Canada! To this I answered "No." He then asked for my political inclinations and what organization I belonged to. He then asked me to sit down and said he would deal with me later.

"I Was Alarmed"

I was, of course, immediately alarmed by these questions and spoke to Bucky and Ed (Eberle) who followed me. I had noticed a card pinned to the passenger list on the officer's desk with my name in red pencil in large letters with writing beneath it. Meanwhile another immigration official had arrived with a file of papers. This man fingered through some pages and then nodded to the other officer. Ed asked why I was being questioned and the official, presuming he was a friend, began asking what organizations he belonged to and had his colleague look up Ed's name in the file but it was apparently not there.

When the official was finished with the remainder of the people in the room he asked them all to leave while he would question me alone. Bucky asked why they could not stay and the officer replied that I was being held by the U. S. government and would be questioned alone and then sent to Ellis Island for further investigation. The matter being one between myself and the government, I would not be allowed to land in New York that day. When Murray asked if there was any way I could get help or receive visitors the officer assured him that I was in good hands and would receive all necessary help. The boys left and I was acutely anxious. The officer again questioned me about my affiliations with the Labour-Progressive Party and also questioned my motives for going to Europe and said: "You visited Russia, didn't you?" I asked if I was the only one from the Volendam to be so detained. He said "Yes," that they expected more on a ship arriving in the afternoon.

Guard Arrives

Presently a guard arrived and said he would help me with my luggage. He said his name was Ernest and he was taking me to Ellis Island. I passed through customs without difficulty and was then allowed to meet my mother As my aunt had her car at the pier Ernest decided that I might be taken to

Radio: Stage 50

Last night the CBC's Stage 50 (Sunday 10:00 p.m.) delved back fourteen centuries for Aristophanes' comedy, "The Birds", to provide Lister Sinclair with another pert commentary on Canadiana. This nimble leap was accomplished by substituting our own fair city for Athens, if you will excuse it, and a fairly nimble substitution it was, too, though not too pointedly plain in its more detailed parallels. The story: two discontented Athenians (Torontonians) persuade the birds to build a city in the clouds, thereby intercepting the sacrificial smoke from earth and starving Olympus. The analogy is not very obvious, is it? Well, Athens had religious fanaticism in the aftermath of the mutilated Hermae and Toronto has Blue Laws in the aftermath of a Puritan conscience. Are you suggesting we stop paying taxes, Mr. Sinclair, or put a cordon around the City Hall? In Aristophanes' birdland began an era of light and prosperity and in yon modern author's cloudy Utopia are no public opinion polls, no publicity men, and no by-laws.

Naturally, in such a hepped-up script, Aristophanes' rhapsody has not survived intact but in spirit, and Mr. Sinclair's improvisations are at least as clever as the best lyrics in, say, a Broadway hit show. The chorus was still there, with sprightly accompaniment by Lucio Aggostini, and the overall effect was that of a bright, very original, sophisticated operetta. Cast was excellent (speaking and singing), although the fantasy got a bit heavy sometimes (too much twittering from the carrier pigeon).

I don't know what the effect on the listening count is, but I rather admire Andrew Allan's unorthodox choice of material, and the CBC's free hand; I doubt if "The Birds" could happen on a commercial program. I also admire his slick production to back it up; in the competitive sense, it must not be underestimated, however fine the material.

Earl Moss

For its first concert in the new Sunday afternoon series, Hart House was off to a fine start with Toronto pianist Earle Moss as the guest. Mozart's Sonata in G. Major was the opener, wherein the pianist's interpretation was marked by a definite restraint and constant control even in the rondo forte passages, which less accurate interpreters usually overdo.

Remarkable in the Mozart was the tempo at which Mr. Moss played movement one. It was barely above continuity level in speed. This treatment enabled him to shade the delicate Mozart phrase with amazing finesse. He produced a mirror clarity in his leggero passages, with a tingling warmth, not often achieved in classic works.

Franz Liszt's monumental Variations on a Theme by Bach proved Earl Moss to be a pianist with an extraordinary technique. From this difficult, climactic set of variations, he brought forth the famed "Crucifixus" theme (from the B Minor Mass) with an electric touch, and a keen sense of the moving majesty of the phrase.

With Bela Bartok's Rondo on Folk Tunes and Maurice Ravel's cyclic Sonatine, Mr. Moss closed a programme immensely demanding in both technique and in musicianship. His performance held the listener unconscious of the performer, yet conscious of his purpose to sincerely interpret the composer's handiwork.

much better after seeing the unbelievable devastation in Germany. Many of the towns looked as if they had been bombed the weeks before. It gave us a greater insight into the German problem, and left us with a horrified wonder that people could still talk of another war."

Young people representing many races and religions were present at the seminar. No discrimination of any kind was felt, and Catholics, Jews and Indonesians formed an integral part of the seminar.

Both change and exchange of ideas formed the main purposes of the seminar. Many ideas formed in the specialization of studies were altered under the broader application to internationalism. Concrete examples were now available to be applied to everything these people had learned and would learn.

Understanding Realized

The seminar was financed this year by the Canadian Council for Reconstruction through UNESCO. An invitation has been received from France to spend next summer in that country. The people who were present at the seminar and the larger group who have profited and will profit by the knowledge gained at the seminar fervently hope that the sufficient amount of money will be raised. "I have a firm conviction that the objective of international understanding was fully realized," stated Dr. Long. "We could see the students and also the professor developing an increasing interest and understandstanding in the European attitude."

One student remarked, "We would never have had this wonderful opportunity if it had not been for ISS. I hope that many other people will have the chance to gain and give as much as we have."

any authority to question him," Eggleton said when describing the incident in an interview.

Despite Eggleton's protests, the young man walked off down the street. "I wasn't suspicious enough to try to forcefully detain him," Eggleton explained. "Everything is so casual around here it is easy for a stranger to walk in without arousing suspicion."

Almost immediately the housekeeper reported the theft to Eggleton, but pursuit proved futile.

"It may be that this is the same man who broke into the house this summer," Eggleton said. "That time the thief was actually rifling the bureau drawers of one of the fellows while he was asleep in the room. When our member was awakened by the noise, the burglar simply replied that he must be in the wrong room and walked out."

Eggleton gave the following description to the police: About 20 years of age, 5'7" tall, short dark hair, and wearing wine Eisenhower jacket, a sport shirt and blue trousers.

threw the arm back. His expression clearly indicated I should keep my stuff where it belonged. Then he went back to his careful perusal of Everybody Slept Here.

Losing my enthusiasm, I dropped the body on the floor of the street car. There wasn't a sound. Except somebody turning a page in his Tely. The driver called out my stop.

Wiping my sticky hands carefully on my trousers, I stepped over the bloodstained corpse, pulled the buzzer cord, stepped on the treadle, and got off.

After I got in the house, I washed the blood off my hands, but left some dark red smears on the bathtub. I wasn't hiding anything.

Then I warmed up a can of beans and opened a bottle of coke from the Frig and had supper. Then I took a nap. I was pretty tired after the tough day so I went to sleep right away.

That's what happened that day. I thought you'd like to know.

Twenty-Four Hours on Ellis Island

the Ellis Island ferry in her car. He changed his uniform for civvies and we left the pier. On the journey, Ernest in answer to questions regarding the completely baffling events said: "At the expense of my job, so don't tell anyone I told you but" that I had made a speech on board the ship evidently in favor of communism. Later he said that five secret service agents had been on the boat since Rotterdam and two more had gone aboard with the pilot. When we mentioned that some of the students on board had been to the Budapest Festival and were outspoken on their political views he said that they would be followed secretly.

"My Politics Dormant"

While we waited for the ferry we hashed the whole thing over and over and could get nowhere. My politics had been vaguely liberal but quite dormant! I had never bothered to join any political club. Certainly I had never been in any way connected with the Labor Progressive party, and as I had not made a speech on board the ship I became less worried about my plight. I left my friends, assuring them that I would be all right and that I would use the phone that Ernest said would be available, to keep in touch with them.

As it turned out, it was impossible to secure permission to phone out at any time. They only allow phoning when friends or relatives do not already know of one's detention.

Ellis Island is a typically institutional-looking red brick set of buildings, not enhanced by the stone eagles and urns which decorate various prominences. The detention side of the island is distinguished from the hospital side by high mesh fences painted orange and wire mesh on all the windows. Ernest's job was finished when he handed me over to a man inside the detention building.

Meal Not Tasty

I was taken immediately to the large cafeteria with its long rows of tables and chairs and white tile floor. A cook ladled the probably nutritious though not so tasty luncheon into my aluminium army tray with its odd-shaped depressions.

A guard in shirt sleeves with a cigar in his mouth watched me eat and then unlocked the several doors which separated me from the main detention hall. This room is about the size and shape of the Union Station concourse, though not so high, and has a superb view of Manhattan through large windows along one side. The floor is red tile and there is nothing soft to absorb the sounds and voices which bounce back and forth like those in a swimming pool. There are wooden benches and chairs about and a few couches. People play cards, or write, read, talk, play ping-pong, billiards, or just sit.

There is a "garden" which is reached by a catwalk and a series of steps over the roof tops and down to the ground level. This area of grass is separated on the one side by a wooden fence from the criminal men, and on the other side by a wire fence from a yard for men — just what kind of men I was never sure, though some said they were stowaways. A very nice woman, the matron, showed me my bed which was one of eight in a large clean room with three basins, a mirror, a wardrobe cupboard, and an adjoining biffy. Women and children live in separate quarters from the men, even married people. There is a laundry with tubs, and clotheslines, and irons. There are shower-rooms and baths. There is no segregation of the women criminals from the other detainees, though the men are segregated.

Irony Surrounds "Lady"

It was such a lovely day outside that I spent the rest of the afternoon in the garden, studying my surroundings and lapping up the sunshine. On the next island stood the Statue of Liberty and, ironically, I saw her through three sets of barbed wire fences. The busy harbour traffic moved back and forth across the blue water. People sat and read or talked or walked about. The children played cheerfully with an old hose and a wooden bench. I could not hear anyone speaking English.

Eventually I struck up a conversation with a young man sunning on the grass near me and found him most interesting. His name was Vladimir and he had escaped from Czechoslovakia since the coup and had been working in London for a year. He had arrived two days before I did on a student ship from England, on his way to the University of Chicago on a scholarship to study economics. He needed some American citizen to put up a five hundred dollar bond for him, guaranteeing his returning to his very good job in London and his aging mother there. So far he had had no luck. He knew only two people in America he might ask, both brief acquaintances from Germany years ago. Some people are on Ellis Island for five or six months. Some are political prisoners, some are bond cases, some have visas which have expired and they refuse to return to their countries now in Russian hands, and some are simply medical certificate cases.

Use of Phone Refused

I asked twice if I could use the phone and finally was taken to an inspector for examination. He reported that the Canadian Consul had been phoning as well as my mother, but that it was not possible for me to contact them. He too questioned me about my politics and affiliations. He said things were held up because it was Sunday but he was sure I would be looked after next morning. He had tried to contact the person who had reported on me from the boat but had been unable to reach him. He made me feel much more confident by saying he thought it must be a case of mistaken identity because I didn't look like a communist!

I talked about many things with Vladimir in the garden after supper but we could reach no conclusions with regard to my case. Lights must be out at nine p.m. but I was so tired by the day's excitement that I went up to my room around half past seven and slept like a log until a quarter to seven the next morning.

"Kept Ears Open"

I could not imagine where I was when I first opened my eyes. At seven a bell is rung for breakfast and we all trooped down to the dining hall. After a breakfast of porridge and applesauce, bacon and tea with bread, I came upstairs and rested. People's names are shouted for hearings beginning at nine o'clock so I sat near the main desk and kept my ears open for my name. I bought myself a pencil and some paper at a little counter which sells everything one could want almost: pop, underwear, tobacco, chocolate bars; it is even possible to order sandwiches and milk. Names were shouted, various officials came in and out. The mail man and a news vendor were almost stampeded.

Shortly after eleven my name was called and I followed a dark, middle-aged man through doors and corridors. He explained that he had not yet received my file but that, because of pressure from the Canadian Consul, he would hold my hearing without them. I raised my right hand in solemn oath, and as the inspector questioned me, his secretary took down every word.

Passport Checked

First my name and birthplace. I showed him my passport. Then I was asked to recall each time I had ever been in the United States, the time of year, and the point of entry and exit. He evidently did not know I was a student until he asked about my trip to Europe. He was interested about the circumstances under which I went, and also about the nature of ISS: what it stood for, who belonged, how one joined, what it did. He then asked about my political leanings, whether I had ever voted and for whom I voted in the last election. After I had answered him he reminded me that I did not need to answer any questions I did not wish to. He then asked if I had attended any political meetings or received any communist literature or whether I had ever studied communism and read books by Marx or Lenin. I never have, and my most extensive knowledge of communism comes from what I learned through the seminar this summer. I told him so.

"Fly Or Be Detained"

He then gave me the choice of either flying non-stop from Ellis Island to Toronto that afternoon (at whose expense, I don't know) or consenting to remain at Ellis Island until my case could be cleared up. I asked if I took the plane trip whether I should have trouble crossing the border again and he replied that I would probably be coming by rail and my hearing could be held right on the platform because all the necessary people and documents would be right there!

I said I would rather stay on Ellis Island for three months if it meant getting to the bottom of this groundless accusation. The inspector then left to get my papers which had arrived and came back in about ten minutes and announced that he could clear the case in an hour. He told me to go to lunch.

When I returned from lunch I was told that Mr. Cannon from the Canadian Embassy was waiting to see me. As Inspector Fingleman guided me to Mr. Cannon he asked me if I knew anything about an inflammatory impromptu speech I had given on board ship (presumably on communism). There was no one to prove I had not done so as I told them, but his attitude towards me had changed considerably during my interview and he did say that he thought I was not the type who would give a speech to a gathering. Mr. Cannon is a young and smiling man who surprised me by saying: "We know that young people are apt to be indiscreet. . . ." He said that the embassy had been in rather a furore over me and he advised me to take the plane trip in order to relieve my family who, he said, were extremely worried. Mr. Cannon went off for lunch and said he would be around in case of further developments.

"Could Hardly Believe"

I had hardly returned to the big room when Mr. Fingleman hurried in and said if I would just follow him he would put my papers in order and I would be free to go. I could hardly believe my ears. I went upstairs and packed the United States Government towel I had been given and literally floated down the steps. I spoke to Vladimir and he gave me the phone number of a friend in New York to ask for help for him and then I left.

Mr. Fingleman took me to a small courtroom adjoining his office and made out my passport and visa form. He was profusely polite and apologetic and could not do enough to make me feel at ease and comfortable. He apologized for my detention, for the fact that there may have been criminals or prostitutes in my room, for the stupidity of some officials and said how personally ashamed he was for what had happened. He asked me if there was anything at all I wished to ask him and he would try to answer me. I asked him whether mine had been a case of mistaken identity. He replied that a lookout notice had been posted on me and it was thought that I was either a communist sympathizer or a communist. He then told me that he had studied communism and that they are dangerous because they stand for the overthrow of a government by force.

No Stigma Attached

I then asked if there would be any mark on my passport to show that I had been detained, whether it would be known in future that I had been held on Ellis Island. He told me there was no stigma attached to Ellis Island because people came there for many different reasons and I might say quite truthfully that I had never

Movie Review

Roseanna McCoy

Roseanna McCoy, playing at Shea's and the Nortown, is the screen's version of how the notorious and long-standing McCoy and Hatfield feud was settled. Proving that true love is greater than the squirrel rifle even in the Kentucky hills.

Much can be said for the straightforward portrait of these jug-swinging - gun - toting Americans. The McCoys were peace-loving, God-fearing farmers with pretty daughters. Just across the river separating the two clans were the Hatfields possessing large families of "Nature" boys in various stages of development. The Hatfields found squirrel huntin' an "bar" chasing more in their line than following a plow.

Roseanna McCoy (Joan Evans) displays a natural ability unique for one who is making her first appearance before the movie camera.

Her rise to stardom is the cinderella story of the year. Sam Goldwyn, looking for fresh, unspoiled talent, sent his scouts scouring the country. Among the thousands of pictures sent him was one of Joan Eunson (her screen name is taken from a maternal grandmother). In the space of a week, Joan was taking a screen test and within a year "Roseanna McCoy" was finished.

Farley Granger as Johnse Hatfield, Raymond Massey as Pop McCoy, Charles Bickford as Pop Hatfield, and Richard Baseheart as a murderous unbalanced member of the Hatfield tribe give full value to John Collier's script.

even asked how she voted in the last election, and whether she had read Marx and Lenin. Ruth is not, and has not been, a member of any political group, she said yesterday.

Her detention at Ellis Island came as a surprise to other members of the Toronto group who attended the ISS Seminar this summer, and returned with her on the "Volendam".

Also surprising was the fact that although there were students who had been to a festival held in Budapest and organized by The World Federation of Democratic Youth, an alleged communist-front group, none of these students were held. "And they were really outspoken on their political views" said Ruth.

Ruth will have no trouble entering the United States in future, and the twenty-four hours she spent on Ellis Island will not affect her standing on State Department records. She is reportedly completely cleared by the American statement.

Blues Bow To Sarnia In Exhibition Tilt

VARSITY SPORTS

SARNIA SIDELIGHTS

Blues Enjoy Week-End Imps Prove Good Hosts

Sarnia really treated the Big Blues well for their stay in the city, putting them up in the best hotel and giving them the best of everything. The police department even blocked off a no-parking area on an adjoining street so the Toronto players and officials who drove down might have a place to park their cars.

Sarnia's daily, the Sarnia Observer, ran a big spread on the champs with a big pic of last year's champs. The locals really expected the Blues to give their Imps a beating because they remembered last year's 41-0 drubbing by Western. The Sarnia and Windsor sportswriters offered two and three to one on Varsity with only one taker.

There was a trumpet band consisting of the Legionettes and the Lambton Garrison trumpet bands cavorting about. They put on a good show, and had Bob Cringan's congregation beaten in at least one department—they had seven (count 'em, seven) drum majorettes.

The bus taking the players down to the high school to dress (there are no dressing rooms at the stadium) was not gloomy or sad. The players joked and nursed their injuries, taking the game for what it was—an exhibition of skill and science. The coach looked a little worried though.

The team was invited to a banquet at the golf club after the game, and the boys really packed it in. It was a buffet, and the players (noticeably Bruce Cummings) displayed extraordinary skill at piling their plates to the maximum.

On the train everyone was tired but no one slept. Card decks were very much in evidence with most playing bridge. Did you know that Bill Brewer was a sharp bridge player, and that Danylchuck was extremely skilful at Hearts? Jack Life, the team manager, proved himself very adept at vingt-et-un (twenty-one, that is).

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

Pass out the crying towels mother, our team lost. Ain't no use crying son, it was only an exhibition game.

Saturday's game at Sarnia bore a distinct resemblance to a horse race where one of the horses has been entered to get a workout with real competition. The jockey is given instructions to race him easy and not to make a drive for the wire. Same way with the Blues last week, chillun, so stop moanin'.

In the words of the coach himself, the Blues were played as an experiment. Bob Masterson wanted to ascertain (big word) just what he had in the way of football talent, and how they would show in competition. He used every man that was dressed and physically fit for action. He put them in positions other than those they regularly play to find out how the team was set for replacements in case the passer or kicker was injured.

These substitutions sometimes reached ridiculous proportions, as when Danylchuk was called on to kick. Little Dany used his head and ran around the end for a big gane, but he was really supposed to boot it (according to Dany).

The team showed quite a bit of natural football ability, but lacked the timing and polish that comes with practice and experience. The team looked a little better than last year's at the stage of the season, and had a little more speed. In a post-mortem talk on the train the coach told your correspondent that the team showed plenty of depth but lacked experience. He was of course a little disappointed about the loss but was pleased with what he saw.

The main reason for the loss was the inopportune fumbling. The referees called several poor decisions, but we had better not bring out the sour grapes. The team was not as strong on defence as they should have been but Bob shoulders the entire blame. He had not drilled the team in proper positional play for defence with the result that large plunging gains were made by Sarnia through small holes. This will be remedied toot sweet.

And leave us not forget that the spark-plug of the Blues was not dressed, throwing a heavy load on the young not-so-cagey players. Cummings doesn't make the team, but he makes a difference in the play. Some of the others were playing in various stages of injury, and Pete Bennett, the giant of the club did not get on at all because of a bad knee.

Masterson is the kind of coach that says "let Western win the exhibition games, as long as we win the league games." Bob is primarily interested in winning the championship again, and all else is secondary.

We repeat—the Blues have a good club, and a pre-season loss doesn't eliminate them from the race. Yes, Paw, I ain't a cryin' no more.

Meet The Ball Club

BILL BREWER was a sensation with the intermediate team last season, and likely would have been with the Blues had he been eligible for senior competition. Bill comes from Bermuda, and played his first football two years ago at Trinity College School. A good soccer player, he immediately took to the Canadian game, and although green to senior football, appears headed for intercollegiate fame under the watchful eye of Bob Masterson.

One of the fastest men on the team, Bill also can kick and pass, and is one of the most natural players ever to appear on the Varsity scene. This sophomore sensation is 20 years old, weighs 165, and is a trifle over the six foot mark. Brewer is enrolled at Trinity College.

Ticket Sale At Varsity Starts Mon.

Student football tickets will be on sale to all members of the University in the form of coupon books this year as was the case last year. These books, priced at $1.50, will admit the purchaser to the five home games scheduled for Varsity Stadium this year.

While the playoffs are not included, bookholders will be given a priority should Varsity qualify for a playoff game. Holders of student tickets will be admitted to the students' section only although regular Reserve Seat tickets will be sold on the campus.

Coupon books will be on sale at the south door of the Arena from 10:00 a.m. till 6 p.m. today, tomorrow and Wednesday at the same time. Athletic Society membership cards must be shown.

Following last year's procedure the married ex-service students may purchase an additional book for their wives by signing a certificate that the book will be used solely by the wife of the buyer.

The first home game of the schedule takes place this Saturday, October 1, when the Toronto Beaches-Indians will confront the Blues providing a stiff home debut for the defending intercollegiate champs.

The B-I Combines were first to face last year's Blues in the 48-49 season opener. In a thrilling seesaw battle the perennial rivals battled to a 7-all deadlock which featured a terrific 115 yard runback by diminutive Doug Pyzer, now with the Argos, with only 45 seconds left in the game to set the Beaches on a par with the Blues.

This year's Beaches aggregation are rated slightly stronger and though without Pyzer, they boast Joe Kane, erstwhile senior Blue backfielder. So get your tickets and get out and meet your Blues.

Varsity Defeated 18-11 Bobbles Prove Downfall As Backfield Breaks In

By BOB DNIEPER

The University of Toronto Big Blues went on display for the first time this season in an exhibition game with the Sarnia Imperials Saturday at Sarnia. The Blues lost the game 18-11, largely through first-game nervousness and costly fumbles. Sarnia has played four league games and are in second place in the O.R.F.U. standings. Toronto was outscored, but not outplayed, as only one of the three Sarnia touchdowns was earned; the others came off fumbles by the Varsity backfield.

Subbed Blues Off

It was early evidenced that the Blues were off in timing and ball handling. The Blues made a few good plays to get Sarnia on their own 30 yard line, but Sarnia made twenty yards on a plunge when they caught Varsity asleep, then followed it up by a twenty yard end run to bring the ball to the Blues' twenty-seven. The Imps' try for a field goal failed and Chorestecki ran the ball back to his own five. On the first play the ball was fumbled and picked up by Den Davey who stepped over the goal line unmolested for the first major of the game. Fisher's convert was good to give the Imperials a 6-0 lead.

Kick Blocked

In the second quarter Sarnia made the six firsts on good interference and poor end run defences by the Blues. Varsity managed to hold them and take the ball to start their own offence, making four firsts. Unfortunately John Crincich blocked a Varsity kick and picked up the ball to run it to the Blues' five. The line held for two downs but on the third "Dutch" Davey plunged and made it by six inches. The convert was good.

Brewer TD's

The score must have angered the oTronto players because they began to fight and drive their way up the field. Ian Clark and John Kennedy were injured, but returned to the bench later. Murray Hadlow made some large running gains to bring Varsity to Sarnia's 45. The Blues' first score came on a pass and lateral combination play. Huble Sinclair heaved a forward to Jack Gray who lateraled to newcomer Bill Brewer. Bill evaded several tacklers and outran the Sarnia team to cross the line standing up. The convert failed.

Blues Improve

The second half brought better play by the Blues, and in the third quarter dominated the play completely. Rangy Alex Lawson recovered a Sarnia fumble 35 yards out from the Sarnia goal, and and caught a pass on the next play to bring the ball closer. Jack Gray snagged one on the Imps' eight to set the stage for the Blues' second score. Bill Danylchuk took the ball on a left fake and ran the eight around the right end to go over easily. John Chorestecki kicked the extra point.

Davey Best

The last period found Sarnia going through the Toronto line easily on slow, driving, plunges by Dutch Davey, easily Sarnia's best player in the game. They drove right up the field and scored on a wide plunge with Gus Scheiers rying. Gus made the convert, too. Big Bob Bazos intercepted a pass and ran the ball into scoring position for the Blues but was called back on a technicality. The Blues really attacked through the air then, but time ran out as they had the ball on Sarnia's ten.

Tennis Tourney To Start Oct. 5 Blue Team Host

The University of Toronto will be the hosts in the coming Intercollegiate tennis tournament, which will be held at the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club Oct. 5, 6, 7. The meet has been moved forward one week in the hope that good weather will prevail. The method of team selection is rather complex.

All of last year's team plus certain newcomers, designated by coach Sid Hermant, will be declared ineligible for the early rounds of the intramural tourney, which will be held on Sept. 28 at the aforementioned club. After the intramural tournament is over, these players will be allowed to challenge in. This new method of selection is designed to give more players opportunity to advance in the matches.

Last year's intercollegiate singles champion, Art Anderson, will be back to represent the Varsity, and will attempt to retain his crown. Art is at OCE this year. Len Turner, who teamed with Aart last year to win the doubles event will partner with him in the hopes of repeating thir win.

McGill, the defending team champions are reputed to again have a strong entry, but exact personnel is not known as yet. At Toronto, the Athletic Office reported a large list of freshmen entries, and the general feeling is that Varsity will be stronger this year than last when they were runners up to the Redmen. Entries are still being accepted in the Intramural Office.

Sportswoman

ARCHERY

For the first time in the history of the bow and arrow, a women's intercollegiate tournament will be held in Toronto. Although this is a comparatively new sport to enter the field of competition among university women, nevertheless the interest shown has been keen. Last year a women's Archery Club was organized at Varsity, and the team that was sent to the meet at McMaster placed fourth, with McGill taking top honours.

The defending champions compete this year with teams from Queen's, Western, McMaster and MacDonald Hall, as well as our own Blue and White team, under the able guidance of Miss A. Slack. This is scheduled for Friday, October 21, in the Varsity Stadium.

As yet the Toronto team of four has not been picked and Miss Slack is on the lookout for all those women with a careful eye and steady arm who always hit the right spot on the target.

SOFTBALL

Notices are appearing in the various colleges and faculties urging all those who are interested to sign up for softball. Practices begin this week at noon hour and the reps are looking for solid teams, once the league gets in full swing. To have a fair and square game the Softball Club has sent out a call for umpires, as well as base umps.

As it stands now, games will start next Monday, October 3, at the latest, either in the Trinity field or the Stadium, from 1:00-2:00. Today and tomorrow have been set aside by Dr. Stewart of the University Health Service to examine all potential softball players, since medicals are a must for this sport.

Freddy Sgambatti Obtains PHE Post

Fred Sgambatti, well known local football referee, PHE graduate, Athletic Night announcer and Duffy of Duffy's Tavern impersonation, has been assigned a post on the staff of the Physical Health Education Department. Fred has been well-known especially in football circles, but has also done a lot of work around the University. Congratulations.

Vancouver, Sept. 24th,—(CUP)—Students at the University of British Columbia will vote Oct. 3 to increase their student fee which will take care of future plans of the International Student Service to bring displaced persons to study in Canada, it was learned here today.

Vote On Germans

On October 5 a general meeting of the UBC Alma Mater Society (comparable to the Students' Administrative Council at Toronto) will vote on unfreezing a fund of $4,100 now held in trust which was provided by the AMS last year to bring four German students to study at UBC. The money was placed in trust when it was learned from the federal government that German students would not be allowed to come to Canada to study under the proposed ISS plan.

If the funds are unfrozen they will be used to pay the expenses of two DP's now attending UBC on an exchange plan with the University of Hambourg. The plan was sponsored by ISS.

The Toronto ISS Committee does not plan to request a student levy here, Bill McDougall, Toronto ISS chairman, said yesterday. "The five DP's at Toronto have been completely financed now," he said.

Funds from ISS plus a $600 grant from The Students' Administrative Council are paying the expenses of the five European students who will spend this year studying at Toronto.

Official Apology To Ruth Comfort, —'Sad Mistake'

The following statement was released yesterday afternoon by the Canadian Department of External Affairs in Ottawa.

"Miss (Ruth) Comfort was detained as a result of a most regrettable and unfortunate mistake, and there was no information in the files of the United States Immigration Service which would render her inadmissable should she apply for entry into the U.S. in the future."

Ruth Comfort was detained Sept. 11 at Ellis Island by U.S. immigration officials on her way back from Europe. They claimed she had made an allegedly inflammatory speech aboard ship.

Public Utility Lanterns Mark Girls' Residences For Daring Male Gaels

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 27—(CUP)—Queen's is making an early bid for recognition.

Last week, certain male students of the university decorated the entrances to all the female residences with red lanterns of the type normally used on public utilities roadblocks.

Just what was intended by this action was not quite clear. However, university authorities ordered their removal fast.

Rugby Tickets Attract Crowds On First Day

The Athletic Association reported a heavy sale of books of football tickets to students on the first day of sale yesterday. The books of coupons are on sale today and Wednesday at the south door of Varsity Arena from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The student tickets cost $1.50 and admit holders to all regularly scheduled games. They do not include any possible play-off games but bookholders will be given priority in the sale of play-off tickets if a play-off is necessary.

Last year many Toronto students who wanted tickets to the final play-off game between Western and Toronto were unable to get them. By buying a book of tickets now, you assure yourself of a ticket to any play-off games. Athletic Association officials said.

Admit to lecture cards must be presented when you purchase your tickets, officials reminded students yesterday. For students who are married there are special books for wives, available upon signing a certificate that the books will be used only by them.

The ticket books will admit students only to the student section at games, although Reserve Seat tickets will also be on sale on the campus.

The first game is this Saturday, when the Blues will meet Balmy Beach in an exhibition tilt.

Tryouts Find Cheerleading More Work Than Glamor

Some forty girls and fifteen male candidates for this year's Varsity cheerleading squad found out Saturday morning that cheerleading is not all glamor. A combination of a good hour and a half tryout period on the rather windy and cold Trinity playing field, and the resultant aching muscles illustrated this fact.

Reduce Numbers

The tryouts reduced the number still in the running to approximately fifteen girls and six boys. Another practice was held this afternoon at 4.30 p.m. to make further eliminations, and the final choice is hoped to be made by Tuesday.

The final choice is being made as soon as possible to enable the squad to whip themselves into polished shape for the Varsity-Beaches game next Saturday. Members of the Blue and White Society, headed by the chairman, Bill Turner, were on hand to make the cuts.

"This year the Society is placing the main emphasis of the requirements of the prospective cheerleaders on their attitude and spirit," Turner said. Turner stressed that the squad is representative of the spirit of the University. Candidates who looked upon the job as a chance for social position, personal prestige, or perhaps a date with the quarter-back, were not desirable.

"The Society is looking for people who are willing to work hard, come out regularly to their many practices, and display lots of drive and enthusiasm even during a cold, rainy November rugby game," Turner explained. "Also, the boys need a certain amount of gymnastic experience, and the girls require a certain amount of poise and naturalness."

Cartwheels Not Practical

The girls were garbed in various styles of clothing, from the long new look skirts and blazers to shorts, slacks, and jerseys. The result of this diversified clothing was that in many cases modesty forbade some of the girls from trying any of the well-known cheerleading antics, such as cartwheels. The more lightly clad girls got some inkling of just how cold it can get when one has no more protection than those smart Varsity blazers and little white skirts.

Ross Worthy, II Vic., back in the squad from last year, assisted the male candidates in the tryouts, demonstrating the motions used in the yells and encouraging drive and spirit. Five veteran girls from last year also were present: Margaret Harrington, III P.H.E.; Helen Channon, III P.H.E.; Hilka Tilpula, II P.H.E.; June Pemberton, IV U.C., and Diana Troop, III U.C. Each of these girls took a group of the tryouts, and showed them the know-how of cheerleading.

Last year the team consisted of nine girls and four boys; as yet however, the definite composition of the squad this year has not been settled. The number of students trying out this year was about the same as last year: approximately 60.

Consulship of Caesar To Be Lecture Topic Of Bryn Mawr Savant

The consulship of Julius Caesar will be the subject of an address by Professor Lily Ross Taylor to be given on October 14 in University College. Professor Taylor is the head of the classics department at Bryn Mawr College.

Referred to as "one of the continent's most brilliant scholars" by Professor G. Norwood, Director of Classical Studies at University College, Professor Taylor specializes in Roman history and Latin literature.

Her book, "Party Politics in the Age of Caesar", is a collection of speeches she gave when she was Sayther Professor at the University of California.

Professor Taylor will give two lectures at University College, the first sponsored by the School of Graduate Studies and the second by the Ontario Classic Association.

LOYALTY OATH PLAN OPPOSED

Berkeley, California, Sept. 23 — (Exchange)— Opposition to the proposed loyalty oath for faculty members was reported increasing here.

The purpose of the oath, according to the university Board of Regents, is to protect the University from irresponsible charges of Communism on the campus. The oath states that the signer is not a member of the Communist party or any other party advocating the overthrow of the Government by force.

A faculty member stated that the oath was opposed because of the "insistence of the University on joining the oath with contracts."

University authorities, however, have never officially stated whether the signing of the oath is in any way connected wth the retention of staff members.

Meanwhile, progress of the petition for students' signatures in opposition to the measure was reported "very good so far." The chairman of the temporary coalition committee stated that 1,000 signatures had been obtained on 40 committee is still circulating another 60 petitions. He stated further that most of the work was being done by Student Progressives, with little help from other students.

College Magazines

Openings For Future Eliots

"College literary magazines give people who want to write an opportunity to get their work printed," agree the four editors of the literary publications on the campus.

Harry Green, editor of Acta Victoriana and Sam Neill, editor of St. Michael's Trireme, agreed entirely with the statement of James Scott, book editor of The Telegram that "the college serious magazine has proved invaluable in helping some of the best writers in North America, T. S. Eliot and Norman Mailer amongst them, break into print."

Says Poets Ape Eliot

Ronald Bryden, editor of the Trinity Review said that the "little magazines produce more T. S. Eliots than Charles Dickenses." Editor of the U.C. Undergrad, Richard Tait, said that "everyone trying to write poetry to-day is trying to be a T. S. Eliot as everyone writing in Tennyson's day was trying to be a Tennyson."

The four editors were very optimistic about their plans for the coming year. The St. Michael's Trireme will see the greatest change from last year. Instituted as a purely literary product, the new editor Sam Neill said that the former issues contained nothing of interest to appeal to the ordinary student. This year a trial issue will appear just before or right after Christmas.

The new Trireme will have a section devoted to sports and one devoted to music, art, and drama, as well as the literary section. It is hoped the formation of the Literary Society will increase the number of contributors to this section and give a greater variety of articles.

Need Larger Magazine

"Naturally the magazine will have to be larger," said Sam, "but by making it more general, we hope that it will appeal to a larger section of the student body."

"The tone of a literary magazine does not have to be intellectual," said undergrad editor Richard Tait. "But what is literarily competent and interesting goes in." He explained that the high literary standards set in previous years will not be abandoned but expressed the hope that by widening the scope of the articles the number of contributors will be increased. The first issue of the Undergrad is to appear

Consider, Gentlemen

Politicians of all parties are still discussing the meaning and possible results of the June election. Regardless of party affiliation, all the pundits seem agreed that the majority marked up to the Liberal Party credit is apt to become a little unwieldy. They (the politicians) fear that it is, in effect, a blank cheque deposited to the account of Liberal policies.

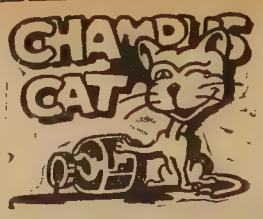
It would be unfortunate if the Liberals' out-sized majority were to be used for this purpose—the railroading of government-favored bills through the Commons.

The question will soon be settled. Parliament is now sitting and debates will prove whether the opposition will be one asking that the next governor-general of Canada be a Canadian. The bill will be introduced by Bona Arsenault, Liberal member for Bonaventure.

Mr. Arsenault had a similar bill before the House last session, but the House was dissolved before it could be dealt with. The Liberal Federation asked Mr. Arsenault to re-introduce the measure this season.

We feel the Liberal majority would be misused in pushing this bill through the House.

The bill is the result of a misdirected enthusiasm for making Canada a completely independent member of the British Commonwealth. Break all ties, assert our independence, the argument would seem to run. It is not childish, but something a little worse—adolescent.



The most obvious objection to this scheme is finding a Canadian who could adequately fill the office and who was, at the same time, politically acceptable to all other Canadians.

The Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King has been mentioned as the man most likely to get the position if the bill passes.

Whatever faults his opponents charge against him, Mr. King served Canada well and undoubtedly deserves some honor in return. This hardly seems to honor Mr. King. There are still many voters in this country who cannot forget that Mr. King was leader of the Liberal Party for many years.

The governor-general is the vice-regal representative in Canada, and as such, he should be free of political associations. We doubt that a Canadian could be found who would be acceptable in all other respects and free of party attachments too.

The government would do well to consider this bill thoroughly before passing it. It could develop into the proverbial hornets' nest.

The Scholarship Question

An interesting sidelight to college life is the scholarship question. Grabbing the gravy train early of the essence, so here are a few of the many openings for the bright (?) boys.

The Slumber Scholarship is an unintentional donation of the English department. It is open to anyone in any course, the only requirement being that they must take a compulsory course in Wordsworth's poetry.

Special consideration is given to those suffering from insomnia, as they will benefit by the sleep which will undoubtedly result from the reading of, and lectures on, Wordsworth's poems. Those suffering from lack of sleep because of social dissipation only are requested to refrain from attending.

Industrialist Gives Support

Surveys indicate that a large number of women are attending this year under the Gothic Foundation. This is made possible by the generosity of a large hosiery manufacturer.

The Foundation is extremely flexible in its terms and by its use it is hoped that the lives of the girls will be shaped in such a way that they will be looked upon with greater favour by the male population. Although it has given great support in the past, no faculty member has come out openly in favour of it— possibly because of the criticism that it often conceals feminine defects.

It is not generally admitted by those using the Foundation—possibly because of modesty—but it is hoped that they will become well-rounded girls. For reasons most obvious to men, names of those uplifted by this Foundation are not disclosed.

Drop Politics Fellowship

The George Drool Fellowship in Federal Politics which expired last June 27, has not been renewed. In an announcement from Mr. Drool's headquarters, it was indicated that because of a rather cool reception at Ottawa (where only a few friends managed to join him), the Fellowship would not be in operation for another four years.

The Panic-Hellish Prize is open to those of college age with child-A "stampede" of prospective memish minds and adult pocketbooks. bers takes place in the early stages of the school year and the result, as the title would indicate, is that the panic is hellish.

Get Close To Study

The TTC offers a travelling fellowship for those living outside the university. This should be especially useful to those taking psychology, for the recipient is able to study all types of persons under somewhat intimate circumstances.

Helpful for debaters, also, because of the opportunity to participate in heated discussions over fares, services, seats, etc.

The Sock and Philly Scholarship is awarded to the woman in any year who at any time has an original thought. It has not been awarded since its inception.

The Pessimists Prize is open only to the higher brass of all faculties. It is awarded to the one, who, during the year, makes the most sorrowful or oppressive statements about the work or future of the students. Seems to be a highly regarded Prize, for competition is very keen. Award is based on timing, sensationalism, and number of newspaper lines received.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

The Editor invites correspondence from Varsity readers. Letters should be typewritten or printed on one side of a standard size sheet of paper. Because of space limitations no letters should be more than one hundred and fifty words in length.

The Varsity will undertake to publish suitable letters, but will not consider any letter which is not signed. All letters become the property of The Varsity.

Noted British Scientist Lectures to Chemists

One of Great Britain's leading physical chemists, Professor Eric K. Rideal addressed an open group in the old wing of the chemistry building Monday afternoon. The subject of Professor Rideal's lecture was "Reactions in Monolayers".

This is Professor Rideal's first official visit to the University of Toronto. He was professor of colloid sciences at Cambridge University. At present he is director of the Davy Farady Laboratory of the Royal Institution, London, England. Professor Rideal will lecture at the Eastman Kodak Laboratory. He was recently in Ottawa to observe research laboratories there.

sometime in November.

Acta Victoriana will appear once a month for five issues after November 1. Editor Harry Green said his magazine will follow a new scheme this year by stressing a different phase of college life each month. In this way all college activities would receive adequate representation without cramping the style of the creative contributors.

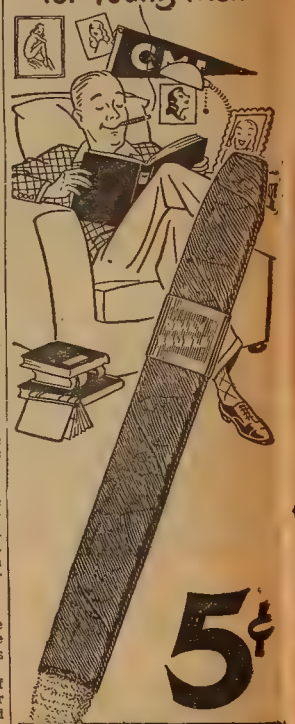
Hope To Answer

This year's Acta will be larger. Green expects that the first issue will contain an answer to the article published last year on the Pass Arts course which has provoked considerable controversy.

"A small percentage of the people take any interest in the literary magazine", said Trinity editor Ron Bryden, IV English Lang. and Lit. "The Review is like football; run for the people who play rather than the people who watch it".

Wants More Photos

Bryden hopes to have a bit more illustration in this year's magazine to give opportunity to the artists in the college.



There are five literary issues of the Review and a sixth summer issue, which emphasizes sports and a review of the year's activities. Although the Review has never been divided into departments, Bryden hopes to have drama and book reviews. These will probably have to be limited to Robert Gill's productions and the college play and to four or five of the important books.

Although all editors declined to mention any names, they are confident that they will find some very good writers by the close of 1949-50.

Behind The News

Most of the students who take it for granted that The Varsity will appear Monday through Friday in neat piles in the halls of college buildings have little or no conception of the blood, tears, and sweat shed by staff and masthead every night in the basement of University College. This is a typical 10.30 p.m. scene in The Varsity office as the men "in the slot" and "on the rim" work fast to make the deadline.

British Democracy Unpopular in Ruhr Asserts Robertson

"The German people do not like the Iron Curtain", said Mr. David N. S. Robertson in Hart House yesterday, "and if the Allies do not break it, the Germans will." Mr. Robertson, who was the Senior Control Officer for the British Foreign Office in Braunschweig was speaking on the Administration of Germany.

Change Policy

He said the British are following a "let's be nice to the Germans" policy instead of the original Morgenthau plan to de-industrialize the Ruhr. This policy has been followed ever since Russian Foreign Minister Molotov promised the German people that the Russian policy would be a lenient one, he said.

Among German national characteristics listed by Mr. Robertson was war-mongering. He was not sure of this however, since the Germans themselves ascribed it to the Prussians.

The Germans are not a democratic people in our sense, he said. "In the family unit, the father is more of an absolute boss than he is here". It is felt by many people, he said, that the Germans still would rather be 'ordered' than left to make decisions for themselves.

When asked about the dismantling of industrial plants, Mr. Robertson replied that synthetic rubber and petrol plants are definitely forbidden as well as plants making steel bearings, lathes of over a certain size and of course, munitions.

Work For Peace

"We are trying to build Germany economically and educationally," he said. "In that way we can make Europe and the World more peaceful."

Mr. Robertson deplored the policy of the British and Americans of sending too many of their occupational forces, both Administrative and Military, away too soon. He said that a city the size of Toronto would have no more than two men to ensure a democratic government and a democratic press in addition to all their other duties. How as this figure is, he said, the American figure is even lower.

Metamorphosis of a Tip, Clues to News to Youse

When you pick up your copy of The Varsity this morning, you might possibly ask yourself where all the stuff came from that you see spread before you. In order to banish this gnawing question from the minds of the curious, this article has been prepared.

For instance, let us take the story appearing in yesterday's Varsity about the burglary at a St. George St. fraternity house. When the excitement had quieted down somewhat, one of the fraternity members had the presence of mind to phone a tip to The Varsity office. The tip was then entered in the News book, a large grimy, much-thumbed ledger which contains all the news stories which need covering on that day.

Reporter Takes Over

The next step occurs when one of The Varsity reporters signs his name to the entry in the News book, signifying that he is covering the story.

The reporter, an inquisitive chap usually, hot-foots it to the fraternity in question in order to find out as much as possible about the reported burglary. His first job is to locate the person who phoned in the tip and get all the information available. He must check carefully in a case like this to make sure that the tremendous amounts reported missing are accurate, and not figments of an over-excited imagination. In this case eight whole dollars.

After he has received all the information necessary, the reporter returns to The Varsity office to type out his story. The story must be typed on a special size of paper, which is made especially to fit snugly into a linotyper's rack. He searches through the story for the most important fact in it, which will go into his first sentence, or lead. The less and less important facts will follow in order to the end of the story, giving it, from an important point of view, the appearance of a triange with the apex at the bottom.

Stories In Duplicate

On the top of each page of copy, the reporter writes a "catch line" which tells in one or two words what the story is all about. Every story is typed in duplicate, so that, if any story gets lost on its way out to Oshawa, where the paper is printed, the printer merely has to phone to whoever has the duplicates in order to get the story. At

Varsity Cinema Group Displays First Movie

The first production of the University Film Society, the documentary "As the Twig is Bent", will be shown on Wednesday, Sept. 28, at 4.00 p.m. in room 8 University College.

This film, which deals with the work of the University Settlement in Toronto, was written, directed and produced by University students. The showing is being sponsored by the University Settlement and all students interested in the program being carried on there as well as in Film-making are invited to attend. There will be no admission charge.

Well-Read Patients Keep Doctors on Toes Dr. Boyd Tells Meds

New doctors will have to work harder than did their predecessors, because "patients have time to read Time, The Reader's Digest and The Toronto Star, about new medical discoveries," Dr. William Boyd, noted pathologist, told the Meds Freshmen last night.

He added that students regarded their professors as their hereditary enemies, which was wrong as it hurt him every time he failed a student.

Dean MacFarlane said he envied the freshmen's opportunity to meet new friends, explore paths of knowledge, and try organization and administration in a student community. He told the class of 5T5 to enjoy every aspect of university life and not to feel that they were definitely going to be doctors during their two years in Pre-Meds.

President of Medical Society Bob Hetherington, stated that they were enrolled in one of the world's greatest universities, and that the Faculty of Medicine was one of the greatest of all times. He asked them to show maturity, gentlemanliness, and good judgment, except in regard to engineers, where they should restrict themselves between the limits of excess bodily harm and property damage.

VARSITY REPORTERS

The Varsity needs staff reporters, experienced or inexperienced, to carry out its function as official organ of the U of T student body. All those interested in doing news reporting, feature writing, movie, art, and drama reviewing, sports, and photography, are asked to report at once to The Varsity Office in Room 78 in the basement of UC.

Pep Rally, Street Dance, To Start Queen's Weekend

Plans for the pep rally and dance on the Queen's at Toronto football weekend, Oct. 8, were announced today by Bill Turner, chairman of the Blue and White Society.

Stella McCord will make her debut as drum majorette, replacing Margie. The cheer leaders will be present in full force to strut their stuff to the music of the Blue and White band.

The official All Varsity football dance for this game will take the form of a roam-around, with orchestras in the Drill Hall, Hart House, Victoria College, Occupational Therapy huts etc. The Blue and White Society announces that in view of the new general policy of the Royal York Hotel not to rent ballrooms for official university football dances, the dances following the Western and McGill games will also be held on the campus.

The pep rally on Friday night will start at eight o'clock with the Blue and White band and the U. of T. pipe band parading to the back campus. Coach Bob Masterson and members of the Varsity team will be introduced to the students, and invitations have been issued to the Queen's coach, Frank Tindall, and to the Queen's pipe band.

Last year's program of skyrockets and skits by the various faculties and colleges is to be largely followed, and Varsity ribbons and buttons will be sold. A snake dance around Queen's Park will follow the rally, coiling back through the front campus, around the loop in front of University College, and down to Convocation Hall. A street dance will get underway in front of Convocation Hall at 10.30 p.m. to the music of a small combo on the steps.

Beautiful Stella McCord To Fill Margie's Uniform

Varsity has a new drum majorette. Twirling the baton in front of the band this year will be brown-eyed Stella McCord, third year Physical and Health Education student.

Stella steps into the drum majorette boots vacated last spring by Margie Dunn, who graduated in June. It's a big job, but judging by her past work Stella is well qualified to fill those boots.

Margie, who had become a Toronto legend in her three years before the Blue and White Band, featured variations of dance steps as the main part of her routine. Things will change with Stella out front: her main interest is in acrobatics, and Toronto fans can expect a little more action this year. Stella has been interested in acrobatics as long as she can remember, and she intends to feature gymnastics in her display.

Stella perfected her technique during four years with her home town band in Barrie, Ontario. She recalls her most embarassing experience with the Barrie band and laughs about the time she lost her direction and led the band down the wrong street in Beeton, Ontario.

Bob Cringan, director of the Blue and White Band is happy about Stella's appointment, and isn't too worried about her leading the Blue and White down the wrong streets. "We are going to make Stella an integral part of the band," said Bob recently. "In fact, the instrumentalists will take their direction from her during the displays. Margie always worked solo, independently of the band. Nevertheless, Stella will have a lot of solo work to do too."

Stella was stand-in for Margie last year, but never had an opportunity to take over. "I'm a bit nervous about hitting the big time so suddenly," she claims, "because it will be a lot different from high school. I haven't worked out a definite routine yet, but I won't copy Margie. Where she was a jitterbug, I will be an acrobat."

The only similarity, in fact, that is likely to be noticed is the uniform. Stella will wear the same uniform as her predecessor, an entrancing costume in the traditional blue and white.

Stella hope to make her official debut as Varsity drum majorette at the Queen's game here on October 8th. Until then we just have to wait.

Campus Political Groups Help Elect Candidates

Federal elections in June presented the highlights of the summer activities for members of the campus political clubs. Members of campus political parties engaged the various campus parties engaged in intensive campaigns all over the country.

Members Help Party

The Conservative Club members were particularly active in Port Hope and Manitoba, as well as helping in their own constituencies during the last election. In Port Hope a Young Progressive Conservative group was organized by Marg Keens and John Boulden. John Groom was a campaign manager in Manitoba.

The Liberal Association was represented in all phases of the elections. Paul Hellier, 1949 president, whom the club hopes to have as speaker on October 6, was elected in Toronto Davenport riding. Toronto Broadview was contested by Ruth Radford '49. Intensive campaigning was carried on by many other members including Henry Bradley (Renfrew North) the Liberal Association.

Next month the Association will be represented at the Young Liberals Convention and the meeting of the Canadian University Liberal Federation, in Montreal.

The members of the C.C.F. club were well represented in the elections. Gordon Milling, IV Poli. Sci., president of the campus C.C.F. club, contested Victoria Riding. Norm Chalmers and Joan Esser were campaign managers.

Members of the L.P.P. club supported Tim Buck in the Toronto Trinity riding. They kept in close touch with the workers by distributing leaflets and selling "The Canadian Tribune" at factory gates.

Defeated Parties Explain

The presidents of the clubs were asked for their opinions of the results of the past elections. Henry Bradley (Lib.) said that although he had expected a Liberal victory he was amazed and pleased at their overwhelming majority. Tom Symons (P.C.) believes that the more important issues were not stressed sufficiently, and that the

Meeting at Wymilwood Starts Year's Program For Vic Music Group

Season's activities of Victoria College Music Club will open tonight with an informal meeting in Wymilwood, at 8 o'clock.

The club executive have planned the evening as an opportunity for members to get acquainted. The year's program will be outlined to the members.

Last year's production of "Iolanthe" and the Glee Club organized by Victoria's musicians are regarded by the executive as successes to be matched or surpassed this year.

Art — Music — Drama

George Formby

The Royal Alexandra is presenting the English comedian, George Formby, and his Music Hall Varieties each night this week in a laugh-filled burlesque that Monday night swept along on an almost continuous wave of applause. The audience loved it, and this is Toronto.

Of the acts that preceded the maestro, we would throw the spotlight on Guus Brox, the musical clown, Medlock and Marlow, dancers of comedy, and Robert Harbin, magician - extraordinaire, but the choice is arbitrary. Cynthia and Gladys opened the program with a graceful and dexterous exhibition of balance in motion, and the virtuoso, Guus Brox, followed this quiet note with a raucous parody of music and musicians, and went as far afield as the Venus di Milo. The Medlock and Marlow number, "Just Knocking Around," was a clever fast-stepping comedy dance, but the Humoresques, an English quartet, with a finished style of their own, did not show up to best effect after the dance number. Their most interesting song was "The Sabre Dance". Nothing can be said about Robert Harbin's memory-magic but that it utterly confounded and delighted, and Alan Clive's mimicry was the finest we have heard.

This bill was merely the entree for England's best-loved comedian, George Formby. The old favourites were there — Mr. Woo, Granddad's Nightshirt, The Sergeant-Major, The Window Cleaners.

George Formby, his smile and his ukelele, are great in any language, and his art is infectious. It was a question as the curtain rang down who had enjoyed themselves more, George Formby or his audience.

P.C.C. management mishandled the campaign, particularly by introducing minor issues such as the ill-fated North Star controversy. Gordon Milling (C.C.F.) claimed that the Liberal government was elected because the C.C.F. platform had been "swiped" by the Liberals for their campaign promises. He believes that his party should concentrate on building up its movement so that it can be presented as an alternative to the present government. Norman Endicott (L.P.P.) believes that the Canadian people voted for the Liberal Party under the illusion that the present government would continue an era of prosperity. He said that time would prove the L.P.P. predictions correct regarding a coming economic crisis.

What's Ahead

At Eaton Auditorium: Nineteen years ago the Auditorium at Eaton's College Street seventh floor set as high standard in the artists they invited to appear. A glance at this season's roster of musical greats will vouch that the standard is still high.

First on the Concert Series is renowned pianist Rudolph Serkin, Czechoslovakian-born, who made his American debut with Toscanini in 1936. In the same series are Ricardo Odnoposoff, violinist, Metropolitan Opera tenor Jussi Bjoerling, Wagnerian soprano Helen Traubel and Thomas L. Thomas, Welsh baritone.

To appear on the new Musical Arts Series are Iva Kitchell, dance satirist, and minstrel-balladeer Richard Dyer-Bennett, specialist in English, Scottish and American folk songs. The Metropolitan Opera's tenor Nino Martini (here last in La Traviata) will be guest artist on November 17th, followed by pianist Hazel Scott, who plays Rachmaninoff, boogie-woogie and Bach, the Philharmonic Piano Quartet on February 9th, with Eileen Farrell soprano, appearing on March 30th to close the group. Programmes for the concerts are posted in the Auditorium rotunda in advance of each event.

University Once Farm

From a solitary building amid surrounding farms to a large bustling institution in the midst of a busy metropolitan area the University of Toronto grew since the first plans for its birth were laid in 1827.

It was in 1827 the idea of selecting a site for a university in this part of the province was conceived for the first time. Choosing the site for the new university was a weighty problem in "Muddy York" with its low lying ground and mosquitoes.

Finally the College Council chose a site at the north end of York, outside the city limits — at that time Queen Street. The Council then purchased land for two avenues of approach through adjacent farms — now University Avenue and College Street.

U. of T. Fenced In

These avenues, being University property, were fenced in and furnished with gates. The gates were locked overnight and considerable friction resulted between the public and University authorities. As a result, the avenues were taken over by municipal authorities in 1859.

Beautiful Plans

University Avenue, intended to be a main avenue of approach to the University with the main building at its head — now the site of the Parliament Buildings — was laid out, symmetrically lined by horse chestnut trees. The men on the College Council planned a magnificent white college building enthroned at the head of a long shady avenue and surrounded by beautiful park lands with the lesser buildings of the University in a half circle around the main the end of the story, he writes "30," which lets the linotyper know that there is no more copy to come. This is a quaint journalistic device of which no one seems to know the origin.

Once the story is written, it goes to the slot man, so-called because of the position he occupies at a U-shaped table, namely the slot in the U. The slot man reads the story, decides how much news value it has and hence where it will appear in the paper. He also decides what type of headline it will carry and how big the head will be.

Copy Reading Is Next

From the slot man, the story goes to one of the rim men (there are several) so-called because of the position they occupy at the U-shaped table, namely around its rim. The rim man reads the copy carefully, checking it for errors of fact, errors in English or errors in style. Every reputable newspaper has its own style, and The Varsity is no exception. If the story is so badly written that it needs a complete re-write job, it is handed to a re-write man. The re-write writes the story over completely, putting the lead where it belongs and correcting any mistakes in spelling, grammar and style.

After being re-written, the story is handed back to one of the rim men, whose job it is to write a head for it. This is not as easy as it may sound. In the first place, the headline must capture, in two or three lines, the essence of the story. Then the head must be cut down or expanded to fit the space it is to occupy. Furthermore, each line of the head must be a complete thought in itself. If one of the words in the first thought-line of the head is carried over into the next line, the head is termed a "head of questionable origin," or perhaps, "an illegitimate head."

Processing Copy

When the story is complete and the head written, the copy is handed back to the slot man (remember him?) who counts the number of lines it contains. The copy is written on a line of such a length that one line of typewritten copy equals two lines of linotyped copy, or, as it is more often called, nay always called, two lino lines. To get back to the slot man. Now that he has the number of lines counted, he knows exactly how much space the story will take up in the finished paper. He marks off the required space on the dummy paper he has, being careful not to disturb the position or size of the ads, places the story in a copy envelope with other stories which are ready to go, and hands it all to the copy boy. The copy boy takes the envelope up to the corner of Bloor and Bay where he meets the Oshawa bus, deposits the copy carefully thereon, and the story is on its way to the printers.

Les Coles, of the Rotary Printing Company of Oshawa, sits at his desk far into the night re-reading and correcting each story before it is printed in The Varsity.

They planned the scheme — but it was never fulfilled.

On St. George's Day, 1842, the corner stone of King's College was laid, near the site of the Parliament Buildings. Five times in the first seven years of its history the head porter of the University was changed, but it continued its struggle for existence with amazing tenacity.

In 1843, King's College was officially opened and in 1845, the south-east wing was completed, and used as a residence, but the capitol of the province returned to Toronto and the University was shunted from the Parliament Buildings where it had found temporary quarters.

Transformed into the University of Toronto in 1850, by act of parliament, the College was too small to house the Faculties of Arts, Medicine and Law, so another building, Moss Hall, was built for the Faculty of Medicine near the site of the present Biology Building.

Thought Unimportant

From the very first, the Government appeared to have thought the University of little importance, for it was tucked away almost out of sight. In 1853 some of its land was expropriation by the Government; in 1856 the old King's College building was expropriated as a lunatic asylum.

In 1859, even more land was taken over. Thus, of the original University property which extended to Surrey Place, there remains only the corner occupied by Victoria College.

As a result, when it became necessary to build a new University headquarters in 1856, the only possible site was the one where University College now stands.

Argue Over Design

After much controversy the building began. In the beginning there had been constant contention, between the governor-general and the architect as to the design of the College and the direction it should face.

The governor-general favored Byzantine architecture, with the result the present building is a hybrid, with traces of Byzantine but with Norman and Gothic predominating. The architects designed the building to face south, the governor-general decided it should face east. So the ground was surveyed again and retaked.

Then it was decided that, unless the building faced south some fine old trees — considered by the governor-general to be the finest in Toronto — would have to be sacrificed.

Faces South Again

So once more the building faced

Once Chuted Into Greece Now Heads Orthodontics

He parachuted into Greece to aid the resistance in organizing their medical services. He spent more time behind the German lines on specific missions than any other American officer. He saw action with the American Army Dental Corps in the Middle East, and in the battle for control of Sicily. Now, Dr. Robert E. Moyers, is heading the Department of Orthodontics of the Faculty of Dentistry. This year he comes to Toronto from the State University of Iowa, where for four years he was assistant to the head of the orthodontics (in simple words — teeth straightening department). During that period he built for himself the enviable reputation of being "one of the most promising of the younger dental scientists in the United States."

If degrees are any indication, Dr. Moyers is well set up, for he has his B.S. in Chemistry; his M.S. in Orthodontics and Child Welfare; his D.D.S.; and recently got his Ph.D. in Muscle Physiology.

Remodelled Office

During the interview the young doctor sat behind his desk in his new, and as yet uncompleted office on the fourth floor of the Dental Building at the corner of College and Huron Streets. Part of this floor is being remodelled to provide a brand new set-up for students doing post graduate work in all fields at the Faculty.

Because of the importance of orthodontics at this level in dental education, Dr. Moyers' headquarters have been included in the changes. The department is being laid out with lots of room, excellent lighting, and the most modern equipment.

This is unique, and the doctor considers himself very lucky to have a part of it; for the other departments are sufering from lack of space, and from antiquated clinics which are inadequate for the number of students training at the college.

Dr. Moyers chose the dental school because he feels that it offers him a wider scope than most available university dental positions. The dental faculty here has a reputation unequaled anywhere in the British Commonwealth, and consequently every year sees students coming from the other dominions, from the British Isles, from the U.S. and many other distant points. "The Empire is looking more and more to Canada for leadership in basic research, and for teachers and specialists," the doctor said.

VIC'S CORNER

We repeat from last year 'Imitation is the sincerest Flattery'. We now have two imitations of Vic's Corner on the Campus, Skulespots and U.C. It's This Way But we are glad to have been able to lead the way for these two weaker links in our University chain.

It is rather obvious that Jack Hoolihan has not been fortunate enough to have visited the halls of Victoria lately or he would not be making slanderous remarks about our feminine pulchritude. On behalf of the students of Vic I would like to extend to Mr Hoolihan or any other disillusioned U.C. Student an invitation to visit our hallowed freshmen and freshie crop rate seshalls where we will see saminintly at its best. I think Mr Hoolihan made his statement in an effort to console himself for the fact that the Cream of the Freshie Crop chose Victoria.

In this our first Corner for the year we want to welcome back all Victorians and to extend a special welcome to the Frosh of Victoria. We are glad you chose Victoria and we are sure you won't regret your choice because anyone who knows will tell you that Vic is tops.

Freshman week-end has come and gone and it was a great success. If it was any indication, this year's freshman and freshie crop rate second to none. It is our hope that the frosh will take an active part in all Vic activities and if you have any questions there will be someone in the V.C.U. office daily from 10 to 2 p.m. to answer them.

We hear from Alison Jefferies that girls' athletics will be getting underway shortly and they are expecting a banner year. Would all the girls please watch the bulletin board by the telephone in Vic for announcements of practices, games, etc.? Also would all those interested in tennis or baseball please sign the lists provided there? For any of the doubtful frosh we would like to inform you that you don't have to be a muscle-bound Amazon to participate. The prime purpose of sports is to get a large percentage participation. This is also your chance to meet your dream boys; there is always a large turnout to watch the games.

This year the V.C.U. have had information cards printed and many of the students have not as yet filled them out. We would appreciate it if all such slackers would obtain a card and fill them out as soon as possible.

Johnny Rhame tells us that boys' athletics are well underway with the rugby team practising every night. He also informs us that the Mulock cup will be coming back home this fall. It is hoped that all Vic students will be on hand when the new addition of the SCARLET AND GOLD takes to the field. In case you don't recognize the team, it is because they are all equipped with new scarlet uniforms and helmets.

Would all track enthusiasts please note that practices have started. Warm up at Varsity Stadium every afternoon and get your PT credits.

The intercollegiate gold trials are being held at St. Andrew's this Thursday followed by intra-mural tournament on Friday and Saturday. Entries for both may be placed at Hart House 48 hours before tee-time.

The social season started off in a whirl with the HOWDY HOP, which following the Vic tradition was a terrific success. The social committee promises a. (no adjective can be found at the present moment to describe the hopeful feeling of the committee).

So here's to a good year ... so drink chug-a lug-lug-lug. Please! ! ! We aren't engineers!

Cocoa At Vic

Vic Freshies relaxed in their residences on their first Saturday night at University and discussed the day's activities over steaming cups of cocoa. Cocoa parties are a tradition at Vic following the entertainment and fashion show put on by the V.C.U. in Hart House. Later residence Freshies shared their beds with their city sisters who stayed at the college for the service in the chapel Sunday morning.

NFCUS For Freshmen...

During the coming months as you read through the columns of The Varsity you will run across a curious conglomeration of initials: ISS, SAC, SCM, NFCUS, and on and on and on. When we came to University we were confused no end by the welter of initials we met. During the next few issues we will try in these columns to acquaint you with some basic information on some of the more important of the organizations.

NFCUS stands for The National Federation of Canadian University Students, an organization of Canadian students composed of the members of twenty-four Canadian universities. You are a member of NFCUS: when you paid your fees this fall, six cents of the money was for NFCUS. There are about 60,000 NFCUS members across Canada, stretching from The University of British Columbia in Vancouver to Dalhousie University in Halifax.

NFCUS was founded in 1926, and since then has led a somewhat erratic career. In the years since the end of the war NFCUS has, under a succession of leading Canadian students, grown much stronger. In general, NFCUS exists to further the interests of Canadian students on a national level. In the past NFCUS has secured such things as reductions in the cost of rail travel, and reductions in the cost of sporting equipment. At present the Federation is working on plans to get the Federal government to help needy university students to get an education, and to secure a national reduction in the high price of text books.

No matter what college or faculty you attend, there is a NFCUS representative there to serve you. These representatives are anxious to tell you more about the Federation if you are interested, and to acquaint you in more detail with the program and aims of NFCUS. NFCUS has many small, and several large benefits to offer you: it is to your advantage to know more about The National Federation of Canadian University Students.

FRESHMEN'S GUIDE

Some Common Initials

We are not quite sure how many initials the poor young frosh run into when they come to university, but we would venture a guess that their former stock is doubled. In any case the confusion which results from ISS, NCFUS, SCM, US, IUS, VCU, WUA, CCP, LPP, VCF, SAC, SPS, PC, JCR, KCR, IRC, M & P, P & B, PHE, RK, ASGA, COTC, UNTD, and ATL is apt to throw even the brightest freshman.

Here then, A Freshman's Guide to Some Common Initials:

ASGA: Annesley Student Government Association.

ATL: Admit to Lectures. The little card they gave you when you registered. Invaluable.

C.C.F. Canadian Commonwealth Federation. A political club.

COTC: Canadian Officers Training Corps. For young men who want to be army officers. Also a drill hall at 119 St. George St..

IRC: International Relations Club. "Attemps to fix the attention of students on those underlying principles of international conduct, international law, and of international organization which must be agreed upon and put into action if a peaceful civilization is to be achieved." Brings speakers, conducts discussion groups, etc.

ISS: International Student Service. Conducts a program "devoted to international education and university welfare." Brought five displaced persons to the university this year to study here. See page 68 of The Students' Handbook for a review of their activities.

IUS: The International Union of Students. Allegedly a communist organization. Has its headquarters in Prague. NFCUS (see below) thought of joining it last year and there was quite a stink. So NFCUS didn't join.

JCR: Junior Common Room. At U.C. (see Below) a place to rest, get cokes, etc.

KCR: King Cole Room. Local oasis at Bloor and Avenue Road. Not to be confused with JCR (see above). If patronized, be prepared to prove your age (21 and up.)

LPP: Labour Progressive Party. A political club.

M & P: Mathematics and Physics. An Arts course.

NFCUS: The National Federation of Canadian University Student. You are a member. Six cents of your fee went to NFCUS. NFCUS is comprised of about 60,000 Canadian University Students from The University of British Columbia in Vancouver to Dalhousie University in Halifax. Twenty-four universities belong. NFCUS has had a hectic history, but has done good work since 1945. This year's big program is to get some scheme of federal aid for education.

P & B: Physiology and Biochemistry. An Arts course. You can see why they use initials around here.

PC: Progressive Conservative (club). A political club.

PHE: Physical and Health Education. A course. The girls are healthy but lovely; the boys are healthy.

RK: Religious Knowledge. A course in the various colleges. (This listing is the result of a request by a friend who spent three years thinking RK was Archaeology.)

SAC: The Students' Administrative Council. In its usual connotation this means the University SAC. The SAC is composed of representatives of all colleges and faculties in the University, and is the main student governing group. Their main activities are listed on pages 19, 20, and 21 of The Students' Handbook.

Movement. See page 83 of The Students' Handbook.

SCM: The Student Christian

SPS: The School of Practical Science. Sometimes known as "Skule". The original name was given to the engineers by a wag with a violent sense of humour. Choose your weapons.

UC: University College. A liberal arts college.

UNTD: University Naval Training Division. For those who wish naval training while pursuing their undergraduate studies.

VCU: Victoria College Union. Student government at Victoria College.

WUA: The Women's Undergraduate Association . For the ladies (!) of UC (see above).

Movie Review

The Fallen Idol

Up at the University and Eglinton, where they (but not I) say "the suspense is almost unbearable," there's a picture called "The Fallen Idol," about which one London critic exclaimed "The best picture anywhere in the world!"

Wondering how a picture with such a slight theme (a child's dubious comprehension of adult deceits) could rise to such heights, I hastened up to confirm my doubts and confirm them I did. I'm afraid the above blurb is just one more sad example of a critic-patriot carried away on the current wave of Anglo-American cinematic contention.

Publicity Hurts Film

This kind of wild publicity would make a better movie than "The Fallen Idol" a disappointment, and the solemn little pep talk prefixed to the sound-track, advising you what a thrill you're in for, is just about the most dampening bit of bad taste that can be inflicted on a film, and an insult to the intelligent audiences such superior films are supposedly designed for.

Divested of these pretentions, "The Fallen Idol" remains a good movie executed with finesse by master craftsmen. Graham Green's sceen-play is about a child who is left in a large embassy over the week-end in care of the butler and his wife. His adoration of the former and hatred of the latter, and his misinterpretation of adultery and accidental death, motivate a web of childish lies that almost enmesh his hero with murder. By a peculiar twist, only the audience knows what really happened.

Runs for No Reason

There is only one pretentious scene—that in which the pyjama-clad child, accompanied by a pounding score, runs through dark streets for no very good reason.

Carol Reed, probably the best director in England, has done just as creditable jobs before, with less credit, notably an unsung masterpiece, "The Stars Look Down". In "The Fallen Idol" he directs his camera with an exciting eye for detail, and his child star with an amazing insistence on naturalness.

The performances are of the best. Ralph Richardson plays the title role. Sonia Dresdel is perfect as his wife. Eight- year-old Bobby Henrey is the rare child actor who doesn't embarrass (at least not this time), and Michele Morgan gives another of her beautiful performances. She is almost unique as an actress who can be thoroughly natural and intensely dramatic at once.

Famous Architecture, Cezanne Oils Viewed During Buffalo Outing

A group of forty-one students and their friends went to Buffalo on Saturday on a trip organized by the Fine Art Club to see the exhibition now at the Allbright Gallery.

The exhibition consists of paintings of famous artists such as Matisse, Cezanne, Braque and Miro. Mr. R. Squire of the Gallery conducted a tour for the trippers explaining the finer points of the paintings on view.

Five of the group made a tour of Buffalo to see such renowned buildings as Frank Lloyd Wright's Larkin Building, Louis Sullivan's Prudential Building, Kleinham's Music Hall, and several of Wright's early houses, one of which is that at 76 Soldiers Place. Recent housing developments were also on the list of Buffalo buildings seen by this group.

SAC

Government In Miniature

The Students' Administrative Council of the University acts as intermediary between the students and the governing body. Reflecting the political set-up of a democracy, the SAC is the elective body composed of the representatives who have been chosen by the students in all the faculties, colleges and schools.

According to its constitution, the SAC is composed of "the presidents or heads of the recognized men's student government organization" or the elected heads of these organizations. Women also take seats on the Council, the Arts Colleges, Household Science, Nursing and the predominantly feminine Schools furnishing members. The Editor-in-Chief and the Women's Editor of The Varsity and the Editor of Torontonensis, the University Year Book also are automatically members of the Council.

Vote In Proportion

When in session, the members of the Council each have a single vote although in certain rare cases of importance, each member votes in direct proportion to the number enrolled in the school represented.

Based on democratic procedure, the system of an elected student government has several advantages. Chief of these is the fact that members are apt to be of high scholastic standard and definitely interested in the running of the University.

On the debit side, the member electors are apt to forget in the strain of election time that they are voting, not only for a college head, but also the member of an over-all University board. Election platforms tend to be built only on faculty issues and sometimes the elected person may turn out to be unfit for the job.

Meet Fortnightly

Besides the regular meetings every fortnight, there are also meetings at regular intervals of the Council committees. Six Commissioners head the committees on Publications, Literary Activities and Debates, Sports, Student Services, and Loans and Finance. Meeting a week before the regular Council meetings, the Committees present reports for general consideration on their field of activities.

From the practical point of view of the students, the SAC does much more than act as a remote governing body. During the school year a rooming service is operated for the benefit of those who need studying and living space. An employment office acts throughout the summer and the session to help find full and part-time employment. More direct assistance is given by the Loan Fund which is fully explained in the Student's Handbook.

SAC, Publisher

The Handbook, together with the daily undergraduate newspaper, The Varsity, and the year book, Torontonensis, published for the graduating class, form the three main publications sponsored by the Students' Council.

The development of the Students' Council was not achieved overnight. Starting at the turn of the century as the Students' Union of University College, it took the place of a more primitive Hart House rather than a governing body. It directed the publishing of The Varsity and had several other functions. The Students' Parliament of 1905 was the next step toward autonomy. Its debating arm rapidly deteriorated and most of its functions fell into the hands of its cabinets to the dismay of the embryonic legislators who decried the transfer of power to executive hands.

In 1913 the Students' Administrative Council was formed out of the parliament and after several changes has come down to the present in its improved form.

University College, the first example of Roman or Norman architecture in North America was finished in 1858. Instead of a corner stone, the governor general laid a coping stone on the turret.

The builders intended the building to be an inspiration for the higher ideals of the University. But apparently the plans miscarried—for the architecture on the side of one side of the door differs from the other, and the back of the building is not in keeping with the front.

The University expansion continued. New students came, old buildings went, and new buildings went up. Today the university faces another expansion crisis — far different from that presented by the appropriation of grounds by the government.

The future path University expansion will take is still a matter of conjecture — but authorities and students alike agree that expansion is a necessity.

finance company has taken all the furniture, leaving Evers only one chair. Jeremiah C. is sitting there dejectedly. Evers: Oh, Woe! Tears seven times salt! Our beautiful University, empty, not a soul, not a student. I haven't eaten in a week. Oh, what has happened?

The End

To make a long story short, Dick Trueheart was enrolled at Theirside College, where he immediately began to win games. The crowds flocked to see him play, while Ourside's gates dwindled. Soon Theirside's reputation as a winning college was widespread, and Ourside made a name for itself through the medical school. Everybody went to T.C. Ourside had to let first the coach go, then the faculty, because of lack of funds. Registrar Evans was the last to go. Now Ourside is dead and forgotten, while Theirside leads the world in academic facilities.

Grab-Bag Goodies: Bob Masterson was driving his Blues through their defensive positional play last night in hopes of catching up to the training sked. Marshall Hames, of the Ottawa Rough-Riders, is with the Intermediate team this year. Don Bark, intermed coach, is having a hard time with his lack of sufficient equipment. Warren Stevens says there will be enough when the team is cut to decent proportions and says that Varsity has more equipment than almost any two other colleges. He claims his dept. bought five thousand bucks worth of new rugby armor this year. The stadium will probably be enlarged next summer to accommodate four or five thousand more seats. This will raise its capacity to twenty-five thousand.

Ints. Shape Up Despite Numbers, Lack of Gear

Last Friday this reporter went out to the Intermediate practice, and from what we saw and heard things are shaping up well. Come the first game with McMaster at the Bloor Bowl on October 7, Don Bark will have what we think will be one of the best Intermediate teams in the history of the University. Despite the lack of adequate equipment, Don has been driving his men hard. He has been faced with the problem of sorting out a record number of candidates and still has not been able to break things down into round numbers. Don's comment was "We have had to turn men away because we just have not got the equipment to give them."

Many of last year's stars are back, among them Rich Howson, Jack Birkenshaw, Tom Lawson and Howie Russell. An encouraging note was struck last week with the arrival of Marshall Haymes in camp. Marshall is new to the University but brings a commendable record with him. Marshall played several games this year with the Regina Roughriders and is sure to fill an important spot on the Intermediates' line. Besides Marshall other names among the newcomers stand out. Some of these are Joe Shapiro, Bill Noonan and also Gerry Sutherland from Jarvis C. I.

First game for the Intermediates is the aforementioned tilt with McMaster on the 7th of October, an afternoon game. This will be followed by a visit from the Guelph Agies on the morning of Saturday, October 15. Both games are at Varsity Stadium.

Trueheart's Tribulations
A One Act Play

Scene: Registrar's office at Ourside U. Mr. Jeremiah C. Evers, registrar, is talking to coach Rugged Robert Smith (of the Deep South Smiths).

Evers: Are we going to have another successful year at rugby-football this semester, Robert?

Smith: Might have, if we get a few more good players. I have several in mind, and if we could get them to . . .

Evers: (interupting) Well get them, sir, get them. We shall not stand in the way.

Smith: Fine! And it just so happens I have a fellow outside who wishes to enroll. Sweil end. Tackles beautifully.

Enter Dick Trueheart, football hero.

Evers: I hear you want to attend classes here son.

Trueheart: Classes? I thought we talked that out, Smitty.

Smith: Ha! Ha! Mister Evers will have his little joke, won't he? Harumph!

Evers: We have the best lecturers in Arts in the world. Our School of Engineering has been long considered . . .

Trueheart: How much?

Smith: Harumph! Well, Uh, Mr. Evers, we kind of thought we might arrange something in the way of a bursary for this academically brilliant boy.

Evers: Why, we do have a bursary fund, Robert. Trueheart, how are your Matriculation standings?

Trueheart: Ha! Get this square, Smitty. Ain't he the kidder!

Evers: Well, Trueheart, how many firsts have you? Nine? Ten?

Smith: To tell you the truth, Mr. Evers, Dick's talents lie more in the athletic field. He only has two matric subjects, but he can run, and pass, and . . .

Evers: What! !! Not complete standing? (dramatically pointing to door) GET OUT!

Scene 2:

A Garret on lower Jarvis Street. Trueheart is sitting alone with his head in his hands.

Trueheart: Alas! What is my fate to be? I have been cast aside! Like last year's pants I been thrown (soft background violin music here) What will become of me?

The door bursts open. In rushes Coach O. Front of Theirside College.

Front: Trueheart! At last I've found thee! Come with me, boy, and let us face the sched . . . Oops, I mean the future, together.

Trueheart: How much?

Front: Free tuition. A room, and all you can eat, And we will lend heh, heh, lend you four hundred for the season.

Trueheart: Lend? When do I gotta pay it back?

Front: Aaahhh, don't worry; sometime within the next sixty or seventy years. We might even get an Alumnus to go your bond.

Trueheart: Agreed!

Meet The Ball Club

GREGG McFADDEN comes to Varsity from Runnymede Collegiate where he played end on the great Runnymede teams of that era. After graduation he chose to go to Western, why, we don't know. Finding one year enough in that institution, he came to Varsity where he played intermediate football last year. Gregg is a backfielder now and a very fast one too. In the off season he takes up track more seriously, and last year was a member of the intermediate team.

Gregg is 22 years old, was born in Toronto, and tips the beam at 175. He is proportionately tall, going just a little better than the six-foot mark. He is in his second year of the PHE course.

Soccer Coach Is Confident

Yesterday afternoon saw Varsity soccer get underway for the 1949 season when 30 hopefuls turned out for the year's first practice. The opening game takes place next Saturday and Brian Barton, once again playing-coach, will have a job getting the team in shape by that time.

However, he has an abundance of material to work with; six of last year's regulars are back in action, and raring to go. In addition several fine players are up from the intermeds and interfaculty teams of last year, among them Glyn Williams, a Victoria man, and Tom Wotherspoon, up from the old Ajax entry of the interfaculty league. (Ed. note to freshmen: Ajax was an extension of our University, located somewhere in the wilds of eastern Ontario, for the purpose of housing homeless engineers.)

Looking over the situation, after tonight's workout, coach Barton said that the boys look like a sure thing to repeat for the Blackwood Trophy. At any rate, he is still accepting applications for his team, so get up off the sideline fellas, and let's go!

Rush for Tickets Continues

Season books of rugby tickets for all the home games of the Blues will be on sale again today at the south door of the Arena. The Athletic Office wishes to emphasize that the books are not on sale at Hart House as so many people apparently thought yesterday.

Remember that it is necessary to show your Admit-to-Lecture cards. It was reported on Monday that several students who have not as yet received their ATL cards, no doubt through technical difficulties, were refused tickets. These students will be severely handicapped when the grand rush for tickets starts in another week or two.

Golf 'Qualifying' Thursday; Track Try-outs Commence

To Pick Two Teams For Kingston Match

A qualifying round for the Senior and Intermediate golf teams will be held at St. Andrew's Club on Sept. 29. It will be a 36 hole tournament all medal play. Only those players who shoot an average score of 85 or less will be considered eligible. So far there have been nearly thirty entries and the officials in the Athletic Office feel confident that the entries will reach a record forty by tee-time.

When the qualifying round is over, the eight best scores will win places on the two intercollegiate teams, and consequently they will be ineligible for the intramural tourney which will be an 18 hole affair held at the same course on Oct. 5, 6, 7.

The Intercollegiate matches will be run off on one of the lushest courses in Canada, the Cataraqui Club in Kingston. Among those who have already signed up for the qualifying round this Thursday are Jack Sheppard of Meds, Al Conboy, Forestry, Jim Torrance, Vic, and C. C. Medland of UC. All of these well-known divot-diggers are expected to shoot in the middle 70's.

This is a new method of selection because in the past the intercollegiate teams have been made up of the eight low gross scores in the Intramural tournament. By this new method, the two teams will be picked about two weeks earlier than in previous years.

Sportswoman

The machinery that operates the women's sports world here at Varsity, after being well oiled, has been set in motion for the 1949-50 season.

Softball

Softball practices started yesterday and will be held every noon hour for the rest of the week. Reps from the various faculties are holding these, with high hopes of getting good teams to start the actual games next Monday.

Basketball

Cay Catto, president of the Basketball Club, held a meeting last night and it was decided that practices would begin next Monday.

Each faculty and college hopes to have one or more teams and the lists to be signed go up today.

As far as actual times for these practices are concerned, a schedule will be announced at the end of this week.

Medicals

Today is the last day for both softball and basketball players to acquire their medicals at the Health Service on St. George Street.

Archery

It has been announced by the Archery Club that all equipment will be provided for the playing of this sport. That means bows, arrows, arm guards and even the straw targets.

The Club meets tomorrow, for the first time this year, in the Varsity Stadium from 12:30-1:30, as well as Thursday — same time, same place.

Tennis

Tennis is well on its way with the faculty tournaments all this week, to be completed by Friday. From each of these go the four best players, to make up the intramural competition, which begins next week.

Swimming

The Aqua Show is the most important event in the swimming side of the sports picture, and rehearsals are all this week.

Yoo Hoo

Girls! Are you interested in sports? Do you like writing? If so we need you for the Women's Section of the Sports Page.

There is lots to write about in basketball, softball, bowling, volleyball and hockey. There are meets to be covered in skiing, swimming, archery, badminton and tennis.

So come down to The Varsity office and sign up!

Frosh May Help Hold Track Title

By BRUCE MacDONALD

"The Varsity track team has ample speed on the track this season, but is badly in need of some outstanding competitors in field events such as the shot-put, and javelin and discuss throwing" stated Barry Lowes when questioned on the chances of the Blues team retaining their championship this fall.

Newcomers like freshmen Mike Zurak from St. Catharines and Bill Webster, a miler will strengthen the squad along with Murray Gazuk of the North Toronto Track Club and Haight from Queen's, who set the Canadian half-mile record last year.

Veterans Miln, a hurdler, Doull, a competitor in the mile and three mile events, and Farlinger, who starred in discuss throwing and pole-vaulting last season will return, along with some former teammates to bolster the Blue cause.

The Intercollegiate Meet this fall will be held at Western University on October 19. With the meet on home ground this season, Weste' will be able to utilize men like Parry and the McFarlanes, who have formerly been prevented from competing by their activities in football. Western is out to crack Varsity supremacy in this field of intercollegiate sport, and it appears that the meet this year will not be a walkaway for anyone.

The Varsity Junior Track Meet is scheduled for Thursday, October 6, and the Senior Meet for Wednesday, October 12. Results at this meet will help to decide who will travel to Western to represent Toronto.

Practices are being held nightly from 4-6 p.m at Varsity Stadium under the direction of coach Harold Brown. Any track men interested in trying out for the Blues team are requested to report at one of the practices.

Buddies and Foe All Argos Now

Team-mates and former archrivals were observed last night at the Toronto Argonaut practice on the back campus. Nick Volpe and John Shore, stars from the 1948 model Varsity machine, and Bill Wardle, a Western Mustang from last year's runners-up, were seen working together under the heavy hand of their coach, Teddy Morris.

Bill Wardle has been working out recently with a broken finger, but the way he was catching Copeland's passes last night, it would look as if Bill only needed one arm.

Nick was doing the quarter-back work for the first squad and looked to be doing very well too!

Oh yes, another item. It was reported on this page on Friday that jovial John Shore had not as yet been thrown out of a Big Four game. In order not to disillusion his many rabid fans, we would like to make a hasty correction. John Shore was ejected from a league game two Saturdays ago in Montreal.

Mustangs Defeat OAC Intermeds

Western Mustangs galloped to a touchdown in every quarter to blank Ontario Agricultural College 25-0 in an exhibition football game in London on Saturday.

Bob McFarlane and Murray Henderson, two of Mustangs' largest calibre guns, were hurt early in the game. McFarlane injured a shoulder and will be out for at least two weeks. Jack Parry, perennial star, scored two Mustang TD's and kicked a single and a convert. Blake Taylor and Wes Williams, newcomers, also got touchdowns.

This game will enable the expert to draw a rough comparison of the relative strength of the Mustangs and the Blues as the latter team meets OAC at Guelph on Wednesday.

Hope To Establish Internat. House Says ISS Official

A move to establish an International House at Toronto for foreign students is to be made by the Toronto International Student Service Committee, Don Scroggie, acting chairman of the Toronto committee, announced last night. The facilities of the house would be made available to all foreign students studying at Toronto.

Will Aid Foreign Students

If efforts to secure the International House are unsuccessful the ISS will go ahead with plans to set up a committee to "give guidance" to foreign students here.

ISS will also investigate the possibilities of geting scholarships for foreign students who want to study in Canada. Their proposal would have the scholarships similar to those currently offered Canadian students by foreign governments. In addition to this ISS would like to see some system of student exchanges set up between Canada and the countries of Western Europe, the British Commonwealth and some Latin American countries.

Change DP Program

The Toronto committee has also decided to recommend that the present program of bringing displaced persons to Canada to study be discontinued in favor of a broader scholarship and exchange program. The DP project was a substitute last year for a student exchange program which proved to be impossible to carry out.

ISS will also set up an information service for students who want to go to Europe, Scroggie said. The service will gather all the available information on study opportunities and scholarships in foreign countries. Data will also be collected on travel to and from the continent, as well as information on conditions and travel in Europe.

The Toronto committee also thinks that the ISS Summer Seminar should be continued, but on expanded scale to make it of "more direct value to the students on the campus", Scroggie said.

Campus Press Speeds News Cross Country

Representing a national organization of campus papers the Canadian University Press provides an exchange of service for student news across the continent.

The Varsity, as a member of this service, has in its staff certain members who are responsible for obtaining and sending stories of general interest to the other member papers. These writers also supplement campus stories in The Varsity with news received from other Universities. In addition an international exchange of news is carried on by CUP with Universities in the United States.

The Canadian University Press was organized by representatives of 12 Canadian colleges papers at a meeting in Winnipeg on New Year's Day 1938. The purpose of the organization as outlined was to consolidate and circulate knowledge of Canadian University student activities.

Two methods are employed in the exchange of news between universities. One method is to telegraph stories of special interest to universities with newspapers having daily edition such as The Varsity. Weekly papers are mailed copies of the member papers from which they may clip desired features.

Each year the members of the Canadian University Press send representatives to a national conference for the purpose of working out methods and practices that will enable CUP to better serve its member newspapers. Last year this conference was held at Laval University, and will be held this year at the University of Montreal.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

The Varsity welcomes Letters to the Editor, but these should be confined to matters of general student interest.

Letters should not exceed 150 lines and must be printed or typewritten on one side of any standard paper.

All letters become the property of The Varsity and will be published at the discretion of the Editor.

'We Want Men at Once' Says U.C. Follies Director

Louise Burns, premiere danseuse in "Meet the Navy" and one of Canada's foremost choreographers, has been signed to direct the dancing in the UC Follies, producer John Bull announced last night.

Miss Burns brings to the Follies 12 years' experience ranging from co-director of dance numbers in the 1948 Olsen and Johnson show at the C.N.E. to 12 years producing the Royal York's New Year's Eve floor show.

"We want men," Miss Burns said in an interview today. Auditions for the Men's chorus lines for the Follies will be held this afternoon from 4 to 6 p.m. in the Women's Union Theatre. Miss Burns has announced that there will be places for at least 20 male dancers of "medium or tall stature and a sense of rhythm."

"What is the crop of women at the auditions like?" she was asked.

All Good-Looking

"I'm amazed," Miss Burns said. "I've never seen so many, and they're all good-looking girls." Auditions are to continue at the Women's Union Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons, she said. "We hope to complete casting at a special final audition Thursday afternoon."

Besides her direction, Miss Burns has danced in the Olsen and Johnson Show in a duo with Peter Hamilton of New York, who danced solos in the Broadway shows, Allegro and Miss Liberty. She was also choreographer of "Meet the Navy" and has just finished designing the dance numbers of "There Goes Yesterday," an all-Canadian Revue which opened last week at the Brant Inn, in Burlington.

"The Follies will feature all types of dancing from exhibition ballroom to jive. We're hoping to use a good many males," she added.

Rain, Injury No Bar To Freshman Initiation Snaking Over Campus

Rain or no rain, the freshman initiation got gaily under way Tues. evening. About seventy freshmen started off from St. Hilda's forming a boisterous snake-dance whose head gleamed with red lanterns.

Queen's Park was the first to receive the impact, its peace shattered beyond repair; frantic couples were seen fleeing in all directions. The damage done, the procession roamed for awhile along Hoskin Avenue, stopping traffic and competing in throat-shattering yells.

The University campus was then serenaded, rather unevenly, until the group reached Knox College. There they were received by buckets of water generously hurled upon them from windows. Unperturbed however by adversities, the offensive was next directed on busy St. George Street where a highly successful traffic jam was on the making for a while.

After some final yells and whistles the party disintegrated into smaller groups, disappearing into sidestreets and adjacent refuges.

Only casualty reported so far in the night's uproar is a slight injury to a prominent St. Mike's sophomore inflicted allegedly by frosh sources.

Three Canadian Plays To Be Presented Soon By U.C. Drama Group

The first bill of one-act plays by the University College Players' Guild will be presented on Wednesday, Oct. 19, in the Women's Union Theatre.

The plays scheduled include: "Louise" by Bruce Evoy, III Phil. & Eng., "The Voice of the People" by Robertson Davies, directed by Sheila Craig III Pass, and a fantasy directed by Arthur Livingstone, IV Eng. Lang. & Lit.

Two more evenings of drama are to be held in Hart House on Nov. 1 and the Women's Union on Nov. 30. In the second term the U.C. Players' Guild plan to stage "The Loves of Annunciata" for the U. of T. Drama Committee program of one-act plays at Hart House in January.

An opening meeting of this group is to be held to-day at 8 p.m. in the Women's Union. Plans for the year are to be reviewed for all old and new members.

Concert at Settlement For New Volunteers

A concert featuring Albert Marson, tenor, and other Toronto artists, is to be held at the University Settlement House this evening. Prospective volunteer workers for the Settlement House are invited to this event.

Pupils of the Settlement Music School will also display their talents. The address of the Settlement House is 23 Grange Road.

VIC. C.C.F. CLUB

There will be an organization meeting of the Victoria College C.C.F. Club on Wednesday Oct. 5 at 1.20 p.m. in Room 21, Victoria College, to elect officers and discuss plans for the coming year.

Chair-Desks Replace UC Seats of Learning Consigned to Scrap

Have you noticed the old desks stacked at the east entrance of University College? The desks have been sold for scrap, after years of hard use by generations of students. As part of the new decoration scheme for University College, the seats of 19 rooms have been filled with tabloid armchairs, which give uniformity and greater seating capacity. There have been approximately 1100 purchased by the University. Not all of these are intended for University College. Some are now situated in the Wallberg Memorial Building, and two rooms in the School of Law are also to be outfitted.

Band Manoeuvers

Intricate, But Interesting

If you have the instincts of a homing pigeon, the nerves of a steel worker and of course can play an instrument, you're in the university band.

You'll admit that it looks wonderful from the stands but would you believe it, between thirty and forty hours of practice were required beforehand? The other day we dropped down to catch a practice which left our head spinning.

They were doing what is called a pinwheel formation. The men were lined up in seven ranks and upon command each rank moved off alternately to the right and left through ninety degrees around a pivot man. This movement continued until they reached their original positions. See what we mean now?

Draughted First

According to Bob Cringan, the band's director, everything is planned out first on a draughting board using wooden pegs to represent the band members. When each manoeuvre appears to be workable it is charted with each move carefully marked. Copies are printed and given to each man with his own particular move marked thereon.

But wait, that's not all. Music must be timed to the bar. It will take so many bars to get to the field from Hoskin Place and so many to arrive at a certain yard line from the door. Such detailed timing doesn't allow for one slip-up. After the paper work is completed, practical application must begin with each man trying his part. Here the kinks are ironed out and the plan developed to perfection.

No Exception Now

It is only in the past three years that precision manoeuvres have been worked out seriously and this year is no exception. A new type of routine is being attempted with a minimum of command and a maximum of precision. Marching particularly, is being emphasized. The group is the soloist and must act as one. One of the formations extends sixty yards—more than half the length of the playing field. There are also several formations including special ones for special days; for example, when Western is here a big "U" of "W" is formed for visiting fans. "It looks easy but it really is a hard and tedious job," said Bob.

Besides Bob Cringan, there is Bill Girvan as his assistant and Bob MacIntosh watching discipline.

This year about half of the old band is back including Ted Snider and Ed Nixon. The former we hear is the "star" trumpet player and the latter a sousaphonist whose instrument has been straightened out after its near demise last year. New members were being chosen last Thursday afternoon and Bob claims it was a difficult job. Apparently the freshmen are getting better every year.

Of interest to all, no doubt, is the new drum majorette. Her name is Stella McCord and she was Margie's understudy last year. From all reports she's good! She and the cheer leaders and all the band work hard and faithfully at many tiresome rehearsals.

It's hard to credit the Varsity band with so much work when they are on the field for less than ten minutes at any game. But it's easy to see why they will be the best college band on the rugby field this year.

Blue And White

Last year the Blue and White Society was the only part of the Students' Administrative Society that paid for itself.

For years the sprawling University of Toronto has suffered from geographic and academic decentralization. The diversified interests of the various faculties and colleges have bred apathy towards many all-Varsity functions. With the formation of the Blue and White Society in the spring of 1948, a distinct step towards University solidarity was taken.

This year the Blue and White will undertake to organize all functions of an all-Varsity nature, with the exception of the All-Varsity Review which has its own committee. This includes pep rallies, parades, dances and in short any and all activities that remind a student that he belongs to the University of Toronto instead of a college or faculty.

To accomplish this task the Blue and White Society has enthusiasm and ability, but not too much in the way of cash. It is up the co-operation and support of the student body that its success depends. Should the dances and rallies fail, it would mean a severe curtailment of such activities in the future.

The machinery is in good running order, but if it is not kept oiled, it will rust.

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

Michael Head

Superb artistry joined forces with a canny sense of showmanship to make the Monday evening concert of Michael Head an especially satisfying one. To excel as a singer, pianist, and composer is extraordinary enough, but to retain at the same time an infectious sense of humour and natural approach to your audience is even more remarkable. Blend distinguished singing and expert self-accompaniment, top it off with a "provoking charm" and emotional warmth, and what have you? Good listening, of course.

Opening with a group of Elizabethan songs, Mr. Head displayed a fine resonant voice with a diction pure and clear. "Weep ye no more sad fountains" (Dowland) was handled delicately; "I'll sail upon the dogstar" (Purcell), with forthright vigour. In the upper range of Arne's "Plague of Love", some relaxing of control occurred. The dramatic effect of the Liszt group, especially "The Three Gypsies", in German on the programme was splendidly sung in English. "Primroses", a substitution turned out to be one of the best. A tasteful balance was always achieved between melody and accompaniment, sometimes by the pampering of a somewhat primitive piano.

As a composer-performer, Mr. Head's obvious enjoyment communicated itself to his audience, which received his "Three Mummers" with even more enthusiasm than his Liszt. "The Garden Seat" was a sensitive mood picture, "Lavender Pond" perhaps the most thoughtful and original. Seumas O'Sullivan's "Piper" was exceptional, "The Matron Cat"'s purrs, disarming.

Top notch musicianship was the order of the evening — a programme as well conceived as it was carefully fashioned in its delivery.

Humor Now Stressed By UC "Undergrad"

"The Undergrad should be snappier, happier reading this year," promises Rick Tait, this year's editor of University College undergraduate magazine. This year's staff which includes literary editor Pat Watson, art editor Patty Scott, and business manager Roddie Roger, will emphasize humor to make a more rounded magazine.

"We are not abandoning the high literary standards set in previous years," Tait explained yesterday, "but wish to widen the magazine's scope and increase the number of contributors."

The editors announce any essay, short story, poem, article, cartoon or drawing will be accepted at the Undergrad office, Room 63, University College basement. Deadline for the November issue is October 15.

The Onion Skin

By NOODNICKS

We are annoyed.

Not that we have any real reason to be raising our eyebrow, but, we are annoyed. It's one of those trivial things in life that's getting us down—Ties.

The day of the Old School Tie is passed. At least we were under that impression, but there are signs that it is creeping back—slowly and insidiously.

There is an argument to be made for the school tie. There are bonds of loyalty and devotion to be considered; there is a feeling of comradeship to be fostered—there is a trust we would place in something bigger than the individual. The school tie is a symbol of such things: if we all wear the same tie, we all believe in the same things, and we will stick together—no matter who stands against us!

It is a fine argument, and we could agree with much of it. But there is this matter of the symbol—of the school tie.

The constant procession of bilious greens, egg yellows, and off-red-pink-salmons to which we have been treated these past few days revolts us. The unhappy choice of tie colours which Skule, Victoria and U.C. present makes it difficult for us to exercise our fine discrimination in the award of our Thorn Of The Week. It has been a strenuous task, but Skule has come through again!

For the monstrous travesty with which they have adorned the neck of the Skule frosh we soberly present to SPS the First Noodnicks Thorn Of The Week. We would console U.C. and Vic, however, for they were close runners-up.

The other day, while we were eating dinner, at Hart House, we noticed an odd green which we had not seen before.

"Son," we said to the young man of the odd green cravat, "just where do you hail from?"

"I'm an engineer," he replied, not without a faint quaver of pride, as he leaned down over our fresh green salad.

"And the tie?" we asked. By this time we had chewed a considerable hole in his lovely tie, having mistaken it for a piece of lettuce. It tasted no better than it looked.

"I'm a freshman," he said. He went on to explain that he wore the tie voluntarily and that he had bought and paid for it himself. We were frankly horrified.

As for U.C. we are fully aware that you must forgive the Artsman a great deal. But there is a limit to kindness. The U.C. colours are red and white. Red and White. If the U.C. tie is red, then our name is Sidney Smith.

And Vic? Let's just say we hate yellow.

Are these the ties that bind those great institutions: Skule, U.C. and Vic?

We are sorry, but we are annoyed.

Congratulations, Skule!

American Democracy

Editor, The Varsity:

The case of Ruth Comfort affords an unusual display of American democracy. The State Department deplores the incident only because Miss Comfort had apparently never read Marx or Lenin. This standard automatically condemns every student of Political Science at Toronto to discrimination when crossing the border. For, if I am not mistaken, their curriculum calls for a study of Marx and Lenin.

This violates all fundamental traditions of liberal democracy and places this university in the ridiculous position of arranging its curriculum to suit the State Department of the United States.

The SAC and other student organizations should denounce this discrimination. The SAC should lead the demand for free border crossing for students and others, regardless of their race, creed, color, or political belief.

Movie Review

When Love Calls

I doubt whether this new film at the International Cinema will break any attendance records, but it is a light, rather unimportant, and thoroughly enjoyable Italian movie. The music is by three gentlemen named Mozart, Rossini, and Donizetti, predominantly Mozart and predominantly Don Giovanni.

The highly implausible plot includes such Saturday matinee features as cross-country chases by stagecoach, kind-hearted bandits, and community singing in a saloon. For the Saturday night crowd, there is a parade of seductive blouses to put the "Wicked Lady" to shame. Intermingled throughout the scenario are small portions of Don Giovanni sung most satisfactorily by Gino Bechi, advertised as having 'the world's most BEAUTIFUL voice.'

Playing the prima donna and Mr. Bechi's wife in her screen debut, is Silvana Pampanini, better known to Life magazine readers as Miss Italy, 1946.

This new movie is strongly reminiscent of the old Nelson Eddy-Jeanette Macdonald series. I would not be very surprised if they were using an old MGM screenplay.

Gino Bechi has been singing since only eighteen on concert stages all over Europe and has made several tours in the United States. He is particularly fine in his Mozart arias, but somehow, fails to reach the standard set by Feruccio Tagliavanni in the Barber of Seville last year. In fact, the music, as a whole, is not equal to either the work in the Barber or in the Lost One (Traviata). The sound track is, however, much clearer than usual in Italian features.

If you have already seen the Fallen Idol, and you like opera, try to see When Love Calls. It may not impress you, but you are certain to enjoy it.

Don Michel.

Meet The Ball Club

FRASER MUSTARD

Better known as "Moose", is one of the best linemen ever to play for the Varsity Blues. Named on the senior inter-collegiate all-star team last season, Mustard also was mentioned on the all-eastern Canada dream team. Annis Stukus, former sports writer with one of the other Toronto daily papers, last season decided he would like to have Fraser on his all-star club.

The "Moose" is entering his first medical year, which means that he will be eligible for senior competition for three seasons after this one. That should relieve Masterson's mind concerning the middle of his wing-line for a while. A great blocker, and a regular terror on defense, "Moose" should have a terrific season.

VARSITY SPORTS

Athletes Sweat It Out Before Mulock Race

Again last night perspiring athletes of a variety of shapes, sizes, and ability, darkened the campus as they trained for the Mulock Cup Handicap. The mug is emblematic of the interfaculty rugby championship. Most coaches are non-committal as to their team's chances, with cutting being put back to next week.

U. C.

Manager Phil Downie of U.C. looks for a much stronger team this year, with many of last year's players and a liberal sprinkling of high school stars out with the team. With Moe Morris of Vaughan Road C. I., and Bill Lawrence of St. Andrew's with the team, the half line should be strong. Ends Red Wass and Pete Hynbida, and linesmen Bev Grasser, Pete and Tom West of last year's team, are others who look good in practice. The team's chances depend on the line which is willing but inexperienced.

Meds Seniors

Meds Srs., semi-finalists last year, look to be strong again although they began training late. The gold dust twins, Al and Gabe Varga are out once more and should be better than ever. Coach Ron Hall hopes for the return of several players trying out for the Intermediates including flashy Tony Cecutti. Good conditioning as always will be Meds policy.

Trinity

Trinity will have a completely untried team, with only three men returning from last year. Coach Chad Bark is counting on High School players to fill the gap. Back for another fling are Terry Wardrup and Don Hunt and new arrivals include John Linklater, Doug Anderson and Harry Meredith from U.C.C. Firsts, Little Big Four Champs.

S. P. S.

Sr. S.P.S. had the largest turnout of any team. With many returning from last year's squad, the men from the Discontinued Ajax team, and the high school players moving up, Coach Ted Weaver's greatest problem seems to be picking the team. It looks stronger than last year's team, and might well be the dark horse of the season. Conditioning and diversity of plays will be featured.

Big Year For Rugby

The rugger season this year promises to be the most active since the war. With a Toronto Rugger League, the nucleus of the Ontario Rugby Union, there will be games every Wednesday and Saturday. All those interested in playing should call in at the Athletic Office in Hart House. The Varsity team will have very heated competition and promises to show some very fine "International Rugby" to the public.

The highlights of the season will be the games against McGill on Oct. 14th in Montreal, and Nov. 4 in Toronto. Twenty-five enthusiastic players have been out to practice already, and more are expected. Varsity will field two teams this year, while Trinity College will as usual challenge 'the rest' to a lively game on the Trinity field.

The Ontario Rugby Union will challenge the Quebec R.U. to an All-Star match later in the season. All games will be announced in The Varsity.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

ACORNS FROM THE ARBOR: Brian Barton will again be the playing coach of the Blackwood Cup holding Senior soccer club this year. By playing as well as coaching last year Brian forfeited a one hundred dollar coaching fee. It's really a shame that the team doesn't get the support they deserve. If more than forty or fifty people attend their games the crowd is unusually large.

Bob Masterson was driving his Blues through their defensive positional play, trying to make sure that nobody duplicates Dutch Davey's feat of being nailed at the line of scrimmage and continuing for nine and ten yard gains. Bill Wade will be back coaching the Varsity Junior Bees this year. Unfortunately for Bill, Porky McDougall will be with the senior club doing his bit on defence. Let's throw a few bo-kays in the direction of Miss Lea of the Athletic Office. She has a ready smile and a wealth of information for anybody that asks. Anything about University athletics that she doesn't know, nobody knows. The bus taking the Big Blues to Guelph for the OAC game will be slightly crowded. It holds 44 and already forty-nine are slated to go.

Only two of Vic Obeck's celebrated Calgary imports are eligible to play senior this year. Mr. Stevens is getting up a game between the Soccer Blues and the leading Ukrainians of the Toronto senior soccer league. McGill plays the Montreal Alouettes an exhibition game Wednesday. We wonder why the U. of T. Blues never play exhibition games with the 'Argos. Is it that the Argo brain trust are afraid of an upset and the resultant effect of a deteriorated reputation on the gates? The Athletic Office has asked us to beat the drum on the forthcoming game with the Balmy Beach Puma-Wolves-Toronto-Indians Football Club at Varsity Stadium this Saturday. It is herewith being beaten.

They picked the Cheerleaders last night, and quite a leggy crop they have this year. Glad to see Hilka with us again. Ed Brennan of Basketball fame has left Varsity to take Divinity. John Roe of the Big Blues, late of Western Senior football, leaves his teeth on the sidelines during scrimmages. John got his teeth knocked out playing for Varsity. Don't forget to-morrow's game at OAC. Western beat the Aggies 25-0 Saturday, and it may be of interest to see how our men stack up with those of Johnny Metras. Western has been offering Andy Sokol of the Sarnia Imperials a scholarship, but it has not been accepted yet. See you in lower left to morrow.

Oops! The Pound Has Slipped

Jack Gray, News Editor, The Varsity, is seen chatting with the Marquess of Salisbury, Opposition Leader of the British House of Lords, concerning the devaluation of the British pound. The Marquess of Salisbury is in Toronto to receive an honorary degree from the University of Toronto in the coming Fall Convocation. Gilbert A. Milne.

British Statesman Terms Devaluation Only A Beginning

While devaluation of the pound in itself is no cure for Britain's present economic plight, supported by increased industrial productivity and an intensified search for new markets, it may point the way to Britain's survival, Lord Salisbury, Opposition leader of the British House of Lords, said in an interview yesterday.

"Devaluation by itself will not work," he declared. "I would like to see a more balanced policy pursued, in which the best means of achieving greater production is found. There is certainly room for improvement."

Talks On Liberty

Lord Salisbury will deliver this year's Falconer lecture in two parts at Convocation Hall, on Tuesday, October 4, and Wednesday, October 5, at 8:30 p.m. both nights. He will speak on "Liberty and Authority — A Re-examination." He is staying with Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, Chancellor of the University, at Port Hope, during his visit here.

The lectures will deal with the conflict in the world today between liberty and authority. "I shall approach the question in the field of international, commonwealth, and domestic affairs, first from an academic point of view and then with some definite applications," Lord Salisbury explained.

Lord Salisbury believes that the recent announcement by President Truman about Russian possession of the atomic bomb makes the Atlantic Pact even more important than it was before. "It is a formidable statement," he said, "but I do not believe that it involves any reconsideration of western policy. If anything, the Atlantic Pact is more important than before."

Wants Air Strength

Regarding stockpiling of atomic bombs in Britain by the Americans, Lord Salisbury thinks that "the stronger our government arms are, the more sure we may be of maintaining peace. And we must build up our air arm, because the air force has certainly become the most important of the three services." Lord Salisbury has long been a leading exponent of air power.

The Marquis was a member of the British delegation to the San Francisco Conference at which the United Nations Charter was drafted. Looking back on the decisions made in 1945, he sees the veto power given France, Russia, Britain, the United States and China as a poor decision.

Criticizes Veto

"Personally, I never liked the veto, but I don't think I expected it to turn out as badly as it has. I think that we can make the UN work with the co-operation of all the members, but the veto must not be used by any nation to further its nationalist policies," he said.

Lord Salisbury refused to make any definite prediction on the outcome of the approaching British parliamentary elections. "We are ready for an election," he said, "and I don't think we will be dissatisfied with the result."

SAC Book Shop Means Savings To Undergrads

The SAC Book Exchange has nearly $5,000 in cash ready to pay out to students, Al Burns, IV C & F, manager of the exchange announced yesterday.

All those who have had books sold through the exchange have money waiting for them at 119 St. George St. Pay day will be Saturday, from nine to one o'clock. There will be extra staff on hand to avoid waiting.

Burns estimated the Exchange has already saved students $2,000 through the re-sale of text-books. In addition all money taken in is returned to other students for them to buy their own texts.

"We feel we have done a good job," Burns said. He explained the system used. A file card is made out for any book brought in for sale and the book is put on the shelf. The owner can set any price on his book, but he is usually advised that a fair price does not exceed 75% of a new copy.

When the book is sold, 10% of the sale price is retained by the exchange for operating expenses and the balance is credited to the owner's account. Some students have over $25 waiting for them.

Any book not immediately sold is kept on the shelves until sold. Texts not sold this year will either be returned to the owner or stored and sold next year.

The Exchange is now open from nine to six. It has most texts and a miscellany of other books at very low prices. "Representative Poetry," costing $3.50, is on the shelves for $1.75. "Phillips Calculus", new $4.20, sells for $2.50.

Reference and supplementary books are extremely low-priced: four dollar books are going begging at 75c.

Besides books, the Exchange handles other student needs. An engineer's level and several dissecting kits are now on hand.

Burns said that Monday was their biggest day. On that day over $1,000 worth of students' books were sold.

Code For McGill Frosh To Be Enforced by Hazing

Montreal, Sept. 29 — (CUP) — Freshmen hazing has returned to McGill on a university-wide basis.

Although milder and simpler than in earlier years, according to McGill student officials, all regulations regarding freshman conduct will be rigidly enforced, and all violators will be tried at a special mass trial. Law faculty students are slated to defend the delinquent frosh.

Senior students, under this set-up, have no power to ask a freshman to do anything outside of the Code of Etiquette laid down, nor may they enforce the code.

Regulations for freshmen are as follows:

1. Every freshman must write his or her name on the "freshie" button and wear it for the duration of freshman activities.

2. Freshmen must wear their green ribbons on the campus, for the men in place of a tie and for the girls in their hair or around their necks.

3. Freshmen must light an upperclassman's cigarette when asked.

4. Freshmen must pay respect to upperclassmen by: (a) Offering seats to them anywhere on campus grounds; (b) letting upperclassmen precede them in any queue, except in regard to official appointments; (c) giving way to upperclassmen on stairways and sidewalks; (d) in general, being respectful and courteous to all upperclassmen.

5. Freshmen must know all the McGill clubs and societies listed in the handbook and their functions.

6. Freshmen must know the McGill songs listed in the handbook.

VARSITY TEA

All students interested in writing for The Varsity are invited to the opening tea to be held in Wymilwood, on Friday afternoon at 4.30 p.m.

All editors will be on hand to acquaint new reporters with the structure and routine of the paper.

Debating Trials To Choose Team To Visit U.S.A.

A tour through the state of New York in late November and a second trip to the New England States, in January, have been announced in the advance schedule of the University of Toronto Debating Union. Two teams, each comprising one man and one woman, will be chosen from those taking part in the debates presented by the Union this fall.

There will be a debate on October 18, against a team from Osgoode Hall, and another debate will take place some time in late October, with representatives from McMaster University.

This will be the first time that the U.T.D.U. has sent teams to the United States, and it will also be the first time that mixed teams have been sent out of the country to represent the University of Toronto in the field of debating. There have been teams sent by the Hart House Debating Club to the States, but this is a new venture for the Union. They now have sufficient expense money to finance the trips, and need only enough applicants to make the trip a reality.

To qualify for the trials, to be held early in November, students must take part in either of the debates, on a paper or from the floor. There will be a committee of staff members and representatives of the Union to pick the teams, and those successful candidates will be given special coaching in the procedure and conduct of a debate. There will also be a coaching for the members of the Union, open to all undergraduates of the University.

The second trip, to the New England States, will take place during the last week in January. To qualify for the tests for this trip, students must take part in any one of the debates in Toronto which take place any time during the fall term. One feature of interest to the coeds is that all the debates scheduled by the Union are open to both men and women.

VARSITY REPORTERS

The Varsity needs staff reporters, experienced or inexperienced, to carry out its function as official organ of the U of T student body. All those interested in doing news reporting, feature writing, movie, art, and drama reviewing, sports, and photography, are asked to report at once to The Varsity Office in Room 78 in the basement of UC.

Football Ticket Sales Surpass Last Year's; Hardly Any Lineups

Apart from the fact that a few misguided people had to learn the hard way which door of the Stadium to enter, the sale of rugby tickets went off smoothly on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of this week. About 8500 tickets were sold; 1600 more than last year. On Monday the sale rose to 5200. This is more than were sold the first two days last year.

Try To Publish Year Book Preceding Grad Exercises

Torontonensis will be published earlier this year. At least this is the hope of the newly appointed Editor for the year, Bill Raymond, a fourth year Commerce and Finance Student.

In former years, this large blue bound volume, which is produced at the end of each school year, came out sometime in June, after graduation; but this year, under the guidance of the new editor, it is hoped it will appear well before the close of the academic season.

The Torontonensis is the official all-Varsity year book; and it is hoped that as usual, all colleges, faculties, clubs, teams, and organizations on the campus will purchase space in the volume. For as Editor Bill Raymond states, "The success of the Torontonensis is entirely dependent upon the type and amount of material turned in."

Last year's Torontonensis, which sold to students at six dollars a copy, and to graduates for two dollars, reached the all time record of 576 pages. Roughly 3,000 copies were distributed.

Regarding the staff needed to prepare the Torontonensis this year, Bill Raymond adds that a notice will be placed in The Varsity early in November and anyone interested in doing proof-reading, layout, art, editorial work or photography for the Year Book will be advised how to proceed at that time.

The style of the Torontonensis will be generally similar to former issues, but the Editor hopes there will be more drawings and cartoons than before.

School of Social Work Finds Tennis Champions At Annual Get-together

Tuesday afternoon the students and faculty of the School of Social Work started their year with a picnic at Toronto Island. The afternoon's activities were centred around the club's three tennis courts.

The centre of attraction was the annual challenge issued by Dr. and Mrs. Cassidy, accepted by Miss P. A. McFarland and Andy Crook. The Cassidys, victors for several years, were finally dethroned after a close-fought match.

Following the afternoon athletics the picnickers dined on corn, hot dogs, coffee, cakes and apples. Afterwards the second year students portrayed the student's initiation into the mysteries of social work.

The evening was topped off by square and round dancing.

SAC At A Glance

At its first meeting last night the Students' Administrative Council:

Heard a letter from President Sidney Smith assuring the Council that the SAC brief on textbooks, submitted to the Board of Governors last spring, had been "dealt with sympathetically";

Heard a letter from Alan Heisey, III SPS, offering to organize and edit an official University of Toronto song book; Council authorized Heisey to investigate the problem further;

Heard a letter from Hart House Warden Nicholas Ignatieff asking that all SAC representatives remind freshmen of the Freshmen Night at Hart House on Oct. 5;

Heard a letter from the pipe-band executive asking financial support for the band from the Council; the Council approved support of the band and referred the matter to the finance commission for consideration.

Does It Affect You?

On July 5, 1940, at his 658th press conference, the late Franklin Roosevelt, when asked to clarify previously mentioned world peace objectives, said that among the essentials of permanent peace is: "Freedom from fear, so that people won't be afraid of being bombed from the air or attacked, one way or the other, by some other nation."

That freedom from fear of attack, one way or another, by some other nation, does not exist in the United States today is quite clear. We here at the University of Toronto have recently been given notice that the full and direct impact of this fact can strike mighty close to home.

The news within the last week has revealed that:

1. Miss Ruth Comfort, III OT, U. of T., was held at Ellis Island on an alleged charge of having given "an inflammatory impromptu speech."

2. Barker Fairley, Professor of German and head of the department in University College, has been placed under a no-entry ban by the U.S. Government. Arthur Kurmath, District Director of the U.S. Immigration Services, Buffalo Area, has placed two definite orders against Professor Fairley which could result in his being barred for life from the U.S. The reason given for the ban is that "his presence in the U.S. is not in the best interests of the country."

The two cases cited can be called symptoms of a world sickness — a sickness induced by fear. This sickness has been brought on largely because of misunderstanding in world politics. The two most potent factors that underli misunderstanding, with its resulting selfishness and greed are the two loathsome bedfellows, apathy and ignorance.

We who are today's university students and, presumably, tomorrow's leaders should be among the first to recognize these symptoms when they make themselves felt right in our own back yard. We must see the symptoms — and, more important, we must be able to read their implications.

We are living in troubled times. We know that. Let us not turn our backs on our larger world problems and race merrily along the dead-end path of frivolity while we are at university, Too many in the past have done that, and left us with innumerable obstacles to a healthy, sane, peaceful world.

This is an earnest plea to all who will read to also heed. Let each make himself aware of the happenings in world politics so that he may intelligently and courageously face the problems that beset us. If all will do this, we need not fear.

HUTTON HOUSE HORROR

In his daily report to The Varsity today, Mr. Champus Cat B.T.O., confirmed the rumour that Hutton House had been raided last night by a special squad of University police. When asked for further particulars Mr. Champus Cat explained, "reports have been coming in to me for some time about the furtive appearances of a young pharmacist who was often seen tossing packages to someone in an upper storey window. Last night," he continued, "the package was accidentally dropped and the frightened Pharmacist sped away.

"Examination of the parcel revealed that there was an empty Rubbing Alcohol bottle inside around which was tied a note, saying, and I quote, 'Sorry love I cannot get any more but I will keep on trying.' Furthermore," said Mr. Cat, "the note was signed, 'hopelessly yours'."

Mr. Cat went on to say that a special squad was then formed last night and the house was subsequently raided. "After breaking through the stag line at the front door," he said, "we went in and searched all the rooms. Oh yes," Mr. Cat told the trembling Varsity reporter, "please tell my wife that I knocked before I entered each room." Mr. Cat then revealed, "In one room well hidden under some red woollen underwear we found 22 more empty Rubbing Alcohol bottles."

The occupants, Miss Agar Agar and Miss Rosie Walnut were then brought down for questioning. Both refused to say anything when confronted with the evidence.

Suddenly a crash was heard in the room upstairs. Everyone rushed up and there on the floor amidst broken glass and debris was another package. Upon opening the package an alcohol bottle full of a white viscous liquid was found. This sudden turn of events caused Miss Walnut to start crying. Miss Agar Agar had a blank look on her face.

"We threatened them with expulsion," said Mr. Cat, "and then Miss Walnut broke down." "Please don't tell my mother," she said, "and I promise to confess everything." Miss Walnut went upstairs and brought down two large angel cakes. "It all happened last week,"

SAC Men Rein Up On Cash

Regulations to tighten control of expenditures by Students' Administrative Council committees were approved last night at the first meeting of the SAC.

The new regulations are based on recommendations introduced by last year's Finance Committee to ensure no large expenditures of Council funds are made without the full knowledge and approval of the SAC. Several times last year large amounts of money were spent by some committees before the Council had an opportunity to approve of them.

Must Be Authorized

Although none of last year's spending was unnecessary, the SAC feels that responsibility for all large spending should have definite authorization, in order to protect the students against needless or foolish expenditures.

The new regulations:

(1)—Close liaison should be established and maintained between the Finance Committee and the chairmen (or Treasurer of the Blue and White Society and All-Varsity Revue) of all SAC committees.

(2)—To ensure efficient functioning of all committees the various chairmen shall present to the Finance Committee and the SAC a proposed program and estimated budget at least three weeks in advance of the date of the proposed program.

(3)—Proposed expenditures and financial committments may be made only with the concurrence of the Finance Committee or the Secretary-Treasurer of the SAC except for small expenditures not exceeding five dollars. Small expenditures must be authorized on the approved form, and copies of invoices must be in the SAC office within three days.

(4)—The following procedure must be adhered to in all committee expenditures:

(a) No expense may be contracted for, and no merchandise may be purchased without an SAC order form, which is obtained at the SAC office.

(b) Copies of invoices, bills, or receipts must be presented to the SAC office within three days of incurrence of expense.

Print Song Book

The possibility of printing a University Song Book will be looked into. The proposed song book would probably be pocket size, and would include about two hundred songs. A report on the estimated cost of such a venture will be presented to the next Council meeting.

Blue and White Society chairman Bill Turner outlined the fall Blue and White program to the Council. He explained that seven committees are working on the details of a full schedule of pep rallies, "Friday Nites", post-football game celebrations, and the Home Coming Weekending. Outstanding among the football festivities planned are proposed street dances for Friday nights, and All-Varsity Roam-Arounds following the Saturday games.

The Blue and White Society will also carry on the various activities they operated successfully last year. There is a committee for "Ribbon, Buttons and Regalia" and others to take care of cheerleaders and the Blue and White Band.

Report On NFCUS

President Bob Hetherington presented a short report on the National Federation of Canadian University Students and steps taken by them at their conference held recently in Ottawa. Hetherington was a delegate to the conference.

He also told the Council that within the next week the Caput of the University will appoint two Caput members to sit on a Student Disciplinary Committee. The Council will have two members on the committee to discuss with the University administration matters concerning student discipline. One of the first matters to be dealt with by the Discipline committee will be the problem of student parking on the campus, Hetherington said.

Charge!

Here is a sample of the work that went on at the OAC camp at Lake Couchiching during the early part of this month. The players are making use of the combination blocking, tackling machine, an ingenious device that gives the boys all the thrill of real, live body contact. The Blues were up at the lake for about three weeks.

New Cheerleaders Chosen For Final Varsity Squad

The final choice of Varsity cheerleaders for this year's rugby season were made Tuesday evening on the Trinity playing field. Four new cheerleaders were chosen to join the five back from last year. Two male cheerleaders also were selected to fill the ranks with the one remaining male from last year.

The four girls, selected from a field of fifteen remaining entries were, Dorothy Lilley, II P.H.E., Joanne Smith, I U.C., Sheila Lennox, II Vic., and Joan Bagsley, II P.H.E.

The two boys, chosen from a remaining seven, were Thornton Bailey, II Vic., and Jim Dooley, II S.P.S. Ross Wortley, II Vic., will co-ordinate the efforts of the squad, and plans to have all twelve cheerleaders ready for action this coming Saturday.

The final selection of the girls was based on a combination of cheerleading ability and personality. Each of the girls was given a short interview to determine her attitude towards the job, and her actions were carefully watched.

Last year's cheerleaders, and Bill Turner, Chairman of the Blue and White Society, cast their votes for the girls they felt would best represent the University. The votes were tallied, and the girls accordingly chosen.

In the boys division gymnastic prowess played a major role in the selections. As Bill Turner stated, "The only time the boys manage to take any attention away from the girls and their cartwheels is when they display some spectacular gymnastic stunt."

When asked how they felt on being chosen for the squad, Dorothy Lilley and Joan Bagsley spontaneously cried, "Terrific!" Sheila Lennox remarked "Sloan's liniment, please!"

The Blue and White Society wishes to thank all those who tried out for the time, effort, and spirit they put into it. There was some consolation for four girls and one boy who were chosen to act as intermediate cheerleaders.

Hart House Champions Welcome New Members, Chess Club Announces

On Wednesday, October 5, as part of the New Members' Night program, the Hart House Chess Club will stage a simultaneous exhibition. Two chess experts, W. K. Hastings, II Arts, the Chess Champion of the University of Toronto, and R. F. Rodgers, IV Arts, will be prepared to accept all challenges. They are the strongest players in the Hart House Club, which last year won the Toronto championship.

All chess enthusiasts are invited to enter and play the champions.

Second Professor Barred From Post By US Immigration

Another university professor has been refused entry to the United States. Dr. Glen Shortliffe, French professor at Queen's University, has been refused permission to enter the United States to take a teaching position offered him at Washington University in St. Louis. It was learned yesterday Prof. Barker Fairley of University College was recently refused admission to the U.S. on similar grounds.

Admits Criticism

Dr. Shortliffe is a member of The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, but has never held an office in that party. "If the reason for my exclusion was on the grounds of my criticism of U.S. foreign policy, then I plead guilty," Dr. Shortliffe said yesterday. "Although I am a critic of communism I refuse to join the hysteria of those who attack it to distract attention from their own shortcomings." His exclusion is reported to have been ordered on the grounds that he is "suspected of being a person whose admission would be prejudicial to the interest of the United States." The bar is not a permanent one U.S. immigration officials report.

Dr. Shortliffe, who had sold his home and resigned his teaching position at Queen's to take the Washington University post is back at Queen's, where he has been reappointed to the teaching staff to take the place of Professor Marcel Tirol, who died suddenly on Sunday.

Prefers Freedom

Although the American ban on his entry to the United States is not permanent, the Queen's professor has no intention of trying to go to the United States now. "I would not go to that country to live if I could", he said yesterday. "I prefer to live in a free world. The smear tactics of the U.S. officials are a denial of the whole tradition of the western world since the Renaissance."

David Lewis, national secretary of the CCF, commenting yesterday on Dr. Shortliffe's case, said: "In my opinion the U.S. authorities have gone too far with this sort of thing in the last couple of years. It may be understandable they would want to exclude communists, but that they should keep out people on mere suspicion, based on an article or a speech, is a disservice to democracy. Of course, Dr. Shortliffe is not the first to be kept out on such grounds. There have been trade union leaders included who were actually anti-communists."

Assists Propaganda

"The major harm is not the inconvenience and discomfort to the people concerned, but such unreasonable and essentially undemocratic behaviour assists communist propaganda in all countries."

"I understand that he holds the view that the Soviet Union means well, and that they could work with us. This, of course is silly, but that doesn't make him a communist."

Here at Toronto Professor McCurdy of the Department of Philosophy commented: "A government has the right to guard itself and

Vic Glee Club Needs Males For Operetta

At the first meeting of the Vic Music Club held Tuesday evening at Wymilwood a call for an increase in male membership was made by Mr. Eisler, new director of the Glee Club. and Mr. Ridaud, director of this year's operetta "Rudigare".

President Bert Sutcliffe, encouraged by the turnout of many old and new members, explained that the club is proud of its history. It is one of the few organizations of Victoria College that does not depend upon the V. C. U. for financial aid, he said.

The president stressed that the Music Club welcomed, in addition to singers, students wishing to help with stage settings, costumes and makeup.

Following an address by honorary president Mrs. Starr, Fran Bennet and Dr. Crawford praised the directors and patrons of the club.

A sample of the Club's activities was offered by the cast of "Iolanthe". Then former president Pete Caldwell, whose performance is demanded each year, gave his now famous rendition of Old Black Joe. Even the refreshments were ignored when Pete finished his number on the piano, playing the treble with his hands and the bass with his left foot.

Lecture Series Brings Widely-Travelled Prof. On Russian Novelists

Professor Leonid, widely-known writer on Russian history and literature, will present the initial lecture of a weekly series, "The Great Russian Novelist," Wednesday, Oct. 5, in room 8, University College.

At present he is lecturing on "Modern Russian Literature Since 1880," a two hour a week course during the first term. The professor was last here during the 47-48 term when he lectured on "Stolypin—A Modern Reformer."

He is the author of three books: Three Poets of Modern Russia, Alexander I of Russia, Intervention at Archangel, Nicholas I, and a Handbook of Slavic Studies.

Tours Vienna

Toronto Student Visits Communist Europe

By JOHN K. ARMOUR, III SPS

I doubt that I would have got that far east if the car which Bert Maxwell, IV, SPS, Duke Mulqueen, recent SPS grad and I were driving hadn't developed brake trouble just after entering Austria this summer.

We hadn't planned to go to Vienna, but stopping at Klagenfurt, the British Zone headquarters of Austria, we got the brakes fixed by R.E.M.E. and at the same time obtained, with no trouble at all, "gray" passes which entitled us to go through sixty miles of Russian occupied territory.

Lodging Troubles

We reached the "check point" in the Semmering Pass at about 9 o'clock at night and after showing the passes to two shiftless looking Russian soldiers who looked much like characters out of a "C" type Hollywood movie, we followed the "Weln" (way) signs and arrived in Vienna about 11:00 p.m. with no idea of what to do next. An Englishman directed us to a hotel which he claimed was in the British Zone. It was too expensive for our taste and we went hunting for one cheaper. That was the only time we knew the British Zone location.

We found a hotel more along our line, which, as you can guess, was in the "other" zone. There were no informers under the bed so we slept with little discomfort. Next morning the concierge suggested where we could get the usual continental breakfast of coffee ("chickeree") and rolls, also in the Russian zone.

Real Education

It didn't take long to realize that there was a noticeable dearth of British or American military personel. Russian soldiers were plentiful, being carted around in the backs of trucks. They weren't the handsomest type of soldier I've seen, especially with their shaved heads and scruffy looking uniforms. The one on foot didn't even bother to look at our new car, perhaps because they looked more like officers and probably educated to such things.

Vienna is one of the very few cities in Europe that doesn't seem to have been affected by the western influence of the American tourist. The only bomb damage is around the Danube, which to me, was a dirtier gray than Toronto's faithful, the Don. There was a feeling in the air different from that of other cities. It was tense, as if what had happened during the last decade was still upon them. But the business men drinking morning coffee and reading their newspapers looked perfectly calm.

Freer Markets

However, Vienna isn't like Berlin. There are no signs, barriers or guards indicating the four zones. There is a "free" market which is freer than the one in Berlin for I unloaded some British zone gas coupons in the Russian zone with no trouble at all. I don't know what would have happened if the police had been around. The American dollar sells for about three times bank value, making steak dinners, which are easy to get, worth about 30 cents. Veal cutlets, or "wienerschnitzel" is the favorite. The beer is pretty weak, weaker than English beer but nothing like the Czechoslovakian export beer, "Piltzner".

There were only two or three American cars around, which was a relief, for we were sick of seeing Buicks and Cadillacs with New York licence plates. The street cars were of 1914 vintage with several trailers bouncing behind, the speed of each being about 90 degrees out of phase with the other.

OCTOBER WEATHER IS FLYING WEATHER ... I've just been chatting with R. S. Central Airways is a government-approved Training School under this plan, and the way the plan operates is simply that when a pilot has qualified after thirty hours of flying experience, the Dominion government pays him a bonus of one hundred dollars, which he may use towards the money which it has cost him to obtain his training. Central Airways is your closest flying field ... at the end of Bathurst Street, take the ferry, for a nickel ...

its people against dangerous opinions, but in a democracy it has an obligation to heed clear-minded and honest criticism, the exclusion of which is a symptom of bad social disease. Surely the university is the best judge of the character of its faculty members."

The woman's sports staff needs writers. No experience is needed but a knowledge of sports would be an asset. The sports department gives a reporter an all round training in journalism as it includes interviews, the writing of columns, and make-up as well as covering games.

Distaff Side

By ANNE BURTON and MARGOT MURRAY

Fashion's the word, gals! Skirts are getting shorter and line-ups are getting longer! Just look at the book store. In days of yore we managed pretty well to wedge our way from the twelfth row to the counter. And the feminine tactics of the winning smile and the sharp elbow got us nicely through the thick blue-and-white line of snake-charmed men.

Comes the revolution and last year's methods of warfare have become antiquated. The men, it seems have counter-attacked with a new secret weapon. This year when you sweet young things trip over to the book store prepared to be served within five minutes in spite of the crowd, you're going to be sadly disillusioned.

Today you must take a number and patiently wait your turn. Clutching card number 212 in one hot, grubby, little hand, you may rest assured that only 211 others have priority before your turn comes.

But never underestimate the power of a woman. There is always The Alternative. Why not do what we did and use the trade and barter method—with (of course) a few feminine wiles thrown in for good measure? When all else fails, there is always some great big hulking—oh, pardon us, we mean handsome—man in the line-up who would love to swap his number 27 for your number 212.

Power Cutoff Not Imminent Says Official

No word of an impending power cutoff has been received by Simcoe Hall, Mr. W. H. Bonus of the Superintendent's Office said yesterday.

During the restrictions of last year, the enforced limit (90 per cent of previous demand) was found adequate. The university generating plant near the Medical Building has helped keep down Hydro consumption in buildings at the College Street end of the campus.

Mr. Bonus expressed the belief that the co-operation of everyone in the university in keeping the use of electricity to a minimum would greatly assist in preventing a serious power cutoff. Should such a cutoff be necessary, the emergency equipment used last year would be available immediately.

Assimilation of Culture By Frosh and Freshies, Theme For Tea Parties

The Trinity class of 5T3 was given an opportunity of spreading their social feelers at a tea given at the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Kirkwood, Wednesday.

Thirty freshies and freshmen looked the field over, subtly aided by St. Hilda's Dean of Women. One of three similar teas given this week, it is part of Trinity's well-planned program to introduce the first year students with university life. While their sister sophomores are learning canasta, the freshies are being entertained by a series of dances and teas where all Trinity men are welcomed.

The tea will be followed by receptions (dances), after which the year of 5T3 will be socially initiated.

Old Lady of Shuter Street

What happened in Toronto's Massey Hall from 1894 to 1949? La night's CBC Wednesday Night aired an hour-long panoramic documentary—"The Old Lady of Shuter Street," complete with re-enacted performances to tell the tale.

George Robertson's adroit script unfolded a chronology of milestones in "The Old Lady's" career, commencing in the 1890's with Mr. Torrington's Philharmonic Orchestra and Choir in a three-day festival at the opening of the Hall.

A daughter came to "The Old Lady" in 1895 with the founding of the Mendelssohn Choir under Dr. A. S. Vogt—a son was yet to arrive. 1901 saw Winston Churchill speak and a gala music festival to celebrate the Duke and Duchess of York's trans-Canada tour. Walter Damrosch and the New York Philharmonic were on hand. Pop seats (with the best view of the royal box) were optioned off at $10.50 apiece.

However, when guest soprano Emma Calve was rendering her first song, the royal couple arrived, cueing the orchestra to desert the singer and break into God Save the King, while during her second song Toronto's fire department searching for a fire clanged along Shuter street.

From the Boer War to 1914 appeared the Westminster Abbey Chorus, the Leipzig Orchestra, the Coldstream Guards, De Pachmann and Rachmaninoff, and the morality play "Everyman" was produced.

Commodore Perry proclaimed his discovery of the North Pole, track star Tom Longboat received a diamond medal and a lovingcup, and danseuse Isadore Duncan "A Miracle of symmetry and grace" appeared in 1909. Many would have enjoyed her performance more "if it had not revealed so much of her arms and legs". Toronto was then the essence of restraint.

Samuel Gompers was elected president of the A. F. L., suffragette Mrs. Pankhurst, fresh from a British jail, in 1909 proclaimed her cause. Harry Lauder sang "I Love a Lassie", Tetrazinni appeared for the first time, Sir Edward Elgar conducted his "Dream of Gerontius" (1913), Irish tenor John McCormack received 1,100 requests to sing "I hear you calling me", and Nellie Melba fainted into the manager's arms when she sang The King—all at Massey Hall.

Jack Dempsey appeared in 1919 to initiate a three-year session of fights when fistcuffs outstripped all other events 3 to 1.

At no time in this kaleidoscope of The Old Lady's Life, notwithstanding some thirteen sketches, was the script rushed. Each episode stood out in verisimilitude and breathed real life into the commentary. Highlights were Calve singing the Habanera and Tetrazinni the last bars of Caro Nome from recordings over 20 years old yet whose fidelity was without flaw.

Only weakness in the presentation was the too-velvety smooth delivery of the narrative, where artificial inflection and forced dignity withdrew much of the punch from the program's otherwise sharp, dramatic force.

Sir Ernest conducted the T. S. O. through Beethoven's rarely played Overture "Consecration of the House", Debussy's Nocturnes—"Clouds" and "Festivals," and Brahms' C minor Symphony No. I.

After the performance, one truth crystallized within the listener's mind, all sentiment and nostalgia aside; that The Old Lady on Shuter Street stands not only as a forum, but also as a now vunerable monument to great moments in great art.

Sailors Elect Pres. At First Meeting

Last night the sailing club held its first meeting of the current year. George Withbertson was elected president, and Peter Pangman, Bud Whittaker, Barry Bill and Cliff Hore were also elected to the executive.

At present the club holds the Colonel Leary Grant Trophy for Canadian inter-collegiate dinghy racing, which they have won three years in a row from R.M.C. and McGill. There are hopes of sending a team to New London, Conn., where they will race many American colleges.

Any one interested in joining the club is welcome to attend the next meeting, which will be announced in The Varsity.

Play Series To Encourage More Acting

At a meeting of the University College Players Guild last night, chairman Ted Fellows announced that this year the Guild plans to produce a series of one act plays.

The reason for this change is they feel that in this way there will be more people participating and all members will have the chance to work. Casting for the plays will take place to-day, Friday and Monday from 3-5.00 p.m. in room R in the English department.

Later in the year they will produce the play which wins Robin Godfrey prize and the two runners-up, also the three-act play which wins the Epstein prize.

On October 19, the Guild will present 'Voice of the People' by Robertson Davies, a Canadian writer, 'Louise' by Bruce Evoy and 'The Artist' by A. A. Milne. The first Hart House show will be 'The Loves of Annunziata' by Dorato, which will be staged on November 1.

Added entertainment at the meeting was a skit entitled "If Men play cards as women do" which kept the audience laughing. The Film Society showed their film on the University Settlement, "The Twig is Bent".

TRANSPORTATION ASSISTANCE

Regulations providing for transportation assistance to University students residing in the Territorial Districts of Ontario have been announced by the Ontario Department of Education.

The Assistance shall be the amount of the special student coach-fare from the railway station nearest the applicant's residence to the eligible institution, less the sum of $10.00, to be paid for only one round trip in any school year.

Application forms are available at the offices of College Registrars and Faculty Secretaries, and must be turned in before November 1st.

U.C., it's this way...

Leave us not prolong this Vic-U.C. feud all year but it still seems appropriate for a closing crack. Jack Hoolihan, Lit President, was somewhat incensed to read that after his statement re Vic Freshies Vic still thinks they have the cream of the crop.

"If the indigenous (indigenous meaning short of jokes) writer (hah, hah) who signed his name Dem Bones, will use his head he would describe Vic Freshies after his own pseudonym—simply "Dem Bones".

But down to business, or rather pleasure. Try-outs for the choruses of the Follies are now underway and brother, if you can shake a leg, get out to the Women's Union from 4 to 6 o'clock this afternoon. Ninety-one pulkri ... pulkra .. oh, heck, beautiful babes, have already been signed up and there seems to be a man shortage. Co-eds, of course, are still needed, too. You probably heard that Louise Burns, professional ballet teacher, and director of choruses in the Olsen and Johnson show this Summer (not the ones with the dirty jokes in them) has been signed to direct the choruses so it's practically a free lesson in dancing.

U.C. crests, rings, pins, blazers, sweaters and maybe shoelaces will go on sale in the Rotunda 10 a.m. to one o'clock every Thursday. The doo-dads are sold at cost and orders for blazers, which cost $27.50 with crest, will be taken. The pins especially make good Christmas presents and there are only 92 shopping days left.

Potential cheerleaders please watch the notice board in the rotunda. "Big Phil" Downey, rugby coach, tells us U.C. is the team to beat and he doesn't mean everyone will beat us. Outfits will be supplied and a good voice and a snappy pair of legs (for cartwheels) are the main prerequisites.

Speaking of rugby, the team has not been selected yet and hopefuls are urged to turn out before the end of the week. Practices are being held daily from 4 to 6 on the Back Campus in preparation for an exhibition game at Niagara Falls over the week-end.

Lacrosse practices start in the Lower Gym, Hart House, this afternoon from 3 to 4. If you don't bruise easily come on out. It's a great game and all equipment is supplied except running shoes.

Volleyball enthusiasts had their first practice of the year yesterday afternoon at Hart House and are rarin' to go.

Before the snows, or slush, come golf players will have their fling. This traditional U.C. Invitation Golf Tournament for all faculties will be played at St. Andrew's Golf Course (end of Yonge car line) and entry lists are now up in the Women's Union and residences.

Due to blackouts pending (heh, heh) the women's basketball practices will ment is still open for entries on the lists in the Women's Union and residences also. Play will start very shortly on the (oh, oh) Vic courts.

Softball practices have been underway for the past week and the first game will take place next Tuesday at Trinity Field.

Due to blackouts pending (her, her) the women's basketball practices will start next week. Watch the rotunda and Women's Union for times and places.

First year nominations will be the major items on the agenda of the Open Lit and W.U.A. meetings. On Oct. 11 in the J.C.R. the first year men will nominate candidates for first year president, first year secretary-treasurer and athletic rep and Oct. 12 the women will hold nominations for first year president and all year executives. Since the first year presidents will be planning all the programmes and parties for ST3 if you want a good active year get out and vote for a good and active president. W.U.A. Literary Director Joan Irwin also says that the Open meeting will hear a debate, "Resolved that the W.U.A. vote the W.U.A. executive a car" ... it ain't for knowledge that we came to college ... best we look into this.

The results of the first year elections will be given at the big dinner and dance for the first and second years on Oct. 18. This is the Soph-Frosh Banquet held every year at the Royal York when the Sophomores formally welcome the new first year into the college.

Second year presidents Barb Davidson and Jon Christensen urge all Soph and Frosh to watch this column and the rotunda for ticket sale announcements for this mammoth affair.

'Bye for now. We'll be back next week.

Bill Francis,
Lit Publicity Director.

Like the "Ex."

In the morning, as I said, we saw quite a few Russian soldiers, but in the afternoon when I wanted to get a few pictures of them we couldn't find any. There were a few standing inside of the old Imperial Hotel, but I wasn't in the mood to walk up and ask them to pose as the hotel looked like an officers club, and I was no officer. We took turns at the wheel, assuring ourselves that we would find a Russian within a few blocks. We covered quite a lot of territory that afternoon. At no time did we know where we were. Near a canal off the Danube there was a European version of Sunnyside which had a ferris wheel three times the size of the one at the "Ex." People were enjoying themselves though I have no idea what zone it was in. I should imagine it was Red as the Danube is in that zone.

Exams Helped

We didn't have much trouble with the German language as Bert was studying for a sup in technical German and had already learned 16 lessons of vocabulary. Quite a few people speak English of a sort and if they didn't understand us we just spoke louder. It usually worked.

So What

To be frank, we were slightly disappointed that nothing happened. While driving toward the "check point" we weren't talking, partly because the brakes had been causing us trouble and also because we didn't quite know what we were getting into. Looking back at the trip and the title at the top of this article my only comment is . . . 'So what?'.

We didn't get into any real conversation with anybody as we only spent a night and a day in Vienna. We weren't looking for trouble, but sitting uncomfortably in The Varsity office there might be more to say.

We finally spotted two officers walking quickly and fairly smartly a few feet ahead. I quickly pulled out my trusty 16 mm. camera and ground away taking more of the inside of the car than my subject. As it turned out I had greatly under exposed the film and had only managed to get 7 frames of soldiers.

We then left, heading approximately 30 degrees west of the sun's position, hoping to find the right road. We passed through Stalinplatz, with a good sized Stalin tank resting in the middle. By cutting north and south several times we soon recognized the road out, and reached the check point, again with an uneventful drive, showing our passes to the guard. He asked us for our passports—a highly irregular routine. But as Vodka was the only Russian word we knew and we didn't have any, there was no argument.

Bert Maxwell's passport was American so that the Russian, on handing back the passports, said nothing to Duke Mulqueen or myself but looked at Bert and in the best American accent he could put forth said "Amerikan."

A Red Spot

About ten miles back in the British zone of Austria we ran into a Communist parade, flags, banners and a band. That was the only real touch of red we ran into.

I can certainly understand that part of the curtain surrounding Vienna is of a very ductile iron and perhaps in a few years I'll be able to write on the harder surface a little further on. Perhaps all of us will.

she said. "My boy friend asked me to bake him a cake and I did, only I poured Milk of Magnesia in by mistake instead of milk. I didn't realize the error until after my boyfriend had left with the cake. About an hour later," she continued, "my boyfriend Peter Lamo phoned back, violently exclaimed how wonderful the cake was, and insisted that I bake more of them immediately for his friends.

"Now I was forced to make the rest of the cakes with Milk of Magnesia and I had to smuggle the Magnesia in so no one would know what I was doing. The alcohol bottle was only a convenient way for my Pharmacist friend to transport the Milk of Magnesia."

Mr. Cat then said, "we took the bottle to our analyst Dr. Herman A. Feelsure, and the girl's statement was verified."

Concluding his report, Mr. Cat stated that when he visited the infirmary Mr. Peter Lamb had nothing to say.

SOFTBALL

Women's softball will begin Monday.

This year's schedule, announced last night by Norma Pinnock, III PHE, president of the university softball club, provides that two games will be played on Trinity field at one o'clock everyday but Thursday. There is no admission charge to these games although Trinity men, especially, assert that they are highly entertaining.

The twelve teams playing are divided into four leagues of three teams each. The colleges and faculties represented in the schedule are Meds, PHE, UC, Vic, St. Mike's and St. Hilda's. The Fizz Edders have a team for every league. St. Hilda's has three teams and Vic boasts two while UC, St. Mike's and Meds have only one.

Last year women undertook the umpiring of women's softball games and this innovation will be continued this year. However Norma Pinnock stated that at present there are very few women available to umpire and that the baseball club was still looking for applicants.

Women who wish to umpire do not have to have actual umpiring experience although a firm grounding in softball rules is essential. Those interested may be able to do base umpiring for experience before they take over behind the plate.

Games for next week

• SKULESPOTS •

Well, the fuse is lit, the charge is packed in and we're all ready for the opening gun of the interfaculty sports programme for this hectic year of 1949. What with golf, tennis, football, lacrosse, water polo, volleyball, and track all set for early starting dates we'd better start digging in under a barrage of scores, stars, excuses, cheers and all the rest that goes with the "Old College Try".

On the quieter side of the picture we have a very important by-election coming up in S.P.S. The post of Vice-President of the Athletic Association is open and available to any man in second year. It doesn't entail too much work and yet is important in the scheme of things, so let's see a long list of nominations handed in to the Stores soon. Yeah, that useless clot sitting beside you right now might show his hidden talents as Veepee. Wer weiss?

Lacross practice times were published in TOIKE OIKE this morning, so you can consult both that estimable journal and the sports notice board (don't tell me you don't know where it is yet) for the time when you unearth your buried talent and join the gang at Hart House today or tomorrow, as the case may be.

Standing Committee member Harry Fogel will be posting volleyball info. on that too-crowded board in the near future. This is important, as the sked for volleyball is very early this session, to make room for more basketball in jam-packed Hart House.

The senior and junior versions of our interfaculty soccer elevens have been practising for a couple of days now, but as usual it still isn't too late to turn out. If you are interested toddle up to the front campus some p.m. about 5 or earlier and see either Reni Barki (senior) or Vern Wright, the managers, who will welcome you heartily.

Another sport which has to be run off before Ole Man Winter or his advance scouts march in, is track and field. Workouts have been going on for several days now, so if you have delayed, hurry to the notice board or the office and enquire.

By the way tomorrow, Friday, is the last day to enter the interfaculty tennis doubles tournament. No your wife isn't eligible, but some red-hot ball-banging buddy of yours is, so march promptly up to Hart House and sign up.

The golf tournament is coming up right pronto. I certainly hope that all divoteers who have signed up turn up promptly and start smashing that elusive old par to smithereens.

The interfaculty office is once more in dire need of experienced referees for all sorts of sports. You are protected from the ire of your mates by law, and are paid well to boot, so if you have the qualifications, whip up to Mac's office and join the gang.

Don't forget this is a democratic organization—if any of you have any advice, or criticisms, desire to help, or any comments at all, they will be sincerely welcomed and appreciated, if you drop a note off in the Publicity Director's slot at the athletic office.. If you feel your team is not getting its just recognition, or you have an imporant notice that deserves publication, don't be afraid to speak up. Then we won't have any sour grape stories about the football team or any other hogging all the print, just because it's a large crowd sport.

Everyone is going to keep hammering at you all year, so rather than be different: this has got to be a big year for Skule so get down low and drive, drive, drive.

SENIOR BLUES TAKE OAC AGGIES 18-7

Sports Officials Sport Official 'Rep' Garb

There will be a new look in the field of intramural officiating this year. The Intramural Office has secured sufficient black and white, vertically striped jerseys to replace the conglomerate array of referees' suitings seen in the past.

The new jerseys are suitably embellished with an official U of T crest, and look very smart indeed. It is thought that the jerseys will out-wear, out-warm and out-shine both the well-known shirts of the same colour scheme, and the assorted sweaters, T shirts, and old vests often seen on the interfaculty scene, prior to this innovation.

Those who will be allowed to wear these new uniforms must qualify, by passing a rules clinic test. News of this clinic is reported elsewhere on this page.

Brown Sensational In Blues' Victory

By BOB DNIEPER

Guelph, September 28. — (Staff) — The University of Toronto Senior Blues to-day beat the Ontario Agricultural College Aggies 18-7 in an exhibition game here. An extended passing attack in the second half put the Blues on top after the Aggies had knotted the score at 1-1 at the end of the first half.

Blues Grounded

A driving rain and wet field kept Varsity from using forwards although OAC tried them with little success. The Blue line thoroughly outplayed OAC's for the first two stanzas, blocking four kicks and tearing holes for the runners.

The first Varsity score came when Dick Brown kicked to the deadline and Bill Calverly was rouged for a single. The Aggies drove back on a long thirty yard pass and were threatening but the ball was snapped over the Aggie kicker's head to relieve the pressure.

OAC used a fake pass and plunge to gain valuable yardage, bringing the ball within kicking distance of the Varsity goal line. Bill Calverly was credited with a single point when he booted the ball out of touch past the deadline to even the score at one all.

Varsity came back strongly with repeated passes to make four long first downs and to come within four yards of pay-off territory, but the half ended before a touch was made.

McFadden TD's

From the opening whistle of the third the Blues drove up the field and succeeded in pushing the OACers back to their own five. John Choresteki ran the Aggie kick to the fifty. From there Norm West hit Choresteki with a pass that John ran to the twenty. West again took to the air throwing to Greg McFadden who evaded a tackle beautifully and scored standing up. Al Stevenson made the convert good to put the Blues ahead 7-1.

Aggies' Major

Aggies' first major score was set up when Varsity's lateral off a completed pass was pounced on by the Redmen. OAC made two good passes to bring them to Varsity's four. Bill Anderson went over on a close plunge. Bill also made the extra point count to tie the score at seven to seven.

Bob Masterson's boys then got down to business and started to roll in earnest. After receiving the kick-off they began flinging passes till they got to the Redmen's forty-five. From there Dick Brown threw a beauty into the open arms of ace receiver Bill Danyichuck who stepped over for five. Al Stevenson again kicked the convert.

Brown Stars

The Blues again went aerial to march up the field. A well-executed double reverse brought Varsity to the Aggies' twenty. Dick Brown again struck gold when he lofted an easy one into the hands of Alexander Lawson, who evaded a tackler and got another major for the Blues. The convert was blocked, and that was the end of the scoring.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

In these days of professional college athletes and "football universities," it is a source of pride and satisfaction to know that the University of Toronto does not in any way pay, subsidize, or entice an athlete to register. There have been a few on the campus crying "Why not? other colleges do it to some extent." It is a good thing that both the Athletic Department and the Alumni associations have not given in to the current trend.

One of the reasons for this is that the coaching staff, and especially Bob Masterson, hold to the theory that a player should not be asked to play; he should love his game enough to get out and do his best for the game itself. The best coach in the Intercollegiate loop (Masterson) feels that as soon as an athlete feels sought after, his head swells at the expense of his play.

The other reason is that Varsity, thank you, has been doing all right without paid aid. In the last two years, they have held almost every inter-college competition trophy in existence. Leading the parade, the senior football trophy rests in Hart House, hard-won from some small Western Ontario school. The senior soccerites grabbed off the Blackwood trophy, and the junior soccer team took their division championship too, but unfortunately there is no trophy for them. The McKenzie trophy was taken by our senior trackmen and the Guthrie award was snagged by the intermediate runners. Both divisions of the fencing competitions were won by Varsity to bring the Walters trophies to Hart House. The Shaw trophy for intermediate hockey is with us this year and Varsity holds the intermed. swimming, golf and wrestling championships (Western managed to get a tie with our boys in the wrestling).

Until taken away by McGill last year to avenge the football drubbing they received; Varsity held the English Rugby, Senior Swimming, Water Polo (Hersenhorn Cup) and team gymnastics supremacy. Two years ago Varsity had the Intermediate tennis, harrier, and boxing; the senior golf, wrestling and hockey championships to their credit. A Varsity man took the individual gymnastics championship for the third time in a row, and the team lost to McGill after successfully holding their championship for twelve (count-'em) years. Duplicate that!

The Varsity senior hockeyists have had their monopoly broken, but they have always been the powers. In any competition, the University of Toronto looms large and mighty, even if they don't walk off with the marbles. They are most always the chief contenders and strongest challengers.

Varsity has indeed an enviable record, and an enviable silver collection. The powers that be are entirely correct in not exerting themselves over reluctant sport chattels when the college is the rich uncle of the country anyway. In any case, most of the University staff believe that a game should be played for its own sake.

As soon as winning or losing becomes of more importance than playing, the tail begins to wag the dog.

Meet The Ball Club

MEET JOHN ROE, Toronto-born outside wing who will begin his second year with the big Blues this season. John stretches six feet one inch from the toes up and tips the beam at a handy 203 pounds. These specifications make him the biggest outside wing on the team. Although Alec Lawson has four inches extra in the height department, John tops him for poundage by 28 units. Though born a homebrew, John was graduated from London South Collegiate, coming to Varsity after the war to study engineering. Having played with the Varsity Blues in the '47 season he was rendered ineligible for last year's schedule when he missed his year. Back again this year, big things are expected of John Roe.

Smiles in September

THERE ARE SMILES TRA-LA: The coaching "M's"—Masterson and Mitchell were smiling like this at training camp, and now, after first win of the season, their happy grins are even wider. Masterson, left, is holding his hands, you'll note. That's so he won't start clapping and cheering. By contract he's only allowed to clap hands for Chipso. Mitchell is walking again, albeit carefully after an attack of appendicitis.

School for 'Mural Refs To Start in Hart House

Fred Sgambati, recent appointee to the PHE staff, will be acting as referee-in-chief for the Interfaculty Rugby League this year. With the calibre of players in the Interfaculty loop rising, Fred was quoted as saying "We will attempt to produce a crop of top-flight referees". Among the many plans Fred has made, is the organization of a first rate Referee Clinic. The clinic will be open to all those that are interested in a correct interpretation of the rules. This will include players, coaches, as well as would-be officials.

The course will consist of three rules interpretation meetings to be held on October 4th, 6th, and 11th at 7 p.m. in the fencing room Hart House. The interpretation meetings will be followed up with exams of the objective type, namely, true-false exams. Prospective officials will have to pass the exams and be accepted by the board. Fred hopes to obtain movies later on in the season to demonstrate the technique of officiating. All those that are interested should turn out now. Further information can be obtained through the Intramural office.

Football Aspirants Brave The Elements

Last night in the driving rain, Phil Downie and his aspiring red and whites carried on their pre-season scrimmaging on the back campus. Bill Wilson, down from the Intermediate Blues crew, put in his first practice for U.C. Vic and St Mike's also turned out in the heavy dew for their daily dozens. Originality was obtained by Jr. Meds and Skule in the way of practices. Jr. Meds turned out to the wrestling room at Hart House for blocking practice while Skule worked out in the gym. Apparently the rain was too much for the future doctors and engineers.

on the sideline

By CONN SPARROW

Hi ya everyone!

By now the rush and confusion of paying fees and registration is past and almost forgotten.

Courses have started and professors seem to give their lectures in the most unbelievable places at the most difficult times.

However, to offset all this, we have a very valuable piece of folded cardboard in our wallets.

Yes, those indispensable admit-to-lecture cards, which are needed for absolutely everything — from being recognized as a Frosh, Soph, Junior or Senior to getting a book out of the library — are important no matter where you go on the campus.

But do you actually know just what the score is when it comes to that back page under the title of University of Toronto Athletic Association — Membership Card?

We as women in the sports world here at Varsity have a great deal to gain from this section.

You wonder just what there could be when the men have Hart House and all the wonderful things that go with it.

Ah, but that is where we are all mistaken. There are lots!

Already we have our rugby game tickets and can see all the games at the stadium. Even the priority on play-off tickets, should it be necessary, has been promised.

Those who want to golf can do so at St. Andrew's Golf Club for reduced green fees.

On week days, horses can be had for half price at the Glen Mawr Riding Club in York Mills. Up there they don't discriminate and the best of nags can be ridden.

Do you like to bowl? Well just imagine paying $2.00 for 20 games at the Midtown Bowling Academy. Cheap isn't it and all because you possess that card.

Basketball, volleyball, archery, softball and badminton are five more sports which the Women's Athletic Association looks after for us, so that we may have our full quota of fun.

All this and more is ours, when we hold out our ATL card. Like a secret key or a special code, it opens up a whole new world for us of activities and new friends.

Wycliffe All Wet Fearful Freshmen Hide In Chimneys

Compulsory baths in icy water and systematic ransacking of their rooms by senior students tested the good humor of Wycliffe freshmen Tuesday morning in the college's traditional hazing of new students.

Although they hid in chimneys, cupboards and fire escapes, most of the first year men ended up being ducked.

One freshman was seen inquiring about his bed. He was told it had been dismantled in Queen's Park and that the mattress was being used as a mop in the bathroom.

The search of another frosh for the door to his room was ended when he found it under the showers.

After the hazing was over, shirts and socks were scattered between and in the puddles of water that covered much of the hall floors.

Ten Percent Increase In Commuters Tickets Due To Rise In Wages

Student commuters will be affected by the increase in commuters' rates on October 15. The C.N.R. Public Relations office stated there will be approximately a ten percent increase in all Canadian commuter fares. Due to the general rise in wages of railway employees the trains cannot be maintained at the present price. Scholars' commutation tickets which allow reduced rates, based on mileage, to students will be continued.

Include In Plans Complete Opera, Famous Artists

First meeting of the Vic Music Club was held Tuesday evening at Wymilwood. President Bert Sutcliffe, encouraged by the turnout of many old and new members, explained that the club is proud of its history. It is one of the few organizations of Victoria College that does not depend upon the VCU for financial aid.

The president stressed the fact that the Music Club welcomed, in addition to singers, students wishing to help with stage settings, costumes and makeup.

Following an address by Honourary President Mrs. Starr, Fran Bennet and Dr. Crawford praised the directors and patrons of the club. Both Mr. Eisler, new director of the Glee Club, and Mr. Ridaud, director of this year's operetta, "Rudigare," called for an increase in male membership.

A sample of the Club's activities was offered by the cast of Iolanthe. Then former president Pete Caldwell, whose performance is demanded each year, gave his now famous rendition of "Old Black Joe." Even the refreshments were ignored when Pete finished his number on the piano, playing the treble with his hands and the bass with his left foot.

Grave-Robbing Not Illegal Medical Students Claimed

Montreal.—(CUP)—The Anatomy ...ct of 1835 was passed as the title ...uggests in 1835. Its purpose was to ...rovide bodies for dissection and ...natomizing in Quebec medical ...chools. However, the provincial In...pector of Anatomy was unco-oper...tive, and the most successful of ...cGill student activities got under ...way.

The Act provided that the bodies ...f executed criminals and unidenti...ied paupers should be made avail...ble to medical students. Since the ...w stated that there was no prop...rty in a dead body, the medical ...tudents decided that grave rob...ing was not punishable by law, ...rovided always that bodies only ...ere taken, and that clothes and ...offins were left alone.

It was, and still is, the custom in ...ontreal to bury people in the ...reat cemetery on the Mountain.

It was also the custom for McGill ...tudents to tobogganning on the ...ountain. 'Nuff said.

The students would set out on a ...ark winter night, pulling a tobog...an loaded with extra clothes. Upon reaching the mortuary, convenient corpses would be dressed in sports clothes, and the whole crew, alive and dead, would careen gaily down Cote des Neiges hill, to the admiration of the spectators and the respectful salutations of the police.

This form of free-enterprise, besides providing healthy outdoor exercise, was also a source of funds for financially pinched students, since McGill paid $50 a body, regardless of social status.

The police finally cracked down by fining Doctor Shepherd, head of the Anatomy Department, $50 for what was called "an offence against decency." But with the connivance of the Medical janitor, one James Cook, most of the stolen corpses were hidden well away from official interference in the basement of the Medical building.

Medical students no longer snatch bodies in quite the same way. However, Cook's contribution to Medicine has been remembered every year, for some obscure reason, in the initiation of McGill's freshman classes.

New Co-operation Of Caput, Students Evident on Campus

By JACK GRAY

A new spirit of co-operation between the students of the University and the administration of the University is showing itself. Next week a new committee of Caput members and students will be formed to work on matters of student discipline.

More concrete evidence of the new co-operation however is shown in the results of a brief on the high cost of text books presented to the Board of Governors by the Students' Administrative Council last spring. This brief asked for a change of policy in the University Press which would stop the practice of not selling books "to competitors," of the University Bookstore, which would bring public lists of texts in the spring, lower prices on books at the bookstore and an "immediate abolition of the ten percent mark-up on American text books."

A letter read to the SAC at Wednesday night's SAC meeting from President Sidney Smith outlines steps which the Board of Governors have taken to answer the brief. Text book lists will be prepared for publication in the spring. While the American mark-up stays on, the new ten percent discount brings bookstore prices for American texts below the American list prices. The Press will sell "to any purchaser at our terms for cash or on credit if the customer is worthy of credit." In addition to these there is the general ten percent discount on all new text books purchased at the University Bookstore.

The President's letter to the SAC reads in part: "You will observe that we have dealt sympathetically with the recommendations and that we have endeavoured to meet the proposals set forth therein. The success of the new policy for the bookstore . . . will depend of course, on its service to the students and also on the wholehearted support and patronage of the student body."

The Book Brief grew out of investigations made last year by the Toronto Committee of the National Federation of Canadian University Students, and out of investigations carried on by the National Council of Canadian Universities. The Varsity also conducted an investigation of its own to probe problems raised by the high cost of text books.

A formal letter of appreciation for the Board of Governors' action will be sent to Dr. Smith by the SAC, members decided Wednesday night. More effective than formal letters have been the large numbers of students who have been buying books at the bookstore. In spite of the downtown attractions Toronto students have been staying on the campus to buy their books.

Although there are many problems still to be considered in relation to the inflated costs of text books, the University Administration and the Students' Administrative Council have shown that problems of this nature can be effectively dealt with.

600 Graduates Land Positions With Civil Service

Ottawa—(Special)—Some 600 university graduates have been recruited by the Civil Service Commission in the last few months.

Proof that the commission is "gunning" for the best in recruits is the fact that the 600 selections were made from more than 4,000 applications received from 40 universities and colleges. Many of these recent appointees are honor graduates, many possess a master's or doctor's degree. The majority entered the service at salaries ranging from $200 to $224 a month.

The commission reported that this has been a peak year for assignments although a shortage still exists in several fields, notably architecture, civil engineering, library science and veterinary science. It will be in the market again next year for top-drawer graduates though the jobs will be fewer.

The number appointed this year was just about double the 1948 figure but the total for 1950 is expected to drop sharply. The commission had previously held a number of positions open until better applicants were available but most of these have now been filled.

New Graduates

At the same time the commission revealed that applicants for some of this year's jobs did not measure up to specifications so these posts will be held open for further competition next year. The commission is aiming, in most cases, at the new graduates.

This year the bulk of appointments went to graduates with scientific backgrounds. The Department of Agriculture claimed 200, mostly from the agricultural colleges; the Departments of Mines and Resources, Public Works and Transport another 250, mostly graduates in civil engineering and meteorology.

Boomerangs Not Necessary For Anthropology Students

"If you're looking to me for guidance in boomerang throwing, you have come to the wrong person," said Professor McIlwraith. "After all it's not a pre-requisite for anthropology professors."

The occasion for these remarks was a session, shall we say, of boomerang throwing on Trinity field with the 3rd year Honour students. From the standpoint of an interested by-stander, knocking over a wallaby is not what its cracked up to be.

"It's got to go this way," said the professor, holding the death-dealing instrument in his right hand. Then he handed it to a feminine member of the class.

Now you might expect a woman to draw on some hidden source of skill—some nacent ability that had brought her ancestors through a bad situation. As when Hubby was lying sick in a cave and the kids without a pound of meat to go around, so she had to go out and knock over an aurock or similar beast.

But do you think these girls could recall that? No sir. That boomerang might as well have been a rolling pin as far as homing instincts are concerned.

Then up-stepped big Bill Taylor. Using high school geometry, as he later confessed, he made the most impressive showing of all. Everyone held his breath as the boomerang curved towards the high-pitched roofs of Trinity, turned again and fell ignominiously in the field.

After the last boomerang had been retrieved, the professor tucked them under his arm and the class broke up for lunch.

How Does It Strike You?

Without a doubt, one of the most peculiar phenomena of modern times is the present wave of anti-communism sweeping the United States. Political observers and just common citizens have viewed it with growing alarm.

This species of mass hysteria has occurred before but never with such violence and wide-spread effects as today.

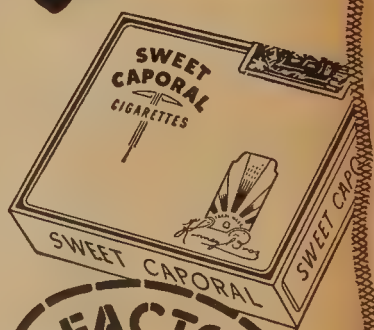
One of the worst features of this new outbreak of mass fear is the restrictions that are being placed on academic freedom. For some obscure reason persons affiliated with universities seem to be particularly suspect in the mind of the communist-conscious U.S.

Within the last week news reports have told of the banning from the U.S. of two Canadians and the border tie-up of another. These incidents are not isolated events but are manifestations of a larger attempt to limit academic freedom.

For many years considered as a Congressional lap-dog whose antics were mildly amusing and not very dangerous, the Un-American Activities committee has gradually grown into an over-large mongrel with a severe case of rabies. Everything it sinks its teeth into comes away infected and must be treated. The treatment usually kills and seldom cures.

Now the committee is eyeing the college text books with a bite-hungry stare. The committee is sure there is subversive material in the books that should be removed.

At the risk of seeming to carp, The Varsity would like to point out again to its readers the necessity of realizing the implications in these cases.



Academic freedom—your freedom to study under whom you please, to study what you please—is one of the issues at stake. Luckily, Canada has been reasonably free of the fear that has bred these restrictions in the U.S. But that is no excuse for a refusal to think of what might happen here nor is it an excuse for a refusal to realize that what happens elsewhere does affect us.

It is no longer possible to lead an isolated existence. World affairs are just that and the affairs of the world are rapidly being piled up to a climax. The cold war is fast developing into a very warm peace. The situation deserves some thought.

I don't know if you have heard about Pauline Trigere but I have, so I want to tell you all about her.

It's a nasty thing that has happened to Pauline and something should be done about it. Pauline, you see, is a designer and if there is anything that shouldn't happen to a designer it is not having her designs go over in a big way. And as far as I can see, that is just exactly the unfortunate thing that has occurred in the case of Pauline Trigere.

It's Radical

Along about the middle of last July I saw a news item on the fashion page of one of our better dailies describing in fascinating detail the latest gimmick that Miss Trigere had dreamed up. It seems that Pauline's fall designs of women's clothing feature a "neckline that plunges all the way to the belt."

Now this seems pretty radical to me, but after all, if ladies who wear these things are willing to risk pneumonia and any other of the fancy germs that medical men are dreaming these days, it's okay by me. But that is beside the point. The startling part of Miss Trigere's design is this—(and I must tell you in the beautiful prose of the newspaper)—"In her fall fashion showing, Trigere's models wear jewelry pinned to their bras, showing discreetly through a neckline that plunges all the way to the belt. The glittering pin also serves to cover that part of the bra that might otherwise show, as well as create the dramatic illusion that the brooch is pinned to the skin."

It's Needed

How do you like that, eh? Frankly, I think Pauline has struck a gold mine in this scheme. The country used to be crying for nickel cigars, but right now, I can't

He did say, owever, that "Incentive and legitiate ambitions are in danger of ing beaten down by overtaxation. here may be mistakes in policy, but the British spirit and individualism is still there."

Remans Two Years

Prof. Feiling came out to Canda in 1907 and joined the staff of he History Department, then headed by Prof. George Wrong. He stayed for two years before going back to Christchurch where he did research work for a number of years as well as acting as a tutor. He left to become Chickle Professor of Modern History at All Souls College, Oxford. Christchurch recalled him in 1946 to help cope with the overflow of students following the war.

Professor Feiling had always wanted to make a return visit to Canada, but the war postponed such a visit until now. He met President Sydney Smith at the Conference of the Universities of the Empire held in England this summer and received an invitation to give a series of lectures at Toronto this fall. Prof. Feiling desired to return to the History Department as an ordinary member, however, and this wish has been granted. He is lecturing in the regular course of studies in the third and fourth years.

Problems are Same

The Professor feels that problems facing Oxford and the University of Toronto are very similar today. Both are labouring under the strain of expansion," he said, "due to the overflow of students as a consequence of the war."

Some considerable changes have been noted by the professor since his last visit to Canada. Particularly notable, he said, are the additions of Hart House and Trinity College. He was also impressed by the enormous numbers of students on the campus.

To the pictures we see of the English people still standing in queues, he remarked, "It is all rot!"

Vic Music Club Head Greets New Members Stage Hands Needed

The production of a full-length operetta and the fostering of more intelligent music appreciation, are the aims of UC's Music Club for this year, stated Bruce Duncan, the club president, at the opening meeting on Thursday evening in the Women's Union theatre.

It was also announced that more attention will be given to the club meetings this year, and it is hoped that many prominent musicians, including famous concert artists, will be guest speakers.

"We have a wonderful year ahead of us," said the president, "and we will need all kinds of people with all kinds of interests."

After the business was finished ice cream and cake were served, and then the members tried out some old-fashioned barn-dancing.

The UC Music Club will have its own bulletin-board in the college main entrance, so watch for coming events.

Ancient Songbook Had Slow Start May Be Revived

Do such rollicking lines as "The Pushful Pollywog," "H2S04," and "There's only Room for one," fill you with the desire to burst into song? In early days these songs were apparently as much a part of life on this campus as "Lady Godiva" is today. They play an important part in the old University of Toronto song book.

The song book dates back to 1887 when a group of U.C. undergraduates undertook a "comprehensive, and, in many respects, a unique collection of College Songs". The task was not easy. College enrolment was small. The music publication business in Canada was young. And Canadian publications were not widely recognized in any case.

However, the project commanded enthusiasm. A thousand, and more subscriptions were gathered. And the committee waded through piles of song-script to come out with "The University of Toronto Song Book."

The older edition has long since died out, but Al Heisey III SPS now proposes a new song-book, incorporating, probably some of the old and some of the new. And so we may again be singing "The Spanish Guitar", and calling on "The Girl from Algoma."

New Buildings Ready At British Columbia

Vancouver.—(CUP)—Nearly one million dollars worth of new buildings will be ready for use on the University of B.C. campus this fall. Construction of four other buildings is scheduled for completion by the fall of 1950.

The $700,000 Applied Science Building, which was partially opened last spring, has now been completed and will be used this year for lectures and laboratories for engineering students.

A new $200,000 Home Economics Building, started last March after fire destroyed the converted army huts housing the department, will be completed this fall.

Construction of a four-storey, four-wing biological science and pharmacy building will be completed by the fall of 1950, with the exception of one wing and one floor, which is being postponed because of construction costs.

Reinstatement Deadline Nears

In order to clarify the position of the student veterans, The Varsity has obtained the following statement from Mr. A. R. Whitten of the Department of Veterans Affairs:

"The student veterans eligible for DVA benefits are reminded that they cannot be re-instated on allowances until they have completed the departmental registration form WD-24. This can now be done only at the training division office, 6th floor, 55 York St., and should be attended to immediately.

"First distribution of cheques will be made October 31. Those who do not register by October 5 are not likely to receive their cheques on time."

Knowledge Ere Action Says SPC

Education before action is the plan of the Students' Peace Council for the coming year. At a meeting yesterday the Council decided that its purposes could better be served by a sane evaluation of current problems than by sweeping statements with, perhaps, little knowledge behind them.

President Omar Walmsley stated that fear is an impediment to true citizenship, and that hysteria cannot produce constructive results. In contrast, he attested that knowledge is the basis of democracy and that the actions of the group would follow on the information gained.

The program for the year is one of education for both members and non-members. Tentative plans include a "UN Week" from October 11 to 15 when the Council hopes to present speakers, movies, and an open forum. Booths in Victoria and University Colleges will display posters and pamphlets covering the UN's plans and achievements.

Shirley Endicott, II Vic, suggested that the question of visas which has recently arisen between Canada and the United States is closely related to the interests of the Peace Council.

Need Two Males Not Too Serious

"There is an urgent need for two male comedy leads for our production of The Red Mill," Ward McAdam, production director for this presentation of the UC Music Club, announced yesterday.

"These parts are not for those who take life or their singing too seriously, but call for a good deal of enthusiasm, and real dramatic ability. There are many openings for choristers, soloists and dancers, and the usual number of stage assistants are required."

Auditions will be held in the Women's Union Friday at four, and on Saturday morning from nine-thirty until eleven-thirty.

Campus Politicos Vary In Opinions On Yank Policies

Three university political leaders in interviews yesterday were unanimously critical of United States government policy which has led recently to the barring of two Canadian professors from appointments in American universities and to the detaining of a third year Toronto student at Ellis Island while returning from Et

Politicos Differ

But the student politicians differed widely regarding a statement by CCF national secretary David Lewis printed in The Varsity yesterday.

Lewis was discussing a report that Dr. Glen Shortliffe, French professor at Queen's University, had been refused admission to the United States to take a teaching post at Washington in St. Louis.

Lewis said, "I understand that Dr. Shortliffe holds the view that the Soviet Union means well, and that they could work with us. This, of course is silly, but that doesn't make him a communist."

LPP Club Education Director Norm Endicott had the following to say about Lewis' comment: "Dave Lewis shows he learned nothing from the federal elections: he can't ride the democratic and anti-Communist bandwagons at the same time."

Tom Symons, president of the Progressive Conservative Club commented, "I don't believe that a person sincerely desiring to co-operate with Russian is necessarily a Communist."

CCF Club President Gord Milling said, "The fact that Dr. Shortliffe has attacked what he considered unwise in the American attitude toward Russia indicates not an ideological bias, but a measure of intellectual honesty which appears to be as unwelcome today in the United States as in the Soviet Union."

Henry Bradley, president of the campus Liberal Association, could not be reached for comment.

The remainder of Milling's statement said, "Dr. Shortliffe has been well-known not only as a critic of U.S. foreign policy, but also as a critic of Soviet Russia and her foreign policy. There may be legitimate disagreement as to his opinions and conclusions, but the suppression of those opinions do not reflect favorably on the American conception of freedom."

U.S. Is Careless

Regarding the barring of the Queen's professor, Campus P.C. leader Symons stated: "I understand the United States authorities taking these precautions. But the Ruth Comfort case certainly shows they are not careful enough in making their dicisions. These debarrments, like the Un-American Activities Committee show the need of protecting civil rights. I feel what is happening in the U.S. should lend urgency for John Deifenbaker's appeal for a guarantee of civil rights in Canada."

LPP leader Endicott charged, "The Shortliffe case is part of the drive in America against academic freedom and of the attempt to intimidate people, to abandon reason and blindly accept the policies of big business and the State Department. This is the road to Fascism.

"I think Canadians should protest this outrageous action against our professsors and demand that the External Affairs Department end its subservience to Washington which makes our passports useless."

Saskatchewan U Collecting Funds For Student Union

Saskatoon —(CUP)—One hundred thousand dollars have been collected to date in a drive on the part of University of Saskatchewan undergraduates for a war memorial building.

Plans for the campaign to raise still more money have been announced by publicity director Frank Lovell. They include a drive for alumni subscriptions and a student fashion show. A Toronto architect, R. R. Moffat, has been commissioned to draw up plans for the undertaking.

The Union will have student offices, and auditorium, ballroom, students lounge and an up-to-date cafeteria. The building will be constructed of reinforced concrete, with greystone facing to be added later.

Memorial Union Building officials plan to organize and activate all students on the campus for fund raising. They are asking all college societies to appoint reps, and expect to reach the final objective before long.

Queen's Professor Collapses, Dies At R.M.C. Service

Kingston. — (CUP) — Professor D. M Tirol, of the Queen's University French department, collapsed and died suddenly last Sunday morning while attending a service at the Royal Military College here.

Professor Tirol came to Queen's as an Associate Professor of French in the fall of 1930 from the Edinburgh Institution in Scotland where he was a French master.

He was "a Licencie es Lettres" at the Sorbonne and taught in Belgium prior to joining the staff of the School of Languages in Edinburgh.

After joining the French army in 1914, he was wounded and spent four years in prison camps on the continent.

At the end of the war he returned to Edinburgh and conducted the School of Languages together with a large translation bureau. During the Second World War he took a great interest in the Free French Movement. He wrote numerous articles and gave many speeches in Ontario and Quebec. He wrote short literary articles in Le Jour, Montreal daily.

Counsel Students

Advisory Bureau Not A Crutch

Aid for solving problems ranging from low exam marks to financial difficulties is available to University of Toronto students at the University Advisory Bureau situated at 67 St. George St.

"Any student is given the opportunity to present any matter which is significant to his own development either as a student, or as a worker, or as a citizen, or as a fully effective human being," H. C. Jones, executive secretary of the bureau, said in an interview recently.

Is No Crutch

But the official warned that students should not be misled into thinking the bureau offers a crutch to aid them over a present difficulty. "This is not so," he pointed out. "The bureau's cardinal aim is to help each student to stand on his own two feet, give him information, and help, but to leave all decisions up to the student himself."

By this means, students were to be enabled to prepare themselves to face problems and to clarify their own thinking.

Originally set up as a service to veterans under the Government Training Plan for ex-service students, the bureau has since undergone an evolution whereby it aids regular university students.

Call For Aid

The government asked all universities after the war to set up these advisory bureaus for veteran students.

On this campus, president Sidney Smith called upon Dr. W. Line to head it. A professor of psychology, Dr. Line had served as Director of Personnel Service in the army.

Ex-service students have in the past received aid in securing of DVA allowances, dental and optical services and other services extended to them. This has now become non-operative.

Other personal problems are now brought to the bureau for aid and solution. Students who do not believe their marks are as high as they should be are advised on how to raise them up a grade.

Have Many Problems

Other undergrads may pause to consider just what they are doing at university. Some ask which course would be the best for their needs and qualifications. Social and emotional problems are also brought before the bureau's experts.

Financial worries form a major proportion of the difficulties taken to 67 St. George St.

Mary Munroe and Barb Booth aid the executive secretary of the bureau. Dr. Line and Mrs. Margaret King are classified as associate members.

Time in Ambush. Isabelle Hughes. Wm. Collins. 257 pp. $3.00 novel. It has been gratifying to notice the last few years the arrival on the scene of Canadian Literature, a veritable deluge of novels concerned with the perplexities of twentieth century living in Canada. McMaster Frosh Loses 3 Teeth In Soph Hazing

Hamilton, Sept. 29—(CUP)—During initiation hazing at McMaster University, freshman William Dandie lost three teeth and was cut about the mouth. Dandie's comment was "I don't mind being initiated but being injured is a little rough."

The president of McMaster's student council, Alex Brown, said Dandie was actually injured in the turmoil which followed the initiation. Even so the student council guaranteed Dandie the cost of his treatment at St. Joseph's hospital.

During the hazing, 'Mac' sophs deluged 250 freshmen with mud, tomatoes, and cold blasts from a fire hose.

lover Leo, finally work everything out, ending the story with husband and wife reunited going forth together into a brave new world, is in itself superficial. The primary questionable merit of the book is its study of character.

The people in Time in Ambush are the stolid reserved type, moving rather listlessly through life with never a smile crossing their faces. They also have the nauseating habit of analysing themselves and their friends with profound observations that seem to come from Psychology 4a and not from the middle class characters they are supposed to represent.

A SPECIAL WELCOME TO ALL NEW STUDENTS

Would you have the ready money to seize a business opportunity?

A life insurance policy is recognized by business men as a most valuable asset because besides the protection it gives, it has borrowing value in case of need. There are many times in which the loan value of a policy may prove of great use.

The important point is to get started with your insurance programme at the earliest possible date. Life insurance rates are determined by the age of the person to be insured . . . the sooner you take out a policy the lower its premium will be.

Your Mutual Life of Canada representative can help and advise you. Take him into your confidence. Explain to him your needs and your circumstances. He has been specially trained in adapting life insurance to each person's particular needs. Take advantage of his expert counsel now.

Charles F. Comfort RCA

The exhibition of the paintings of Mr. C. S. Comfort, R.C.A., O.S.A., now hanging in Alumni Hall in Victoria College, is excellent. It presents some of the best of Mr. Comfort's recent works. The first impression the visitor will receive is Mr. Comfort's versatility, and the next is that of his strength. He shows great ability in getting into harmony with his subject.

The power in Mr. Comfort's paintings is apparent at once. His pictures are bursting with life and vitality. It is upon this delight in the earth and her peoples that the charm of Mr. Comfort's work is built. None of this power and life seems to carry over into his abstract paintings, which are dull by comparison with the other pictures in the show.

In the exhibition are several of Mr. Comfort's war pictures, on loan from the National Gallery. These were painted in London from sketches made on the scene of action in Italy. Such a picture as "Canadian Guns At Ortona" well displays Mr. Comfort's dramatic and romantic attitude. His sense of the dramatic sometimes runs away with him and becomes melodramatic, as in the portrait, "Flight Lieutenant Carl Schaefer."

Mr. Comfort paints with a good, bold stroke with a liberal application of paint. His pictures have all the detail that they require without appearing cramped. The success of this technique is demonstrated both in oil and water-colour by "Italian Town" and Mr. Comfort's Georgian Bay paintings.

Victoria College is to be congratulated upon this show. I hope that they will give us more of this same high quality. I have only two faults to find with the show. The best abstract is hidden when the doors are open and one of the most attractive pictures, "St. Eval Church," is buried in the corner behind the print cabinet.

Prom Concert

Last night's Prom concert under Andre Kostelanetz in Varsity Arena opened with the "Prometheus Overture" by Beethoven. Unfortunately, this overture was all smoke and had little of the necessary fire.

Mr. Kostelanetz imparts a spongy quality to the music he conducts. He seems best able to handle the string section of the orchestra, the other sections remaining under incomplete control, particularly the brass.

The Overture to "William Tell" was played, let us hope for the last time.

Before intermission, George Haddad, guest soloist, played a group of Chopin's piano pieces including "The Grande Valse Brilliante", which was too slow, uneven in melodic line and full of incorrect pedalling.

Mr. Haddad has a good feeling for Chopin, but his technique seems poor. After the performance of the played-out "Polonaise in A flat", this reviewer felt that it finally had been interred. Here, his fingering was sloppy and it seemed he had practised the last half but not the first.

The feature work of the program was George Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue. This work is interesting mainly because of the jazz themes and orchestral technique it uses. Gershwin was one of the first American composers to adopt this subject matter, the only truly American folk music.

In its playing there was a difference in tempo between the orchestra and the soloist. It was also uneven in tempo. Mr. Haddad showed heaviness and a short-tonal range.

At the end of the Rhapsody the audience positively erupted into applause, clapped Haddad, Kostelanetz, the orchestra and even the three stalwart youths who closed and shifted the piano. They would have applauded a pig crossing the stage.

The fascinating Bolero by Ravel closed the concert. Starting slowly, the rhythm of this piece changes seven times, the tempo increasing and the orchestration becoming richer, more dynamic, until it builds to a terrifying climax.

Dredy Cops First Spot — In Qualifying Round

Eight golfers won positions on the intermediate and senior golf teams yesterday at St. Andrew's Golf Club. A large field was out and resulted in a late finish, it being dark before all the scores were tabulated.

The four best low gross scores were to make places on the senior team with the next four going to the intermediates. However, there was a tie for the fourth slot between R. Masters of U.C. and S. Smellie, SPS. They both came in with a 36-hole total of 163 and this tie will necessitate an 18-hole playoff tomorrow, to see who makes what team.

D. N. Dredy of SPS tied together an 80 and a 79 to come out on top of all comers with a 159 total. The next two places on the senior team were also won by Skule men. H. Watson got an 80 on both nines to emerge with 160, while J. C. Pavanel bettered his large 84 on the way out with an incoming 78, to get a 162. Hot on his heels came the tie for the fourth place.

Jack Sheppard, Meds, had a bad back nine in putting together an 81-83 to give him a 164 and a spot on the intermediate foursome. Jack's teammates will be J. R. Glennie, Dents, and D. B. Grant, SPS, who shot 165 each. It will be noticed that SPS won four of the eight spots and tied for one other.

The senior intercollegiate meet is at the Cataraqui course in Kingston on Oct. 5, 6, 7, while the intermediate tourney will be at Guelph on Oct. 4.

FRESHMAN BALL SCHOOL RUN BY BARRY LOWES

Barry Lowes, the smiling blond of the Intramural office, is again coaching the Junior Blues Basketball entry this year. In an effort to search out hidden talent in the freshman year of all faculties, Barry is organizing a freshman basketball school. The school commences on Monday, October 3, at 5 p.m. in the big gym, Hart House. The school runs through till the 7th and is open to all men who are interested in playing basketball.

Barry is also interested in obtaining some more material for the track team. Barry thinks that he will definitely have a track team this year but says that more material is needed. All interested should turn out to the Bloor Bowl tonight at 4 p.m.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

The Big Groan is currently making its rounds of the campus. Varsity loses a game to the Sarnia Imperials, beats the OAC intermediate Aggies by only two touchdowns, and the wisenheimers already have them buried. Western beats OAC by twenty-five points, so everybody calls Western to trim the Blues.

This in itself is nothing. But unfortunately, this "they haven't got a chance" attitude spreads. A feeling spreads just as fast and just as surely as a rumor. The feeling that a college's senior team is not doing very well and is not a very good team harms the school spirit, and more materially, the team itself. Don't be fooled; the players can tell when they are getting support from the student body. When they feel that fourteen thousand people are with them all the way they play a better game.

Registrar McAndrew of University College says that most students at a university don't get more than forty per-cent of what a university can offer. School spirit and pride in the institution they attend is an integral part of university life. If you don't have it, both you and the college lose.

If the freshmen are brought into an institution where there is an indifference, or still worse, a mild antagonism, to the representative teams, they are liable to carry the attitude through the rest of their stay. This "Aw, what the heck, they won't win anyhow" feeling is in some evidence even at this early date of the season.

This attitude, if it is allowed to, will build up to a gigantic lie. There is reason to say that this has happened at the University of Toronto. If you ask someone which Eastern Canada University is THE athletic college, chances are he will say "Western". They feel that Toronto is not taking its share of the athletic honors. On the contrary, The University of Toronto takes the lion's share of senior competition. The idea of Western supremacy was fostered between 1939 and 1948, when they won the rugby championship four times in a row. This is not a unique feat; it's been done before. Queen's took it four times straight from 1922-25. When we look at the record, we find that Varsity has taken the rugby championship as many times as Queen's and Western put together. And so it is, the students at Varsity fail to give their University its due respect when it comes to sport. The word is—Western; the fact is—Varsity.

Are you asking "So what?" So we'll tell you. This column was prompted when a number of people mentioned to us that they thought Varsity is all washed up in the intercollegiate race. These experts were basing their comment on two exhibition games, one of which Varsity won. It wouldn't matter if they kept it to themselves, but no, they have to show what they know, so they knock the team. Some will believe these opinions; but let us say again—Varsity are the champs, and will win again. Those connected with the team are in a good position to judge, and that is their opinion.

Don't let these first two games lead you astray. They were little more than practices and should be treated as such. The team will come out on top—if we suport them! Now let's get out and let them know whose side we are on!

Meet The Ball Club

JACK ROBERTS is another graduate from the intermediate ranks, bringing with him plenty of experience in front line activity. Jack, or "Boogie" as he is called by his mates, comes to Varsity from that great football high school, Vaughan Road. The "Boogie" has impressed one and all in pre-season speed and blocking ability. Roberts is one of the younger members of the team, being only 19. He is stocky, 5'10", and packs 180 pounds on his solidly-built frame. Being a good tackler is another one of Jack's assets.

Meet The Blues Here Saturday Also Balmy Beach

The University of Toronto Big Blues play their first home game of the season tomorrow when they take on the Balmy Beach Club of the O.R.F.U. The Balmies are now at the bottom of the heap in their league, but are showing a much better team than at the first of the season. They went very well against Sarnia Wednesday, and promise to give Varsity a tussle.

Last year the Balmies tied the Blues on Doug Pyzer's 115 yard run. Coach Bob Masterson will be hampered by team injuries, with many players nursing bad knees, arms, and shoulders. It is unlikely that Bruce Cummings will play much, as Masterson is "saving him for Queen's".

In spite of the injuries, a strong team will be fielded on Saturday, and they will be out to win. This is the last exhibition game for the Blues before they hit Queen's on the eighth.

Interfaculty Tennis Skedded For Today

The much put-off interfaculty tennis tournament will go today at the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club. Players are asked to please be on time and to remember what flight they have been put in. The rain that has prevailed in the last few days is thought to have made the courts rather damp.

Rumour Has It —

Funny thing, rumor. Howie Harvey, ex-Leaf chain goalie, when he left the Smythe organization stated that he would like to go to Varsity and study engineering. Now the Queen's Journal has hopefully stated that he would be in attendance there—maybe. No matter where Harvey lands up this year he would not be eligible for senior competition. He probably does not wish to continue to play hockey anyway as he is troubled with a skin rash that is brought about by goaler's tension.

Look at that ball fly through the air. Why it landed right in that sand pile over there. And look at all those girls in sweaters and skirts waiting to take their turns.

My goodness, just what goes? Let's go over and see if we can play too.

Yes, let's all go.

Where?

Why to the University College's Invitation Golf Tournament for women, which will be held on Monday, or if it rains on Tuesday.

This year, as in others, St. Andrew's Golf Club on Old Yonge Street in York Mills, will be the scene of action.

Jane Abbott, the golf rep for UC has sent out invitations to all faculties, and hopes that lots of girls will rise to the occasion, grab their golf clubs and skip out to the club for a whole day of fun.

There are no handicaps and, for goodness sakes, you don't have to be a professional.

Just as long as you possess some equipment and know what a golf ball looks like, as well at that valuable ATL card and 50c, you can become a bona fide contestant.

Professor H. L. Humphreys donated a lovely golf cup last year. The first winner was Anne Sharp, PHE.

However, she won't be here, so everyone has a good chance to become the next champ.

Competitors should arrive on the course between nine in the morning and two in the afternoon, and don't worry about food—there's a snack bar out there that serves sandwiches.

No lists to sign, no experience necessary, just come and we'll see you all Monday morning.

As for the softball games next week on Trinity Field. UC I will play Vic I on Monday, instead of St. Hilda's playing St. Mike's, as was announced in yesterday's paper.

This important struggle between the angels and the saints is scheduled to take place a week Monday.

Umpires for these noon hour strugles are still wanted by the softball club, and for all girls who go through this neutral experience there is some token of remuneration.

Powerhouse Wally London bits the turf after a seven-yard drive through a gaping hole in the Beaches' line as the Blues march to two early majors in the first quarter of Saturday's tussle. Beach players H. Dunlap (45) and H. Fleming (30), are shown coming to the assistance of Mike McLaughlin who is grassing the Varsity back. Alex Lawson, veteran Toronto end, is getting to his feet after providing blocking on the gain. This play set the stage for a long cross-field pass from Brown to McFadden for a Varsity touchdown.

Brown's Hot Arm, Dany And Brewer Lead To 40-6 Win

By JOHN KENNEDY

The University of Toronto Blues romped to a 40-6 win over the tail-end Balmy Beach club of the ORFU in an exhibition football encounter here Saturday. The month of October came in Saturday bringing with it perfect football weather that enabled the Blues to make the most of their greatly diversified attack. Coach Masterson used all the players that were dressed in the Blues' local debut.

Dead-Eye Dick

The standout player on a field studded with stars was deadly Dick Brown, last year field general of the Mulock Cup-winning St. Mike's team of the interfaculty loop. Brown threw pass after pass that were completed missing only two in a dozen attempts. The line on nearly all his passes gave him plenty of time to get them away; and Dick showed that he has the cool judgment necessary to remain in senior ranks. Bermuda Bill Brewer, pre-season favourite, lived up to his press notices grabbing up two touchdowns, as did rapid little Bill Danylchuk.

Fast Score

The Blues started on their point-getting spree four minutes after the Beach kicked off to start the game. Right off the bat Dick Brown started hurling passes, hitting Alex Lawson and Bill Danylchuk with perfect pitches to move the Blues to the Beach 38. After three straight first downs the Blues lost ground on an incomplete forward and a penalty that moved them back to centre field. From here Dick Brown hoofed one that bounced perfectly into the coffin corner.

The first major of the one-sided practice game came after Wally London carried twice through centre taking the play to the Balmy 33 and a first down. Brown then threw a strike to Greg McFadden, good for 15 yards. Greg caught the ball and ran the remaining 15 yards, finally diving over the goal line for the score. The convert attempt was blocked.

London Majors

Brown's passes again set up the next Varsity score. McFadden, Gray and Dany were the receivers on this march that was culminated by Wally London's drive off guard that netted the Blues their second TD. Al Stevenson made sure of the convert. Quarter-time score: Varsity 12, Beach 0.

Nick Purdue blocked a Balmy kick at the start of the second

Student Sellers Of Game Ribbons Banned By Law

Three girls selling ribbons for the Blue and White Society were ushered from the street Saturday afternoon when they could not produce street vendor licences.

"These permits are for sale to those who in our opinion are worthy of this permission," said a police official approached on the subject last night. He said that no licences would be sold to varsity students.

"The price is only one dollar, and the reason for these restrictions is to help poor and handicapped old men to make a living" he added by way of explanation.

The action was instigated by these same vendors, who complained to the patrolman stationed outside the stadium that the student salesgirls were underselling them. (The price asked by the Blue and White is 15c, that asked by the street sellers 25c).

Paul Break, publicity director of the Blue and White Society, asked that students aid the Blue and White by patronizing their official representatives "Wait until you get inside to buy your ribbons, thus helping to rid yourselves of these hawkers, and at the same time helping the Blue and White Society".

SAC Public Relations director Doug Thomas said last night that they were trying to get licences enabling girls to sell the ribbons out on the street again. "If this is not possible we ask you to watch for our salesgirls, thereby helping us raise funds for our many worthwhile activities."

Probe Of Law Schools To Be Made This Fall By Independent Panel

Mr. Charles P. McTague K.C., member of the University Senate, has been appointed the head of a council to make a coast-to-coast survey of legal education and its distribution between the universities and the profession. The members of this council will be chosen from each province and will consist of 22 leaders of the bar, university presidents, prominent business men and a representative of organized labour.

The panel is a completely independent organization with no responsibility to any other body. Financial support for the duration of the survey has been furnished by the Carnegie Foundation of New York, the Nuffield Foundation of England, and the Canadian Bar Association.

VCU TO DISCUSS IF VIC TUCK SHOP TO CHANGE HANDS

Operation of the Vic Tuck Shop is one of the topics for discussion tonight at the first monthly meeting of the Victoria College Assembly. VCU president, Stan Kurisko, announced Friday that an outside source has offered to take over the operation of the tuck shop on a split-the-profit basis.

This source contends that their control will result in added services, and the possibility of attracting more co-eds to use the shop as a result is considered meritorious, Kurisko pointed out.

Other questions of prime importance to be laid before the assembly of representatives of Vic's various classes and clubs, as elaborated by Kurisko, are:

1. Planning of the stage show.
2. Future policy concerning handbook distribution, (none were distributed this year).
3. Appointment of an outside chairman, (a post previously filled by the sitting chairman).
4. Appointment of working committees.

British Surgeon, Statesman To Get Honorary Degrees

At the Fall Convocation this afternoon, the Marquess of Salisbury, opposition leader in the British House of Lords, and Baron Webb-Johnson, Surgeon to Her Royal Highness, Queen Mary, are to receive honorary degrees of Doctors of Law from the University of Toronto.

Gives Address

After the degrees are conferred, Baron Webb-Johnson will give the convocation address. He has followed the medical profession since his graduation from Manchester University and is connected with the Royal Medical Corps of the British Army.

During World War I, he was consulting surgeon for the British Expeditionary Force, Webb-Johnson was mentioned in despatches three times. He holds the D.S.O., is a commander of the Order British Empire, and is a Knight of Grace of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem.

Baron Webb-Johnson said that he missed the notable names in medicine with whom he had made friends on his last visit to Toronto in 1923, including Sir Frederick Banting, discoverer of insulin.

During his career he has written many articles in medical journals and has made tours, studying hospitals and medical schools in the United States and Canada. He was the doctor in attendance on Rudyard Kipling, noted British author, during Kipling's last illness.

College Bombed

Baron Webb-Johnson was president of the Royal College of Surgeons for eight years before he retired in July 1948. His term was the longest of any man who has held this position. During the heavy bombing of May 10, 1941, the building was partly demolished.

The baron undertook to organize the re-building and financing of a new hospital and college. He is attempting to create a more collegiate atmosphere by campaigning for residences for the students and staff. These residences, he says, will help cement relations between surgeons and students and will encourage greater co-operation. He explained that this increase in co-operation will produce a better medical profession.

Created Baron

In June, 1936, Webb-Johnson was knighted. In 1945, he received his baronetcy, and in 1948, he was created first Baron Webb-Johnson of Stoke-on-Trent. During the same year he was knighted, he was appointed surgeon to the dowager Queen Mary.

After Convocation, Webb-Johnson will continue his tour of Canada and will return to Toronto late in November when he will receive an honorary fellowship in the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Marquess Will Lecture

Later this week, Lord Salisbury, the other recipient of the degree, will deliver the Sir Robert Falconer lecture. On Tuesday and Wednesday, in Convocation Hall, he will speak on "Liberty and Authority — a Re-examination." Commenting on Salisbury, Dr. Sydney Smith said, "Few men have had his opportunity

University Life-- Pain Or Pleasure Discussion Topic

A series of discussion groups on mental health, intended primarily for freshmen, will be held this year on the first Thursday of each month at 8 p.m. in the Lecture Theatre of the Toronto Psychiatric Hospital, Surrey Place.

The discussions will be led by members of the staffs of the Department of Psychology. After the formal presentation of each subject, general discussion will follow.

The following are the subjects for discussion: 1. "University Life — Pain Or Pleasure," Oct. 6; 2. "The Price of Knowledge," Nov. 3; 3. "Effective Study and Work Habits," Dec. 1; 4. "Worry and Health," Jan. 12, 1950; and 5. "The Approach To Examinations."

The first lecture, "University Life — Pain Or Pleasure," will be given by Professor J. D. Ketchum, Associate Professor of Psychology. It will be given on Thursday, Oct. 6, and will deal with the transition stage from high school life to university life with stress given on the adjustments required for such a change.

Girls Out, Men In By One Each A.M. At U.W.O. Frats.

London, Ont., Oct.3,—(CUP)—New regulations for fraternities which seriously restrict their social activities will probably be instituted this week at Western it was reported last night.

The new regulations crack down on the number and variety of dances, the use of liquor, and will even go so far as to exclude wives of members from male frats.

The new rules say that frats may hold only four informal dances per year, lasting not later than 1 a.m. Chaperons who have been approved by the University must be present at all fraternity parties attended by women as well as at the one stag permitted each frat year.

"Death Knell" for Frats

Students at Western feel that the new regulations may sound "the death knell" for fraternities here. Saturday Night parties, which are traditional at Western fraternities are no longer permitted. Administration officials said that the regulations affect the conduct and social life of students, and that these must be the same for everyone.

A spokesman for the University administration said that "Western is just falling in line with the policy established at several other universities. Fraternities are part of college life and they have responsibilities to the university in the same way that students have responsibilities."

"Can't Understand Rreason"

One student, commenting on the new regulations said: "I could understand the reason for the rules if the university provided other facilities for social activities, but but there is practically nothing else to do that doesn't cost money."

The new regulations also provide that tea dances after football games must be over by 8 p.m. Girls will be allowed in fraternities only at chaperoned dances.

Similar regulations are not possible at the University of Toronto because fraternities here are not recognized by the university administration.

Our Voice Is Weak, O Caput

Whatever else it may do, the University of Toronto offers its students little in the way of practicing democracy on the campus. This seems a poor way of teaching the fundamentals of what we have come to regard as our best form of government.

Listen to what Principal R. C. Wallace of Queen's University has to say on the subject of student government: "You can talk all you like about democracy, but as long as you are authoritarian, the students won't learn about democracy." Principal Wallace goes on to say that students who are allowed a chance to govern themselves stand a better chance of becoming useful citizens.

True to traditions of ivory-towered detachment, students on this campus have given little thought to the share they have in the management of their own affairs. It may come as a shock to some of them to learn that the student voice in problems of student discipline has been an insignificant squeak. All disciplinary authority has been placed in the hands of the Caput which is under no compulsion to listen to or answer the students.

Four years ago the Caput placed a ban on loud speakers and beauty contests on the campus. Last year, just before the visit of the so-called "Red Dean" of Canterbury, the Caput forbade the use of University buildings to guest speakers during lecture hours. In neither case did the Caput feel it necessary to explain its regulation.

Last week The Varsity carried news that might indicate the piping squeak is becoming more resonant. The Caput has announced that it is setting up a liaison committee to work with student representatives. At this time, the only improvement seems to be a very slight strengthening of the larynx.

The Caput has given no indication that the committee will discuss anything more than administrative problems. The first topic for the committee will be the question of automobile parking on the campus roadways.

This seems like a rather puny opportunity for the testing of a stronger voice. We are, perhaps, being unduly sceptical. We hope we are. This permanent laryngitis is becoming tiresome.

Lost Boundaries

This film gets under your skin.

In documentary style, this Louis de Rochemont effort recounts the true-life story of a fair-skinned Negro couple who 'passed' for whites in a New England town. 'Passing,' a comparatively unfamiliar aspect of the Negro problem underlines the varying degrees of cloudy acceptance, some of our citizens undergo.

Some dissenting opinions charge this film is not as great a movie as critical cheering would indicate. Perhaps, point out the dissenters, critics bend over backwards to huzzah because the theme is of the newly-recognized "s h u s h - shush" type.

I wonder about this. Lost Boundaries is not as good a movie as The Fallen Idol for instance. But as an evening of emotional impact it would be hard to beat. Adult and intelligent, Lost Boundaries depends on subtlety rather than sensationalism to score on a touchy problem.

Until the final climax, there is no let-up. If you are willing to undergo a rewarding experience, a sustained impact, go see the film.

If, on the other hand, you plan to haul a comely wench to a light evening of entertainment, choose some other picture. Take in "Lost Boundaries" when your mental antennae are attuned for intellectual reception.

So many pictures are meaningless fun, to be forgotten at the theatre exit. But it will be hard to forget "Lost Boundaries".

Balfour Blacklist

Sexy books on the news stands seem to be troubling Controller Balfour lately. So, he has drawn up a "blacklist" to show the other City Fathers.

Since this is Important News, the other local dailies have told us about it, mentioning that among anonymous others two books—Eager Is The Flesh and The Bed And The Blonde—are on the controller's list.

Agreeing as I do with the controller that the reading public should be protected from such dangerous literature, I have checked up on the controller's choices.

It took a long walk down Yonge Street to locate the two books, The Bed and the Blonde was easily gotten. When I asked the book-seller for Eager Is the Flesh he tried to foist The Flesh Is Willing upon me.

Demurring I drew away. It was Eager Is the Flesh or nothing.

"Yup," he acquiesced, "one at a time is enough."

Later, with both books in my possession, I carefully studied this material. To tell the truth, I am a little disappointed.

Having hoped for exciting covers with unclothed females in seductive poses I get pictures which seem copied from lingerie ads in Ladies' Home Journal.

And though, the cover on The Bed and the Blonde says, "Gay, Risque and Racy"—there wasn't any inside.

Maybe it was subtle.

At any rate, Controller Balfour's choices have proven a considerable let-down. Maybe, like the Kinsey Report, he had not read them, but had only judged from hearsay.

I am eagerly waiting for the next Balfour blacklist. Then my faith in the controller's sense of discrimination may be restored.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

Editor, The Varsity—

This letter is written in reply to Mr. George Fake's letter in the September 28 issue. The case of Ruth Comfort has nothing whatsoever to do with American democracy. It is due to the United States being engaged in a "cold war" against Communism and its principal exponent, Russia.

Miss Comfort is not an American citizen, and as such the Bureau of Immigration of the United States can make regulations as to her activities while in the United States. They brought her to Ellis Island. She had been reported as a Communist sympathizer and they wished to prevent her wandering about the United States advancing the cause of Communism.

What is regrettable is the apparently false report of Miss Comfort's activities and her apparently unwarranted indignities. It will illustrate, however, the extent in small details to which the United States is going in its fight against Communism.

Ancient Runner Leaves Retreat, Appears Here

"Kallinike is coming!" announced the Blue and White Society at a meeting last night. Kallinike (pronounced kah-lin-nih-kay), a noted Greek runner, is scheduled to arrive on the campus at about 1:00 p.m. Tuesday, bearing a guilded scroll and two tickets to the Blue and White Roam-around on Saturday night, the tickets to be presented to President Sidney Smith. It is estimated by Doug Thomas, Publicity Director of the SAC, that a crowd of some 8,000 students will be on hand to witness the spectacle of Kallinike's debut on the campus, escorted as he will be in the triumphal classic manner.

Swam Hellespont

Kallinike, the first man to swim the Hellespont, was an all-round athlete, but achieved fame as a runner late in life when he astounded medical science with a strange affliction. The M.O. examined Kallinike very carefully (and very painfully) and although there was no apparent source of infection Kallinike was in a bad way.

Hippocrates was consulted, and his diagnosis, athleticus footicus (athlete's foot), established an historical precedent that runners have followed ever since.

Making a pilgrimage to the sacred oracle at Delphi to bathe his feet, Kallinike returned in triumph to Athens where he really hit his stride. Thinking nothing of a quick dash around the plains of Marathon before breakfast, Kallinike stayed in training.

Mass Greeting At Station Overwhelms Vic Student

When Frank McCamus, IV Vic, pulled into Union Station Friday morning on the train from Kenora, Ontario, where he spent four months this summer as an assistant geologist for the Ontario Department of Mines, he was looking forward to a warm greeting from his girl, Jean Hemphill, III Vic.

Frank was not disappointed. But he got another reception he was not expecting.

Hardly had he begun to demonstrate to Jean how much he had missed her, when five other girls brushed Jean aside and smothered him in kisses and squeals.

Welcome Home

Close behind them were several fellows carrying "welcome home" signs, who commenced to pummel him on the back and generally impress on him their joy to see his return to civilization.

By this time Frank and Jean had realized the reception party was made up of their friends at North House, Annesley Hall and 85 Charles St. residences.

Gloves and Tails

Chuck Malloch, IV Vic, dressed in white gloves, tails, and ascot tie, with a three-inch diameter chrysanthemum in his button hole, made a suitable speech and presented Frank with a huge key to Annesley Hall (Jean's residence) "to aid you in the further pursuit of your extra curricular activity."

Finally, Frank and Jean were driven to college in a large, black chaufeured Cadillac. (The boys had got considerably worried as the hired car and driver waited outside for the train, which was 90 minutes late.)

Frank's and Jean's reaction to all this: stunned silence.

External Affairs Member To Address IRC Meeting

Talks by an External Affairs Department member and by a panel of students back from Europe are planned for the first two events of the International Relations Club this fall. The program for the year will be outlined at the first club social to be held at Wymilwood this afternoon.

Attendance at the annual international conference held in Washington and at a UN sitting in New York is also scheduled for this fall.

The club is devoted to the advancement of knowledge and the discussion of international affairs. The four point program includes speakers, discussion groups, trips to international conferences and a library on international problems.

An attempt is being made this year to provide a varied group of topics for discussion and to assist the groups in exploring whichever field most interests them. The groups will also be divided into sections for those who wish to discuss general problems and those who have special interests. In addition the visits of outstanding foreign statesmen may be the occasion for special meetings.

The Club's library in the Economics Building is to be expanded. There will be additional opportunities for interested members through the facilities of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs, the Carnegie Endowment and the United Nations Society.

Student Vets Here Ask Easier Rules Regarding DVA Aid

A request that DVA ease regulations covering the payment of assistance to veterans attending university won general approval of student veterans on this campus, in a poll taken last Friday.

The request had been made by CCF MP Joseph Noseworthy (York South) in the House of Commons recently.

Jones Critical

W. C. Jones, executive secretary of the University Advisory Bureau, was more critical of Noseworthy's suggestion, although he expressed sympathy for veteran students whose DVA credits have run out.

In making his request, Noseworthy said 15 of 83 University of Toronto student veterans who took second-class honors in their exams had their assistance expire while writing examinations, after they finished what DVA defined as their academic year.

Officials at the University Advisory Bureau here explained that present regulations allow extension of credits beyond the length of time allowed automatically on the basis of one month of credits for one month of service, only if a student has attained at least second-class standing for the previous complete year of university studies.

Thus the students mentioned by Noseworthy must not have attained second-class honors in their previous complete year of studies.

Would Extend Credits

One student veteran, Bill Acheson, IV Vic, commented: "If a fellow can get second-class honors, he should be given the opportunity to continue his university education. I understand they require second-class standing in the previous full year of entitled credits. This might be a little unfair. Sometimes a student comes into his own in his second year."

Mr. Jones, of the Advisory Bureau, said:

"I would think that the particular plight of these veterans happens to be more dramatic because their entitlement happened to expire so close to the end of the year.

"But I am not sure that their cases justify any exception to the principle of the regulations. If you accept the principle of the regulations, I cannot see how you can criticize their enforcement.

Criticizes Noseworthy

"Though there may be exceptional circumstances, I am not sure that Noseworthy has anything more than a human interest story to play on. Those students should have known that their entitlements were going to expire before they completed their year. If they knew this, surely it would have been prudent for them to make sure they got second-class standing the year previously."

Mr. Jones said many of the students who come to the University Advisory Bureau are veterans whose credits have expired.

"They are in a tragically ironic position," he explained. "They are in the position that they are not eligible for the University Veterans' Loan Fund, which can be had only if you are receiving veterans' allowances.

Supports Ruling

"This seems justified, for a veteran who has not attained Grade B standing is probably ill advised to borrow money to continue a course in which the records indicate he is not exceptionally qualified."

Some opinions by other students:

"I think, when they got that far, second-class honors should have made them eligible for further credits": J. Cennis, graduate, Electrical Engineering.

"There are a lot of deserving cases where the students are probably entitled to further benefits, even though they have not attained second-class honors": K. Armson, III Forestry.

"I think there definitely should be action taken regarding these fellows": G. Carruthers, IV St. Mike's.

'All My Sons' Play For Year By Vic Drama

"All My Sons", by Arthur Miller, has been selected by the Vic Dramatic Society for presentation this year, it was announced last Thursday. Henry Caplan, the young U.C. grad who directed Toronto's entry in the Canadian Drama Festival will direct the play.

Meetings will be held once a month for five months, Dave Gardner, president of the society said, in outlining the plans for the coming year. He urged all members to attend the casting to be done on Monday and Tuesday. Mr. Caplan will assess the work of all applicants, and the information will be used by the society in all future work.

It was decided that the short one-act type of play put on Thursday evening will be the vehicle for many of the members who do not get a part in this year's show.

Guest appearances by Don Harron and Peggy Brown, former Vic students and present members of the New Play Society, highlighted the evening which was attended by a crowd estimated at one hundred.

X-Rays Are Compulsory For All New Students

Chest X-rays are compulsory for all new students, final year students, medical students, nurses, and foreign students, the Health Service has announced. The X-ray survey is to continue from Monday, October 11, until October 28, except Saturday and Sunday. Examinations will start at 9:00 a.m. each morning.

The survey will take place in the COTC Drill Hall, 119 St. George St. Male students of all faculties other than Arts will make their appointments through their class representatives during the next week. Arts students and all women will make their appointments during the same period at the Health Service unless they have already done so while having their health examination.

Last year, approximately 10,000 persons, including 1,000 staff members availed thmselves of the free X-ray examinations.

As a result of these examinations 13 active TB cases were discovered as well as old cases which were either cleared or dormant; they were treated and kept under frequent periodic observation.

The Health Service urges all students and faculty to avail themselves of this privilege.

INITIATION INSIDE

Freshies Are Exposed

By NORM SHERMAN

Do you know what the Freshies consider the essentials of male sex appeal to be? What do they think of necking? Have any of you men been to a Freshie initiation? Little is known of this vast, obscure function.

In the interests of knowledge and the undergraduate body, I donned the disguise and attended a Freshie initiation this weekend.

The lights were dimmed; at one end of the long room sat white-sheeted Sophomores. In front of them in a semi-circle stood the trembling Freshies.

Before the questioning, the Freshies were told that there was a rumour that a male reporter from The Varsity might be present. I trembled in my white sheet and wondered whether my slip was showing.

The questioner rose and solemnly called the roll. Then the questioning began.

"What are the essentials of male sex appeal in your estimation?" The first Freshie came forward. "Well, he must be tall and handsome. Dark, with flashing teeth —." In a rosy fog, she was gently led back to the line. I scribbled madly under my sheet. No one seemed to notice.

Questioner: "Next Freshie. Do you believe in co-education?" Freshie: "Yes, it gives you two points of view. Boys in class aren't distracting. You get used to them — not like at a girls' college, you know."(!)

Questioner: "What do you think of the Frosh?" Freshie: "Well — they're so young!"

Questioner: "What have you found to be the best method of introducing yourself to a man?" Freshie: "Trip him."

Questioner: "Do you approve of smooching?" Freshie: "Oh, yes!" I sat up. Questioner: "On a first date?" Freshie: "Well — sometimes; there are circumstances — if you like the fellow, I mean."

Questioner: "Do you sleep with an animal?" The question took me by surprise. The next Freshie in line came up. Freshie: "No — no, certainly not!"

Questioner (gently): "We had teddy bears or bunny rabbits in mind. Next!"

Questioner: "Do you believe in family life education in secondary schools, or do you think that girls should be innocent when they come to university?" Freshie: "Yes, I believe that knowledge is always worthwhile. I think it is the duty of the Board of Education to enlighten us on this field. I. . . ."

Questioner: "Yes, I see. What do you think, Jean?" She was looking at me. "She's right," I squeaked, "absolutely." The questioner turned back to the Freshie with a puzzled look on her face. I quickly flipped my sheet over the chair back, whipped behind it and skinned out the window. I ran all the way to The Varsity office, locked the door and crawled under the table — where I am writing this.

ART — MUSIC — DRAMA

Radio: Stage 50

Many years ago Ernest Hemingway began deglamorizing war, and his special pet was the Spanish Civil War, possibly because its issues were clear cut. Not so many years ago it wasn't nice on this continent to be anti-Fascist and I sometimes think it still goes. A ten-year-old war may not be headline material, but it is something less than topical with the issues removed.

Listening to the CBC's production of "The Fifth Column" on Stage 50 last night, I concluded that had someone not mentioned Madrid late in the show, I wouldn't have had much idea who was fighting whom, why and where. When you read Hemingway, you know before many pages that his heroes aren't kindly disposed towards the Franco regime. For Canadian listeners: a cloak-and-dagger melodrama, with a good score to guide you through the double-talk.

His counter-espionage agent (Bud Knapp) remains a tolerable hero in the best Hemingway tradition; war-weary, uncertain, cynical, he is no hero at all, only a man. He is also a volunteer, and hence must have ideals, but these, in no Hemingway tradition, can scarcely be traced. He eventually leaves love and luxury because "they" dropped their bombs just when the cinemas let out, and killed dogs, too.

With the war well out in the corridor a more personal conflict rages in the foreground. His sweetheart, a pleasant but unprincipled sort, wants him to take her away from it all and is even not above a little private profiteering. He is forced to discard her as "an expensive and useless commodity."

Heard on the basis of straight drama, it was a good show. Agostini is one reason why this program, week by week, is also often a brilliant show. His "Fifth Column" score was menace-music with a Latin beat, and exciting contrasts of hot Spanish melody with abrupt climactic crashes. He seems a bit wary of using his music as background (the above was mostly bridges) , yet the best scene was a bit of spoken tragedy incongruously backed by castenets which then erupted into full orchestra.

Next week: Sheridan's "The Rivals," which shouldn't be too controversial.

Jim Dickinson.

Who's Kallinike?

Prog.-Conserv. Art

Hanging in Hart House Gallery until October 24 is an exhibition of Canadian art. One glance at the collection convinced us that few of the artisans had taken more than a glance at what they had endeavored to paint. William Weston's "Red Mountain" was a flat, strokeless canvas in pea green, bearing no resemblance symbolically, identically, or transcendentally to a mountain or anything red. Likewise Carl Schaefer's flat, depthless, murky yellow symbol for Kingston Penitentiary, that looked more like a great church. Charles Scott's "Salute to Mozart" resembled the backgrounds in Laurence Olivier's "Henry V" in it surrealistic study of the composer's grave.

In stark contrast to these progressive pieces hung "Political Meeting", a fresh, deep study of the human mind, with a setting in a small forum, centred and flanked by three maypoles. One's eyes are drawn into the picture's depth. We commend it to the first hour you have free.

However "Lonely Land" (Jack Bush) and "In The Wood Val David" (Louis Muhlstock) both dark obscure attempts at atmosphere, in thick hard brush strokes hit out at the mind's eye instead of inviting the eye in. A striking study of youth on the street, William Winter's "Promenade" portrays a deductive scene where the artist sees his subject as a whole rather than in its component parts. The work glows with rich wine and sepia brown hues out of which emerge, like the petals from an old rose, six girls and seven youths. Of parting mention are Brooker's "Chorus", a modern piece of columnar geometry on a Greek theme, Humphrey's "Child in Red", a still life portrait of a shaggy-haired girl, Kathleen Daly's "David", a negro boy gazing wistfully into the sky against a backdrop of four towering tenements stroked in an obscure maze. We were most struck by Miss Daly's sketchy brush line and her keen sense of projection and form.

A heterogeneous exhibition such as this is at once progressive and conservative, not unlike its counterpart on Parliament Hill. In their efforts to strike out in a new path, to leave the known road, these painters often wandered into the wood or stepped off the bank into the stream. Net result being an overcrowding of trees as in Ethel Seath, or a watering down as in Yvonne Housser's "Cap Chat River".

In attempting to retain the status quo by painting what they see while progressing to painting what they do not see, they inevitably end up in a state of flux, their paintings become shallow and insincere, with a need for "more matter and less art."

period with Hubie Sinclair recovering. Norm West now tried his expert arm at passing, connecting with McFadden who had to dive to catch the throw. Sinclair and West took end runs up to the Beach 13 from where West tossed a shovel pass to Brewer who drove to the one. Brewer got the major by racing around right end. Convert blocked.

75-Yard Kick

The Balmies tied the Blues up momentarily after the kick-off and Brewer was forced to punt from his own goal line. The leather soared a full 75 yards, landing on the BB 35. Again it was Brown's clever playing that put the Blues in scoring position. Seeing the whole Beach defense fall back on an attempted pass, Dick took the opportunity thus offered, by scampering 20 yards to the Beach 25, from where on the next play he hurled an 18-yard pass that neatly caromed off the Balmy safety into the arms of J. J. Kelly. Kelly raced over and Jim Bell hoofed the convert.

Kane Carries Load

Joe Kane, erstwhile Blue player, carried the entire load for the east-enders in the first half. He had trouble getting his passes away as the Varsity line continually rushed him. Half time score: Varsity 23, Beach 0.

Passes from Brown-Brown, Brown-Lawson, coupled with plunges by Wally London, ended in another Varsity major when Danylchuk skirted the left end for the score. Stevenson got the convert. Shortly after, Dany got his second TD when he intercepted a Leuty pass on the Balmy 45 and went all the way for the 5 points. This score went unconverted. Both Brown and Danylchuk got tremendous ovations when they left the field in the third quarter.

Beach Score

Bill Brewer also got his second score on a sensational 85-yard run through the centre of his line behind great blocking by Clark and Roberts. Bell kicked the extra point. A Varsity kick that was blocked on their own 40 led to Beaches' only major. McLaughlin of the Balmies dribbled the ball over the Varsity line and fell on it. A Leuty-Richardson pass was good for a convert. That ended the scoring and the game.

ready. Without even waiting to tie up his sandals or bid farewell to his aged and bedridden old mother, he sped away.

Over hill and mountain sped the pride of the Athens track team. Through town and village, pausing only at the Albanian border for a glass of water, the untiring courier faltered not, until he reached the pates of a small monastery in the Swill Alps. With a cry of "Pax vobis," he thundered at the door, which was opened immediately to the famous Greek.

Has Yielded To Entreaties

Within the walls of this quiet retreat, Kallinike has lived on a modest athletic scholarship. At last, yielding to the entreaties of the Blue and White Society, and being assured that Xerxes had returned to Persia, Kallinike the swift, Kallinike, the Greek hero, has consented to reappear in public.

Kallinike will be received by a welcoming committee comprising SAC officials and other prominent figures about the campus. Representatives of the press and the wire services will also be present at the ceremony. President Smith will deliver the welcoming oration and will be answered by Kallinike himself in ancient Greek. The School cannon will fire a salute officially opening the ticket sales for the Roamaround.

Co-eds will be well advised to watch the spectacle from a discreet distance, warned Paul Break, Publicity Director of the Blue and White. "Kallinike has spent the last 2000 years in a monastic seclusion and his reaction to our beautiful U. of T. girls is liable to be very demonstrative."

Frosh Raid Convent; Police Make Peace

Ottawa, Oct. 3 — (CUP) — Freshmen from the University of Ottawa stormed through Gloucester Street convent here last week.

Hooting and yelling their way through the convent halls, the students were eventually dispersed by the police, although no arrests were made.

1889 1949

In the years following 1889, the cycling craze swept this continent. Men and women, both young and old took to wheels. For the first time, people began to see the country, and a demand arose for better roads. The development of automobile transportation in the present century was made possible by further expansion of our highway system and the use of Nickel alloys for important parts of automobiles. The use of these stronger, tougher alloys greatly reduced breakdowns and made the automobile safe and reliable.

How Nickel Benefits Canada

Since more than ninety per cent of the Nickel produced in Canada is sold to the United States and other countries, it brings a constant flow of dollars back to Canada. In fact, Canada's Nickel industry is one of our chief sources of U.S. dollars so essential at the present time to maintain our foreign trade and make available products not produced in this country.

These dollars help pay the wages of the 14,000 Nickel employees, and help provide the dollars which make it possible to pay millions in freight to Canadian railways, to buy timber, steel, coal, machinery and supplies amounting to many millions each year.

These millions, flowing into all industries through the length and breadth of Canada, help create jobs for Canadians.

lues a visit this Saturday, and the Blues are out to avenge at 8-6 defeat of last year. Our cloak and dagger boys eport that Queen's have a decent backfield in the persons Lenard and McKelvey, but seem to be having trouble nding a sea-worthy line. Jack Gray, arsity News Editor, broke a fine record and went to a ecture Friday. Tough luck, Jack.

Meet The Ball Club

Veteran snap ARCHIE JONES, pictured above in his stance at the centre of the line, is back again this fall to hold down that important spot with the Blues.

Archie is an old hand at line play, and showed by his performance in the game against Balmy Beach that he is a valuable asset to the Varsity squad.

At Trinity College School, before coming to Varsity, Archie won letters in football, hockey, cricket, and gymnastics, so is a strong candidate for the title of all-round athlete.

Archie's teammate at the centre spot is Ian Clark, and together they form one of the post potent combinations for the snap position in the Intercollegiate League.

There is one sure formula for recognizing Archie if you should happen to run into him on your travels around the campus. He seems to have a hard time keeping his opponents from shoving him face-first into the dirt, and the result is a proboscis that is always minus a good deal of its skin.

OBECK DEFINES POLICY ON STUDENT LOAN FUND

In a recent press release from McGill University, Coach Vic Obeck made clear the position of the University and himself on the much-criticized system of bringing new football talent to McGill.

Said Obeck: "There has been a great deal of comment about the new Student Loan Fund which was announced in Montreal for McGill. I would like to tell you the straight dope on this Loan Fund. There is a group of business men in Montreal, some are McGill graduates and some are not. They decided to get together a sum of money from which good students who are good football players and worthwhile people could borrow whatever they needed to go to school.

This money would be signed for in the same way as any other loan and would have to be paid back after they graduate. Naturally, I think this received a lot of different twists in the various ways it was handled to make it look as if we were buying football players. I can say in all honesty and sincerity that we are not giving anyone anything to play football for McGill."

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

The huge crowd of supporters (maximum for this season's first two games—ten) rooting for the Blues must have given the Blues added heart in their win over the Beaches Saturday. Either that or Masterson has been feeding them raw meat. Two quoteworthy post-game quotes: From Bob Masterson, the maestro of understatement . . . . . "They're beginning to look like a ball club"; and from Gord Walker of Globe and Mail frame . . . . . "last year's vets will have to hustle to grab a spot from these new guys."

The boys played well, though, and had their plays clicking. Even that "practice it but never use it" shovel pass worked every time. The Blues thoroughly out-played, out-passed, and out-scrambled the Beaches. If they can go as well against Western, the London drug stores will do a land-office business in aspirins.

The high score is quite a surprise when we consider (a) that Bruce Cummings was not dressed and sat it out with five or six other regulars and (b) that the Balmies are improved enough to give league-leading Sarnia a real tussle; but that's football. Masterson proved himself a master magician when he transformed Al Brown from an intermediate to an outstanding senior in two hours of practice. The coach removed doubts as to his powers of legerdemain when he turned Jimmy Bell into an end the night before the game. Bell has never played that position, but put on a show to shame the best end-man in the business.

The Blues' razzle-dazzle style of play is graphically shown in the statistics . . . . . they tried nineteen passes and completed fifteen for total yardage of 268 and an average of 18. They averaged eight yards on eleven end runs and eight on twenty-six plunges. The Beaches came nowhere near matching Varsity, making four on each buck and less than five on end runs. In the passing department the Men of McKenzie were hopelessly outclassed, completing five out of ten passes for small gains . . . and three of these passes came close enough to half time to cause Varsity no worry.

From our department in charge of he who has the last laugh etc. we hear that Western dropped a decision to the Sarnia Imps., 20-11. That's two more than Varsity lost by.

After UWO's 25 point win over OAC and Varsity's schmozzle at Guelph, where does that leave the two teams comparatively? In another exhibition game, the McMaster Rams (you know, the team that our intermediates edged last year by a score of 59-0) beat the Gold-Plated Gaels of Queen's University 7-5. These same Gaels pay the Big

Rainy weather played havoc with the tennis schedule last week but inter-faculty results will be in by Wednesday morning.

Winners of this group are not only finalists for their own faculty or college, but represent their college in the intramural competition. Of the results that are in, Joan Cowan, Sheila West, Jean Burley and Anne Cowan will play for the School of Nursing. Phyllis Wilks, Wilma Johnston, Wendy Dunford and Elizabeth Little are the entry from Physio Therapy.

The inter-collegiate team will consists of the four winners of the intra-mural contest to be held this week on the St. Hilda's courts, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday.

These four finalists will play at Western on the week-end of the 15th.

Band, Stella, Cheer-Gals Go All Out For Varsity

By JOHN ELLIS

Saturday afternoon bloomed bright and warm for the first home game of the season for the Blues. For an hour before game time the university crowd lined up at the south gate of the stadium and kept seven gates busy until well after game time. The line-ups stretched gack to the sidewalk from each gate.

The Varsity band, led by that connoisseur of cartwheels, Stella McCord and her trustworthy associates, the Varsity cheerleaders, paraded along Hoskin Ave. and up Devonshire to the northwest gate and onto the playing field.

About ten thousand people crowded into the stadium: The student section from the north side of the press box to the Z section in the southeast corner was filled to overflowing. At half time a hopeless battle was waged by the ushers in the northeast corner to keep the track seat crowd from filling what was left of the cement stands.

The new cheerleaders more than proved their worth as such to the student body. After a great demonstration of cartwheels at half time the beautiful bevy of bouncing babes were subject to loud yells of "cartwheels," if they didn't accompany their cheerleading efforts with cartwheels.

At half time the crowd was rewarded by a tricky demonstration of precision drill by the band led by Stella McCord. The playing field resembled a two-ring circus. The band occupied the large ring to the north and a student, identity unknown gave a great display of high bar gymnastics on the crossbar at the south goal posts.

Interesting comments were passed on the game by the out of town freshies. One frill was heard to comment to her present beau who was attempting to explain the game, "when does the silly thing start?" meaning the game, while another beauty wanted to know why Masterson's boys didn't let the Beaches score a few points.

The punch-line to the Blues' victory was the announcement that Sarnia Imps. were leading the Western Mustangs 3 to 0.

Schuman To Back Student Exchange

Promises To Propagandize In Homeland

One of the aims of French Foreign Affairs Minister Robert Schuman's visit to Canada is the promotion of student exchanges between France and Canada, Schuman announced yesterday during a visit to the University of Toronto.

"I will contribute all in my power to develop the exchange of professors, technicians and students," Schuman said. "French students like to stay at home. When I return I will make 'propaganda' in the French universities. With better organization we hope to have more student exchanges."

Asked about the reaction of the UN to President Truman's announcement that the Russians have the Atomic Bomb, he replied they had already known about it, and that it was of no interest at all.

Adenauer "Logical One"

Commenting on the appointment of Conrad Adenauer as Chancellor of the West German Republic, he said the choice was a logical one, as Adenauer is the leader of the Christian Democrat Union, the most powerful party in the new republic.

"It is too soon to say whether any German can be a friend of France," he continued, "but he comes from the Rhineland, the part of Germany closest to France. In this there is hope for lasting friendship."

The French official arrived at Simcoe Hall at 12 noon, accompanied by Hubert Guerin, Ambassador de France, Paul Martin, Consul in Toronto, and Guerin's military attache, Colonel Gilbert Andrier. The escort provided was led by two RCMP constables in their red dress tunics, and by five Canadian Army cars, with four motorcycle policemen.

Tours Hart House

With this company the tour proceeded from Simcoe Hall to Hart House where President Sidney Smith introduced the party to Warden Ignatieff who took them on a short tour of the building. From here the party went on to the Institute of Medieval Studies and was entertained at lunch by Rev. L. J. Bondy, Superior of St. Mike's in Brennan Hall.

When he was shown the debates room in Hart House, Schuman remarked to Ignatieff that "debates could provide that excellent thing which all who take public office must have before they can made the grade." He also expressed interest in the windows of the chapel. The stained glass consists of fragments from the windows of a French cathedral demolished during the First Great War.

Notes Differences

Seeing the long lineup of students waiting to get lunch at the Great Hall, Schuman said he was glad he was having lunch at Brennan Hall instead of waiting in the lineup.

Asked what differences he had noticed between French universities and universities here, Schuman replied he had found differences between French and Canadian universities and also great differences between the the six Canadian universities he had visited in Quebec and Ontario. One major difference he had noticed was that French universities have no colleges. They have different lodgings for students but these are entirely separate from the university.

The chairman of the campus ISS, Bill MacDougall, said that he was pleased to hear of Schuman's promised aid. "It is a fact that Canadian students have passed up French and other foreign scholarships because they haven't heard about them. A man of such eminence promoting the exchanges will help us in our plans to publicize these opportunities."

ALIASES MASK DEBATERS FEAR USA BAN ON ENTRY

Take Communist Side To Provide Opposition In Trinity College Tilt

By JIM KNIGHT

Fear that they would be refused permission to enter the United States if they were suspected of being Communist sympathizers has led two Trinity students to adopt false identities for a debate.

To Oppose Motion

The speakers, who have taken the aliases "David Blok" and "George DeReszke," will oppose the motion: "Resolved that the activities of the Communist Party are detrimental to the interests of Labour." The debate will take place at 7:15 p.m., Wednesday, October 5, in the chapel, Trinity College.

John Hladun and Mike Hicks will be the speakers for the Government. Hladun is a former member of the Labour Progressive Party who "severed his connections" with the party some time ago.

When contacted, Michael Macklem, of the Trinity College Literary Institute, said Norm Endicott, IV Vic, had promised to be one of the speakers for the opposition. Macklem also said Hladun had promised to ask Tim Buck to be the other speaker. Before Macklem learned whether Tim Buck would speak or not, Endicott returned and told Macklem that he would be unable to speak and also told him Tim Buck did not intend to speak either. Macklem understood that Buck refused to speak because of Party policy.

Thought Request Odd

It was at this time that Macklem approached "Blok" and "DeReszke" and asked them to speak for the Communist side of the debate. They agreed on condition that their names be kept secret. Macklem thought the request odd at the time, but since "DeReszke" intends to live in the United States, and "Blok" would like to continue visiting there, he realized that it would be foolish for them to run the risk of being labelled Communist sympathizers.

"DeReszke" said he was "dead serious" in his determination to keep his identity a secret. He said if there were any possibility of the American Consulate finding out who he is, he would withdraw from the debate immediately.

"Macklem has spent more than three months preparing this debate," he said, "and I am taking part in it to oblige him and the Literary Institute." He added that, after finally procuring John Hladun to speak for the Government, it would be an anti-climax if he had no opposition speakers.

An official of the American Consulate said that the fact they had upheld the Communistic viewpoint in a debate was not enough in itself to make the students inadmissible to the U.S.A. If they were members of the LPP, or other Communist-dominated organizations on the campus, he said, they would be inadmissible.

He added that the American Government policy is to exclude only those people who are "plotting to overthrow the Government by force." "DeReszke" commented: "What about Ruth Comfort? Did her alleged inflammatory speech constitute a plot to overthrow the government by force?"

Commenting on the action taken by "Blok" and "DeReszke," Hladun said that if they ever were refused admission to the States, "I can give

CCF Speaker

HAROLD E. WINCH, leader of the CCF Opposition in British Columbia, is to speak to U. of T. students on Wednesday, October 5, at one o'clock. The meeting, sponsored by the CCF Club, will be held in room eight, University College.

Winch, born in England, was first elected in Vancouver East. An electrician by trade, he is a member of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (A.F.L.). Father of three children, Winch has formed a father and son team with his son, Ernest. Both have been members of the B.C. legislature for 16 years.

The CCF leader returned recently from a world tour on which he visited Britain, France and Isreal. He is in Toronto to speak on behalf of his party's candidate in the Greenwood federal by-election.

"Mr. Winch is one of the most controversial figures in Canadian politics, and has an excellent reputation for being a rewarding speaker," CCF Club President Gord Milling said.

Rid Compulsory Oath Demand Faculty Reps At U of California

Berkeley, Oct. 2—(Exchange)—Academic Senate members voted overwhelmingly here to petition the Board of Regents for a voluntary loyalty oath, to replace the compulsory one demanded by the Board.

From the first, the faculty have opposed the oath, charging that their positions were dependant on on their signing.

The oath simply states that the signer is not a member of the Communist party, or any other group dedicated to the overthrow of the Government by force. The only change demanded by the faculty, is that signing should be on a voluntary basis.

Value of Arts H. House Debate For New Members

"Resolved that the wise freshman enrolls in the Faculty of Arts" is to be the topic of the first of the Hart House Debates Committee's discussions this year, to be held tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in the Debates Room as part of the New Members Night program.

New Members' Night is an annual show put on by Hart House to acquaint freshmen and other new members with the House's activities and facilities. (See pictures on page six.)

Hart House debates are patterned on House of Commons debates, so that every person attending has the right to speak. Speeches from the floor are limited to three minutes so that as many as possible may speak.

The motion will be moved by D. H. Hay, Grad. Studies, and opposed by E. D. Fedryk, IV S.P.S.

All speeches are to be recorded. At the end of the debate, which will last one hour, the addresses will be played back. Professor D. M. Hayne, Debates Committee critic and coach will be on hand to give pointers on presentation and technique.

Varsity News Lecture

First in a series of news-writing lectures is to be given by The Varsity News Editor Jack Gray today, at 1 p.m., in Room 11, University College.

All interested are invited. Bring lunches if necessary. Make-up staff members are also asked to attend these news lectures.

COPS STOP VENDORS

Street vendors who object to the Blue and White Society selling ribbons for 15 cents will get sad news this Saturday.

As a result of their action the constable involved has reported the pedlars have become a nuisance, and suggested no more licences be issued to such people in the future.

Acting on this advice, Inspector McAlister has ordered his men to make any such person around Varsity stadium move along. This includes hawkers who have already received their permits for this year.

Not For Busy Streets

McAlister said no licences issued gave anyone right to sell ribbons on busy thoroughfares. Anyone who did would only be doing so under false pretences.

"Until now we have done little about this, but in the future they will have their licences revoked," the inspector announced.

Mr. Surgeoner of the licencing department at the City Hall said anybody could get a pedlar's licence for one dollar.

Stadium Area Restricted

"There are certain areas which are closed to pedlars, of which the vicinity or Varsity Stadium is one. However we will accept any application, and forward it with the notation that it is for some restricted area. Then it is up to the police."

Mr. Keeler of the same department defined the permit as "licence to go from door to door, selling goods, wares and merchandise, from dawn to dusk." As regards to standing, the regulations he cited allow a man to stop for ten minutes to unload from a vehicle. This applies in particular to peanut vendors. The regulations also permit a pedlar to remain in the same block for half an hour "at the discretion of the police."

Says Pedlars Nuisance

Devonshire Place, which runs along the West side of the Stadium, is under the supervision of police from number two station. Inspector Cool of this station said, "The pedlars have been creating a nuisance, and obstructing traffic. Last year one of those fellows tried to park his car right on the street, and it resulted in a traffic jam lasting for some minutes. It is this sort of thing which we are trying to prevent."

In the meantime there seems to be some difference of opinion as to who shall give the order to stop the sale of permits. Inspector Marshal said he had not done so, and Inspector McAlister of number 5 pre-

THE FALCONER LECTURE

Many and diverse are the educational offerings of the University within and outside the classroom. A significant example of this fact is the Sir Robert Falconer Lecture which will be given in two parts at 8.30 p.m. on Tuesday, Oct. 4 and Wednesday, Oct. 5 in Convocation Hall by the Marquess of Salisbury.

Known earlier in his career as Viscount Cranborne, he is eminently qualified to discuss "Liberty and Authority: a re-examination". Students are cordially invited to attend this lecture and to avail themselves of this unique educational opportunity.

Wigs And False Beards

Last week in these columns we advised our readers to try to see the effects to themselves of certain policies adopted by governments not necessarily our own. At that time we pointed out that we cannot expect to live in an ideological-tight compartment.

In these days of faster-than-sound airplanes no nation can seriously entertain ideas of a strictly national nature. Don't quibble about this being a truism. Truisms often need repeating.

The news pages of today's The Varsity give further proof (if such were needed) that what one nation does affects others.

The case in point involves two Trinity students who feel it necessary to adopt aliases and disguises in order to say something that is not derogatory to the Communist Party. There may be an element of good humor involved in this disguise but the situation is not without its serious under tones.

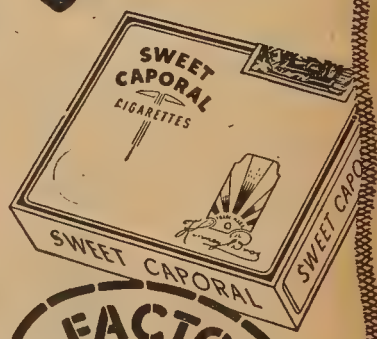
One of the students plans to live in the United States after graduation; the other hopes to visit there often. Their chances of doing either of these things would be nil if the American Immigration Service had the slightest suspicion of their political leanings. Indeed, that service seems to be acting lately on a good deal less than a suspicion.

The whole question of U.S. Immigration Service policy would have a slightly absurd aspect—an aspect reminiscent of a Gilbert and Sullivan farce—if it were not for the seriousness of the issues involved.

Here again we see the further limiting of academic freedom, the restrictions on intellectual honesty, that this unreasoning fear in the minds of our neighbors is producing among us. The American State Department and its various branches appear to have thrown logical thinking to the winds in an effort to exclude "undesirable aliens" and their unrational policy is affecting us.

We do not blame these students for resorting to this subterfuge. If they wish to visit the United States in the future it is almost a necessity.

We do criticise the thinking that makes the disguise necessary.



The issues are being brought close to home. The signs of the times are becoming plainer and more difficult to ignore.

Once again we would say, think it over. Are you affected? What does it mean to you?

Once upon a time there was a little girl. This little girl went to Public School.
Mother dear, Oh mother dear,
There's a little boy that pulls my ear,
Tell him not to, mother mine,
And everything will all be fine.

Now this little girl prances into High School.
Mother dear, Oh mother dear,
It's simply too divine,
The football captain none the less,
Is taking me to dance and dine.

This little girl finally survives Fifth Form.
Mother dear, Oh mother dear,
I must get into college,
There is no other reason why,
Than just to get the knowledge.

Father (looking at his wallet): "She got to Varsity at last and now she'll get a man but fast."
The young lady now demurely enters College.
Mawtha, rawtha, mawtha deah,
There isn't anything to feah,
It isn't right to sit and fret,
Although I have no doctor yet,
There are dentists here and pharmacists too
And engineers, they'll have to do.
But just you wait, I'm not a dope,
I'll get a man, Oh Lord I hope.

Among Those Present

Pictured just before they participated in the Fall Convocation ceremony yesterday afternoon are (l. to r.) the Marquess of Salisbury, the Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, Baron Webb-Johnson, and President Sidney Smith. Honorary degrees of Doctors of Law were conferred on two British visitors. The Marquess of Salisbury is presenting the Sir Robert Falconer lecture tonight and Wednesday night on the subject: Liberty and Authority — a Re-examination. Time: 8:30 p.m. Place: Convocation Hall.

Should Teach Life, Not Just Vocation —Webb-Johnson

"Universities should teach the student how to live . . . . not just how to make a living" said Baron Alfred Webb-Johnson yesterday afternoon after receiving an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from the University of Toronto in Convocation Hall.

Thanks Varsity

Baron Webb-Johnson gave the Convocation address as he thanked the University of Toronto on behalf of himself and the Marquess of Salisbury. The Marquess is the leader of the Opposition in the British House of Lords, and the Baron is the newly appointed Surgeon to Her Majesty the Queen.

"Collegiate life may have more intrinsic value than anything learned in laboratories and lecture rooms. To get that fuller value, universities all over the world need a large 'residential element.'"

Baron Webb-Johnson is President of the Royal College of Surgeons of England.

The Baron stated that if universities are to fulfill their mission of bringing wisdom into human affairs, they should arrange that there be "no swift dispersal after lectures are over—so that keen young minds can remain in contact with each other and with their seniors, of whom a goodly number should be in residence." The U. of T. with its Hart House has made some progress toward this end, he added.

The Royal College of Surgeons is trying to achieve this collegiate life, he said, particularly for graduate students from the Dominions. That is why London House was established in London.

Baron Webb-Johnson then praised Lord Nuffield for donating a quarter of a million pounds to develop on-campus residences. Resident students will thus be able "to live together and to meet socially the principal surgeons of our country and distinguished teachers from other countries who may be visiting London."

Wonderful Record

Thanking the University of Toronto for the degree, the Baron said: "What makes me enormously proud and superlatively grateful for being honored by your University is the wonderful record of Toronto in the field of medicine and surgery."

He then recalled several names as outstanding in the field of science, and connected with the University when he last visited Toronto 26 years ago: F. N. G. Starr and Clarence Starr, Roscoe Graham, Alec Primrose, and others. His council at the Royal College of Surgeons "have found in Toronto a unique number of men deserving of special recognition." Some of those he mentioned were Gillie, Shenstone, MacFarlane, and Wookey.

"But while we have eagerly sought light and learning from this great University," he said, "we have not been altogether idle ourselves and we hope that those of you who have visited us, or will visit us in years to come, will feel that the Old Country still has something to offer besides I.O.Us."

Baron Webb-Johnson and the Marquess of Salisbury were introduced to the Chancellor by President Sydney Smith who, after telling something of their past lives, requested the conferring of the degrees.

Hart House Star— U.C. Grad Joins Ottawa Theatre

Last year's star of Hart House Theatre, Anna Cameron, a U.C. grad, left Thursday for Ottawa to join the Canadian Repertory Theatre. Next week she will play the lead in J. B. Priestley's "The Inspector Calls."

Anna appeared in four major Hart House productions as: Sphinx, in "The Infernal Machine," Lisa, in "Jason", Sabina, in "The Skin of Our Teeth", and Arcadina, in "The Sea Gull".

Mr. Robert Gill, director of the Hart House Theatre, says, "her most brilliant performance was as Sabina, in 'The Skin of Our Teeth' ".

She was instrumental in organizing the group which presented "Another Part of the Forest", in which she appeared as Regina, at the Central Ontario Drama Festival. After winning the prize, the group represented Toronto in the Dominion Drama Festival. During the summer, she was with Sadlier's Peterborough Stock Company.

In that Company she starred in the Peterborough Summer Theatre. Playing in such presentations as "By Candlelight," "The Voice of the Turtle," and "The Importance of Being Earnest".

While Anna was there, Robertson Davies, eminent Canadian Playwright and essayist, and editor of the Peterborough Examiner, was directing at the Theatre.

Actors Plan Program To Link Drama Groups Throughout University

"We are planning a program linking the efforts of all drama groups on the campus," said Gardner. "At the meeting a new and closer relationship between Hart House Theatre, the U. of T. Drama Committee, and the drama societies will be discussed."

A comprehensive program for the year of all college groups and of Hart House Theatre will be given

Wild Animals Give Roaring Welcome When Kallinike Gallops Onto Campus

Kallinike arrives today at 1 p.m., complete with two lions (alive) and three elephants (also alive), Bill Turner, chairman of the Blue and White Society, announced yesterday.

Lo! He Cometh

Kallinike's impending arrival has been the talk of the campus for the last few days. Various opinions have been offered regarding the appearance of this famous Greek runner, who has spent the last 4,000 years in monastic seclusion in darkest Greece. In his interview, Turner has now given final and complete information.

Bears Tidings

Kallinike, the first man to swim the Hellespont, will arrive on the campus at 1.00 this afternoon, bearing tidings of great import to all students. A welcoming stand will be set up at the south-east corner of University College, where President Smith and other college dignitaries will be on hand to extend an official welcome. Also present, will be cheerleaders, members of the Pipe Band, a large orchestra, representatives of The Varsity and other Toronto papers, and the radio and wire services.

Debut

The program will begin with the arrival of Kallinike's handmaiden, a sloe-eyed Grecian beauty, who will be borne in a chariot manned by two man-eating lions. Shortly after, Kallinike will appear, clad in the customary Greek manner (fig leaf and running shoes), bearing gifts for the President. Following Kallinike will be three elephants bearing his luggage, which we understand includes full modern sanitary conveniences. Kallinike will present a scroll, which President Smith will read aloud, translating from the original Greek as he goes.

Contains Important News

Upon further questioning, Turner disclosed that the scroll will contain highly pertinent news regarding the Pep Rally and Street Dance to be held this coming Friday night before the Queen's game.

Also announced will be full plans for the Roamaround Dance to be held on the campus this Saturday night. After the scroll has been acknowledged, President Smith will be presented with two tickets to the Roamaround Dance.

The ceremony will conclude with the cheerleaders leading the assembled masses in a rousing rendition of "Old Toronto", which it is guaranteed will be heard in Kingston. President Smith will then declare the Roamaround Dance ticket sale officially open, and the Skule Cannon will fire a spirited volley to disperse the gigantic mob which is expected to be on hand.

Don't Feed Animals

The elephants and lions that will be on hand at the Kallinke reception will be on loan from a circus playing Toronto this week. Blue and White officials have reported the police department has raised an eyebrow over the appearance of uncaged lions in public. "We are keeping our fingers crossed," Blue and White Society chairman Bill Turner announced. "We hope no untoward incident occurs but we would warn all students to stand well back. These beasts are wild and ferocious and I'm not kidding."

Plans to feed one of the Varsity cheerleaders to the lions fell through when none of the crew would volunteer. "There is a limit to our spirit," commented one of the beauties.

4000 Students Sign At U. of Alberta Freshmen Total 900

Edmonton—(CUP)—Nearly 4,000 students will throng the University of Alberta buildings this week.

For an estimated 3,000 senior students it will mean a return to the books for another year. The freshman class this season is expected to be about 900, officials said. Although this would be a decline of about 200 from last year, there was still overcrowding in some faculties.

A considerable backlog of high school students, unable to enter in the 1948 term, will be accommodated this year. "Few veteran students will enrol this fall," officials report.

A "reprieve" from night lectures and labs is expected this year. With the expansion of facilities, especially in the engineering faculty, there will be fewer night classes. Some evening sessions for third and fourth year engineers may be necessary.

Pawnbroker's Shop

Lost And Found

Judging by the number of articles remaining unsought in the Lost & Found department in Simcoe Hall, one would judge that Varsity students have plenty of personal possessions to spare.

Indeed, in diversity and quantity of stock, the office is not unlike a pawn-broker's shop, save that it is probably much better organized. Articles varying in size from trench coats and blankets to spectacles, keys and dime-store jewellery fill the racks and shelves.

Although students sometimes strew their belongings over the campus, more often they leave them behind in lecture halls in their haste to be gone. In the latter case, the caretaker of the building concerned, registers the articles and holds them for a week before turning them over to the University Police for centralized storing in their office.

From time to time, a list of the things unclaimed is published in The Varsity. Certainly, the custodians of the department do all in their power to inveigle reluctant owners into reclaiming their possessions.

Who knows? Perhaps the muffler you lost at the rugby game last November is "fusting unused" in the Lost and Found division. Varsity Students Compete For New York Editorships

Mademoiselle Magazine is again offering to college students the opportunity to serve on their college board of directors, and compete for a month's guest editorship next June.

Each year Mademoiselle chooses twenty young women to spend June in New York writing captions and articles, editing, planning fashion and art spreads for the August College issue. Trial reports (deadline November 1) are used to place young people on the college board. Mmbers of the college board compete for the editorship by answering quizzes.

Joanne Stoddart, III UC, who was on the college board last year, claims that anyone who is among the lucky twenty really deserves the honour.

"Some of the quizzes are very hard," said Joanne "I remember one which asked us to identify fifteen to twenty names. I spent an afternoon in the Reference Library and still couldn't find them. Another quiz asked for a compilation of a complete college wardrobe."

Anyone who is interested in competing should write immediately to College Board Editor, Mademoiselle, 122 East 42nd St., New York, N.Y. The deadline for the trial report is November 1, 1949.

EDITORIAL

What You Want

The women's page is a weekly feature of The Varsity which is made up of news and features that might otherwise be neglected. It is run primarily for the distaff side of the campus but is of a nature that should interest the mighty frequenters of Hart House.

It is not meant to be a page devoted to feminine chatter or social gossip but rather a page of light and humorous articles which will make good reading.

Not that the page will neglect certain so-called 'burning issues'. We will try for instance to keep you posted on what plans and steps are being taken for the proposed Women's building, and discussions of what this building should contain.

The primary purpose of this page is to give to students, particularly women students, what they want. As it is barely a two year old it needs all kinds of help and direction.

A few writers for The Varsity cannot assume that they know exactly what will 'go over big' among students. They can only hope that by trial and error they will discover what is wanted and what is read. The only way they can discover what their public likes is to get their comments on what appears Tuesday mornings.

If you think our material is not up to scratch,—okay, let us know, we'll try to do better. If you think we've neglected something, tell us. If you have any suggestions to make, make them.

It's not hard to make yourself heard. If you are averse to writing letters, come into The Varsity office and sound off in person . . . . we'll listen.

Freshies Admit Chasing Males Occupies Them

By NANCY GRAHAM

The freshies who are at the U. of T. have come here for a purpose, and it isn't, as the age-old maxim goes, "just to get a man." At least that is what our notes say. Every year the girls are doing more and more on the campus, and are proving to everyone — even you hard-headed males — that their place cannot be overlooked.

Ahead Scholastically

Scholastically, says Miss Ferguson, dean of UC women, the freshies are away ahead of the freshmen. The girls were awarded twenty-eight scholarships, appreciably more than the men; and what's more the Prince of Wales Scholarship (awarded to the student with the highest Matric standing in the province) went to a coed this year! Evidently the men are going to have to pull up their socks if they want to keep up with these gals.

We decided to ask some of the freshies about their reasons for coming to college. So, strolling across the campus as nonchalant as possible, we spotted a group of freshies walking ahead of us, carrying on an animated conversation about that peculiar "thing" known as a college man.

Why They Came

"Why did you come to college?" we asked in our best reporter fashion. "Whadya mean?" was their unanimous reply. Slightly taken aback we tried once again: "What were your reasons for coming to Varsity?" "O-o-o-oh!" We began to fell like the guy who found the lost chord. "Oh what?" we murmured about to give up and be off.

When finally pinned down, nobody was very sure — they'd come because they were keen on their course; they'd come to have new experiences, and to make new friends, but they did unaimously agree on one thing however, that was a general curiosity about Varsity men — their activities, and their hide-outs.

Rather Revolted

By the time that we'd gotten this far in our interview, we had almost reached the book-store, and before we knew it our freshies had departed from us "'cause there goes Stu." We felt rather revolted by this attitude, but then we thought again why did we come to college? Before we had time to ponder further on this subject, something happened and, oh golly, there goes that terrific new guy in our course. Mind if we dash and catch up with him?

The next lecture is so dull.

Queen's Girls Supply Cigs, Stand In Queues For Men

EXCERPT FROM QUEEN'S JOURNAL

So we're gold-diggers, eh? Well, let me tell you, any girl that manages to be a gold-digger around this place must be a genius—nothing short of it.

You stagger into the Union to find the man of your life sitting with four red-blooded Queen's types, all of whom greet you with a haggard look and a lethargic invitation to join them at their two-by-four table.

Supply Cigarettes

You seat yourself wearily, after dragging a chair from the opposite side of the coffee-shop, and fish a cigarette out of your case. The man of your life, who always smokes a pipe and therefore never carries a cigarette, quickly fills the ash-tray by knocking the smoldering contents of his pipe therein, and then says to no one in particular: "Say, I think I'll have a cigarette for a change." Whereupon his four red-blooded friends follow his example and obligingly empty your cigarette case for you.

The scintillating discussion re the relative merits of O'Keefe's and Labatt's has become a little tiresome, and as you rise to speak to an old acquaintance your man casually remarks "Uh—getting yourself some coffee, dear?" Before you have time to reply in the negative he adds: "How about bringing me a coke while you're there?" Whereupon his four red-blooded friends all place their orders and you join the queue.

Control Fury

During your absence the Okeefe-Labatt discussion has become so heated that it can be terminated only by experimental testing. So your man and his companions gulp down their drinks before your coffee is even visible through the steam, smiling ingratiatingly at you all the while.

You control your fury all the while by thinking how nice your man will look in his tuxedo at the Meds formal, when suddenly you realize he's saying something to you . . . "awfully sorry we can't go, but I couldn't get the complimentary ticket. You understand . . . see you sometime." . . . Whereupon he dashes after his four red-blooded friends and leaves you alone—except for the dishes.

cinct said he had received orders from Marshal to prevent anyone from selling ribbons on public property next Saturday.

Asks Aid

The Blue and White Society will have their girls inside to sell ribbons. Paul Break, publicity director of the society, asks that the students wait until they get inside before they buy their ribbons. "We need your cooperation to make a success of our plans," Break said. Money raised from the sale of ribbons is used to help finance many of our activities."

He added that the Blue and White is eager to see the outcome of this action. "These hawkers have been around for years, and it is time that someone got rid of them."

You Don't Say . . .

The philosophy prof cracked a delicious pun and kept a perfectly straight face. Nobody laughed or even snortled except one lone coed. The pun? "Some think that Hobbes' philosophy is h-obnoxious."

VIC'S CORNER

Trying to get ideas on how to write this Corner is much like pulling a tooth. No pains are spared. There are those who would say that reading the Corner reminds them of having a tooth filled. They are usually bored to tears. To such persons, we can only say that, if, like the shopper who is buying a chesterfield, you look long enough, you're bound to find something that will suit you in the end!

Roughly one year ago to the day we sat at this same dust-ridden typewriter, in these same moth-eaten underwear, looking for that same general-interest news item that would suit all of you . . . regardless of the particular spot. Strange as it may seem the very same topic comes to our mind (not that it could possibly be one tracked.) . . .

Last night while most of you were enjoying the Autumn moon a group of 75 people met in the College to discuss and decide upon innumerable issues pertaining to student affairs at Vic. The Vic Assembly had started on its second year of operation, and a year that will prove to be one of the biggest in our history. These people, elected by yourselves last March, studied the Vic Tuck Shop, the up and coming Vic Show, men's and women's Athletic's, the Common Rooms, publicity and innumerable other items . . . all of which affect your life while at Vic.

Now we don't expect you to turn out to these meetings. That would be impossible and futile. But if you will show enough interest to read about these meetings (an account of last night's is found elsewhere in today's Varsity) and support the V.C.U. whenever possible in its activities during the coming year no one could ask for more. Nuff preachin' for one week. But think about what we've just said.

One of the big changes brought about by last year's Assembly was a complete revision of the Bob Constitution. The new set-up now awaits the perusal of the Board of Regents of Vic before it becomes official but from where we sit it looks like a dash of the new for the Old Ontario Strand. Watch The Varsity for a complete story on the Bab, the Bob Apple Battle, for full details than we could possibly hope to give you now.

There was a time when we would watch with interest the secretive attempts of Frosh and Sophs to hold Bob practices. But from now on the time and place of such meetings will be proclaimed publicly. The rival years in ordere to use the College for the conclaves must promise that no attempts to break up practices will be made. Everyone will know about them but of course, unwelcomed years will be kept out. After last year's watery deluge and consequent material damage to old Vic the Class Executives have agreed to co-operate in this respect. The promise of crippling fines to year treasuries in case of damage to that venerable old structure has doubtless influenced the thinking of the Classes. But don't worry Sophs and Frosh, you'll have your chance at the Bab.

It's about time for the Frosh to start warming up for the Freshman Harrier which takes place Saturday, October 15. If you are able to walk, run, crawl or even stagger from Vic to Con Hall in less than ten minutes you're a sure-fire bet to finish the Freshman Harrier which is only a two-mile jaunt. Get yourself some P T credits and points toward your Athletic "V", not to mention the odd bunion, by turning out. Watch the Athletic Bulletin Board for organized practices!

The same old tradition, (victory), a goodly number of the old players from last year and a new coach, Lou Frick by name, have been combined into what looks like another contender for the Mulock Cup. We're very anxious to see the brand new Scarlet and Gold outfits that the feetballers will be wearing this year but like the rest of you we must wait until the season opens up. Watch for the notices that will come out about the middle of next week.

It has been said that music washes away from the soul the dust of every-day life. To those of you seeking such a formula there is a group here at Vic that can certainly show the way. The Glee Club are carrying on practices on Monday and Wednesday of this week in Vic. At the same time, well almost the same time (Tuesday and Wednesday to be exact) the Music Club will be holding tryouts for their annual Gilbert and Sullivan presentation. Both groups are in urgent need of tenors. If you're interested in singing why not turn out?

Before closing we have the usual weekly reminder. The V.C.U. is trying to get a complete list of everyone in the College and where possible the activities in which each person is interested. The cards are kept in the V.C.U. Office for those of you who have not filled them out. Get the general idea?

With cigarette butts piling high and smoke rings clouding our eyesight we find it difficult to carry on. Until next week then we remain .....

HART HOUSE DOORS OPEN TO NEW MEMBERS

At the annual camera club salon, Yousuf Karsh, who acted as judge of the exhibition, is shown above presenting the junior award to Morris Resnick, II Meds, as senior winner, while Blachhall, a graduate member looks on. In addition to the annual salon, the camera club conducts monthly shows to which all members are encouraged to contribute. Under the direction of the art committee, an exhibition of varied forms of art are presented throughout the academic year for the study of the members at their convenience. Two students are shown below viewing such an exhibit.

Whatever be the form of diversion sought by the male of the U of T species, he is almost certain to find it within the portals of Hart House. Annually elected committees guide the many clubs and activities of the House in active programs which are both instructional and entertaining.

To many, Hart House is a convenient and very pleasant place to partake of the noonday meal or to make a free phone call, but to those who investigate its cultural and recreational possibilities, it becomes the centre of their extra-curricular life as an undergraduate and a permanent tie with the university as a grad.

Students and alumni share common interests in such activities as the Glee Club, recorded music, instrumental recitals and sing-songs in the Common Room; art classes and exhibits in the Art Gallery; regular debates, drama under the direction of Robert Gill in the Theatre; chess, archery, and rifle-shooting in their respective clubs; photography in the Camera Club, and a complete facilities and supervision of athletics under the athletic association in the athletic wing.

New Members' Night provides the freshmen on the campus that Hart House has to offer. Members of staff and committees will be on hand tomorrow with an opportunity to see all evening to assist the warden in welcoming the new members.

For members of the professional faculties who wish to relax from the arduous tasks of lab reports and clinics, the library (above) offers a peaceful seclusion amid classics and moderns, fiction, fact and philosophy. Library regulations require that no books be taken in and no library book be removed, thus assuring an atmosphere uncontaminated by thermodynamics, calculus or anatomy. For the artsman who wishes to flex his muscle once in a while, there is the athletic wing with gyms and swimming pool (see below). In the pool, one may swim, play water polo, receive instruction in life-saving or revive from a dull lecture. In addition to the usual game sports and P.T. classes, the more energetic among us may study fencing, wrestling or the fine art of self-defence.

GRADUATION PORTRAITS

Again this year we are photographing graduation classes and if you are a representative, we will be pleased to quote you prices on your class.

Phyllis Knight

Poor old Beethoven was drawn, quartered, pounded and rushed to death when Toronto pianist Phyllis Knight swept through the master's "Appassionata" Sonata (Opus 57), last Saturday night.

Movement one commenced with a loose, hazy statement of the first theme, with no sense of rise to the trill in bar four, with extensive pedalling when none is marked, with an arrogant disregard for accentuation, resulting in a syncopated confusion of both the rhythm and the notes. Miss Knight's interpretation was never dull. Taking the sonata's nickname to heart, she poured passion over the keyboard through the entire piece. Her erescendos in movement two (a flowing miniature of theme and variations) were so ecstatically delivered as to lose entirely the thread of the poetic theme.

Chopin's B Flat Minor Scherzo (Opus 31) fared even worse. The pianist had no discretion in her tones, which stood out like the Death March from Saul, cold, shallow, hard progressions, that left the listener equally cold and hard.

Warmth was the one quality that Phyllis Knight's recital lacked. Whether the cause lay in her obviously premature appearance, in a need for further intensive study, or more likely in faulty pedagogy, I am unable to ascertain. But no doubt remains that the pianist's notation was inaccurate (small wonder since she played largely with her wrists), that her articulation was anything but clear, that her technical facility and general keyboard command fatally injured the aesthetic value of what she played.

The occurrence of the Chopin Scherzo with Liszt's twelfth Hungarian Rhapsody, combined with mannerisms such as convoluting arms, a constantly overweighted left hand and perverted wrist position, with frequent tone irruptions (not in the score) for purposes of show, give rise to a faint suspicion that Phyllis Knight's performance results directly from a pedagogy that believes the performer and audience are primary in interpretation, and faithfullness to the composer last. All three suffered on Saturday night.

Winnipeg Ballet

Last night the Winnipeg Ballet opened a three-night run in Eaton Auditorium. Taking all things into consideration they are a very good company and present an interesting repertoire.

The only general criticism can be on the standard of training which the dancers have had. It has been neither rigorous enough nor long enough to produce the great ballerinas, male leads, or the precision corps de ballet found in English and Russian companies.

However, they have certainly utilized their training to produce a very good evening's entertainment. For it is that word "entertainment" which seems to characterize the results obtained by the Winnipeg Ballet.

The first work performed was "Romance," the music by Glazounov, arranged by Robert Fleming, and the choreography by Gwenneth Lloyd. This was a ballet in classic tradition, designed mainly to show the standard movements. While undoubtedly symbolic in nature, it seemed confused by the many entries and exits made by the corps and the leads. Jean McKenzie showed herself worthy of being prima ballerina of the company by a number of excellent attitudes and a very clean style. Unfortunately, the rest of the company did not seem so confident nor so graceful. There was some difficulty in timing between duo-piano accompanists and the company.

"Ballet Composite" was listed in the program as a "mathematical interpretation" of music by Brahms. It was more mood-dancing than ballet. All movements were sharp and exact, and interesting choreographic patterns were formed.

An addition to the program was a group of excerpts from "Swan Lake". This is one of the great ballets and it was danced excellently, Jean MacKenzie and Arnold Spohr being at their best.

The one work which seemed to suit the Winnipeg Ballet best was "Chapter 13". This is a fabulous melodrama about a burlesque queen, a racketeer, an artist, and a lot of chorus girls. It is bumptious and rollicking. Set to Gershwin's music, it adds up to downright fun. One could see that the company enjoyed itself and from the applause the audience did, too.

The ceremonies began, and the three minutes silence was announced. Forty thousand people stood stock still, the wireless ops stopped their keys, end even the outside traffic seemed to half. The quiet was absolute. Suddenly the silence was shattered by a bellowing voice shouting "Hot Dogs! Red Hots! Get your Red Hots here!"

Several thousand people looked at him with blood in their eyes. An iconoclast! Wrecker of holiness! The poor hawker looked bewildered, but the look on his face changed to dejection as he took off his steaming gear. He didn't know anything but how to sell hot-dogs, and they were belligerent to him for it! He sat down on the steps, looking like a whipped cur.

We took a closer look. His face seemed vaguely familiar. We tried to remember, and suddenly we realized who the hawker was. Yep, you guessed it . . . . Gus Johns, the budding engineer, the great blocking back, the great tragedy!

All members of the senior team are in the faculty of engineering. This tournament will be a 36-hole affair.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

There used to be a kid living up in Bracebridge about twenty years ago who was the epitome of the clean-cut, red-blooded American boy made famous by Al Capp. Big Gus Johns was a well proportioned young man of six feet plus, and had a reasonable amount of grey matter between his ears. His ambition ever since he saw his first Meccano set was to be a Civil engineer; to graduate from college and to work for the Ontario Highways Dept. But with his old man working for twenty four bucks a week in a local woolen mill, Gus wouldn't bet a torn shin plaster on his chances of getting to be an inmate of Skule.

One day a scout for Southern State of the Banana League was passing through on his way to the Haliburton fishing grounds and stopped for gas. While his heap was being filled, he happened to notice Gus. Gus was at the moment rounding up the cows for a neighboring farmer, and one of the bulls had broken out of the pasture and was high-tailing it down the road like a bat out of a bag. Gus broke the existing sprint records to overtake the bull, whereupon he threw it a block and laid the critter out cold. Negotiations began immediately and Big John was happily enrolled at the Southern State College of Sciences.

Gus didn't think much of football, and didn't like the idea of clipping classes for practices and games, but he either played or went back to the bulls. So he played.

The coach quickly saw that he had a valuable chattel on his hands. What made him happier, was the realization that if Gus was coupled with Speedy Smith, the best running half in sight, Southern could easily take the Rose Bowl marbles. With Speedie running and Gus blocking, State was unbeatable. It was always "Smith running . . . . blocking by Johns"; and Speedy etched his name in the scoring records, while Gus got his share of sport-page glory.

Gus tackled up and down the field like a wild man all season, and on the day of the Bowl qualifying game, the odds were on State against Southwestern. But Southwestern proved a tough nut to crack, and Gus was left in without relief. He did what he could, and played one of his best games ever, but Speedy couldn't get anywhere. By actual count, Gus made twenty-seven tackles and blocks. He was staggered several times but always got up for the next play. In the second half he looked as if he was a little tight, lining up with the wrong team twice.

Late in the game Speedy grabbed a fumble when one of the opposition backs was tackled so hard by Gus that he dropped the ball, and ran for what proved to be the winning touch. Gus didn't get off the ground when the play was over.

Gus wasn't played in the Rose Bowl game, but the fans figured that with Speedy in shape, Southern State didn't need Gus. State was murdered in the Bowl, and Speedy's biggest gain was three yards.

We didn't hear anything more about Gus directly, except that he had flunked his year, but was allowed to repeat. He seemed to work hard enough, but was a little absent-minded, and couldn't grasp anything more complicated than two straight lines. He left school on the remmendation of his professors.

Two years ago we were covering the Southern-Texas College game on Armistice Day, and met some of the old-time writers. Gus was one of the topics of conversation, but apparently no one else knew what became of him either.

Meet The Ball Club

IAN CLARK pictured above needs no intro to loyal Blues rugby fans. Last year captain of the team, Ian is back again this year and is still rocking the opposition with gay abandon. (Gay is an import from the U. of Sacramento.) Clark was born in Hamilton 25 years ago and at present is enrolled in OCE. Ian is 6 feet tall and weighs 195. While overseas in the army he played for the "ORFUNS". This year Ian will try a new position. The absence of John Shore called for a replacement at the important centre slot and Clark was Masterson's choice for the job.

Sportswoman

Vic I defeated UC I in the noon softball games yesterday by a score of 17 to 3. The Vic team, bursting with energy from their hastily eaten lunches, cheered five girls across the home plate but put the UC players up to bat as three "outs" followed in rapid succession.

To round out the first inning, UC scored their first and only three points, only to return to the field to watch while their opponents gained six more runs. The game came to a swift close as the losing team fell even farther behind. Their first trio of batters struck out, giving Vic their opportunity to boost the winning score to 17.

"Our victory was due to the skill of our coach, Dave Weatherhead, the excellent pitching of Dot Parkinson and the hard practicing of the team" panted Di Rogers, Vic Athletic Directress and catcher for the team.

ST. HILDA'S vs ST. MIKE'S

St. Hilda's were defeated 3 to 1 by St. Mike's first on the Trinity campus. Betty Jean Fraser from St. Mike's was Hilda's played a good game in the field catching two flies in a row.

TENNIS TEAMS PICKED

The names of the players on the Intercollegiate Tennis Teams were announced last night. On the senior team are Art Anderson, Len Turner, Ernie Howard, Jack Little, and Fred Dawes. The intermediate team consists of Frank Taylor, Jim Biddell, Ted Powell, and John Coles.

CORRECTION

Humble apologies to Dave Greey of SPS who placed first in the intercollegiate senior golf qualifying round last Friday. The win was credited to some fictitious chap named Dredy. Dave Greey, in addition to being captain of the senior team is the manager of the foursome. Sorry, Dave.

Looks Like Big Season For Interfac Gridsters

By JOHN ELLIS

Friday afternoon the Intramural Office and the contestants in the race for the Mulock Cup met and the following came out of their meeting. Group one will have U.C., Vic, Sr. Meds, and Sr. S.P.S. while second group will include Dents, Trinity and Jr. S.P.S. and third group will have St. Mike's, Jr. Meds and Forestry. Two teams from the first group and one from each of the other two groups will proceed to the semi-finals. First games will be on Oct. 12 but as yet the schedule has not been completed. With Fred Sgambati starting a referee school and the calibre of players improving things are looking up. The teams have been practising hard and strong for a week while some have got two weeks under their belts. A quick stroll of the campus showed the following:

University College

Phil Downie is expected to field one of the strongest contenders this year. With a little better than two weeks practice gone by the red and white promises to be the best conditioned team this year. The line will be big, averaging 195, and the backfield will be fast. The backfield has such notables as Bob Walker, Bruce Miles, Hugh Law while the line acquired Bill Wilson from the Intermediates last week. The team as has been mentioned will be well conditioned. The plays will be built around speed. In the minds of sideline coaches the following thought has arisen. Have the red and white finally got a Mulock winner? Only the season can give the answer.

St. Michael's College

Despite earlier expectations St. Mike's will not field a spectacular team. Lou Barnes paints a black picture but this may only be propaganda. It is true however that the team will lack experience. Dick Brown of course is up with the Blues to stay and only Jerry Washington and Tony Adams will be back. Thirty of Lou's last year champions are graduates. Because of this St. Mike's have been dropped to the third group. St. Mike's have been practising for a couple of weeks and may yet come up but they had better hurry up and do so.

Victoria College

Last year's runners-up will have a strong contender. It may be the crash helmets acquired from the Blues but the red and gold look good. Lew Fick is coaching this year and expects a light but very fast team. Lew says the team is behind in training but they certainly do not look like it. Lew is glad to be back in the first group this year because as he puts it "it will give our team a little more competition and perhaps a little better chance to get in the finals." Lew is a teacher now at Danforth but played college ball for Vic. Among the holdovers are Keith Sumner, Lorne Lodge, Tommy Dryden and Bruce Ledger, Don Mowat, a newcomer, is shaping up well.

Forestry

Coach Max Lister will have a good team but figure that the teams in the third group were not given a fair deal. Max was quoted as saying "St. Mike's should not have been dropped back to the third group. With their larger college they should be in either one of the larger groups. It does not give the faculties with small enrolments a break." Max's team may be big but they are a little behind in conditioning. Holdovers include Phil Austin, Sid Sheldon, Rosty Winters and Fred Collict.

Dentistry

Coach Ken Thompson, formerly of the Regina Roughriders and presently a fourth year Dentistry student, expects the team will be much the same as last year's. The team is in its second week of conditioning and looks pretty fair. Holdovers are many with Wes Moore, Erwine White and Bob Hana, down from the Blues, heading the list.

Trinity College

Chad Bark, quarter for the Beaches, is looking for more material. Apparently he is handicapped by a lack of men. Don Hunt and Bill Skinner are back but other than that they will have an entirely new team. The Trinity cheerleaders are showing more enthusiasm than the team so far. Liz Sommerville and Marg Brooks, to name only a couple, were seen out practising cartwheels. If some of the men saw these beautiful women out wasting their energy they would turn out for the team. Take a look, fellas.

By CONN SPARROW

So this is your first year at college. You've looked forward through high school to the time when you would finally be able to say—

"Oh yes, I'm at Varsity.

A freshie—with all the details that accomany this title. Halos for Trinity and cute little blue hats for PHE. Luncheons and teas have been given for you and all kinds of student organizations have welcomed you warmly.

By now, you know that Hart House is for men only, unless you sneak in furtively through the side door to get tickets at the Athletic Office.

You have also found out that there is a marked difference between the JCR and the KCR.

All sorts of new sights greet you each day—attractive engineers, the modernized book store, and the unconcerned way everybody dresses—not at all like the pictures in fashion magazines.

But do you realize that sports here on the campus are exactly the same as they were in high school.

Still the same rules, the same need of enthusiasm and the desire to learn exist. Many a freshie has come to Varsity with the idea that this is "bigtime stuff" and she just couldn't compete with the talent of "all the others."

Actually we want you to play on our teams; to enter the circle of sportswomen, for you come to us with a freshness—which your name signifies—bringing us new pep to spark the soul of a team, or the competition of a meet.

How do you suppose women's sports exist? It is because of the new ones who have just arrived that fill those gaps left by the graduating class.

You were a good guard last year, or maybe a fast-moving forward. Twelve months haven't changed you so drastically that you couldn't make a team this year.

All this week those interested in basketball are being given a chance to try out for teams.

Therefore, it's up to you! Support your college by turning out for those practices

VARSITY CO-ED ATTACKED

Greek Hero Jumbo, Leo Aid Society

A crowd, estimated at 5,000 by Blue and White Society officials, witnessed the arrival of Kallinike, the famous Greek runner, on the front campus yesterday afternoon at 1:30. Kallinike arrived to assist the Blue afid White Society's campaign.

Hero Arrives Late

Kallinike was scheduled to arrive on the campus at 1:00 p.m., but was detained for some time through difficulties experienced in swimming and crossing the Alps. His animal retinue was inadvertently detained through the efforts of Toronto Police Department who refused to allow elephants and lions to parade up Bay St. during the noon rush hour.

Although Kallinike was late the crowd assembled at the roar of the mighty Skule cannon and were entertained by the cheerleaders, members of the Varsity Pipe Band and two trumpeters from the U. of T. Band.

Trumpets Blow

Amid the fanfare of the trumpeters, Ted Snider and John Sproule, 'President Sidney Smith' (Doug Thomas) of the official welcoming committee was cheered onto the platform, correctly attired in a Greek toga with a crown of Blue and White oak leaves. Then Kallinike stepped out on the front steps of UC. Amid the cheering of the crowd, he tirelessly loped around the quadrangle and, completing his circuit, handed a scroll, written in ancient Greek, to the 'president'. 'Mr. President' translated the scroll in these words: 'Know all ye men and women of the Giant Pep-Rally to be held on the coming Friday evening at 8:30 p.m. on the Back Campus . . . and which will be followed at once by a monster snake dance to the Convocation Hall and Skule triangle, whereupon a great FREE dance will take place under the stars, till very late in the night. The Team will be there and everyone is invited.' This concluded the ominous words brought by Kallinike, who then presented two tickets to Saturday's Roam-Around Dance to the 'President', which officially opened the ticket sale to the dance after the Queen's game.

Retinue Arrives

At this point the rest of Kallinike's retinue arrived by taxi and moving van. From out of the taxi jumped Buddy — a very live lion—

All Freshmen are reminded that this evening is arranged especially for their benefit.

'Liberty Needs Authority' Theme of Falconer Lecture

Far from being incompatible, as is sometimes thought, liberty and authority form an essential balance for each other. This was the view expressed by the Marquess of Salisbury in the first section of the Falconer Lecture delivered last night to a capacity audience in Convocation Hall. The speech was an introduction to the main part of the address, to be given tonight.

The subject of the lecture, "Liberty and Authority, a Re-examination", is a particularly vital one today. Lord Salisbury affirmed he approached it as a politician, in the practical light of what can be done to solve the problems of the future.

Unknown Assailant Seizes Vic Girl— 'Almost Killed Me'

A third year Victoria College co-ed was attacked last night by an unknown assailant shortly before nine o'clock between Victoria College and The Vic Library. The girl is reported to have been "thrown to the ground and indecently assaulted." "It was an awful thing," she said last night. "It almost killed me!"

Assailant Asks Direction

The co-ed was attacked as she walked through the Vic campus towards Charles Street. As she came along the path between the Vic Library and the College building she met a man headed north.

The man stopped her and asked her the way to Simcoe Hall. As she raised her arm to point the direction to him he grabbed it, twisted it behind her back, at the same time pinning her arms in such a way that she was unable to struggle.

"He grabbed me by the throat and I wasn't able to scream. Then he dragged me towards the library. He banged my head against a tree," she reported.

Breaks Hold, Screams

The girl was unable to break the man's hold on her "but I somehow managed to get his hand from my throat and screamed." Although no one is reported to have heard the scream, the assailant was apparently frightened by it, because he immediately released the girl and ran south.

The co-ed rushed into Victoria College where the Vic Bob was holding a first year practice. She was hysterical.

Stan Kurisko, Victoria College Assembly president, was notified that there was an hysterical girl in the college. When he came on the scene the girl had calmed down and was able to give a description of her assailant.

"He was about five foot eleven, dark, wore a tan raincoat, and had

Vic Assembly Shelves Move To Rent Shop

Victoria College students will retain control of the Vic Tuck Shop members of the Victoria College Union decided at their first assembly held in Alumni Hall Monday night.

The question of a possible change in management rose from the offer of an outside firm willing to install more equipment on the tuck shop and run it at reasonable prices. The VCU executive opposed the idea because of possible complications.

With the retention of the present student management, the VCU will be responsible for the proposed tuck shop expansion this year.

This year's Vic Bob coming this month, is to be in the old-time Bob style. Claire Green explained the usual concert is to be replaced by features like a "Bob Appie Battle" afternoon and mock parliament for the female sophs and freshies. A yelling session for both sexes is to follow these afternoon events. A dance will climax the evening.

Non-appearance of Vic Handbooks this fall was explained by VCU president Stan Kurisko. He said handbooks had been an over-expensive experiment last year.

To make some substitution for the handbook, the Assembly discussed ways to acquaint students with Vic organizations, song, and the new constitution. It was agreed the SAC handbook filled the need up to a point. Mimeographed copies of the constitution will be made available for the student body, it was decided. A compact pamphlet to fill other lacks was suggested.

Government Pays $100, Help Defray Civil Flight Cost

The University Flying Club, an offshoot of last year's Ajax Flying Club, is seeking all undergraduates, graduates and any staff members who are interested in learning to fly.

The first meeting of the club will take place at 7 o'clock, Thursday in the Mining Building.

Under the Federal Government civilian flying training scheme, all members of civilian flying clubs who qualify for licenses are entitled to a rebate of $100 from the Government to help defray the cost of instruction.

The club also needs pilots with instrument ratings to assist in training.

Crybabies!

Students in the Victoria College Building went on a crying jag last night. Somebody let off a couple of tear gas bombs in the building and had the boys rubbing their eyes for quite some time.

No one seems to be quite sure who pulled the "gag", but Skule was prominently mentioned by a red-eyed commentator last night.

Members of the first year who were practicing for the Vic Bob had their rehearsal rudely interrupted by the incident.

Bedlam In A Taxi

"I Road With A Lion . . ."

By JIM SIMPSON

I rode in a taxi with a real live lion yesterday afternoon.

So what? Well, it's not every day you ride in a taxi with a lion, and so tell the truth I wouldn't want to.

Leaving the crowd gathered to see the arrival of Kallinike we wheeled out to College Street. Because of the natural odor of lions the window was open, and Buddy the lion had his head well out past the legal limit.

As we pulled up beside a standing streetcar I noticed a human head sticking out of a window. Our lion co-operated beautifully by raising his leonine features to meet those of the passenger. The lion won the staring contest easily as the owner of the head recovered sufficiently to withdraw, shrieking and shaking into the safety of the car.

Pat Him?

"Pat his head", the trainer suggested and held Buddy so that I could lean back and scratch his magnificent mane. I cautiously extended my left hand (I write with my right hand) and as he started away with a deep-throated cough, I lunged back to stare straight ahead of me.

Whipping out his rough, rasping tongue he started to lap at the back of my head. My hair curling, I froze, not daring to move so much as an eyebrow. Sounding as if he had just swallowed one of those cement-mixing trucks, he began to purr.

Sold Out

Once more he settled down with his head out the window, his short crisp mane ruffled by the wind. Soon we pulled up outside the ticket-booth of the Downtown Theatre.

Several bystanders peered into the taxi, and finally we got the attention of the ticket-seller. She took one look at the occupant of the back seat, and hanging up the "Sold Out" sign fled into the safer recesses of the theatre.

Amber Or Not . . .

Moving on, we were stopped at the next intersection by a red light, and as the cab sat there idling, another cab pulled up alongside. The driver stuck his head out the window, and hollered to his pal to take a look in the back seat. As the other driver did so there was a mad gnashing of gears and hurriedly pulled out into an amber light. You would think the idea of a lion in a taxi cab shocked him. And they say that taxi-drivers can take anything!

Turning into Wood Street, the constable on duty hailed us, waving his arms in wild fashion. One-way street! Excited by all this hollering and arm-waving, Buddy roused from apparent reverie. Opening his mouth he let out one of those blood-chilling roars made so well-known by MGM. Considering discretion the better part of valor, the constable, (number unknown), calmly strode off in the other direction.

The Finale

In a few moments we had pulled up at the freight door of the Gardens. As far as we were concerned the ride was over. But Leo, the Pup, had other ideas. Apparently now that he had gotten used to the idea, he liked riding around the city in a taxi.

A few vigorous tugs by the trainers started him on his way out of the cab. The third man along from the circus now got into the act. Taking a firm grip on Buddy's tail he hoisted the struggling and howling lion off the ground, and a queer procession started down the ramp of the Gardens.

Following as close as I dared, (as far away as possible but within hearing distance), I watched the troupe struggle with stairs, children and doors. When the beast was once more safely caged I went the way of all good reporters — back to the office to type out my story.

Black Madness

There is an old journalistic adage that says: When a dog bites a man, that's too bad; when a man bites a dog, that's news.

Today we propose a new version of the old saw and it runs as follows: When an institution of higher learning acts in a rational manner, that is to be expected; when an institution of higher learning acts in an irrational manner, that is betrayal.

Lest any of our readers think that the phrases "institutions of higher learning" and "acting in an irrational manner" are mutually exclusive terms, we point to the actions of the Board of Regents of the University of California. (The Board of Regents is a body comparable to the Board of Govenors at the University of Toronto.)

The Regents at California have demanded that all faculty members and employees sign a loyalty oath declaring they are not affiliated with the Communist Party.

This action is betrayal. It is betrayal of all that a university stands for. It is self-betrayal and a betrayal of all those who believe in the fundamental principles on which the American Constitution is based.

As faculty members have said, "It (the oath) is unnecessary and possibly paves the way for other restrictions interfering with academic freedom."

Canada's Minister of External Affairs, Lester B. Pearson has pledged that his government's policy of clearing Communists from positions of trust would "never succumb to the black madness of the witch hunt."

We hope the government and Mr. Pearson will not forget their pledge.

CASINO REVIEW

Art, Music or Drama?

This week's stage revue at the Casino Theatre is definitely good entertainment. Not only are the performers very much in the flesh but some of them are talented as well.

"The Girl with the Blue Velvet Voice," is the star of the show. Working against a white backdrop with only a microphone and a strapless evening gown as props, Miss Helen Forrest offers the excellently phrased "Them There Eyes", the jumpy "On the Sunny Side of the Street" and the playful "I Wish I Could Shimmy Like My Sister Kate". The Former Harry James-Benny Goodman vocalist is at her appealing best in the plaintive ballad "I Don't See Me In Your Eyes Any More" in which she achieves night club intimacy.

As encores Miss Forrest sings "Melancholy Baby" and "Baby It's Cold Outside" in the beguiling style that has made her famous.

Stan Kramer and Company, consisting of his mom and dad and nine unique puppets provide an amazing twenty minutes of fantasy.

The show is rounded off with the Chuck Gregory stable in a well rehearsed, scantily clad dance panel on a pre-historic theme. The young ladies were aided by Bob Goodman's undecided tonsils.

The Casino's screen delight this week is a Barbary Coast epic which does not require heavy concentration nor a doctorate in psychology in order to follow the plot and for this reason is appealing.

Canadian Painting

The person who wishes to know and be able to understand Canadian art must go to see the exhibition "50 Years of Canadian Painting" now hanging at the Art Gallery of Toronto. There the visitor will find the pictures hung in a manner which will enable him to see the effects of the various influences, continental and otherwise, which have moulded Canadian painting.

The break in the evolution of Canadian painting is in the seven years between 1912 and 1919. The Great War broke the wall that isolated Canadian Art from that of the continent and the U.S. In the period since 1919 there has been little radical change. Canadian painting since the Great War has grown more vigorous than it was before. Newer and bolder treatments have been employed. It is interesting to note that the subjects chosen by Canadian artists have remained substantially the same. The landscape is still the choice of the majority of painters. The continuity between the first war period and the present is well shown by a comparison of B. C. Binning's "Ships in a Classical Calm" with Franz Johnston's "A Northern Light" painted during the last war. Then compare the essential simplicity of these pictures with the more ornate "Oxen Drinking" by Horatio Walker of the early period.

Portrait painting in Canada seems to have changed little over the period. With two exceptions, "Dr R. I. Harris" by Cleeve Horne and "Louise" by Charles Comfort, I found the portraiture dull and uninspired.

There are four primitive paintings in the show, all by artists in Quebec. Only one of these, "Deer Hunting" by Ida Champagne, will be of any interest, I think.

The show is extremely interesting not only from the historical point of view, but because of its comprehensiveness.

his hair combed straight back. He was carrying a suitcase. I am sure I would recognise him if I saw him again," she said.

"He must have had quite a hold on her throat" Kurisko said last night. "You could see the red marks his hands had made very clearly." Kurisko reported that the girl had been taken home by students at the college. She lives in Toronto.

A doctor from the Toronto General Hospital examined the girl last night. Toronto police report that "she was thrown to the ground and indecently assaulted." At press time last night the police had no further information on the case.

Liberty Needs

He pointed out that "the century of the common man" had seen two catastrophic wars and abolished liberty in many countries.

To explain this paradox, the speaker offered two suggestions. The first was a clarification of the terms liberty and authority. The second pointed out how each can be abused. Authority should be used by the community to insure individual liberty, and to create conditions in which liberty can survive. Liberty, at the same time, is not licence.

Ordered liberty requires voluntary self-control both on the international and national scene. Abuse of liberty is not often successful in domestic policy. There, Lord Salisbury attested, the greater danger lies in over-emphasis on authority. The acceptance of rule by the majority is apt to tend towards the denial of the rights of the minority. Mass dictatorship is as much a dictatorship as any other kind. The welfare state must not become a benevolent tyranny. The problem of reconciling liberty and the necessary authority is in need of solution.

Meet The Ball Club

Bruce Cummings, they call this great half-back. Bruce is one of the team's triple threat stars, and last year was "THE" triple threat star. Bustin' Bruce is possessed with a smooth and accurate throwing arm, a pair of legs that drive like pistons and a superior hoofing foot. This will be his third year on the Varsity squad, and probably his last, as he is in his graduating year at SPS. Last year Bruce was chosen on the intercollegiate all-star aggregation, and small wonder too. A shoulder injury has kept the stocky dynamo out of the line-up in the Blues exhibition games to date but he will probably see action against Queen's on Saturday.

A product of Ottawa high schools, Bruce is an all-round athlete, but limits his talents pretty well to football now. He is 22 years of age, stands 5'10", and weighs 173.

Sportswoman

Despite the threat of rainy weather the interest in sports has not been dampened.

Softball games have been played as scheduled and UC's Invitation Golf Tournament, although cancelled on Monday, was completed yesterday.

Field Hockey

Tomorow morning will see another early practice at eight o'clock on the Trinity field for all those interested in field hockey.

This is a team that is organized just for fun from all the colleges and faculties. Last year the team played Havergal College and Ruth Bynoe and Joyce Rous are arranging something for this year.

Golf Tournament

Twenty golfers entered the tournament yesterday and only a few of these did not complete the course.

Carol Hopton, UC II, is the new champion, with a final score of 106. Second was Jane Abbott, UC III, who was six points behind Carol. A score of 120 brought Helen MacPhee, UC III, the honour of third place.

Softball

PHE III was the winning team in the mid-day softball tussle yesterday. St. Hilda's II was edged out by the Pixz Edders to the tune of 10-7.

Both teams turned in hard-fought games and gave their supporters, who turned out in strength, plenty of opportunities for cheers, Although the St. Hilda's squad was trailing behind their athletic opponents throughout most of the game, they tied up the score in the fourth inning, 6-6.

With a sudden spurt of energy, however, PHE took bat in hand to win the game. In spite of one "out", due to a mix-up in batting order, they gained four runs to round out their score to an even ten.

Pitching for PHE was Joan Rogers, who put in a commendable performance, while Barbara Brazil, the St. Hilda's pitcher, played an equally good game.

PHE IV arrived late from distant points on or off the campus, only to discover that the Vic team had won by default in the League IV game. However Bob Ralph, coach of the Vic team, agreed to play at a later date if this default affected the standing of the PHE IV team.

A barbecue, sponsored by the Vic VCF, will take place on Thursday, Oct 6. Those interested will meet at the corner of Runnymede and Bloor at 7:30.

Blues Cut 10 Readying For League Start

The Big Blues football squad has been cut to 30 players, Coach Bob Masterson revealed last night. The latest cut released 10 players who immediately reported to the Intermediates for further seasoning. Among those released were Bob Bazos, big half-back from UCC, Bruce Brown, Joe Errington, Ted Gawinski, Julie Hanson, John Roe, Bud McCagerty, Rod Whitehead, and Jim Murray. Jack Gray, ace end is the only player who was not out to practice last night. He has been sidelined with an ankle injury incurred in the exhibition game against the Balmy Beach outfit.

Tickets for the Queen's game are, as usual for these tussles, at a premium. After selling a few on a two per person basis yesterday, the Athletic Office reported that they were completely sold out. Students had lined up for hours to get at these few tickets. Lucky the thoughtful ones who had the foresight to buy the large economy size ticket books.

Last night the team worked out in full harness and looked very enthusiastic and eager to get at the Golden Gaels from the Limestone City. Dick Brown's hot right arm came in for lots of exercise as did his talented right toe. At present, Dick is holding his own with the peerless Bruce Cummings. Varsity should be in a powerful position with two great kickers on the squad.

Bruce Cummings' shoulder is responding to treatment, and he has been in uniform practice with the rest of the team. He looked last night as if he should be ready to go Saturday.

Anderson Leads Sr. Racketeers To Tennis Wars

The intercollegiate senior and intermediate tennis championships will be decided by Friday of this week. Starting today at the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club, the senior team from Varsity will meet the teams from University of Montreal and from McGill. Western and Queen's have no entries.

The senior team in order of merit are, Art Anderson, last fear's singles champion; Len Turner, who teamed with Art last year to cop the doubles event; Ernie Howard, Fred Dawes and Jack Little. Howard and Dawes will probably play as a doubles team.

Jack Glennie of the Varsity team won some honor for the Blue aggregation by virtue of his score of 76, the lowest of the day. Bob Master was the next best Varsity scorer with an 82, while Porky Goulnlock took and 88, and Grant came in with 87.

MURAL GOLF GOES TO-DAY POINTS FOR REED RACE

To-day, and for the next two days the intramural golf tournament will be run at St. Andrew's Golf Course. There has been a record entry so far forcing an early start. The tournament will be played over the 18 hole course and winter rules will prevail. The four lowest gross scores from one faculty or college will be the winning team. Points for entry and for winning will go in the T. A. Reed Trophy standing.

Balance By Morals Sick World Cure Asserts Salisbury

An objective moral code is the solution put forward by the Marquess of Salisbury to the problem of the proper relationship between liberty and authority.

"The nations of the world . . . should base their conduct . . . on the great basic principles of some inspired religion." It was with this suggestion that the second and last of the Falconer Lectures closed last night in Convocation Hall to a near-capacity audience.

What Proper Balance?

Lord Salisbury reiterated the problem: "What is the proper balance between liberty and authority, and how can it be achieved?" He suggested that generalities in politics are useless, and went on to apply the principles he had mentioned to the concrete question of domestic and foreign policy.

In the international field the speaker noted that the attempts to reconcile liberty and authority have not been wholly successful. The League of Nations failed because it was not world-wide; the United Nations is only partially successful because, Lord Salisbury pointed out, Russia has used it to thwart any efforts to restrain her actions. The principle of liberty perfected by authority has not been followed.

Danger of Authority

The pendulum can swing too far in the other direction, and there, the lecturer remarked, authority can override liberty. He sees this danger in over-centralization of government, stressing two evils that can arise from it. Excessive centralization removes the government farther from the ordinary person and is apt to destroy initiative. The second pitfall, Lord Salisbury observed, is a tendency to disregard the rights of the minorities, to forget that government solely in the interests of one section of the population, no matter how large, is not compatible with freedom.

Lord Salisbury compared the effort to base the actions of nations on anything but an "extraneous and immutable" code of morals to building on shifting sand. There we can see the relationship of liberty and authority. Lord Salisbury summed up the problem in these words: "Authority is no doubt necessary, but its main purpose must be to buttress that liberty of thought and spirit which it is our Christian duty to uphold."

MARQUESS OF SALISBURY

University Life Dull, Intolerable Say Students

Some students find university life bewildering, dull, and even intolerable, said Prof. J. D. Ketchum, Professor of the Psychology Department of the University of Toronto. Prof. Ketchum will develop this topic this evening when he addresses the discussion group meeting at the Toronto Psychiatric Hospital (Surrey Place).

The first discussion group of the Mental Health Series is on the topic "University Life—Pain or Pleasure". This topic will deal with the transition stage of the high school graduate in becoming a college student. Prof. Ketchum says the student has to modify his relations, habits and attitudes when he arrives on the campus of any university. He will discuss this modification and give example cases of difficulties and aids in his discussion.

After his discussion the theatre will be thrown open to a discussion period in which students are requested to ask staff members and officials any questions they wish.

Lab Blast Hurts Two

Hamilton, Oct. 5—(CUP)—Two McMaster students were injured in a lab explosion that occurred here yesterday when some perchlorate blew up during a distillation experiment.

Don McElcheran sustained injuries to his left eye, and facial lacerations. He is still in a serious condition at the hospital.

Don Wiles has been released from the hospital after treatment for minor cuts.

McElcheran lives in Hamilton. Wiles is residing at the University.

DP Student Aid Challenge To Us Long Tells ISS

The D. P. student problem is a challenge to every person in the university, Dr. Marcus Long stated yesterday afternoon, at the International Student Service of Canada meeting.

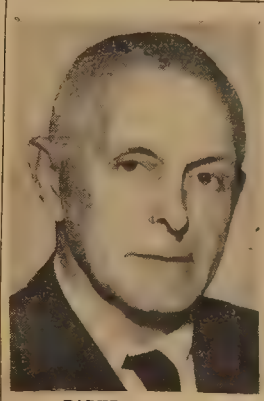
"Eight thousand students in Germany and Austria, who have given up pasts and futures in their homeland to stand up for their principles and convictions, are now in the position of being dependents on the International Refugee Organization, which expects to fold next June, and the I. S. S.," he stated.

Dr. Long, who spent the past summer in Europe visiting D.P. camps, stressed the fact that the selection of D. P. students was not a substitute plan but a definite scheme to bring twenty-five European students to study in Canadian universities. Five are at the University of Toronto, four in third year Honour courses, one in second.

Seminar in Holland

An I. S. S. seminar was held in Holland last summer at which one hundred and thirty students from sixteen nations met to discuss the topic, "The Individual and Society." "International understanding was achieved by stressing the points of agreement, not the differences.

"The real objective of this seminar was to demonstrate democracy in practice and complete freedom of opinion, the only restriction being that others had the right to criticize that opinion," said Dr. Long.



Notable Speakers

During five busy weeks, professors from Queen's, McGill, Laval and Columbia, and three from the University of Toronto gave two general lectures each morning and conducted groups in the afternoon. In addition to this fine staff there were notable supplemental speakers such as Andre Seigfried and Dr. Nord, leader of the European Federalist Movement, who gave them a "sneak-preview" of the Strasbourg meeting. On the same platform were Free Canadian Act Urges Dr. Fairley, Barred From U.S.A.

"I find myself at once honored and dishonored by the United States," said Prof. Barkley Fairley, head of the German Department at University College, yesterday. Dr. Fairley was referring to the action taken by the U.S. authorities in barring him from the United States.

BARKER FAIRLEY

Bryn Mawr Cancels

Dr. Katherine E. McBride, President of Bryn Mawr College, in making the announcement yesterday, said that she has had to cancel a series of lectures Dr. Fairley was to have given there this winter.

Dr. Fairley called the ban an "anti-Canadian act". "I may say that I belong to no Political Party and never have", he said, "Nor have I ever lectured or written on a political matter. But I have associated myself with certain broad non-party causes, making for peace and civil liberties causes which in their hearts the great majority support". Dr. Fairley was vice-president of the Canadian Council of American-Soviet Friendship. He, with his wife and John Goss of Vancouver, attempted to attend the Cultural and Scientific Congress for World Peace in New York last March. Mrs. Fairley and Mr. Goss were ordered to leave the country, but Dr. Fairley was allowed to remain.

Goethe Visit

"It all arose" said Dr. Fairley in a statement released, "out of my being invited to visit the United States during the Goethe Year. Since early in the year, I have lectured at various United States universities, including Yale and Princeton. Also, I was Visiting Professor of German in the Graduate School at Columbia University during the spring term and I attended and gave two addresses at the Goethe Convocation at Aspen Colorado, in July. Finally I was to give the Mary Flexner Lectures at Bryn Mawr this fall. But instead I find myself excluded and denied a hearing before a Board of Special Enquiry'."

In Ottawa later, Prime Minister St. Laurent told the House of Commons that the Canadian Government had requested an explanation from the U.S. Government. The US reply the Prime Minister said, was that there was 'no discrimination against Canadians as such'. The statement continued, 'Visas were withheld from a number of persons (from several countries) who wished to attend, in a private capacity, the Cultural and Scientific Congress for World Peace".

Regrettable Incident

"The State Department has informed us", the Prime Minister continued, "that as Mrs. Fairley and Mr. Goss were not admissible under US immigration regulations, they should have been stopped at the border. Had this been done, the regrettable incident would not have taken place".

Dr. Fairley is a leading authority on Goethe, the German philosopher, dramatist and poet. His talk on "The Universal Goethe" was the major item on CBC Wednesday Night last night.

"After long residence in Canada, during which my conduct has never been questioned, I now find myself at once honored and dishonored by the United States. It would be interesting to know," Dr. Fairley said in his statement, "what reasons the Government of a great democracy gives itself for its treatment of me. No reasons have been given by the Immigration Service. I can see none myself".

Devaluation Puts Load On People Says LPP Head

Devaluation of the Canadian dollar was termed "a means of placing the burden of the economic crisis on the back of the working class" by Norm Endicott, president of the LPP Club, at the club's first meeting of the year, held Monday night.

Endicott was unanimously elected president of the club during the meeting. Others elected were: Reva Steinberg, III UC, organizer; and Ben Shek, IV UC, education director.

The members decided the club will take part in the LPP's program of "demanding trade with the socialist sector of the world and working for higher wages for Canadian labor."

Plans were made for a "welcome home" reception for Reva Steinberg when she arrives from Europe last night. Miss Steinberg had been sent as club delegate to the World Youth Festival and Congress, held in Budapest this summer.

The members also planned discussion groups on devaluation and the economic situation in Canada. Several speakers are to be brought to the campus.

Varsity Lecture

All those interested in newspaper makeup are invited to the first in a weekly series of makeup lectures to be given by the Varsity makeup editor. Date: Today. Time: 1 p.m. Place: Room 11, University College.

Those attending are asked to bring copies of today's The Varsity with them. Attendance is open to all. Lunches may be brought and eaten.

Books, Books, Books

Are You A Chigger?

By HERB WOOD

Book reviews are usually carried in another part of the paper but in this case exception has been made to cover that sterling little treatise, A Guide Book for Students.

The guide book, attractively bound in bright red, caught our attention in the UC library. At the time, we were seeking a nice quiet place—anywhere to get away from that Varsity office.

Even if you don't use the library except the week prior to exams, you'll find the book has some good features. There is a very good map of the campus and some curious sketches that are good for a laugh.

Shut My Mouth

But the first page you turn to shuts your mouth before it even had a chance to open. And we quote, "I agree that the library is overcrowded, inadequate ... I agree there aren't enough books ... I agree that library rules are sometimes a bother ... "

Say, did you say anything, pal?

No?

Well, stop that sniping, see?

Whew, now that's over with, let's enjoy ourselves. And with that the tone of this cheery little book changes but quick. They start to get friendly ... to ask questions like, Are you a chigger

At this point the book takes to cartoons to prove a point. Take a look. See that character leaning against the desk with the cigarette in the mile-long holder, his head cocked on one side and his arms akimbo. And wearing the bow-tie. ... He's a chigger.

Chiggers Annoy

What's more, chiggers waste time, they don't think rules apply to them. They get under people's skin. They ... they ... oh let's just keep away from those people kiddies.

The rest of the book tells in crisp terms the in's and out's of this borrowing business. For instance, what could be more delightfully direct and straight forward than this? "At the delivery desk you apply for books and periodicals that you need, and return them when they are due." Now what could be clearer than that? At a time like this when we read so much that is confusing and controversial it comes as a relief to read something that is sound and undeniably true. You can just imagine some illiterate borrowing a book and forgetting all about it.

But let's read on. In case of a person losing himself in the catalogue ... that's what it says, honestly, ... an assistant will be on hand to help you. Gosh! Everybody form a chain, here we go after "Wordsworth's Selected Poems."

Assistants Aid

But come, hand in hand, let us delve deeper. The assistants in the reading room will do everything to help you, but simply have not time to write your term papers for you. Psst! ... Bub! How much to write my thesis?

Look, there's a chigger again. He's sleeping and using a huge tome for a pillow. The caption explains: "A chigger using a reading-room book." Looks like he's snoring too. Must be a Skuleman. The one on the page beside that aforementioned map, is moaning like all get out. He says he knows the book is overdue, but he lost the library ...

Love Conquers All

Like all successful books there must be a love interest and our little gem is no exception. At the bottom of one page is a chigger and a chiggerette. Bless them both. They're having a swell time gabbing like mad. But that's the point. This little couple are bothering other people who would like to just read and study.

On the last page, under a cartoon of chiggers discovering the catalogue the night before examinations, is a little bit of advice to what's going on. Of the two diagrams, one explains. This is an atom watching a chigger ... the other warns. This is an atom watching you. Don't say I didn't warn you ...

Not To The Bone, Please

Discussion on the proposed Student Memorial Union will soon to be resumed by the Students' Administrative Council.

Plans for the new Union have reached the point where it is possible for estimates on the cost of the project to be obtained. Following hard on the heels of the estimates will come the question of securing the necessary money.

Preliminary figures on the cost put the figure somewhere in the region of $1,000,000. Ian Maclennan, chairman of the SAC committee in charge of the Union said recently that the committee hopes to reduce the costs by "paring down the list of requirements."

Students at this University will have to bear the cost of building the Union. It is inevitable that a substantial increase in the Students' Administrative Council fee will be necessary to cover the expense. One way or another Toronto students will pay for the building.

It is to be hoped that the committee, when "paring down the . . . requirements," will bear in mind the fact that we shall have to raise a great deal of money, and that if we are going to do this we might just as well go ahead and raise sufficient funds to build the best Union we can.

Students, through polls and questionnaires, have indicated what they want in a Union. Within reason, they will be willing to pay the cost.

Get It Off Your Chest

Chests, we see, are much more prominent in the news than they ever have been before.

Whether this proves the magnitude of the influence Paris dress impresarios have on the western world, or a new school of sun-loving women, we do not know. It's just that chests have suddenly leaped into the public eye, and Tarzan isn't the only character with one.

We emphasize the importance of the chest in the western world because here on our own campus, we are being reminded of the care we must take of our own chests. You have one, too.

Starting next Tuesday, October 11, the Annual Chest X-Ray Survey is to be conducted by the University Health Service for over two weeks.

To many students, this free chest X-ray is compulsory. To all others, it is also offered free of charge.

The chest X-ray is a simple matter taking but a few minutes. Clothes removal is not necessary.

During the years 1941-1948 in which the Survey has been conducted at this University, eighty students were found to have traces of active tuberculosis. Luckily, eighty is only a minute fraction of the over 32,000 students examined in that period.

What is more fortunate is that these eighty students were warned in time of their affliction to be able to do something about it.

A lifetime of secure health for only a few minutes of your time now. Where can you get a better bargain?

VanSchweringen Requires Help!

Editor, The Varsity

I wish to request your aid in a rather important and delicate matter involving the honour of our beloved university and the scholastic reputation of one of her most valued staff members. I refer to Dr. Bucyrus F. Erie, world renowned lepidopterist and Dean of the School of Applied Insect Behaviorism.

Dr. Erie was at work in his office Tuesday morning when there moved across the field of vision subtended by his window a most improbable apparition. It took the form of an undoubted member of the human genus, evidently of the female sex in its late adolescent period. Upon its head was an object, parti-coloured blue and white, bearing the inscription M.P.E. The garment which I presume was intended to serve as a dress is difficult to describe. The Greeks certainly had no word for it; possibly H. L. Mencken does. The hair was tied with a number of streamers evidently the result of an overdose of alcoholic matter by the weavers of the kilts of the Royal Edinburgh Dragoons; a number of textbooks reposed in a fruit basket.

Dr. Erie is unfortunately somewhat short-sighted, and he mistook this object for a swarm of Helicoptera Neurotica, a form of locust which appears for three hours every twenty-nine years in the north-west corner of the Gobi desert. Naturally the appearance of this insect in Canada, which has never been found outside its native land, aroused Dr. Erie's scientific spirit, and he has commenced an article for the Britannica on the occurrence.

The laughter of the lepidopterological world when the error is disclosed will result in a severe loss to the reputation not only of Dr. Erie, but also of the University. I have thought that perhaps matters might be cleared up if I got one of the young ladies who adopt this garb to appear before Dr. Erie so that he could examine her more closely and convince himself of his error, but every time I approach one of them, I can't begin to explain what I want without her muttering "Wolf" and walking away.

Sir, the Honour of the University is at stake. I therefore appeal through the medium of your columns for aid. One of these young ladies will be doing far more for mankind than she realizes if she will meet me on the steps of Applied Insect Behaviorism at some convenient time, say Saturday night at 8:30.

Yours sincerely,
Themistocles VanSchweringen Jr.

REFUSED VISA

Editor, The Varsity

I have followed with interest the letters and articles in recent Varsities with reference to the American Immigration Policy and its relation to academic freedom. Many of my friends were alarmed when three weeks ago I was refused a visa to enter the United States where I had been accepted by the Boston University School of Theology to enter my second year of study. It is obvious that a cold war is going on but it is time we started to realize that recent trends in our method of fighting it are failing to take into account the nature of the conflict and are endangering the morale and the morality of our people by denying them the freedom to study and express themselves on these problems. The nature of the conflict between East and West is a social-ideological one and Communism everywhere, as in China, justifies itself by its clear-cut plan for meeting social and economic problems by which so much of the world today is faced. To study this basic tactic is an essential part of preparing a permanent answer to the threat of revolution and violent overthrow of our governments, and one realistic step in the direction of world peace. To meet Communist invasion with military strength might win a round of ato[illegible] for the West

Arts Faculty Suffers Defeat At Open House

The wise freshman will not enroll in the Faculty of Arts was the conclusion of the Hart House debate last night. The motion "Resolved that the wise freshman will enroll in the Faculty of Arts" was defeated by a vote of 12-11.

Most of the arguments for the affirmative were negative in nature, stressing, what one speaker called "the demoralizing effect of the Engineering students on the campus." Among these demoralizing factors was included the Skulemen's practice of publicly announcing their ability to "demolish forty beers". Wally Fram, IV UC, cast doubts on their ability to perform this feat. He also introduced, as an argument, the polished Artsman's way of ordering a "beah", while the Engineer orders bee-ur. J. L. Lunny argued that only through an Arts course does one get a knowledge of life, does he learn why we are here, and what our purpose is while we are here.

Grant Morden, IV Wycliffe, arguing for the negative, said that the beginning of wisdom is not in the study of Latin or Greek, nor even of Practical Science, but in the fear of God. Therefore, he argued, the wise Freshman enrolls in Theology.

Harold Carter, III UC, also arguing for the negative, said that a freshman enrolls in any school because, on graduation, he receives something that the rest of the world admires. The end product of education, he said, is a medium of self-expression. This medium to the Artsman is letters, to the Engineer, steel and stone. To say that the wise Freshman will choose the medium of letters is to say that all men are alike, he argued, and asserted that this is not the case.

After the debate was concluded, the speakers were able to listen to their own speeches on a tape recorder which had been installed for the purpose.

Grub Makes Hit As Starved Frosh Visit Hart House

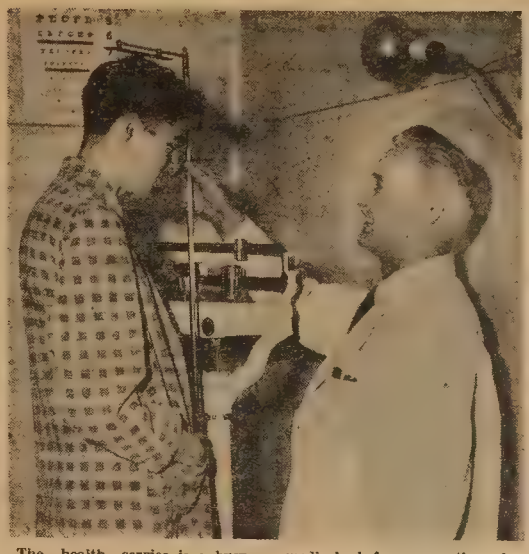
The coffee and buffet luncheon stole the show last night as Hart House held its New Members' Night.

The Great Hall echoed with the clinking of cups and saucers as the food was rapidly devoured. The various clubs had to vie with the appetites of young freshmen as the many rooms emptied, and a horde of hungry males flooded into the undergrad dining room.

There was a meeting of the Glee Club in the Music Room, and across the Hall the Record Club enjoyed a recital of some of the masters.

The Chess Club settled in the reading room, and there was a duplicate bridge match in the east common room. The Radio Club used the other common room, entertaining many with their live-wire performance.

One feature missed by many was the Lee Collection which is off in a corner of the reading room. Curator J. S. Harper was on hand to guide visitors through the priceless collection. His interesting talk makes the collection have a vitality lacking in a casual survey.



Committee members were not too busy, having sufficient time to enrol and indoctrinate all of the freshmen who showed any interest in their clubs. The evening was acclaimed as a great boon to the activities of Hart House, most of which suffer from want of public knowledge.

This Open House will be an annual affair from now on. As the years go on it is hoped that more and more of the freshmen will take advantage of all the possibilities contained in this campus institution. It is open to all men, and exists solely for their interests.

CORRECTION

Roamaround Dance will start at 9:00 p.m. rather than 8:30 as stated in Varsity ads.

Gained Again

The health service is a busy place these days as the inter-faculty football and soccer leagues prepare for their season's openers. All freshmen on the various teams must have medicals before competing in their first game. The Intramural soccer league opens today on the front campus and the football next Wednesday on the back campus.

Increased Fees Necessary If Student Union Reality

An increase in Student Fees will be necessary if the plans for the proposed Student Union are to become a reality, Ian MacLennan, Chairman of the Student Union Memorial Building Committee of the SAC said Monday.

"We hope to make up a good deal of the debt with returns from various paying parts of the Union, such as the cafeteria," added MacLennan, "but the Union will be for the students, and the students must pay for it."

"The plans for the building have been put on a sounder basis through the consultation of a firm of architects", MacLennan stated. The firm has given the committee a free estimate of the cost of the building. tentative figures for the building alone run to $700,000. The addition of a theatre would mean an extra $240,000 dolars.

Students Pay

The capital for the project will be obtained through a loan "in all probability from some source within the University itself," said MacLennan. The loan will be repaid by student fees and subscriptions.

Discuss SAC Transfer

The interest shown by various officials in the University indicates MacLennan thinks, that the University in general is beginning to regard a co-ed Building as a desirable memorial.

MacLennan has held conferences throughout the summer with President Sidney Smith, SAC secretaurer, E. A. Macdonald, Miss Parkes, and Steering Committee of the University. Finances were among the problems discussed, as well as the location of the building. It was tentatively suggested that Baldwin House, the present home of the History Department be given to the SAC for the purpose of a Co-ed Building.

Committee Chosen

Plans for a Student Union were first proposed in 1947. Through the efforts of SAC president, Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, a SAC Committee for a Student Union was set up last year and various widespread committees across the campus investigated the possibilities of a Union. Student polls were taken, and a list of recommendations based on these reports was drawn up. Various items on the "must" list include a lobby with an information desk which can double as a ticket booth, a main co-ed lounge and two separate lounges for men and women, which can be converted into ball rooms, a cafeteria, and a coffee shop as well as offices for the different

Communist Actions Hurt Labor's Aims Debaters Decide

By a vote of 55 to 4, members of Trinity College Literary Institute agreed in debate last night that "the activities of Communism are detrimental to the interests of Labor."

Press in Red

The debate featured two "exchange students from the University of Pinsk", "David Blok" and "George DeRezke", who opposed the motion. They wore wide mustaches and bright red shirts and ties.

Main speaker for the affirmative was John Hladun, self-styled former member of the Communist Party and author of "They Taught Me Treason".

Hladun said the present Russian economic system is a "state capitalism". "Before the revolution in Russia the objects of the Communist Party were idealistic," he stated. "But afterwards there was a change. Russian Communists met problems they had not expected. The workers had to be made to produce. Now everything is monopolized and the worker is adjusted to the state."

Becomes Imperialist

Hladun claimed Russia can never improve the position of her workers because she cannot under her present system produce the surplus necessary for economic progress. Faced with this problem, Russia had embarked upon a program of imperialist expansion and exploitation.

To aid her in this program, Russia had sought the aid of labor in the lands of her adversaries. Hladun said he was trained in Lenin University to carry out these plans regarding labor.

"We were told our aim was to create friction between labor and capitalists," he continued. "Every strike was to be a rehearsal for further unrest. We were never to be satisfied, but must always ask for more."

Apologizes

Speaking for the opposition, Blok apologized that "the great leaders Mr. Buck and Mr. Endicott were not able to come, because of orders from higher up."

Blok questioned the desire of the worker for freedom. Security is what labor desires, he said.

Michael Hicks, first speaker for the affirmative, explained he would criticize Communism from the socialist point of view. He said Communist labor leaders destroy control by the rank and file and accept the inevitibility of violence. "The socialist revolution going on in Western Europe and Britain proves them wrong," he stated.

DeRezke termed Hladun criticisms of Russia "just prejudice".

Commenting on a statement by Hladun that Russia had repudiated her public bond issues at the end of the Second World War, DeRezke said, "I wouldn't worry. I understand Russia is going off the ruble."

No Frat Changes Bissell Assures Worried Students

Rumors that the University of Toronto might curtail the activities of fraternal organizations were dispelled yesterday by Dean Bissell.

In an interview, the Dean said that although the matter is of considerable importance, he saw no indications of any new regulations being imposed.

"The issue of fraternity controls has not been raised at all," said the Dean, "and I have no knowledge of any impending changes."

On the situation as a whole, the present fraternity regulations, and the regulations imposed at the University of Western Ontario, Dean Bissell did not make any comment.

Local Worry

The fraternity members at Varsity began to worry about their own regulations when they read about the crack-down on frats at Western.

The University of Western Ontario applied new rules to their fraternities governing the number and variety of dances, informal evenings, and post-game tea dances. Hereafter, chaperones must be at all frat affairs, and women will be allowed to be in the fraternity houses only four times per year. Open house on Saturday nights has been eliminated and the amount of liquor controlled.

Frats Make Friends

Bill Reynolds, President of the Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity, said: "The purpose of a fraternity is to make good friends. Fraternities are not primarily social clubs but their functions are important."

Bill French, former Western student and Globe and Mail reporter, said that the main point in favour of fraternities is that the members could have their girls in for social evenings without spending any money.

In the future, however, all such evenings will be eliminated even though there are no university residences at Western.

A spokesman for Delta Kappa Epsilon said: "The Dekes are the life of the Western week-end but now they won't even be able to have a party after the rugby game."

Fraternity men in general felt that the restrictions were extremely severe, that the university was "laying it on the line pretty heavily" and that the restrictions would mean the end of fraternities at Western.

Toronto fraternities, who showed great concern over the possibility of having these rules imposed at Varsity, had their fears proven groundless by Dean Bissell's statement.

Kallinike

Greek Hero Will Open Pep Rally

Full details for the opening Pep Rally and Street Dance of the season, to be held on the campus tomorrow night, have been announced by Bill Turner, chairman of the Blue and White Society. "This will undoubtedly be one of the best campus events in the year", he noted, adding that KALLINIKE (pronounced Kal-in-ik-kay) Bob Masterson and the Big Blues, the Varsity Cheer-leaders and the Blue and White and Pipe Bands, a giant victory bonfire, and fireworks would be featured throughout the evening.

"KALLINIKE himself will be the central figure at the Pep Rally," Turner said. "The name KALLINIKE is that of one of the first Greek athletes, and when translated into English means "Oh Triumphant". It is for this reason that the Blue and White Society have revived Kallinike, and have set him up as a figurehead to represent in one personage the united and triumphant Varsity Spirit which is going to guide the Big Blues through another championship season.

With Kallinike as a focal point, and rallying cry, the Big Blues should sweep the league this year. Since Kallinike's triumphant arrival on the campus Wednesday, Varsity spirit has been at an all-time high, and should result in a really explosive Pep Rally on Friday night."

Proceedings will get under way on the back campus at 8.30 p.m. with the arrival of the bands and the firing of the Skule Cannon. Between cheers and songs, Bob Masterson and his Big Blues will be introduced to the crowd. Kallinike will then appear, and in his position as figure-head of the united and triumphant Varsity spirit, he will throw an effigy of "Golden Gael" from Queen's, into the giant bonfire. Following Kallinike there will be a monstrous fireworks display.

Immediately after the fireworks and bonfire, a torchlight snake dance, led by the cheerleaders and the bands will set out along Hoskin Ave. Following around the east loop of Queen's Park and in front of the Parliament buildings, the snake dance will wind to Convocation Hall. Inspector Chisholm of the Toronto city police expressed his pleasure at the proposed route, and assured the Blue and White Society that the snake dance as planned will have the full support of the police.

In front of Convocation Hall, decorations, by courtesy of the T. Eaton Co. Ltd., will have transformed the street into a rustic autumn scene, complete with wall murals, hay mows, sheaves of corn, and a white picket fence around the dancing area. Music will be provided by an 8-piece dance band playing from a stage on the steps of Convocation Hall, and will be broadcast over the best portable P.A. system in Toronto, it was assured by John Bain of the Blue and White Society. Bain emphasized that the dance itself is FREE to all comers.

So let's get behind KALLINIKE and support the Big Blues! You can come stag or in couples. There's absolutely no charge for a terrific evening, at the Pep Rally and Street Dance on the Back Campus, tomorrow night at 8.30 p.m. See you there!

No Editor For "Tricolor" Alma Mater To Manage Queen's Magazine Safe

Kingston, Oct. 4 —(CUP)— Unable to find a full-time editor to head the "Tricolor," Queen's magazine, the Alma Mater Society executive have decided until further notice, that executive members will serve as a volunteer staff.

At a Tuesday meeting, the executive decided that further delay in publication might mean the end of the magazine. Hence the executive plan to take over.

The problem started with the graduation of all of last year's staff. Even though the position of editor is well paid, no applications have been forthcoming.

ART — MUSIC — DRAMA

People Like Us

People like us were somewhat disappointed with "People Like Us" which opened Tuesday evening at the Royal Alexandra, starring Ann Dvorak and Sidney Blackmer. Advance reviews based on the performance given by the English cast were highly favorable and commended the play as thrilling and dramatic. For its Canadian debut, the cast, even more-so than the play, failed to measure up to this standard.

The London murder scandal, the notorious Thompson-Bywaters case, was background material for the plot. The story revolves around a woman whose world of dreams is more real to her than the everyday world. She is like a fly finally caught in the web of its own imagination.

To tell lies seemed as vivid as to tell the truth to her, but how was her lover to know that her bizarre plans for killing her husband were merely figments of her imagination too?

The wonderful opportunities for dramatic moments must have readily presented themselves to the author and, on the whole, the lines are credible but the scene in which the lover's mother tearfully urges the erring heroine to "give up her son and set her poor boy free" is a notable exception to credibility.

This sense of unreality was further increased by the actors' performances. One continually remembered that one was in the theatre; there was little self-indentification with the drama. There were too many melodramatic gestures that detracted from the plausibility of the action. Some of the dramatic touches were most effective, such as an involuntary shudder of revulsion after Miss Dvork kisses a man with whom she only imagines herself to be in love. Unfortunately such touches were rare and widely interspersed with trite, unnecessary bits of staging.

Mr. Blackmer played the calm Mr. Carter with ease and charm and in her final scene Ann Dvorak was both moving and pathetic. The play opens shortly in New York.

U.C., it's this way...

Hello everybody! When the column tells you all about the meetings of the W.U.A. you'll know it's Paula and when it's newsy and humorous you'll know it's Bill. This week the first Open Meeting of the Women's Undergraduate Association is the most important event on the agenda for the women. At this meeting which will be held next Wednesday at 4 in the Women's Union Theatre not only the first year president and all her first year executive will be nominated but all year executives. Last spring the second, third and fourth year presidents were elected and now each year will elect a Literary Director to look after the Portia Debates, an Athletic Director and a Publicity Director. You've got to be there to nominate so make it a date to be at the Women's Union Theatre next Wednesday, that's October 12, at 4 p.m.

The men are having their first Open Meeting of the year next week too, in fact, a day before the women. This meeting of the Literary and Athletic Society will be held in the J.C.R. next Tuesday at 7:30.

A new president must be nominated from the first year and also his executive which is composed of an athletic representative for first year and a secretary-treasurer. Also from first year an assistant secretary-treasurer of the "Lit" will be nominated. Besides the first year nominations there will be a discussion of the proposed amalgamation of the Lit and W.U.A. The budget which will have several changes in its general pattern will also be an important item on the agenda for the first meeting of the year.

The results of these nominations will be announced at the Soph-Frosh Banquet. The Soph-Frosh is the most important single event in the fall term for the first and second year students. It is a traditoin at U.C. and when the torch is handed down from the Sophs to the Frosh it signifies that the class of 5T3 has become a part of University College. After the banquet there will be dancing to the Stardusters Orchestra. The whole evening's entertainment costs you only $2 and from 7 p.m., when the dinner starts, until 1 a.m., when the dancing stops. It's going to be a night that you will never forget. Unfortunately there will be a limited supply of tickets so get yours early in the rotunda any day this week and next between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. The motto of the Soph-Frosh is "Come single, go home double."

Ward McAdam of the Music Club reports that the chorus tryouts for The Red Mill were amazing and that it was very difficult to choose the chorus with so many good singers turning out. Practices for the chorus will start this week for the Operetta which will be held December 5, 6 and 7.

"We're all for U.C." will be te new opening song of the 1949 Follies. This is a marvellous spirit builder to start the show off with a bang. There is still room for different script ideas and any contributions for amusing acts or songs will be eagerly accepted. The emphasis this year is going to be on slightly longer, and a greater number of musical comedy acts.

Bernard Tierney and his orchestra will provide the instrumental accompaniment. A retired army entertainment bandmaster, Tierney has organized the band to rehearse numbers well in advance of the show.

To aid the band there will be a new innovation of a 20-girl chorus to work with the orchestra in musical numbers behind stage.

Important notice for all members of cast. There will be rehearsals this Friday from 4-6, Monday from 4-6, Tuesday from 4-6, and at this rehearsal pictures will be taken and another rehearsal on Friday 4-6.

Jack Novitsky has called the first meeting of the Red and White Society for tomorrow at 4 in the J.C.R. The Red and White Society will in U.C. correspond to the Blue and White Society of the University of Toronto. Phil Downie has the rugby team pretty well chosen and has high hopes for its success. Through the Red and White Society Jack hopes to find cheerleaders to encourage the team to victory and the Mulock Cup. Some reports have been heard that U.C. lacks spirit. The Red and White Society intends to show that U.C. students are loyal to their college and do support its activities.

The Pan-Hellenic Association has donated a new cup for Women's sports in the College. The cup which the president of Pan-Hell, Margot Murray, will present to Jane Ratz at the Open meeting of the W.U.A. next Wednesday will be given annually to the woman who contributes most to college athletics in her undergraduate years. This beautiful cup will be kept in the new W.U.A. cabinet for Athletic trophies in the U.C. Rotunda. Each winner of the trophy will receive a small replica and her name will be engraved on the large cup. The Pan-Hellenic cup for women may be compared with the Cody cup for men.

Remember the Fun Fest and Barn Dance? I know two weeks ago seems like two months ago but it seems that everyone had a wonderful time, and Presidents Jack Hoolihan and Jane Ratz want to thank Eaton's and Simpson's for all their support and co-operation in supplying the decorations.

Before we go a wee reminder, Don't Forget the Open Meetings, the Lit on Tuesday and the W.U.A. on Wednesday.

We'll be back after Thanksgiving. Have a wonderful week-end.

Paula Zumstein,
W.U.A. Publicity Director.

MacLennan emphasized the fact that such a building would in no way interfere with Hart House or with the proposed Women's Building. "We plan to have no duplication in the new building," he said. For instance, the theatre in the Union will house the various undergraduate shows, and leave Hart House free to seek professional groups. And as Hart House has excellent swimming facilities, these will not need to be a part of the new building.

The SAC Committee for the Student Union Memorial Building Committee will meet as soon as possible to discuss further plans for this year.

Buck pointed out he would be pleased to debate Communism at the University if invited by the students or the authorities, but that he was not going to assist in publicizing the activity of a man who is without standing in the Canadian Labour movement.

Lastly, Mr. Buck debated at Hart House on the topic of the policy and record of Communists and was vindicated by a good majority of the House.

Roman Comedy "Rope" Presented By Trinity At Hart House Theatre

On the Hart House stage tonight, Friday and Saturday a Roman comedy will be produced for the first time in many years. The play is the RUDENS (The Rope) by Plautus, in an English verse translation by Prof. E. A. Dale which preserves the metres of the original. Under the direction of Prof. Dale and Prof. Scriven of Trinity College, the cast and chorus which is largely composed of undergraduates will raise the curtain tonight at 8:30. Original music has been composed especially for the show by S. Keith MacMillan, famous for the scores of Trinity musicals.

Many students will remember the presentation, two years ago, of Prof. Dale's translation of Sophocles' Antigone. He has again demonstrated his efficiency as a translator of the classics with this version of comedy by Plautus which goes far to recreate the humour and vigour of the original.

Regrettable Mistakes

(Reprinted from the McGill Daily of Sept. 30)

One of the most remarkable cases in the "open season" on university students was the recent arrest and detention of a University of Toronto co-ed in New York.

Daughter of a noted Canadian artist and vice-president of the Students Administrative Council of Toronto, Miss Ruth Comfort was detained in a cell on Ellis Island when she returned from a trip to Europe where she attended a seminar instructed by outstanding faculty members from various Canadian universities including McGill.

The U.S. State Department has now apologized to Miss Comfort, declaring that she was detained "as the result of a most regrettable and unfortunate mistake."

There seems to be little doubt that secret agents of the United States, who took it upon themselves to investigate Canadians on the ship, made a blunder. But there are several disturbing aspects of the case which require more explanation.

United States agents could have learned the nature of the project she attended from such people as Prof. J. Corry and Dr. A. R. M. Lower of Queen's or Geoffrey Pearson, son of Lester B. Pearson, Minister of External Affairs, all of whom were in Miss Comfort's party. There was no need to place her in a cell to investigate the seminar which they attended.

While detaining Miss Comfort, agents of the United States asked her how she voted in the last election. Now we think it should be made quite clear to the United States government that voting in Canada is by secret ballot and not even an officer of the law has any right to demand information on the manner in which a person votes.

The whole case, of course, throws further light on the fact that U.S. agents appear to be going to considerable trouble to check on the activities of Canadian students. They have been gathering data on Canadian university students for the past few years.

For example, if a student were affiliated with a leftist organization on a Canadian campus some years ago but had given up this political leaning upon graduation, he would find it difficult if not impossible to now cross into the United States. Further evidence of this was obtained by The McGill Daily recently when a young woman was refused admittance to the United States because of campus political affiliations of several years ago.

It would be interesting to know how many secret agents of the United States are attending Canadian universities as "students". This appears to be a fantastic suggestion, of course, but how was it the U.S. had a file on Miss Comfort? Has the U.S. a file on every Canadian student?

Unless there is a change in policy south of the border, we do not think this will be the last "most regrettable and unfortunate mistake."

but it would very likely aggravate the ideological basis of communism around the entire globe, and thus, in post-war times of moral ruin and mental confusion, the Western world would have made her problems far worse than they are now. Unfortunately, the present policy seems to be following this direction, at least, insofar as it is now a policy to bar students who, like myself, are trying to discover valid alternatives to war. I know, though the Immigration Office would not admit it, that I was barred for interest I took last year and this spring in the Canadian Peace Congress. The Immigration knew perfectly well that I am not a Communist and I made it plain that I differ with them fundamentally in my philosophy of life and my methods of approaching life. I have never been at a Communist party meeting in my life and happen to have supported the CCF in the provincial and dominion elections, although I belong to no political party. My interest in peace does not stem from Russian foreign policy — it is the natural reaction to the death of a close companion in the last war and first-hand contact with the Japanese bombing in West China. I am certain that history will mark us for failure if we continue to submerge freedom and let war hysteria, instead of facts and reason, direct our course through these difficult times .I believe the United Nations will succeed in keeping world peace and I wish some of the leaders in the West would calm down, and read Jefferson's First Inaugural Address.

Hladun Denies

Editor, The Varsity.

I should like to throw a little light on your lead article of Oct. 4. John Hladun was misrepresented, in view of the fact he has never been a member of the LPP, and was dropped from the Communist Party in the early 30's, for incompetence. His present activities at the U. of T. stem from his need for publicity as an "anti-Communist expert" in a non-election period. Students interested in verifying the facts should locate a copy of "his" paper "The Worker" which is adequately self exposing — I suggest the issue of Aug. 21, 1949.

I regret being unable to attend the Trinity Debate to which I was so kindly invited. However, I cannot be in two places at once, and as a Committee member will attend the Hart House Debate on the same night. I had earlier withdrawn from the Trinity debate when I learned that Mr. Hladun had phoned Mr. Buck and suggested supporting me in debate, before I had even heard of the debate. Mr.

Hya kiddies—you dogs! And by this I refer to the so-called "senior" years, namely third and fourth years. Why, oh why did it fall to my lot to have to chastise you yolts, and get you to come out for a sport. S'help me, it's like beating your head against Hart House's wall, and just as profitable. Why can't you schlemiels be like the soph-frosh aggregation, and volunteer, instead of having to be coaxed.

Before I forget, I am at present referring to those sterling, he-man games of soccer and lacrosse, with a little water-polo thrown in for those who like them wet. Those sports are coming up on the sked very, very soon, and hardly anyone has turned out. Why don't about 30 or 40 of youse guys take a gander at the notice board, ask a few intelligent questions, gather your mighty muscles together to impress the coach, and show up to help win that Reed Trophy. This way I'm getting ulcers from frustration.

Now for a topic of the moment—the all-important Harrier races: Freshmen, Junior and Senior. One by one, the story goes like this, Freshmen race on the back campus some Saturday quite soon. The map of the course and all the info you need are posted up in the Athletic wing of Hart House, and the walk up there will do you good. The junior race should be run off a week from Saturday, and all undergrads who haven't been in intercollegiate races or who have placed in the first ten of a senior race are eligible.. P.T. credits are given for Harrier, and there is all sorts of instruction available up at the Stadium daily from 4 p.m. on. All undergrads are eligible for the Senior race, which is held at High Park early in November. All you have to do to get in on these races is sign up at the Interfaculty Office in Hart House, get your medical, and turn up come race time.

The Harrier is one sport where we can pile up a bunch of those Reed points with a large entry. Other colleges do it, let's not be left out in the cold.

Before the cold winds really start blowing in earnest, the Junior and Senior Track meets will be run off at the Stadium. The eligibility laws are similar to those for the Harrier, and there is all sorts of info on the notice boards in Skule about times, places, events and all the rest. This is one type of activity that almost anyone can get into, so surprise your, Executive for once and pile out for the Track meets. There is a small but potent experienced nucleus of stars who will probably do well, but as usual the rank and file of the team is wide open, and at the present time, quite empty. Once again, don't be afraid to ask questions anywhere, we're all brodders here, and you won't be thought stupid, even though you may be just that..

Time out for a lecture: I'll finish this during lunch, wait for me, there is a lot more gen stuff coming up . . . .

Old man Injury bit the junior football team Tuesday, when Al Bulock, star quarterback of Davey Munroe's squad broke his collarbone in tackling practise. Tough luck, Al, but we're all plugging for your fast recovery.

The football and soccer skeds start next week, with the Seniors playing Meds on Wednesday, and the juniors jousting cum Trinity on Friday. A tune-up game with Waterloo College on Thanksgiving Day has been arranged and seventeen stalwarts from each squad will make the trip.

Soccer also starts next week with the seniors playing U.C. on Tuesday any and the Juniors "heading" it with Forestry on Friday.

That's about the 3-oh mark for this week except for the small reminder that your illustrious presence is requested for those games next week. Remember, those spectators make a big difference to a team.

VARSITY SPORTS

McGill Much Stronger; May Surprise Mustangs

With the Intercollegiate football season so close at hand it might be well to take a look at what the various universities say that they have in the way of a team this year.

WESTERN

Western are busy preparing for their season opener with McGill in London this Saturday. Coach John Metras says that he is confident that the Mustangs will hold their own—provided that the injury jinx doesn't continue to ride them herd. At present Big Blake Taylor is the only Mustang that will be riding the bench come Saturday. Captain Jack Parry in the Sarnia game was very impressive making yards time and again through the heavy Imperial team.

McGILL

Vic Obeck of McGill is singing the blues in print about the terrific looking team that Western reputedly has. He was recently down in London and came back with an itemized account of just how good the Mustangs are. From reports he became positively haggard when he started to talk about the Western backs. Obeck is making no predictions however about the outcome of Saturday's game in London, but there s a decided opinion in Montreal that they may have a surprise in store for the Purple Tide.

QUEEN'S

The Golden Gaels of Queen's are an unknown quantity in the league. Frank Tyndall, coach of the outfit has all-star quarter Al Lenard back, together with speedy Ross McKelvey. The Queen's suffered a stunning loss last week at the hands of the intermediate McMaster Rams. They were downed 7-5 and no excuses.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

'ACORNS AND ETC.: . . . Our intermediates take on the McMaster Rams this Friday aft at Varsity Stadium for the opening scrap of the season. With the Rams knocking the Queen's seniors around and about, Coach Bark has his worries. However, he got some welcome material from Bob Masterson when the senior squad was cut to legal proportions so it will be a battle worth watching. Varsity kicked the bejabbers out of the Rams last year but Bernie Taylor has improved his squad no end, so our boys will have their hands full to win. It has always been a source of amazement to this department why students will knock themselves out trying to get tickets to a senior game, but won't go to an intermediate scramble where the play is only very slightly under senior quality. And admission is free, too.

Pete Bennett is back in the Blue line-up after an enforced rest occasioned by a snafu-ed knee. Masterson will really have the boys going Saturday . . . . no more taking Queen's lightly after last year's loss. The Queen's publicity release speaks highly of the Gaels in spite of their loss to the Rams, but as Masterson says, if you'd read enough of those releases, you'd die of worry. See tomorrow's column for the winner of Saturday's game.

The highest scoring senior rugby game recorded in the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union's files took place on October 22, 1922; Toronto whipped McGill 51-5. And McGill's lone score was disputed. The only team to get the better of Toronto in football is Queen's, who have won 27 from Varsity while losing 21. But on the other hand, Toronto has held the Yates Cup seventeen times, five more than the Gaels.

Barry Lowes is holding his Freshman Basketball College at Hart House this week; from five to six, you future basketball stars! His junior basketball team made an excellent showing last year, and almost copped the city championship. Barry has that optimistic coach's pre-season look now, and thinks they'll have a hot team come the snows.

The Dean of the Medical School refused to cut classes for the Meds to attend their field day at the Stadium with the result that only about fifty attended. In answer to many who have asked, both him and us, Mike Dumbeliuk's full name is (take a deep breath): Alexei Mihail Wolodomir Haroldescu Cowperthwaite-d'UmbellCount Dumbeliuk de Romanovsky-Brassovsky-Holstein Gottorp. Must be a long-distance runner.

The intramural tennis tournament is down to about the semi-finals, although with flights and the rest of the complicated set-up, it's hard to tell. It won't be completed until after the senior tournaments. The sports ed of the Queen's Journal called the Gaels to win by thirty points from the Rams. Boy! Did he put his foot in his mouth! Now he is calling for a close game with Varsity but says nothing about who will win. Let's hope his average is kept up.

Tee Off Time In Interfac Golf Tourney

Sixty-five happy divoteers left the first tee yesterday as the annual intramural golf tourney got underway at St. Andrews Golf Club. The tournament will continue today, and Friday, winding up on Saturday. Large numbers are expected to compete with eighty-five to tee off today and other seventy-five to eighty should make their start Friday.

This meet is open to all undergraduates who are members of the athletic association except those who are members of the current senior or intermediate team by virtue of placing in the top seven of the qualifying round.

Entries will not be accepted now as the stipulations made were that the contestant must sign at least 48 hours before the start of the tournament. The draws were and will be made in foursomes and can be learned at the intramural office as well as the starting times.

The contestants will smack their way across eighteen holes and winter rules shall apply. When inquiry was put concerning the meaning of winter rulings it was pointed out that lies could be improved and one-putts conceded on icy greens.

The four lowest gross scores from a college or faculty will be totalled to determine members of a team and a team championship. The score cards must be turned in to a member of the Standing Committee on duty in the clubhouse. Green fees are 50 cents and are assessed to the student's college or faculty.

New Classifications Reed Trophy Race

The Interfaculty Sports Committee has handed down the official point classifications of the various colleges and faculties for the Reed Trophy competition this year. The committee was unanimous in their decisions on all the groupings and decided further that no bonusing of the type that was used formerly to balance certain discrepancies in the enrollment of different contesting bodies. These discrepancies were brought on by the war influx which has now died down.

In group AA, all by themselves, is Skule while the A group has Vic, UC and Meds. Trinity, St. Mike's and Dents comprise the B group with Forestry the lone member of the C category. Section D is the largest, listing Emmanuel, Wycliffe, Pharmacy, Knox, Inst. Mgt., Architecture and the new School of Law.

Fem Racketeers' First Round Over

Wet courts almost caused another delay in the Women's Intramural Tennis play-offs. However sweepers cleaned the leaves and water from the St. Hilda's courts and the first round was completed yesterday.

The results are as follows: Muriel Chinn, UC, defeated Wilma Johnston, Physio, (6-0, 6-0); Sheila West, Nursing, defeated Joyce Atkinson, Trinity, (3-6, 6-3, 6-3); Ev. Aiken, Vic, defeated Helen Cannon, St. Mike's, (6-1, 6-2); Bunny MacPherson, PHE, defeated Marg Dodd, UC, (6-2, 6-2); Joan Cowan, Nursing, defeated Fran O'Brien, St. Mike's, (6-0, 6-2); Bev. Downey, Vic, defeated Virginia Gundy, UC, (3-6, 6-3, 6-3); Alma Hatch, PHE, defeated Ruth Day, St. Mike's, (6-0, 6-1); Lib Mackay, UC, defeated Marilyn Jones, Trinity, (6-3, 6-2); Anne Cowan, Nursing, defeated Helen Southcott, St. Mike's, (default); Virginia James, PHE, defeated Libby Little, Physio, (6-3, 3-6, 9-7).

One match was played in the second round with Barb Allmond, Trinity, defeating Eleanor Blake, Vic, (6-1, 6-3).

SOCCER LEAGUE STARTS

The intramural soccer league gets off to a booming start this afternoon, when Trinity I play Sr. Vic. on the front campus. Trinity are the defending champions and it is reported that they have another strong entry this year. These games are not famed for having record-breaking crowds but those who do take them in will agree that they are an exceptionally fascinating sports event.

U. of Montreal Second; Anderson Loses Singles

The singles event in the senior intercollegiate tennis tournament started yesterday afternoon at the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club. McGill University jumped into an early first day lead winning three of the five singles matches for three points. University of Montreal took the other two heats for two points and Varsity were in the third and last place with no points.

Tuesday's heavy rainstorm made morning as scheduled and the singles didn't get started until around noon. Late in the afternoon the doubles got underway but complete results were not available at press time. The weather in the afternoon was bright and cool, making for perfect conditions.

The best match of the day from a spectator's view-point was the one between Len Turner of Varsity and Raymond Page of the Montreal Carabins. Page's blistering serves pretty well kept Len off balance most of the sets, but Turner managed to win the second set 5-7. Page took the other two sets 6-4, 6-3.

Turner seemed to be having some difficulty with his serves, double faulting often.

Another torrid match was the Art Anderson, Hammie Quain set to. Anderson was the favourite due to the fact that he was the defending singles champion. He took the first set easily beating the McGill man 2-6. However, his smaller opponent fought on tenaciously and grabbed off the next two sets 6-4, 6-2. Anderson seemed to be off his usual steady game, observers noted.

The second round of the singles starts this morning. The players that played yesterday will play one more match and the singles entries that didn't go yesterday will play two today. Jack Little, Art Anderson ad Len Turner were the Varsity entrants yesterday. Ernie Howard and Jack Dawes will each play two matches this morning.

Anderson and Turner will team up in the doubles as will Little and Dawes. The tournament will continue today and tomorrow.

Yesterday's Results

Simpson (McGill) beat Little (Varsity) 6-3, 6-3.

Labrie (Montreal) beat Ollivier (McGill) 2-6, 7-5, 6-4.

Cain (McGill) beat Panneton (Montreal) 6-1, 3-6, 6-2.

H. Quain (McGill) beat Anderson (Varsity) 2-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Of the doubles' results that were in at post time we have:

Turner and Anderson beat Faguy and Panneton (University of Montreal) 6-4, 8-6.

Howard and Little (Varsity) lost to Mike Cain and Paul Ollivier (McGill) 6-3, 9-7.

Parle and Labrie beat Little and Howard 6-0, 6-4.

Sportswoman

Using an old Varsity and a rock as a home-plate, PHE I easily defeated UC I by a score of 13-3 yesterday noon on the Trinity field.

Star of the game was Merry Cochrane, who not only pitched an excellent game for PHE, but brought in two runs off two singles as well.

Fizz Ed shone in the hitting department with fifteen hits and two walks in twenty-four times at bat. UC had the spirit, but lacked the fielding ability it takes to win against such competition.

In the game between St. Mike's and PHE II Betty Jane Fraser, St. Mike's pitcher, was injured when a ball hit her between the eyes.

The game was called by umpire Joan Hume and will be played at a later date. Actually Betty Jane was the all-important player of the St. Mike's team.

The game between PHE IV and Vic II which was defaulted last Tuesday will be played next Tuesday.

on the sideline

By CONN SPARROW

After talking sports, writing sports and even dreaming sports ever since we came back from the land of the pine trees and rocky lakes, we decided to take a look-see and collect some extra facts.

Yesterday's bright sun and blue sky was a welcome as we started out on our "roamaround of sports."

The first stop was Varsity Stadium with Miss Slack and her able Robin Hoods. Targets were set up on the fifty yard line, while the girls took aim back on the one yard line.

Sounds like a long way to try to hit that bull's eye, but the girls move closer each round, consisting of three volleys of arrows.

Saw Helen Prendergast, St. Mike's, plant a willing shaft on the "nine spot" in the second round. As yet the archers are finding this business a little stiffening, but after all it takes a pull of about thirty pounds to shoot an arrow and this all adds up after an hour of practice.

Miss Slack feels that there will be a good team this year and she is pleased with the enthusiastic group that come out — Mondays, Wednesdays and Thurdays.

Bumped into Pat Montgomery, President of Tennis this year, between the Stadium and Trinity field. Pat is in the midst of the intramural tennis championships and stated that the first round was finished, with the other rounds to be completed tomorrow.

Finally we got to the softball game, cheered on by groups of men and women who never agree with the umpires' decisions. However, the game between St. Mike's and PHE II ended abruptly when Betty Jane Fraser, up to bat, was hurt.

We had a few minutes to talk to Cay Catto, basketball head, before she went back to a lab. Evidently practices will continue all next week and games will begin Monday, October 17.

There will be three leagues of four teams each and two leagues both containing five teams, making the grand total of 22 teams and five leagues.

The Freshie team at St. Hilda's needs some more members, so come on kids, get out and support your college. As far as the other teams are concerned there is still a chance to be a member.

One thing we did notice on our little jaunt was that whether you're playing a game or just standing "on the sideline," you're there, you're with your friends and you're having fun!

Skulemen Mustered, Medsmen Flustered, Cannon Stands Pat

"We have no secret society organized for the purpose of stealing the Skule cannon," said Meds Society President Bob Hetherington last night when he learned of the engineers call to arms.

"They must be worried if they feel they must guard it so closely. We Medsmen do not have to summon a guard, the spirit of the faculty is better than ever before. We won't start anything but won't quit first if anything is started."

When Sid Wax was questioned about this, he said that the idea of the engineers being able to hold on to anything but a bottle of beer seemed very difficult to visualize.

"Skule's presumptuous statements are contrary to real fact: (1) Meds did get the cannon; (2) Medsmen held the cannon until they tired of the unequal battle; (3) the pleadings of the engineers were enough to melt the hearts of the Medsmen, and the cannon was returned out of pity for the frantic Skules, and (4) as any Pass Arts co-ed can tell you, history repeats itself."

The Skule cannon will come out of temporary seclusion Saturday afternoon at the first Intercollegiate rugby game of the year. In the meantime it is under close guard, resting in the iron-clad depths of a locked safe in the Engineering Society office.

On all public appearances this year the cannon will be under the care of a corps of hardy mining students, suitably garbed in hard hats and toe-guard boots. The secretary of the society has assured us that there will not be a recurrence of last year's tragic incident, when the Medsmen captured the cannon and held it for some days. In case of emergency, the Engineers have a reserve force of two hundred students of Mining and Metallurgy, eager to show that they can carry more than the traditional forty beers.

Another note of interest revealed in the press release yesterday was the addition of a new ingredient to the already powerful powder used for the explosion.

The society feels that no one will be able to get past their reinforced defense, and asserts that Skule spirit is stronger than ever before.

Varsity Lecture

First in a series of weekly lectures on news writing will be held in Room II, University College, Tuesday, October 11, at 1 p.m.

"News Writing: First Principles" will be the subject of the lecture to be given by the Varsity News Editor. All interested are invited.

Members of the makeup staff are also requested to attend.

English Books Harmful Student Dislocates Jaw

Vancouver.—(CUP)—A Senior Arts student here found a few days ago that studies can sometimes be very disconcerting.

He looked up from an English text book, stretched and gave a hearty yawn. Suddenly he bounded from his seat and staggered from the library clutching his jaw.

At the Health Service hut a nurse informed him that the yawn had dislocated his jaw.

KEEP 'EM STANDING, STEM GAELSTORM!

Rumors are flying thick and fast regarding arrangement being made to 'protect' Varsity Stadium from rival invasions this wek-end.

The Blue and White society, who are in charge of 'Operation Gaelstorm' refuse to make known any of their plans for reasons of security at this time.

Nevertheless, the Stadium and University campus will be closely guarded on both Friday and Saturday nights, but just how this is to be done is a deep dark secret.

'Adequate steps have been taken to protect both the Etadium and the Campus', revealed Terry Jaeger, Director of Defense. But when asked just what the adequate steps were, Terry's only comment was 'No Comment'.

A late press-time release from Blue and White officials revealed that there would be no change in their very hush-hush operations.

No More Hips For Western Cheers

London, October 6.—(CUP)—The day of the axe has arrived for Western's drum majorettes.

The powers-that-be have decided that there will be no more hip-swinging at Mustang games.

One pretty youngster lost out in a contest to choose the current crop of talent because one of the professor-judges claimed he found her hip swinging objectionable.

'Stonewall' Jones Blues' Snapback Chosen Captain

Archie Jones, snap-back of the Big Blues, has been elected captain of this year's team. He beat out three other nominees for the position.

Archie's football history goes back to 1935, when he played for Trinity College School, where he won his first team colors for hockey, cricket and gymnastics. He also plays tennis, squash and golf, as well as being an avid ski enthusiast.

After his demobilization from the RCNVR in 1946, Archie entered Forestry at Varsity and tried out for the Blues. He has been with them ever since, starting as an end, moving from there into the line, and finally to snap. He carries no rabbit's foot, relying solely on his 195 pounds to carry him through.

Although his is a sort of honorary position, Archie says that the captain has the last word on decisions made on the field. He does not call the plays in a game

In the summertime, Arch does the required Forestry field work, and says he might be sent "anywhere there are trees".

When asked for a prediction on the outcome of the Big Four season, Archie said, "The Blues will definitely be heard from again".

Ticket Sale Heavy 20,000 Fans Are Expected At Game

By JOHN KENNEDY

The Blues, the cheer-gals, the Blue Band, the Queen's Pipe Band, Stella McCord, and last but not least the Queen's Golden Gaels will be on view to-morrow at the local intercollegiate senior football opener.

Yes, the fever is on, as once again the most enjoyable semester of college life gets really under way. The Athletic Office has been long out of tickets and scores of luckless students are now wishing that they had had the foresight and the necessary funds to buy those handy books of tickets that were on sale earlier in the term. At the last report from the Athletic Office, the crowd for the first game was estimated at 19,823.

Big Blues Ready

Thursday night the Blues went through a long practice session and wound up with a tough scrimmage against the intermediates, who incidentally are playing the strong McMaster entry this afternoon at the stadium. That the teams went all out is evidenced by the fact that Al Stevenson picked up a slight shoulder injury. However he is expected to be all right by game time, as the wing is responding to heat treatments.

Gigantic Pete Bennett's ankle is all right now as is Bruce Cummings' sore shoulder. Jack Gray's ankle is ready for action: the only player that has not been going through heavy practice is the Vaughan Road star, Murray Hadlow, who also has a bad ankle.

Coach Not Worried

Coach Bob Masterson did not seem unduly worried about the outcome of the game but remarked that it would be a really tough game. He went on to say that "any time that Queen's plays Toronto you can throw out past performances. They will come out like a bunch of tigers. Those guys would rather beat Toronto than any other team in the loop."

Recalling last year's two games with the Gaels, Masterson said, "I sure hope that it doesn't come up mud, because on a wet field the team's chances are usually evened up. They will make it a tough game but we'll be ready for them." It will be recalled that in last year's Queen's game here, on a wet field the Queensmen beat the locals 8-6. In the return engagement in Kingston, Varsity got some satisfaction in a 4-0 win. Bruce Cummings' kicking that day saved the game for the Blues. That particular day it rained the proverbial cats and dogs.

Popular veteran Archie Jones is the new captain of the Blues. Further information on Arch is reported elsewhere on these pages.

Horseplay and Vigilantes

The team this year is really serious about their football and not much horseplay is evident, as is so often the case with an aggregation of athletic young males. However, after the game to-morrow, they are having a little party at one of the frat houses. Another team plan is a trip to Buffalo in the near future to watch the Buffalo Bills in action.

It is reported that the Blue and White Society has organized a band of vigilantes to guard the University and the stadium against the marauding Queen's fans. Last year the inmates of the Kingston institution managed to splatter yellow paint on parts of the stadium. Up and at 'em loyal fans.

MANITOBA DROPS RUGBY

Winnipeg, Oct. 4—(CUP)—All intercollegiate football plans have been scrapped here.

Lack of money was the prime reason, according to Athletic Director Wray Youmans of Manitoba, for the change in plan. To replace the usual inter-Varsity games, the Athletic Directorate are sponsoring six man interfaculty teams.

Style of play in the new teams cleaves closely to the American tradition, with 15 yards for a first down, four downs, all around eligibility for pass receiving, unlimited blocking, and style of scoring.

No Payne?

Football, in one form or another, goes back a long way. According to the historians the first actual mention of "football" is in Fitzstephen's 'History of London,' published about 1175.

Edward II prohibited it because it made too much noise, and later, under Henry VIII, Elizabeth, and the Stuarts, laws were enacted because of the brutal nature of the game.

Poets sang of it, and distinguished writers damned it. "Nothing but beastlie fury and extreme violence whereof proceedeth hurte and consequently rancour and malice" said Sir Thomas Elyot in the time of Henry VIII.

A Royalist poet, Edmund Waller (1606-1687) described it:

> "And now in winter when men kill the fat swine
> They get the bladder and blow it great and then
> ...Each one contendeth and hath a great delite
> With foot and hand the bladder for to smite.
> If it fall to the ground they lift it up again,
> And in this way to labour they count it no payne."

At Toronto football is not a new game. Sir William Mulock, late Chancellor of the University who graduated in Arts in 1863 once said, "we played football where the Parliament Buildings now stand." Neither the rules nor the ball were the same then as now. In 1879 the Varsity team played the University of Michigan. The game ended in a tie and a Detroit reporter wrote. "Football, of the old-fashioned kind, was exciting sport, because all the participants had an equal chance to become wearers of bruises, cuts, stiffened limbs and tattered clothing and because the game from the beginning to the end never stops its booming, rattling, tearing enthusiasm."

In 1898 The Intercollegiate Union was formed, and Dr. Henry Brydges Yates, a graduate of McGill presented the first Yates Cup. Toronto won the Yates cup that year. Since then they have chalked up an enviable record, bringing the Intercollegiate Championship here seventeen times.

Tomorrow the Blues take to the field against a traditional rival, Queen's, in their first match of a new season. There are few times in the year when the many sections of The University of Toronto stop grinding their individual small axes and get together. This is one.

When Bob Masterton's Blues appear in the stadium tomorrow there will be about 17,000 Varsity fans there to provide the "booming, rattling, tearing enthusiasm." We hope we can help the Blues to say: "And this way to labour we count it no payne!"

In a Pig's Eye

One of the most interesting things about writing for a newspaper is the hundreds and hundreds of letters you get from all kinds of fascinating people. Every day our mail box is just jammed with letters.

A lot of these letters are mimeographed sheets marked "News Release". The Editor tells me these are from people who are trying to get free publicity in the newspaper. He says they are Nasty People. But I don't believe everything he says.

Now take as example a letter I got this morning and I'll show you where the Editor is wrong in making these sweeping generalities.

This example is a letter or "release" from an organization calling itself the Health League of Canada. It isn't made clear whether they are in league with or against health but that really doesn't matter. Here is how the release reads in part:

"Psychologists haven't quite persuaded orthodontists that it is proper to let a child suck its thumb, says Dr. A. B. Winn of McGill University's Department of Orthodontics in an article — 'Orthodontics and Child Care' — in the current issue of HEALTH, Canada's National Health Magazine."

[illegible] the way. Just listen to this: "They" [illegible] ality, etc., etc."

I don't know how you feel about a thing like this but, personally, I'm not standing only by what somebody starts a discussion about my etc. If my etc is going to be affected then I want to be the first one to know about it. Pardon me if I seem to be getting worked up on this subject but I do feel very strongly about it and I'm grateful to the Health League for bringing it to my attention.

Getting back to what I was talking about, this letter goes on to say: "Dr. Winn" (have you forgotten already? Then read the fourth paragraph again) "Dr. Winn, suggests a lot of the blame for irregular teeth can be traced to civilization — the knife and fork, soft well-cooked foods."

Right here is where I have some personal evidence to submit. I make no claims as to having the most beautiful mouthful of molars [illegible] these parts, but I will say

Make Up For Lost Time At Post-Game Roamaround

Have you seen the campus recently by moonlight? If you haven't, you have something in store. This Saturday will give you the chance to make up for lost time. One of the clearest nights possible is forecast with the stars so near you can almost reach up and touch them. Boy! What a night for a roamaround

And that's exactly what is planned for this Saturady night. A vast roam-around embracing both Hart House gyms, the C.O.T.C. Drill Hall, Strachan Hall, JCR and O.T. huts if necessary, is planned for this Saturday. Music will be supplied by Stan Patton, Boyd Valleau, and others.

A dance such as this caters to all tastes. For instance, if you don't like the girls or the atmosphere at Strachan Hall you can take yourself over to Hart House gyms. And if need a coke drop into the Hart House Tuck shop; it will be open.

If you're one of those guys or gals who enjoy a change—Queen's have a big block of tickets sent down and will be at Saturday's dance in force.

Incidentally, these roam-around dances are one of the best ways of getting acquainted. What is more natural and straight forward than to suggest a nice walk over to J.C.R. You can stop to point out the beauties of this delightful autumn night.

They tell me Cassiopeia,, Ursa Major and Ursa Minor will be out but don't let that worry you. Tell her the story of Cassiopeia—bet she hasn't heard your version.

Now here's how you cut yourself in on this session. Open up the piggy bank, extract one dollar then hurry down and get your tickets. They're on sale at VCU office, Skule stores, SAC offices—men's and women's.

Montreal Wins Tennis McGill, Varsity Second Anderson Still Going

The University of Montreal won the senior intercollegiate tennis championship yesterday at the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club. The win gave the Montrealers their first title in twenty-five years. Varsity and McGill finished in a second place tie with six points each, trailing the new champs by three points.

The single and doubles championships will be played today. Art Anderson, Varsity's sole remaining singles competitor, will complete with Faguy and Page of Montreal, and Cain and H. Quain of McGill.

Anderson and Len Turner, the doubles champions, will again team up to defend their title against [illegible] and Labrie of Montreal in the [illegible] at 3.00 p.m. today.

Great Gains By Socialism States Winch

England, the socialist countries of Europe, and Israel, have made remarkable gains in their program for social security, stated British Columbia Opposition Leader Harold E. Winch, in an address to the U. of T. C.C.F. Club here Wednesday.

Security For All

Social security is reaching out to cover every phase of life in many countries of Europe, according to the C.C.F. leader. "In many housing schemes of Europe, the tenants pay three percent towards the building of their apartments. The rest is furnished by Credit Associations, on a 40-year repayment basis, and the national government. The cost for rental is extremely low, and the rate is reduced, as our own income tax, on the basis of number of dependents."

"Playgrounds for the children, and also facilities for the adults are an integral part of the unit, and separate houses in a special row are rented to the aged people at the rate of 75 cents per week." Mr. Winch commended especially the special facilities available for the children, the future adults of the country.

Children Helped

"In Denmark, any child who is being financially or morally undernourished in his present environment, is enrolled in the "Open Air School." A school bus takes him to and from the school every day. He is provided with all his meals, and every type of therapy and medical attention. Three walls and the ceiling of each classroom are made of glass, and on a fine day, are moved away to seat the class in the midst of a beautiful park." Winch felt that the general attitude of the socialist countries was that spending the adequate amount of money on the child saved considerable expense on the delinquent adult, and provided better citizens for the country.

Israel Population Increases

"The eight days I spent in Israel was one of the high spots of my entire trip," stated Winch. "Here is a people who are making a new nation out of sand. In fourteen months, the population has increased by over 400,000, and the government of Israel has had to provide food, clothing, housing, and employment for these new people. And they are doing it. There is a rigid price control, and rationing of every food but fruit and vegetables. There is absolutely no black market. The notoriety and heavy fines make it highly unprofitable."

New Varsity Yell, Kallinike's Boots At Tonight's Rally

The first major pep rally of the year, your first chance to show that you are behind the Blues, body and soul, is all set to roll to-night at 8.30 on the back campus. So oil up your rusty lungs, glance over the Varsity songs and cheers and then use them to-night at the rally.

New Yell

Keynote of the rally will be a new Varsity yell centered around that man of immortal fame Kallinike (pronounced Kal-in-ik-kay). By now every man, woman, and child should know who and what Kallinike is. For those who do not, here is the latest gen. Kallinike is an ancient Greek athlete who appeared on the campus last Tuesday in conjunction with the pep rally tonight and the Roamaround dance on Saturday night.

A point of interest to those interested; on Tuesday, Kallinike was slightly delayed due to a pair of faulty boots. However, his boots have been fixed and they no longer take in water so he will be able to swim the Hellespont unhindered.

Feature Fireworks

Strictly a campus affair, the rally will feature the Blue and White Band and the Pipe Band, the Blue and White cheerleaders, Stella McCord, the new Blue and White drum majorette; the entire Blues team with coach Bob Masterson, the Queen's Pipe Band and Queen's coach Frank Tindall, fireworks, bonfires, effigies, snake dances over the campus, quartettes and other forms of entertainment!

Rumor has it that a mystery man is on his way in chains, well-guarded by a group of officials of the Blue and White Society. At present no further details are being given out by those in charge but everything will come to light tonight at the rally.

Immediately following the rally, a monster snake dance will take place led by the bands, the cheerleaders, men with torches, and Kallinike. Remember, follow the bands. By diverse routes the snake dance will arrive at the front campus where there will be dancing till the wee small hours of the morning to music supplied by an eight-piece orchestra playing from the steps of Convocation Hall.

Last minute reports indicate that the Skule cannon will not be brought out to the rally. An official spokesman for the Ancient and Honorable Company of Skule Cannoneers states that the cannon is

Student Veterans Will Collect Pay End of October

First DVA cheques this year will cover the period up to October 31, A. R. Whitten, District Supervisor or Training at the Department of Veterans Affairs, announced yesterday.

The date when payments will begin is to be announced later, Whitten said.

He said the next pay period will be for the two weeks up to November 15. From then on payments would be made monthly, at the middle of each month.

Although figures are not yet complete, Whitten says the department anticipates a registration of about 3500 veteran students, including those in post-graduate work.

Location of points where cheques will be given out is also to be announced later. Otherwise no change in policy is expected, the official said.

Fees are paid for the tuition and incidentals on the basis of entitlement. In cases where entitlement to training will expire this year DVA regulations are as follows:

If, in the spring of 1949 or after the summer supplementals have been written, a veteran in any undergraduate course has obtained at least second class honors or stood in the top 25 per cent of his year without condition, an extension may be had if recommended by the Scholarship Committee of the University. Students in graduate studies must show that the further study is very important for their careers.

Fees for students who do not get an extension are paid in proportion to the remaining entitlement, unless the entitlement expires in the last quarter of the year. In the latter case DVA pays fees for

INTERFAC SOCCER GAME WINDS UP IN 1-1 TIE

The Trinity Cup soccer team played the Vic Seniors Thursday afternoon to a 1-all tie.

In the first half, Trinity took a lot of land, but didn't manage to score. The game livened up in the second half. Trinity scored on a well-placed shot in the right hand corner of the net placed by Al Forbes, after brilliant approach work by Hugh Rowan. Trinity took a goal kick when Vic fouled the goalie.

In the last seven minutes of play, Vic forwards made a good try but the keeper just managed to push the ball over the bar. Two minutes later, Bill Mercer scored, to end the match in a draw.

Thanks From Queen's

Editor, The Varsity:

Thank you, Varsity! You were very kind. At least 900 of the 2,000 Queen's students who wished to see the Queen's-Varsity game will be able to do so, and what's more a few will be able to bring their wives.

Also we thank you for the wonderful tickets that you sent us. They must be the best there are as they entitle us to sit in seats that are the closest to the field, and will give us 145 yards of unobstructed view to the far goalpost.

It will be so nice that from that angle we will be able to see the play develop, although we may not be able to tell just where it is on the field or which team has the ball. We will have a wonderful view of any touchdown scored at our end, even though more myopic members of our body may not be able to see any of the scoring at the far end or the play in that half of the field.

We thank you again for your supreme generosity and hospitality and we hope that we will have the opportunity of returning your unselfishness.

Some Queensmen
Kingston, Ont.

Ed. Note: You're welcome. Actually we're even more unselfish. Athletic Association officials say 2,100 tickets were sent to Queen's.

CBC Goethe Salute

The CBC last Wednesday night presented Canada's most important contribution to the Goethe celebrations of this year. It was fully up to the standard of CBC Wednesday Nights, which was already high. First there was a talk by Barker Fairley, who undertook to give a coherent general account of Goethe in fifteen minutes, and succeeded. The listener would have found it easy to understand why Fairley is one of the world's best Goethe critics. Then there was a performance of Goethe's tragedy Egmont, no doubt the first radio performance in Canada, with the overture and incidental music (including two lovely songs sung by Frances James) specially written for it by Beethoven.

Professor Fairley's eloquence and Beethoven's noble overture hardly prepare us for the curiously vague exuberance of the play. Its theme is the treacherous seizure and brutal execution of the sixteenth-century Dutch patriot Count Egmont by the Duke of Alva during the Spanish reign of terror in the Netherlands. The "tragic flaw" in Egmont's character is a rather sentimental attachment to the symbols of authority, first to the helpless regent Margaret, then to the distant King of Spain. Both, of course, let him down, and his colleague William the Silent, who has no such illusions, refuses to walk into Alva's trap, and lives to fight another day and to free Holland. His youthful egoism, which is capable of keeping three couriers waiting while he finishes his soliloquy, plays him false too, as one of his reasons for not escaping is a romantic attachment to a girl who, when she can do nothing for him, poisons herself and persuades her rejected lover to do the same. The historical Egmont had a wife and eleven children who were reduced to beggary by his murder—surely a far more genuinely tragic situation. Goethe's Egmont calls himself, in a remarkable speech, a kind of sun-god driven to a predestined hero'c career by an overmastering force. But it is difficult to disentangle this force from the force represented by Alva, the solemn and owlish march of stupidity and cruelty over all man's efforts to gain peace and freedom. Alva also talks about destiny, and has also a romantic attachment, the fruit of which, his bastard son Ferdinand, is an irresolute weakling who hankers to be like Egmont. In short, Egmont accepts too much of Alva's attitude to life to illustrate the complete contrast between liberty and tyranny which is the play's theme.

Lister Sinclair's adaptation seemed excellent, and preserved an archaic quality in the language which, for an English listener, is well suited to a play that has so many echoes from Shakespeare (especially Julius Caesar). The reading was excellent too: perhaps one may make special mention of Margot Christie for building up the minor figure of Margaret of Parma into an integral part of the play.

Rudens

As the classic comedies, far less durable than the tragedies, are rarely performed, Toronto's Classical Club's choice of a Roman comedy, "The Rope" by Plautus, is a curiosity as well as an entertainment. Judged by modern standards "The Rope" is not extremely funny — in fact, the prose version I armed myself with before seeing the play was highly unfunny — but the metrical English translation by Ernest Dale of our faculty, is not forced in its comedy; rather it captures the quaint, subdued note of humor, abetted by lines cadanced most musically, surely not unlike those that pleased the good Republicans' ears. The story is a bit of romantic nonsense on a coast of Africa and involves the wicked pander, a free-born slave girl, long-lost parents, and a handsome hero. Harold Sallach, who is immortal, is on hand to mete out justice and account for all the coincidences. There is also a moral, which I won't expound lest it sadden you, for it is no longer applicable.

Gripus, one of the great characters of Roman comedy, is admirably played by John Scrivin, and Gary Clark shows a flair for comedy in a role whose possibilities are not suspect in print. Keith MacMillan's original music for the serious moments is simple and appropriate. Professor Dale also produced and directed; his production is smooth and altogether tasteful and should be of special interest to students of Latin drama. (Presented at Hart House Theatre through Saturday.)

Jim Dickinson.

Roma Page

One of the most talented and promising young organists of our time, Toronto's own Miss Roma Page, played a recital in Eaton Auditorium last evening that proved she is all that and more. From Bach to the modern masters, Miss Page showed herself incapable of nothing in performance.

Seth Bingham's "Rhythmic Trumpet" and Gerald Bales' "Prelude in E minor," gay, light and witty, were very effective, while the Bach, "Come, Sweetest Death," was performed with all the pious dignity it can inspire. The same could be said of the Reger number, although scored in a different style.

The great "Toccato and Fugue in C" of Bach with which Miss Page opened her program seemed to suffer the most, however. At times her pedal registration clouded her cadenzas somewhat, and when played with Manual passages it was too harsh, almost blurting. The Adagio was ever beautiful but the fugue sadly lacked the crispness that is written into it.

The modern part of her program was skilfully interpreted. The Reubke "94th Psalm" was the crowning glory of manual and pedal technique.

Miss Evelyn Wharram led the Leaside Ensemble in several well-known numbers including Mozart's "Jesu, Son of God" and Handel's "Come unto Me" from the Messiah. Although small, the choir was clear in diction and tone. Both choir and organist were favorably received by a meagre but enthusiastic audience.

that I've been-complimented on my teeth. And I say proudly that I've never in my life used either a knife or fork. My mother tells an interesting little anecdote about me when I was first learning to talk. It seems a relative put a knife into my hand at mealtime and tried to show me how to use it. Mother says that I threw it on the floor and lisped, "Don't you know that most of the blame for irregular teeth can be traced to those products of civilization — the knife and fork?" I have always tried to keep this little story quiet because people who don't eat with a knife and a fork are thought dotty. But I'm glad to have it told now there is a chance of proving a very important point.

So I'd like to say again that the Editor of this newspaper isn't always right and that a lot of mail we get is pretty darn exciting.

A veteran in receipt of disability pension never runs out of entitlement, but must merely continue to pass without condition, or with not more than one condition if allowed by his faculty.

Intermediates Tangle With Rams To-day

McMaster Out To Get Revenge For 59-0 Defeat Of Last Year

Friday afternoon will bring the test of strength for Don Bark and his crothing Intermediates. At 2.15 p.m. McMaster Rams and the Small Blues are scheduled to run off the first game of the 49 - 50 Intermediate rugby season. For the last two weeks the Intermediates have been toiling on the Trinity field and things of late have been looking up. Pregame gossip has it that this will be one of the feature games of the rugby season, Blues games included.

Bernie Taylor, coach of the year's crop of the McMaster Rams, will have the most improved team in the Intermediate loop. The Rams took up with the upper of the year last Saturday when they beat the Intermediate entry from Queen 7-5. If the Rams were able to beat Queen's, who are not the weakest sort of the Intercollegiate league, they certainly must have something on the ball. On top of this, Bernie Taylor is no foreigner to this campus. Bernie is a graduate of the University and also former coach of famed Vic interfaculty aggregations. This would lead one to believe that his desire of the moment is to wallop the Intermediates come this afternoon. It must also be remembered that the same Intermediate Blues trounced the boys from the mountain city last year to the tune of 59-0.

"We Can Win"

All things considered however the game will not be handed to the Rams. The Intermediates are every bit as good as last year's team if not considerably better. Last night Don sent his men through a light signal practice in preparation for the big effort this afternoon. Before the practice he was quoted as saying: "If the boys want to win they can do it. It won't be a run-away like last year but the material is there and there is no reason why they can't win."

The Intermediates have been strengthened considerably by Bob Masterson, Ted Gawinski, Julie Hanson, Howie Russell, Bill Noonan, and John Roe have been sent down from the Blues. John won't be dressing, however, due to aggravated injuries. Another encouraging note was struck last night when it was learned that Norm West, also of the Blues, will be dressing this afternoon. Don has also got a good lineup of holdovers from last year, among them Rich Howson, Bill Davis, Jack Birkenshaw and Tom Lawson.

Line-Up

This is the line-up that will be dressed for the game — Ends: Ted Gawinski, Howie Russell, Bill McCagerty and Frank Kieczor. Middles: Barry Howard, Hugh Forge, Rod Whitehead and Doug Shay. Insides: Bruce Brown, Joe Errington, Bill Noonan and Marshall Haymes. Centres: Jerry Sutherland and Bill Scott. Halfs: Julie Hanson, Tom Lawson, Johnny Green, Tony Cecutti, Norm West, Jack Birkenshaw, Bob Leaming, Bill Davis, Artie Bell and Rich Howson.

This line-up sports speed and weight. The overall average weight this year is 190 lbs and the overall average height is 5 ft. 11 in. The other night the Intermediates scrimmaged with the Blues and gave many of the sideline observers the impression that they would almost be good enough for Intercollegiate competition. The line was charging well and on the whole kept up to the Blues. The backfield was fast and shifty and at times overran Bob Masterson's boys.

Blues - Queen's Starting Line

Here are the probable line-ups for tomorrow's game:

VARSITY	Position	QUEEN'S
Stevenson	Quarterback	Lenard
Cummings	Halfback	Roberts
Danylchuk	"	McKelvay
Choreskecki	"	Sisson
London	"	Tenner
Jones	Centre	Charters
Lloyd	Inside	Simola
Zimmerman	"	Safari
Mustard	Middle	Cole
Evans	"	McCarney
Gray	End	Logan
Lawson	"	Harrison

The team including those that will not be dressed this afternoon are in good physical shape. Only three injuries mar the record sheet. John Roe, of course, is out for some time. Wally Morris has torn ligaments in his ankle and will be out for another month. Marshall Haymes has a dislocated thumb but will be able to play. Marshall is the terror from the western plains. Marshall played part of this year with the Regina Roughriders in the Western Canada loop.

The team was disappointed to hear that the cheerleaders would only be able to lend three of their numbers to the raising of the team morale. The band has not offered to turn out. It would seem that the Cheer Department of this University does not consider the Intermediates worth supporting. It is worth bearing in mind that the Intermediate Blues are the source of many of the men that will be playing with the Blues next year. Dick Brown, the present sensation of the Blues, was with the Intermediates earlier this season.

Game Time 2:15

It should be a good game. The teams would seem to be about on a par. If the day is dry, the Intermediates should win. A wet day will make it much closer. Regardless of the weather it will be a close game; neither team is expected to have a runaway. Game time is 2:15 and the place of course is Varsity Stadium.

Cuff Notes: Last night the team was fitted with game uniforms . . . Jerry Sutherland is quite perturbed because he will not be able to wear 13, his lucky number . . . watch Marshall Haymes, it is no secret that Bob Masterson has been keeping his eyes on this western newcomer . . . your A. T. L. card will admit you free (I say again FREE) to the game . . . this year the Intermediate games will sport programs, "you can't watch the ball game without a program." . . . Prediction: The Intermediates will win by one touchdown.

Whereas: the easiest way of making money is betting, and whereas: there is plenty of Queen's money floating around, and whereas we could use some of same, your correspondent has decided to call the shot on Saturday's classic. From long and painful experience (take it from us) we find that the orthodox methods of picking winners such as asking coaches, scrutinizing the lineups, consulting records, and the rest, are strictly N.G. So this department decided to get the winner by the most reliable, sure-fire, gilt-edged, iron-bound method of prediction. We went to a fortune teller.

Alim Se Bey has his Prophecy Parlor in the Queen and York district, so we wisely removed our watch, ring, and wallet, and deposited them at the SAC office before we left the office. Bey's fee ($2.00) we clutched in our hand and departed.

The parlor's exterior was decorated with signs extolling the supernatural powers of the Bey, such as he sees all, understands the cards, and see this great man now. This is the goods, we figured. We know that these men of mystery often used burning incense for atmosphere, but were unprepared for the type Alim Se used. It was immediately recognized upon entering as a combination of beer and cigar butts.

Alim came out of a draped-off cubicle and greeted us warmly.

"Ah, the man from the paper . . . . come in, come in."

"Who's going to win the Varsity-Queen's game?"

We sat down in a dark cubbyhole with a glass ball on a table in front of us. Alim spoke.

"Your name is Bob Dnieper, and . . . ."

"I know my name. Who's going to win the game?"

"Now, we look into the magic mirror! Look . . . . Ahhhh —I see men in Blue . . . ."

We felt a hand in our pockets.

"Bey," we said, "please tell your spirits to stop flitting about in my pockets. I'm ticklish."

"Harrumph . . . . we see a group of men . . . . scrimmaging . . . ."

"Who's winning, I'm asking you!"

"Ah yes, the score board . . . . Varsity 47 . . . . Queen's . . . its not very clear . . . looks like a zero . . ."

"Aha!" we shouted with joy, "here's your dough Bey!" We unclutched our hand to see if the deuce was still there. It was. We rushed out the door feeling pretty good about not getting picked and inquiring our common sense in leaving our stuff at the U. We reached into our pocket for a cigar-

KILTS CLIPPED IN CLOSE CALL

Blues Start Late, Nip Gallant Gaels In Thrilling Game

By BILL ROSS

Coach Bob Masterson's defending champion Senior Blue footballers, from Bob himself right along to the rub-down man, knew they had met a team when they left the Varsity bowl last Saturday with a hard-won 22-21 victory over a revitalized Golden Gael aggregation. Ideal weather conditions and a sellout crowd of over 20,000 were on hand for the season opener which featured grade A spectacular football as well as crowd-pleasing music and color which always accompanies a meeting of the traditional rivals.

Westerns Close Too

Saturday was the day for near upsets as once mighty Western Mustangs finally pulled out of their spin in the third quarter and came from behind a 12-0 deficit to take over and eke out a 14-12 victory over McGill in London. But for suspense and sheer football thrills it was the Varsity-Queens encounter which will not likely see its equal this season.

Frank Tindall's underrated Queensmen made sure on their good fortune when Al Lenard's opening kickoff was run back to the Varsity 43 yard line by John Chorestecki. The officials promptly awarded possession of the ball to the Gaels on that spot as the result of some illegal interference by Varsity.

Five plays later, with only three minutes gone in the game, a Lenard to Harrison pass clicked in the end zone and Queen's went ahead 6-0 on Lenard's successful convert attempt. It was Al Lenard however, whose short kick gave Varsity the ball on the Queen's 52. Another exchange of kicks found the Blues in possession on the Queen's 44. Bruce Cummings hit end Alec Lawson for eight yards and Wally London bucked for a first down with yards to spare. Danyichuk and Stevenson worked the ball down to the Gael 17. Stevenson's field goal attempt from that spot was wide and McKelvey's short kick gave Varsity their second chance when Danyichuk ran the ball back to the Queen's eight.

Backfield Confusion

Bruce Cummings made the best of some backfield confusion and circled the end for six yards on an impromptu run. London bucked to the one and Nick Purdue majored on a smooth quarter sneak which Cummings converted to knot the count at 6-6.

Wally London who played a bang up game at half for the Blues opened the second quarter with a successful buck which netted a Varsity first down on their own 47. London and Dick Brown proceeded to take things into their own hands at this point and racked up an unbroken series of first downs which resulted in Bill Brewer being stopped right up against the Queen's goal post. Another London buck through the right side of the gold-clad line was the payoff touch and Bell converted to put Varsity out front 12-6.

Jack Roberts exploded for Queens just two plays after the Varsity kickoff when his usual buck through the right side of the Blue line developed into a thrilling 75 yard jaunt through the whole Toronto team for another spectacular Queen's TD. Lenard added the extra point to tie up the contest at 12 all.

Dick Brown, who was very impressive throughout the afternoon in the Blues' cause, looked very cool as he shot a fine aerial bullet to Bill Danyichuk for a twenty-three yard gain after a Dave Bryans fumble was recovered by Varsity on the Blue 45. London and Brown picked up thirteen more yards via the ground route placing the ball on the Queens 15. John Chorestecki booted a twenty-five yard field goal in a neat effort which advanc-

Drama Promises Tears, Laughter

Highlight of the program of the University of Toronto Drama Guild this year will be four plays, Dostoyevsky's "Crime and Punishment", Robertson Davies' "Fortune my Foe", Molnars' "The Guardsman" and Shakespeare's "Othello". This was announced at the first meeting of the U. of T. drama committee on Thursday afternoon at Hart House Theatre by Robert Gill, director of Hart House Theatre and head of the committee.

Commenting on the philosophy or idea behind the theatre, Mr. Gill said it must be educational but not academic in the "stuffy sense". Broadway junk will not appear on our stage, declared Mr. Gill, "but neither will dusty old classics be produced." "The theatre will be a place for excitement, laughter and tears, but not for research."

"The benefits derived from participation in the various drama societies are many," he pointed out. "The theatre is to be a training ground for those who hope to eventually follow a professional career in acting and direction. Participation can also give the students a wider scope of appreciation so that they can derive pleasure from the exercise of the craft, and obtain a greater appreciation of good acting."

A pool of costumes and stage sets has been organized which cuts down expenses and makes it possible for better scenery to be obtained for the various college productions. The Cody Award which expired last year will not be renewed this year at the Drama Festival. In order to lessen the competitive nature of the festival and thus discourage dissension, the adjudicator will criticize the plays but not grade them.

There are still openings for those who are interested in drama. College representatives are Ted Fellows, U.C.; Dave Gardiner, Victoria College; Don Glen, Trinity, and Claire Jackman, St. Michael's College. They say that no previous theatrical experience is necessary.

Apple Fight To End Hazing Vic Bob Unites Soph-Frosh

The Victoria College "BOB" — the traditional hazing time in that college since 1872 — has been scheduled for next Thursday afternoon and evening. Apples, violins and the usual props highlight the show which is to include some fierce rivalry between the sophs and frosh.

Thursday afternoon has been reserved for the "BAB" — the Bob Apple Battle—between the freshmen and sophomores in Little Vic Field.

Secret Practices

Both groups are still in ignorance of the major part of the program. Practices of the rival years are held in private and revealed only on the night of the event.

Program for the day has the BAB on Thursday afternoon. According to a version given by Clare Greene, the Frosh are held down by the presence of Dean Bennett and Prof. Robbins while their gals cheer them into a fighting mood. The referees then move to the side and the youngsters are let loose on the hardened sophs who try to protect the symbol of an apple. Blood spilled during the event is said to be bottled and used to make the Red Line in Vic's open ice surface later on in the year.

Pay Price

In the evening, while the girls enjoy the Mock Court, the Freshmen are to be "entertained" by the sophs. The losers of the BAB during the afternoon are expected to submit quietly to certain humiliations.

When the trial and humiliations are over the participants are to assemble in Burwash Hall for a yelling session which is usually kept to a roar hardly louder than the Skule cannon . . . though continuous.

Then the dance of the year for those who survive.

Debating Union To Send Teams To U.S. Colleges

Debating teams from the University of Toronto will go on a tour to several American universities during the last part of the 1949-50 session according to a news release from the U. of T. Debating Union. Expenses of the trip will be borne by the UTDU.

Every student has an equal chance to participate in the tours. To become eligible, a student must speak at one of the preliminary debates to be arranged by UTDU.

A student needn't make a major speech in a debate; a speech from the floor will suffice.

The first of these preliminary debates will be held in Brennan Hall on Tuesday, October 18 at 8 p.m.

It is hoped that a large number of contestants will turn out to the trials at which the main speakers for this debate will be selected. The trials will be held at Brennan Hall on Wednesday, October 12 at 1 p.m.

The topic for the trials will be "Resolved that the activities of the Unamerican Affairs Committee is undemocratic." Each speaker may defend or oppose the resolution. Speeches should not exceed five minutes in length.

IRC Members Planning To View UN in Action On November Weekend

A trip to Lake Success to see the United Nations Security Council and General Assembly in action some weekend in November has been planned for members of the International Relations Club, it was announced at the opening meeting held at Wymilwood last week.

The exact form and date of the trip to U.N. headquarters will depend on the results of a questionnaire distributed to members at the meeting. Dates offered run from the last weekend in October to the first in December.

The estimated one hundred present were also given the opportunity to indicate their preferences for discussion topics in another questionnaire.

Representatives of the International Relations Club will be present at a conference of university International Relations groups later this year, it was announced by President Ed Eberle. Eberle stated that the club has fifty new members and called for a further increase in membership.

Varsity Lecture

The first news lecture on "News Writing, First Principles" will be given at 1 p.m. today in Room 11, University College. Members of the News and Make-Up staff are asked to be present.

Yell, Stella Introduced

Rally Sparks Pep

As a thunderous display of fireworks roared up into the clear moonlit sky, the first Varsity Pep Rally of the season got underway on Friday evening.

Along Hoskin Avenue to the floodlit north campus came Bob Cringan and his Blue and White Band, preceded by the vivacious cheer-leaders and breath-taking Stella McCord.

First item on the program was a musical group known as "The Skule Quartet." With ukelele and tambourines, they sang their own arrangements of "Cigarettes, Whusky, and Wild Wild Women" and "Where Did Robinson Go?"

New Yell Intro-ed

After playing the Queen's Song, the new yell "Let's Go Blues," featuring a trumpet solo, was introduced by Cheer-leader Ross Whartley.

At this point, Kallinike and his interpreter arrived. They were hoisted to a truck which was being used as a platform and were interviewed.

Next came the Big Blues, headed by Coach Bob Masterson and Captain Archie Jones. All were introduced and said a few words, but it was Masterson who proved the most talkative.

Honors For Stella

The band played a rousing number and Stella McCord was cheered onto the platform, where she was officially welcomed and accepted by the various colleges and faculties on the Campus. Meds supplied a free physical examination plan for Stella; Vic presented her with a key to Burwash Hall, should she ever need it. Trinity offered a crumpet-proof pen that would write under tea. The engineers chemically analyzed her, and indeed women in general, and warned that they "turn green in the presence of a superior specimen." Stella accepted her gifts graciously.

A Sad Day, Laddie

Saturday's opening of the current football season was a sad disappointment to us. The Blues played a fine game and Queen's deserve much praise for their exceptional opposition, but the game was still a disappointment.

It is always a sad thing to see honored customs flouted. It is a pull at the heart strings to see thrilling traditions go by the boards.

We refer to the non-appearance of the Queen's pipe band and Highland dancers.

Queen's has always gloried in its Gaelic traditions and the half-time parading of the pipe band has been, in the past, one of the most exciting parts of a football weekend.

It seems now as if the brass band has top priority in the affections of the students. We do not like the change.

We are not suggesting that the Queen's brass band is not a fine group—as good, we would say, as any other that has played at Varsity stadium. We do feel that Queen's is unjustly laying aside one of its most stirring traditions when it relegates its pipers to second place.

It's Our Job

There is abundant evidence that the University is expanding.

The President's address at Fall Convocation told of plans for a new men's residence. The Wallberg building is now in full use. The library is being extended by means of the Archives building now being added.

The days of too many students and too few class rooms are over.

That expansion is needed, no one will deny. But a university education consists of more than lecture rooms and Toronto students still lack a central and coeducational building for extra-curricular activities.

In this period of building and expansion it is doubtful if students may expect much help from University authorities towards final realization of the Student Memorial Union.

This throws complete responsibility for the entire project into the hands of the students.

It is no time for shelving of plans or resorting to compromise because of inability of the University to assist.

If we are to have a Union, we must work for it ourselves.

Pickled Pipers

INTER-OFFICE MEMO:
Subject: Enterprising addition to The Varsity news staff.
Dear Editor:

This is to tell you about a news item which does not appear in today's The Varsity. You will remember the new man, Themistocles VanSchweringen, II Pass, SPS. He came in Saturday morning with a great idea for a story.

Since the Queen's pipers would probably celebrate their visit to Toronto after the game, Themistocles thought it might be possible to get them sozzled so that the local gendarmerie would jug them. Then we could print the story in this issue with the headline:

POLICE PINCH PACK OF PICKLED PIPERS

Themey also suggested if we printed the names of the jugged Gael pipers, there might be a Dobronski or a Pastrannelli in the bunch to add a hint of heather.

Naturally thought this perfect for this issue—asked Themey how he would go about it. He says after scouting the sozzling he could tip off the cops to make a raid. Wondered if this might not bother ethics of The Varsity. Themey says what the heck, they're only Queen's men.

Might be able to talk a cop into making a fake arrest for the story, Themey then suggested. Don't know, lots of campus characters are still dubious of the completely above-board Skule cannon steal and the kidnapping of Bob Hetherington was trumped up by The Varsity.

So, sadly we let the story go. That's why we can't print what might have won us a trophy at the CUP conference this year.

This is to advise that we must keep a sharp eye on VanSchweringen, Jr. If we don't, we might lose him to The Star. Mark my words, Themistocles will go far.

Faithfully,
FAGU.

Sad Story

Reports have it that some engineers who lost the goalposts at the Saturday game are griping about the lack of co-operation from other Varsity rooters—particularly the few thousand Arts types.

This is sad to hear. To pile this upon the shattered illusions we are clutching the remnants of to our bleeding hearts is too much.

Small Budget For U.C. Lit. Seen For '49

Britain's Austerity Budget will have nothing on the U.C. Lit's 1949 Budget, Lit President Jack Hoolihan said today. Official approval of the budget, which features many slashes in unexpected places, will be sought at an Open Meeting of the Lit tonight at 8 o'clock in the Junior Common Room.

Bob Hands, Lit Treasurer, will present the budget which asks an increase in the price of the Soph-Frosh Banquet and Dance and, for the first time in many years, a charge of $1.25 for the Graduation Banquet.

Money put into the UNDERGRAD has been slashed from $2,000 last year to $1,300 and only two issues will be published.

The subsidy to the Arts Ball has been cut from $600 to $250 and that of the U.C. Follies from $750 to $300.

The executive of the Lit, unwilling to institute wholesale cuts, were forced to take this step following the announcement that male enrollmen in the college has fallen from last year's figure of 1,600 to 1,200, Hoolihan said. "The Lit's revenue has dropped more than $5,000 in the past two years to $8,400," he added.

Also to take place at the meeting will be nominations for First Year President, who will sit on the Lit, First Year Secretary-Treasurer and Athletic Rep, and Assistant Secretary-Treasurer of the Lit. All these offices are open only to freshmen.

'All male undergraduates of U.C. are eligible to attend the meeting, Hoolihan said. Each has paid seven dollars to the society in their Incidental Fees.

Notices of any motions to be put before the meeting must be in the hands of the secretary of the society 24 hours before the meeting.

U.N.B. PASS MARK RAISED TO 50%, STANDARDS SAME

Fredericton, N.B. — (CUP) — Officials of the University of New Brunswick have raised the pass mark from 40 to 50 per cent. Explanation of the increase, in a statement released to the press, is that the Faculty was attempting to get rid of the difficulty caused by the fact that nearly all other Canadian universities have an accepted pass mark of 50 per cent.

Midnight Watch

Two members of 'Operation Gaelstorm', Dave Armour (left) and Ken Laverty, just before being relieved. Queen's did not try any 'rough stuff', and the boys had no opportunity to operate the walkie-talkie seen with its aerial protruding from the window.

Riot Squad Waits In Vain For Expected Vandalism

"Operation Gaelstorm," the secret protective measures taken by the Blue and White Society to curb pre-game activity by aggressors, was an outstanding success. Not one case of rival "Aggression" was reported throughout the night!

Now known is that fact that during the giant pep rally and indeed throughout Friday night, the Varsity Stadium and the whole Campus was alive with the buzzing of several radio transmitters. Three Walkie-Talkies were loaned to the society by the COTC, and were set up at strategic points on the Campus. Their operators reported anything unusual to the "Central Command" in east house men's residence.

A riot squad was on call the entire night at the men's residence, with cars ready to rush to any point on the University grounds to prevent any rival refacing, painting or pillaging of Varsity property.

The Stadium itself was the best protected. Brilliantly lit by floodlights all night, not even a mouse could have entered without being seen by the Transmitter operator in the Press box, or the two burly city Policemen in the grandstand. All remained on duty till eight or nine Saturday morning, at which time the regular staff took over till game time.

The third transmitter in the protective hook-up was in a car, and cruised around the Campus, keeping in close contact at all times with the other two.

More than 25 students took shifts during the night, operating the equipment, driving and watching for "activity." Some of the girls served coffee and sandwiches to those on the long vigil.

The warmth and the clearness of the night, as well as the nearly full moon, combined to make the task of the watchers much more bearable in the silent watches of the morning.

New Liberal MP — Vic Graduate '49 Recalls Jitters

"Anyone with an exaggerated idea of his own importance ought to get himself elected to Parliament," advised Liberal M.P. Paul Hellyer, who graduated from the University of Toronto last year.

The 25 year-old Arts graduate, Canada's youngest M.P., was speaking at the University Liberal Club's first open meeting held in Wymilwood Thursday night. Hellyer won Toronto's Davenport riding for the Liberals in the recent federal election, defeating veteran Conservative John R. MacNichol who had represented the constituency for years.

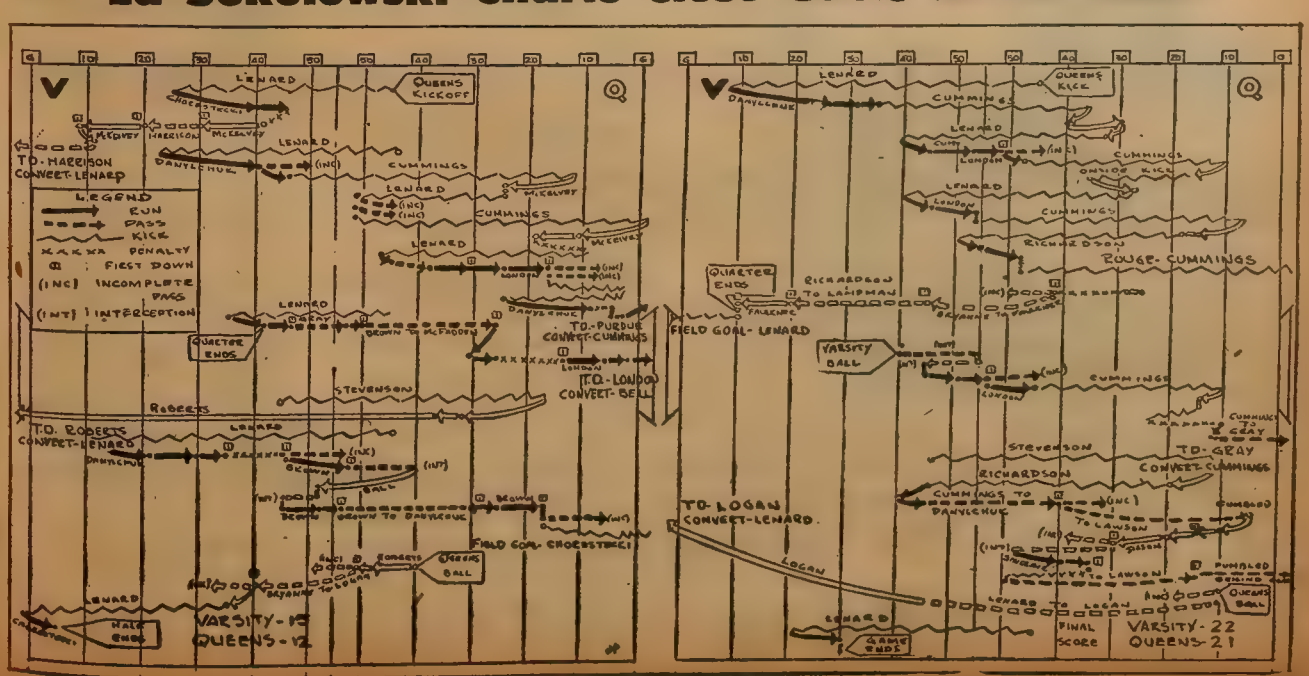
PAUL HELLYER, M.P.

Parliament Deflates Ego

This is the first plunge into professional politics for the young M.P., and he finds it interesting and sometimes a little unnerving. Knees knocking is only one of the symptoms that attack new members on their first attempts at speech-making in the House, said Hellyer; the whole process would be an excellent remedy for an inflated ego. It is an experience calculated to reduce the average person to very small proportions, he said.

Speaking about the government's bill to abolish appeals to the privy council, Hellyer condemned the Opposition's attempt to insert a clause binding the Supreme Court to the law as set down by former decisions of the privy council. Maintaining that such a clause would be a reflection on the ability and intelligence of Canadian judges, he also pointed out that the privy council's judicial committee itself has not always felt bound by this principle.

The "ever-changing, always progressive" aspect of Liberalism is what attracted him to the party, said Hellyer. "Prime Minister St. Laurent is head and shoulders above any other member in the House".



Election Tests Housing

Another former Arts graduate of Toronto University, Perry Ryan, also addressed the meeting. Ryan is the Liberal candidate in this month's Toronto - Greenwood by-election. He explained why he thinks Greenwood riding needs a Liberal member at Ottawa. Many local improvements are needed in the district and a member on the government side of the House would be more likely to get results quickly, he said.

Primarily however the by-election will be a test of the government's new housing plans, stated Ryan. This is the first chance the public has had to register an opinion on the scheme, and Ryan feels the vote in his riding will be considered significant.

Club President Henry Bradley urged members to lend active support to Ryan's campaign, and plans for this were discussed.

Ed Sokolowski Charts Close Gaels-Blues Clash

By shattered illusions, I mean this. Watching a group of stalwart Miners go by bravely singing: "Are we going to guard the goalposts, Are We Ever!", we were stirred by another example of the "Forty Beers - brawn over brains" contention. We had total faith in the gallant Skulemen.

But after a fear-filled game in which the Gaels made our mighty Blues look feeble too often for comfort, the goalposts topple down with a rending topple.

Even if a lowly Artsman dared to trespass on the domain of the mighty Skuleman (forty beers, swan dives, goalpost guarding, etc.) — even if he dared — could he be expected to put forth this pathetic effort when all around him he sees the Skule legend crumbling?

We are struck to the core. And further, when we think of the effect this Skule failure will have on the impressionable minds of the frosh of all faculties, our cup of bitter tears runneth over.

This is a sad day.

Film Review

Queen Of Spades

Anton Walbrook, in this British film, plays a sort of humorless, unamiable Russian "Sorrowful Jones," a penny-pinching junior officer who, in the St. Petersburg of Napoleonic times, sets out to make a fast rouble by learning the card secret of an eccentric old Countess. He gains entry to her quarters by playing up to the Countess' "seemply gargious" lady-in-waiting. But the old woman declines to share the secret because it is bound in a past scandal and when the captain throws a fright into her, she dies.

During a conscious nightmare Walbrook receives the secret from the dead Countess and the remainder of the movie shows us how he who wields the sword is finally slain by the sword, in this case the weapon being a queen of spades which mysteriously replaces the crucial ace in a game of Faro and plunges the captain into poverty-stricken madness.

In one particular element this picture continues without a slip, and that is in the atmosphere which it creates. There is a strong appeal to the senses in the lavish sets and costumes, backed up by a very strong musical score, and featuring a generous use of violent sound. The nervous tension begins at "High" and ends up somewhere around "Cold Sweat." Add to these the ironic situations and nefarious deeds and you have a good picture of Author Pushkin's Russian scene.

Actor Walbrook slices his ham about the same thickness as America's Orson Welles does. However, I think it is excusable, and even called for in a film of this type. Dame Edith Evans, as the Countess, displays amply her long and famed stage experience. The lesser roles, too, are well-acted.

Yet, despite the meticulous efforts which have apparently gone into this film, something profound is lacking. "Queen of Spades" is a movie rich in its vulgarity, resplendent in its corruption, but somehow trivial at the same time. Without intending to be smart-alecky, I found myself asking when it was finished, "So what?" I felt that Pushkin had intended this story to deliver a moral blow, not merely to be a brilliant animated tapestry. As it was presented in the movie, it left me shrugging my shoulders with near-indifference. Somewhere in this deck, there was a card missing.

VIC'S CORNER

His name is Pik. He loves water, eats regular meals and does all the normal things. But he puzzles us. He may be violating rules of men's residence if he isn't a he. Can anyone tell if a turtle is?

And while we're on the topic, about men that is, there is good news! The Bob is slated for this Thursday, Oct. 13. For those interested, here's the dope. The Bob Apple Battle is the afternoon attraction. The gals line up while the guys get ready for the struggle. Then when the Dean and Prof. Robbins run for shelter, the freshmen run for the sophs who try and protect the "apple" ... which is likely to be anything under the sun. After 20 minutes or more, when all of one side is dead or crippled the Red Cross will remove the corpses and the winners will be rewarded later in the evening.

It is expected that the cheering femmes will not take part in the first aid.

In the evening the happy old Mock Court (which only two male undergrads have ever seen, as far as we ... both of us ... know) will be held for the girlies. While they parade around the men will be enjoying the subtle humor of the Bob. This highly rated show will be restricted to the sophs and frosh, providing there are any left. Bob Director Clare Greene promises many surprises, a thing you can count on men! The loser of the Bab (Bob Apple Battle) will be subjected to horrible humiliations.

When all the gruesome stuff is over the Femmes de la Rue Bloor et al will arrive on the scene. Then the yelling starts! And how! When things quieten down soft music will lure the tired bodies to their feet and behold and dance shall take place! Girls are requested to start training now so they can support the fatigued chappies in the ensuing hours of stopping.

In the intermission here we remind all that the Corner is yours, so use it! When you have news, views or dirt drop it in at the VCU office before Friday night. This goes for all Vic organizations.

Cheerleaders, the spectacle and drawing card of the gridiron grapplings, are under the fatherly eye of Committee Chairman Dick Bowles this year. An ad further down the page bespeaks his mind. He wants guys and gals with vim and vigor to meet him in Little Vic Field on Wed. This is a real chance to get in line for a Varsity spot next year, so come on out kids and show your stuff!

Social Directorate (Jack Birkenshaw and Marge Mills) are really on the go for the Vic Informal Nov. 25 at Hart House. If you are interested in decorations for the do, drop around and see them, or leave your phone number at the VCU office.

There is also a rumor in "those circles" that the Vic Formal of Jan. 27 is really going to be distinctive! Perhaps even go all formal, tails, bow ties and long sweeping evening gowns ... with no corsages. It's merely rumor, but think it over and let someone know your sentiments, chiefly those on the Directorate. They would like to know.

And while we are talking of big things, don't forget the homecoming week-end on the 25th of Oct. A tremendous parade is planned again, with floats from each faculty. Paul Dilks is skipper for Vic, and with the aid of all of you helpers he will be able to make the projected dream-boat come true.

"All My Sons" by Arthur Miller which won the 1947 Drama Critics' Award is under rehearsal now. Vic Drama club had 56 trying out for the nine parts and the selected cast is under the hand of Hank Kaplan. We shall see them on Nov. 3, 4, 5.

The Drama Club is unusually active this year. Dave Gardner and his exec. plan a one-act show and guest speaker for Oct. 26 meeting. They are also sponsoring a poster and program cover contest, deadline Oct 21. Watch bulletin board. Prof. Comfort will be the judge.

Athletic braintrusters are out for more and better Vic Yells. Evidently the Rah-rah scarlet and gold is not enough. Rattle some of your sleep and slide them into the VCU office.

Vice-president Lawson hints that he wants nominations for a male NFCUS this week. Again it's the office you go to!

Vic Debating begins next Monday night! The tongue-tussle is over a problem of immature freshmen! Guess this means those youngsters will have to turn out and vote themselves into adulthood. The tonguesters will be Roy Neehall and Fred McFadden vs Di Rogers and Vida Taylor, place ... Alumni Hall (Co-ed Common Room).

Vic's Sr. Soccer really put the boots to Trinity last Thursday winning a tie from the highly rated champs of last year. The disjointed jaw of Dave Hastings was "jointed" up in time for him to set up the tying play. Way to go, men!

The Freshman Harrier in which Vic frosh can win the college points towards the Reed Trophy is next Saturday. Al Strike, Athletic Director, has persuaded Mr. Norm Hastings of Vic French Dept. to coach the lads. Come on out men, get points for Vic and pass your French!

Vic Rugby boys step into the limelight Wednesday 4 p.m. on back campus. Get out and see the future winners of the Mulock Cup. They need your support.

The Color System for Vic athletics is being mimeographed on the new VCU Gestetner and copies will be available to all. Frosh can get up on how to win that "V".

Meet The World at Wymilwood, Friday, Oct. 14, 8 p.m.! Your chance to talk to people from over 20 countries, students now on the campus. Roy Neehall, SCM pres., hopes for a big turn-out. "It's really a wonderful chance for anyone keen on the idea of world unity". Watch the board.

Harry Greene, (my, he's getting fat!) the editor of the controversial Acta, has something up his sleeve this year. He calls it the New Acta which might conceivably be a sequel to another journal, recently adopting the adj. "new". The addition of comics is a matter of speculation! Watch for it.

There seems to be some trouble at the gals' baseball games lately. The problem is "scantiness". Read into what you like, but Alliston Jeffries said it was a scanty crowd. Come on out men and see for yourselves.

Jackie Pember hinted around about basketball too. It's going over big at Vic, and gals are to gaze at the bulletin board for the info.

A wild rumor is going around that the pot-bellied (he said it!) VCAU Ex's are going in the Junior Harrier in two weeks. Direct all complaints to Al Strike, gentlemen.

Led by Rumball, Pearce and McMackon, Vic dragged down a third in the Junior Track meet. It was well done. Tomorrow the Senior Track meet will again pass out Reed Trophy points to participating colleges. Take a peek at them if you get a chance to leave the rugby game!

SCC in Mod. His. II thanks for pix. Summaries yours for the asking!

Now, till the next hectic week-end, when we shall see you in McGill, yours in reverse,

PIK

Casino Review

A Real Gone Guy

Musical satire at its best is on deck at the Casino this week. Red Ingle, who says his Natural Seven doesn't "tear a song apart, we just flatten it ...", lights into the moony swoons of croon ballads, and the hectic tick-tock of ephemeral Hit Parade novelties with relish, gusto and malicious intent. All making for a well above-average Casino show.

Mr. Ingle's voice is a gorgeous instrument with a rich ripeness that suggests both the golden gleam of well-done corn on the cob and corn in a more fluid form. Before he and his Natural Seven shattered national calm with Tim-tuy-shun, Ingle was a Spike Jones mainstay, responsible for the glorious Chloe, surely the greatest City Slicker effort, and for the "coughs and hiccups", in Cocktails For Two.

Although Ingle is a refugee from Jones, his form of musical satire is more subtle and more savage than that of Spike. The Jones boys operate in carefully-calculated teamwork, relying on a formula employing various plumbing tools and noisemakers plus a long drawn-out gag (i.e., Feitlebaum or fireball Peter Lorre). Red Ingle churns the melancholy melodies of Temptation and These Foolish Things hilly-billy style. Or writes fiendish verses for innocuous pop tunes. Foolish Things comes out Them Durn Fool Things in the violent metamorphosis. Nature Body is Serutan Yob (A real gone guy from Goneville).

In this week's show, the Natural Seven is but a quintet of characters who prove that Al Capp's visions of Lower Slobbovia are not so fantastic after all. The other two must have been dropped off at Pasahogan.

The short program opens with a wild burlesque of a longhair effort called by Ingle: Pagliacci's Concerto For Violin—in E. Then bassman Hank Wayland ("He doesn't look like other people, does he?") and drummer Oddy Wharton do a burlesque of the Bob Haggart-Ray Bauduc classic Big Noise from Winnetka. Their number is effacingly titled: Mild Disturbance in Guelph.

A riotous performance of Chloe (Where are you, you old bat?) by Ingle in leopard skin and technicolor golfing cap shifts the show into high. Miss Wileen Martin, only human-looking member of the group, appears at this point. An extremely attractive girl who also sings well with touches of Mary Ann McCall, Miss Martin draws many respectful whistles for her two "teaser" songs: Do It Again and No One Ever Makes a Pass At Me. The second statement is an obvious lie.

Ingle re-appears in a night shirt to plead for temperance in Cigarets, Whusky and Wild Women. Followed by another call for reform in You Can't Be Fit As a Fiddle When You're Tight As a Drum.

Miss Martin joins Ingle and the Natural Seven five in A—You're a Dopey Gal (B—you're my boozin' pal, C—you're a creep and that's for sure) which makes the Alphabet Song sound a little different from the Perry Como version. Then the classic Tim-tuy-shun provides the finale for an all-too-short show.

Standout in the supporting show is Gregory Girl Thelma Frechette's singing of the familiar I Didn't Like It the First Time (referring to spinach, of course). The Gregory fillies are surprisingly well-clothed in this Thanksgiving show, so much so that the inadvertent showing of slips by a few of the girls (two in the first show, three in the second) is annoying.

The film is what seems to be a Damon Runyon very badly Hollywoodized. William Bendix is top man in the cast and his is no Riley's life here. One tall-stemmed blonde beauty (identity unknown since film titles were missing) handles the title role of the Brooklyn Orchid offering much pleasure visually if not histrionically.

Rally Sparks

To round out the rally, a "typical" Queen's man was brought in a large cage, and interviewed. A Golden Gael was then burned in effigy, and the Rally ended with more fireworks.

The crowd of several thousand formed into a snake dance that wound around Queen's Park to Convocation Hall, where a street dance was held.

At a post-game interview Saturday night, the members of the Blues gave the following comments:

Bruce Cummings: Everyone on the team expected a tough game, and got it.

Bill Brewer: The backfield was the weakest spot, the line was sensational!

Hubie Sinclair: I'm glad it was so close. It will make us fight all the harder at McGill next week.

Bill Lloyd: I knew we could take them once we got rolling.

The International Nickel Company of Canada, Limited invites students planning or preparing for a career involving the use of metals to write for this valuable reference book. This 32 page book entitled "The Technical Editor Speaks . . ." contains a series of one-page articles. These articles explain the practical meanings of technical words that are used in describing and measuring the mechanical properties of metals and alloys such as stress-strain, impact strength, Curie point, elastic limit and thermal expansion.

Written by the Development and Research Division of The International Nickel Company, the purpose of the book is to assist students and others interested in learning how to appraise the various properties of metals. It will be valuable as a permanent reference book on metal terminology. It is available without charge and will be sent on receipt of the coupon below.

ch of the latter depends for achievement upon split-second g, a half-gesture, a curved in- ion, a pause, an eye's flash or nspoken word. These were the tools by which the cast re- ed the Goldsmith play.

Cause: an intrinsic thy within each player of spirit and technique generat- from actor to actor and finally ding over beyond the stage. illary to this is the nature of a 'permanent' one, where from k to week the members acquire ch other member, of his ability of his role, an insight and an understanding that only time and association can give.

In the entire play, after a healthy search we found but two flaws. In matters of make-up and disguise we question the unnatural hair of Tony Lumpkin, his blob cheeks and "grand-opera" eyes — or the face-swallowing wig of Mr. Hardcastle. It speaks well for Don Harron and Colin Eaton in the spirited enacting of their respective roles to have overcome the obstacle to a large extent.

But these minutae were far out- shone by the competent cast: the bristling vitality of Margot Christie's Mrs. Hardcastle, Robert Christie's supple, effusive Marlow, or the commanding presence of Pegi Brown lost in her Kate Hard- castle, or her artful barmaid.

In his Poetry and Truth, Goethe remarked that the highest problem of all art is to produce by illusion the semblance of high reality. In the NPS production much of that problem has been solved.

Radio: Stage 50

Andrew Allen's CBC concurrence of Sheridan's "The Rivals", with the New Play Society's "She Stoops To Conquer" was undoubtedly a boon to students of 18th Century treatre. But to us the radiodrama came like a cream puff in the wake of a great feast.

First of the drawbacks was Lis- ter Sinclair's telescoping of the plot. Much of the Sheridan wit and charm lies in the situation and the atmosphere. Neither Mr. Sheridan in the original nor Mr. Sinclair in the adaptation took this factor into sufficient account and the gay spirit of the comedy, seen on the stage, was lost on the air.

The most significant drawback was the cast. Excepting the roles of Lydia, Jack Absolute and his father, the players lacked spon- taneity in their parts. They spoke from the throat, and the dialogue was correspondingly ill-paced and weak.

On the other hand, Lucio Ago- stini's sprightly, fresh, original musical score lifted the listener's expectation and prepared his mood for the theme to come, only to be let down with a thud by the absence of any mood in the acting of the scene. Thus we began looking to each interlude of Agostini between dry, lifeless slices of the Sheridan play.

Next week's production will be "Salome" by Oscar Wilde — which was banned from the English stage for 30 years. The announcer did not state why.

William Glenesk.

Inside U.S.A.

"Inside U.S.A.," which opened at the Royal Alexandra last night and will play there all this week, may not have been originally intended for export, but it is just as much a hit outside U.S.A. as it was in- side.

A bright, fast-paced musical re- vue starring Beatrice Lillie, "In- side U.S.A." is ostensibly based on the best selling John Gunther round-up published two years ago. Apart from the name and one prop there is little similarity be- tween the book and the show.

Ranging across the face of the United States for its scenes, "In- side U.S.A." draws on samples of "typical" Americana for its themes, and comes up with a snappy mix- ture of gentle satire and good fun. The public opinion polls, obnoxious waiters, Hollywood, the "theatah," a daily tabloid, story, and the American Indian are all there, with a smattering of the dance and a couple of ballads thrown in for variety.

Although it isn't entirely Miss Lillie's show, it wouldn't be much without her. She doesn't disappoint an audience, and her polished sense of comedy and incomparable foot- work rank her high on the list of present-day comediennes. Particu- larly good is her skit, "Better Luck Next Time", in which she drives a famous actress to distraction on an opening night with a mixture of nervous little snatches of song, fid- getting, and dire prophecies of the show's certain failure, supplemented by some interesting information — by a ouija board on the actress' private life.

Lew Parker, who plays the male comedy lead, is adequate, but hardly outstanding. He plays his material well, but he is rather overshadowed by Miss Lillie, and seems to sense it.

One of our special laurels would go to Olga Lunick who dances two particularly effective numbers, "Haunted Heart" and "Tiger Lily". Working against a beautiful night scene in "Haunted Heart" and through a colorful "tabloid ballet" in "Tiger Lily", Miss Lunick gave her audience good season for the tremendous reception they gave her on the curtain calls.

With good sets, lots of life, and a great many good lines (examples: "There's a saga born every min- ute," "He was a pilgrim who couldn't make progress," "I'm a seacow named Desire" — Miss Lillie as a mermaid), "Inside U.S.A." is a full evening of laughs and fun. It may not make the American way of life any clearer, but it does make your strongest criticism of our friends to the South a good belly-laugh.

ed the count to 15-12 for Varsity.

No Lack Of Skill

Queens threatened again before the end of the half when they completed a thirty yard march from their own fifty only to have Le- nard's field goal attempt go un- rewarded. Choresteckl further dist- inguished himself with a fine run- back of Lenard's boot as the half ended.

The third quarter play was car- ried on, for the most part, in the centre half of the field but never- theless there was no lack of either skilled or bone crunching varieties of play. Cummings and Lenard both excelled with the toe with the former having a distinct advantage in the distance de- partment and the latter along with Moe Richardson carried off some quick and onside kicks. Varsity tackling improved with Lenard be- ing shaken for ten yard losses by Gray and Lawson and by Moose Mustard.

What might well be pointed out as the real payoff play of the game was the skillful cofin-corner kick by Cummings after an offside penalty had been handed the Blues near the end of the quarter. Bruce's kick drew Richardson right over to the deadline and when the Queens backfielder caught it his balance forced him to step into touch. The quarter ended with a 16-12 margin in Varsity's favor.

A Bryane to Falkner pass went for twenty three yards and a real dipsy doodle lateral pass and ex- tension advanced the ball to the Varsity ten yard line. The Gaels, however, were not equal to the task involved in a major score as they were stopped twice by a strong Var- sity line. Lenard came through on the third down with a field goal to dealock the contenders at 16-16 going into the last frame.

Varsity received the ball on the Queens ten yard stripe as a result of a no yard penalty after their thrust to the 14 broke down right there. This time a fake field goal attempt evolved into a payoff toss from Cummings to Jack Gray which the former converted making the count 22-16.

Varsity's final threat was called back just inches from success after a Cummings to Lawson pass gain- ed 35 yards. The next play was a reverse which Bill Danychuk made into a near score. The ball, accord- ing to the officials, was fumbled into touch by Varsity and Queens took possession on their own ten. Lenard's second pass attempt from this spot resulted in another ex- plosion when Tip Logan snatched the toss on the Varsity 45 and lug- ged it across for the final Gael score. It was a 55 yard pass and a 45 yard run typical of the Queens scoring plays of the game. Lenard converted with a minute to go mak- ing the final total 22-21 as the gun went the goal posts fell.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

minutes. A few bad breaks (viz.: Dany's touch called back) and one or two lapses evened the score, but the Blues were the better team by three touches. And speaking of breaks, we always thought that the linesmen were supposed to watch the play closely and the refs supposed to have standard inter- pretations of the rule book. How far was the Queen's right end off-side on the last touchdown play for the Gaels?

In answer to numerous critics, may we say that WE did not call Varsity to win 47-0; it was Alim Se Bey. We actual- ly did go to a fortune-teller, and he did call the Blues by forty-seven. Guess he must have added when he should have subtracted.

It would have been a good thing for Varsity if Western had not come back in the last quarter to beat McGill. They will probably beat the Redmen in their next encounter, so that Varsity could split one series and still take the champion- ship. The last week-end has shown that no team will be a shoo-in, and that the Yates Scramble will be a tight race. The stadium should be packed for every game.

P.S. Bob: Can you spare a kicker for the intermedi- ates? The Second Blues played fairly good ball, and should have won on Friday, but their passing attack's ineffective- ness coupled with under-par kicking lost for them.

Looks like a hard season for both teams.

Four Bands, 24 Gals Goal Posts Shattered

What a game Saturday! The guy that said Queen's always play better against Varsity wasn't far wrong. The exuberance of the team flowed into the Queen's rooting section and really set the joint jumping. The Gael supporters shouted themselves hoarse and really put on a good show.

There were four bands in attendance, and put on a display of precision marching that was very well worth watching. Stella McCord really knows her stuff when it comes to twirling her stick. How does she do that one-handed cartwheel and not miss a beat of the baton?

It must have been Queen's throwing those orange smoke bombs out on the field at half time. Next game our chemistry department should come out with some blue and white smokers. How about it you chemers? The cheerleaders were out in full force to strut their stuff; and there were more of them than in former years. Between the two schools there were twenty four. Boy, were they ever pretty!

As one spectator said after the game, "If I have to go through that again, I'll die of heart failure." The excitement didn't die out after the game, though. Queen's had their eye on the goal posts, and made a desperate effort to grab them. The mining engineers were out to protect them, and did very well. But the next time boys, stick around; don't leave the posts to go out behind the band. People might think Queen's got the posts by force.

The Roamaround dance (plenty of roamaround, not much dance) was quiet a success. The dancers were packed in so tight that breathing was hard and movement impossible. With so many single Queen's men in town, Whitney Hall was devoid of women. All out on dates, you know.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

Queen's! Ha . . . . If we were a student at Queen's we would be tempted to hang our head in shame. We have never seen such a poor show in a supposedly sporting contest as that put on by the Golden Gaels. Big Jim Charters especially, should get a medal for his fine sportsmanlike gesture in clouting Dick Brown with his fist. Charters couldn't stop Dick with a legal tackle, so he had to do it with his fist. It's too bad that elbows, knees, and fists can't win ball games. Queen's would be world champs.

Near the end of the game the Blues got wise to themselves and retaliated in kind; up to then, they thought the elbows and knees were accidents. It's all right to have a fighting ball club, but where does spirit end and viciousness born of futility begin? Queen's went into the game as underdogs, but their ego wouldn't let them stay like that long. They came out determined to beat Toronto—how, it didn't matter. They wanted to show that their University was better than Varsity. They couldn't get anywhere by playing the game so they had to make up for their lack of football ability with viciousness.

If this traditional "rivalry" between Queen's and Toronto is going to put scars on the players and create enmity between two good schools it's better the rivalry were quashed.

One final word to Queen's—if you want to show your boxing or wrestling ability, apply it to the boxing tournaments. You've only won them twice since 1913, and your punching will be appreciated more.

As a matter of fact, the game turned out for the best. The Blues got some valuable experience and showed them that defending champions or not, they are not invulnerable. They found out how close they can come to defeat. In addition to this, the team got the two points for the win. Bob Masterson didn't look like he was any too well satisfied with the game, but the team won, and a coach can't be very harsh with a winning bunch.

The one point does not show the true differences between the teams; Varsity held the ball at least 80% of the time, and monopolized play for a great portion of the sixty

After 12-0 Lead McGill Overtaken, Lose To Western

London, Ont., October 8.—(CUP)—Jack Parry's kicking and passing sparked Western to a 14-12 victory over McGill in their opening game here in Little Stadium.

McGill were leading 12-0 in the third quarter when Parry began to pull the Mustangs out of the hole. He kicked two singles in the third, and in the fourth threw touchdown passes to George Arnott and Bob McFarlane. Both majors were converted by Parry.

First Quarter Scoreless

In the scoreless first quarter, the Redmen played impressive ball. In the second they piled up 11 points and booted a single in the third.

First McGill touchdown was scored by Terry Rogers who plunged from the three yard line: Rocky Robilliard converted. Jim Mitchener took a long pass from Harry Irving on the Western 20 and the play was repeated for the second Montreal touchdown. The third quarter single was kicked by Robilliard.

Western started to roll when Parry kicked his two singles in the third. Arnott ran his first touchdown pass 25 yards for the Mustang's first major and their second was brought in by Bob McFarlane, also on a pass from Parry.

Intermediates Edged 7-4 After 4-1 Lead At Half

By MAL CRAWFORD

"We had them cold in the first half; we just petered [out] in the second". That's how coach Don Bark accounted [for] the Intermediates' 7-4 loss to the McMaster Rams in [the] season opener at Varsity Stadium Friday afternoon. [The] game was as tight as the score, and featured very tough tackling and line play by both sides.

Matched Mac

Varsity more than matched McMaster in rushing, getting 13 first downs to McMaster's 5. A temporary let-down in the third quarter by the Intermediates' defence gave the Rams the winning touchdown. "However," Don continued, "considering that we've only had three weeks of practice and no pre-season games at all, the boys played pretty well. It'll be different next time."

The general feeling among the coaches and players was that the team could and would be better in the remaining games.

Varsity took the lead in the first quarter on a well-placed touch-in-goal kicked by Bill Davis, after a brilliant thirty yard end run by Jack Birkenshaw put them in scoring position.

McMaster tied the score [when] Lorne Wrigglesworth kicked a [long] hard punt that took an Argon[aut] bounce over Birkenshaw's head [and] went deep into the Toronto [end] zone for a single point.

Drop Kick

In the second quarter John Gr[ant] kicked a field goal for the Int[er]mediates to put them ahead 4-1. [It] was a drop kick, a rather rare [play] nowadays, when so much stress [is] being put on placement kicking. [The] Blues' seconds stayed ahead [but] they ran out of steam in the [third] quarter, when Lorne Wrigglesworth [again] tossed a long cross-field pass to [Ken] Foster, putting the Rams on [the] five yard line. Ken Lye then carried over on a spinner buck to the short side.

Varsity threatened to score in the last minute of play, when [Neil] West forward passed them to [the] master's twenty, but his pass on the final play was nowhere near the mark.

Injuries

Varsity lost two of their best [line]men at the beginning of the game. Bruce Brown suffered a charley horse while warming up, and Don Shay sustained a possible concussion in the first quarter. Nevertheless, the line played a good game. Joe Errington and Hugh Forge [were] ing the most outstanding on the fence. Frank Kiezcor played a [fine] two-way game at end. Bob Leeming and Rich Howson gave the best display in the backfield.

Kopulos Stars

George Kopulos, formerly with Hamilton Wildcats, was the best of the McMaster backs, until he was carried off with a twisted knee in the first play of the second half. Bill Berezowski, who started the season with Argos, Jim McCracken, Eric Jones, and Ed Link were the hard rocks of the McMaster line.

The Varsity backs often seemed uncertain of which side of the blockers to run, and frequently were past their blockers on end runs. Maybe that's just because we have such fast backfielders.

Anderson, Turner Champs Page Wins In Singles

Art Anderson and Len Turner retained their senior intercollegiate doubles championship at the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club Friday afternoon. After fighting hard to get to the finals, and playing on courts that had been liberally sprinkled with rain the night before, Anderson and Turner had little dificulty in winning the title 8-6, 6-2, straight sets from Page and Labrie, Montreal.

However Anderson did not repeat in the singles event and the crown is now worn by Raymond Page of University of Montreal. Anderson was eligible for the singles finals but decided to secede and save himself for the doubles go with Turner. Hammy Quain of McGill did likewise.

Page beat Mike Cain of McGill, in straight sets, 6-0, 6-1. Page then advanced into the finals and copped the crown when he beat Faguy of McGill, 6-0, 3-6, 6-2.

SKULE GOLF CHAMPIONS TARASICK TAKES TITLE

The faculty of engineering emerged triumphantly from the intramural golf tournament which ended at St. Andrew's last Friday. The individual champion was Walter Tarasick, who had the lowest gross golf score, 75. On the SPS team with Tarasick were G. Smith, who came in with 84; O. LaFontaine 83, and T. L. Manning with 86.

Second in team standing was the UC entry of George Fine, 78; C. D. Haist, 87; N. Schipper, 88, and Ted Luck, 89. Fine was the individual runner-up in the meet. The Vic team came in third.

In the words of fellow contestants Wally Tarasick shot a "blistering eighteen" to come out on top. George Fine in placing second found it necessary to get hot on the back nine, which he did, parring the last seven holes. The tournament was played under ideal weather conditions.

McGill Golf Champions Queen's, Western Follow

The Senior intercollegiate golf tournament was completed Friday at the Cataraqui course in Kingston. McGill was the surprise winner this year in a tournament that was played under very poor conditions as it rained most of the time.

The host university, Queen's, came second with Western third, Varsity fourth and Carlton College fifth. Moreland of Queen's was the individual champion shooting both eighteens in the middle seventies to emerge with a respectable 152 for the 36 hole tournament.

Th Toronto team was made up of Dave Greey, John Pavanel, Hugh Watson and G. F. Smalley.

SPORTS REPORTERS

Intramural football starts on Wednesday. All prospective sport reporters please reaffirm their desire to write by seeing the sport-editor as soon as possible.

U.T. TARS TRAIL

The University of Toronto and McGill University, trailed with 68 and 48 points respectively, in the eighth sailing of the Danmark Trophy regatta which ended today. King's Point, the United States merchant marine academy, captured top honours with a twoday total of 140 points. Massachusetts institute of Technology and Princeton were tied for second with 121 points each.

Sportswoman

Swimming

Rehearsals for the Aqua Show are well under way and everybody is working hard for the final night on October 20.

After this date, however, recreational swimming will begin in the Lillian Massey pool.

This week, Miss Baxter would like to see all those who are not in the show, but want to try out for the Intercollegiate Team. Conditioning should be started and she can be found at the L.M. pool anytime this week.

The Intercollegiate Meet will be held at McMaster in December, while the Intramural Championships will take place about the middle of November.

Lifeguards

A call has gone out for lifeguards. This is an excellent opportunity for all those interested to get in the "swim" and there is a small remuneration for the job.

However, those applying should be their second year with at least their Award of Merit. They are urged to call at the Lillian Massey Building and leave their time-table, name and telephone number.

Softball

Vic II trounced St. Hilda's III by a score of 21-10 on the Trinity field on Friday.

As the score indicates there was plenty of action, but it wasn't all confined to hitting. Shirley Ambridge, St. Hilda's second baseman, drew a laugh from the spectators as she slithered through the mud to beat the ball to first base.

Vic brought in sixteen runs in the first inning, mainly by virtue of St. Hilda's infield errors. However the 2nd inning the Saints tightened up, holding Vic to five runs and bringing in six in an attempt to even the score.

In the third inning Vic held St. Hilda's to three runs, finishing the game quickly to beat the two o'clock deadline.

In a close and spirited softball struggle Friday noon, St. Hilda's tied scores with a hard-playing Meds squad. At the end of the tussle the score was 6-6.

The first three St. Hilda's batters struck out, giving the Meds' pitcher Irene Haine, and Sally Sarles first base, their opportunity to get the ball across the field for the home runs.

Meds continued to hold their own until the end of the third inning when the runs totaled 6-3. At this point, the Saints, with eager determination, took the batting point—added three points to their score and thus heightened the excitement with a tie.

Then Meds, with equal determination, attempted vainly to win their lead. When their third out was judged out, the game ended with the score still tied.

Student Architect's Plan Wins Prize

Expect Lean Years Slash UC Lit Budget Will Guard Surplus

The UC Lit Budget has been slashed by $3125 it was announced last night at the first open Lit meeting. The drop is due, in great part, to the unexpected drop in enrollment, said R. A. F. Sutherland, Lit Director. A surplus of approximately $2700 from last year will be kept to help in succeeding years when the enrollment will be even less.

Undergrad Hardest Hit

Hardest hit by the budget was the Undergrad, whose subsidy was cut from $1,900 to $1,300. This will mean that the Undergrad will be able to publish only two issues this year instead of the four published last year, due in part also to two increases in printing costs.

In order to save money, the Arts Ball will be held in the college this year instead of renting an outside hall. Two tea dances will also be held, but the music for these will be supplied by records instead of a band!

John S. Bull, Social Director, said that the Lit will try to save money on the Follies costumes by renting them to other college or campus shows or by selling them outright on a depreciated basis. He said that there was great difficulty in saving money on sets because the college has no facilities for storing them except in a garage. The damp atmosphere warps the sets and makes their recovery or re-use impossible. Costumes have in the past been used by the Music Club for their productions, but will in future be made available to all groups willing to rent or buy them.

Almost Eliminate Club

The budget showed that the Married Student's Club had been struck off the budget altogether. Until press time, last night, this item was the most hotly contested. Two representatives of the Club requested that a subsidy of $10.00 be voted by the members present to enable the Club to carry on its activities. The motion was carried after almost an hour's debate.

Treasurer R. Hands reported that the Women's Association would pay 40% of the cost of the joint activities this year. Last year they were responsible for 34%. He also said that a charge of $1.25 would be made for the Graduation Banquet. In former years, it was the policy of the Lit to make this banquet free to members of the graduation class. There would be no charge to those attending the Athletic Banquet.

The motion was carried to have the Robinette Debates continue throughout the year, although the contest will still take place in the spring.

TO SHOW MOVIES OF UNITED NATIONS DURING 'UN WEEK'

Three films on the achievements of United Nations will be shown by the Students Peace Council on Thursday afternoon, Omar Walmsley, president, announced last night.

The films, entitled "Defense of Peace", "One World or None", and "Important Achievements of the UN in 1947-48", are part of the Council's 'UN week'. Booths have been set up in UC and Vic displaying pamphlets and other literature on the work of the United Nations.

"The aim of the Peace Council this year will be to give students an opportunity to study the ideological and scientific aspects of the world crisis," Walmsley said. "University students must be intelligent about the problems of the international scene today."

Later in the term, the Peace Council will study Professor Summerville's "Philosophy of Peace" and Blackett's "Fear, War and the Bomb".

Fewer Students Attend Except Montreal College

Montreal —(CUP)— Most Canadian universities report decreases in enrollment this year, but Montreal's Sir George Williams College boasts an increase of over 500. Last year's student total at Sir George Williams was 2,977, while early this month, a total of 3,503 registered students was recorded by the Records Office.

Plans For Co-ed Union Win Prize For Varsity Student

A thesis submitted by Stan White of the School of Architecture, the design for the new Co-ed Union, won second prize of one hundred dollars in the Pilkington Competition.

This competition is conducted by a council of all the schools of architecture in Canada, and each school enters its three best theses.

White's plan for the Union was commended by Ian Maclennan, of the Student Union Memorial Building Committee, as giving a concrete emphasis to the proposed union. The original site for which White designed the building was not suitable for such a building but the site offered by the University in its expansion scheme is "very reasonable." "It will be easily accessible and is likely to become the focal point of campus life" he said.

The Union as designed contains a chapel, a dining room and a large lounge, as well as two separate lounges for men and women. The business section is on the ground floor, and the basement houses a lunch room, coffee shop, book exchange, and a workshop.

MacLennan would like to see the final plan for the Student Union Building chosen from a nationwise competition. "Such a competition would give us a chance to pick and choose the best ideas from several designs, and would also serve as a stimulus to architecture in Canada. I am sure we would get a big response, especially from young architects who are anxious to establish themselves."

"We want to build a new modern building on the campus which will become a focal point of student life," said MacLennan. "Modern architecture is designed for maximum usability. We don't want any pseudo-gothic creations that are not one thing or the other, and that sacrifice conveniences for exterior curlicews."

Gain Freedom Add Stature

"Freshmen meet a crisis when they come to University — but the crisis met and overcome successfully can lead to greater development of the individual", contended Professor J. D. Ketchum in a Mental Hygiene talk 'University Life—Pain or Pleasure' last Thursday night.

"A new student is faced with new found freedom, both intellectual and social. He must adjust to different methods of teaching," he said.

"Many find their university lives satisfying and enjoyable, but there is a small group who find the life anything but pleasurable. They find it not only distasteful and painful, but even intolerable", he went on.

Professor Ketchum reassured those who did meet the crisis: "The individual who does not have so many problems will not benefit by having achieved a satisfactory adjustment."

"A sincere search for truth is the key to intellectual pleasure which facilities individual growth and provides a fascinating experience."

Bluebeard At Work

By IVAN ARON

Who has the finest beard on the campus?

The Varsity nominates Ernest Saunders, III U.C. Ernie, who was kissed by a girl on The Varsity features staff (see story and picture in adjacent columns), grew the beard while working on a tramp freighter on the Vancouver-Alaska run this summer. "The time and place were right," says Ernie, "and I felt like it, so I just went ahead. I had no ulterior motive. I am not a religious fanatic, haemophiliac, prospective pitcher for the House of David team or loser of an election bet. I just felt like having a beard."

The kissability test, the results of which appear at right, was conducted at the instigation of males of The Varsity staff who are considering the advisability of beards. They are waiting anxiously for the anonymous (by request) beautiful blond guinea-pig to announce her reactions.

Mr. Saunders, staunch disciple of the doctrine of masculine dignity and individualism, has had to endure many stares and whispered comments in his travels about the campus and city. He doesn't seem to mind it — much. On the other hand it has its compensations. Visits to saloons invariably result in offers of beer from the habitues.

Ingesting food and drink is not too difficult. After a drink Ernie can, he says, wring about a mouthful from the moustache. The only precaution necessary is to avoid spaghetti which must always be-

Want a real thrill girls? We can't offer you a ride on a roller coaster, or even a date with Kallinike, but how about a kiss from a man with a beard . . . A-A-A-choo. We tried it yesterday an . . . A-A-A-choo, discovered a new sensation.

First step was to survey said beard with great care measuring it in all its extremities. Be sure of your man and step carefully at this stage. Our guinea pig was very co-operative, allowing us to use a ruler in order to figure the best line of attack.

Second step was to approach Ernie, then skirting around the beard, to discover his well-concealed mouth. Having done this, we took a moment off in order to quiet "the BEARD's" giggling supporters. The photographer then poised his camera, Ernie posed with your reporter; the picture was taken.

Our impressions were vague, but we had said that we'd try anything once. It was tried — nuff said.

SAC To Hold Auction Of Unclaimed Articles ISS To Get Proceeds

Lost property accumulating since The University Lost and Found Office opened will be auctioned off for the benefit of the International Student Service campaign for funds early next month.

A wide variety of articles will be open to bidding. Included are sports equipment, pocket knives, cameras, cigarette lighters, slide rules, all types of clothing, and even rugs.

E. A. MacDonald, Secretary-Treasurer of the SAC, who is managing the sale, terms it "one of the most unique and most effective methods of raising money for a worthy cause."

There has never been another auction like this at the University. Mr. MacDonald explained that the property being sold has lain unclaimed for at least two years, and has now been turned over to the SAC by the Comptroller of the University.

He added that students should get very good articles at reasonable cost.

The auctioneer will be a student, as yet unselected. The sale will continue until the last article has been disposed of.

The starting date of the auction will be announced later, Mr. MacDonald said.

Who's In The Middle?

Which is least safe in student hands? Unlimited money or limited power?

The thinking observer would declare for the former.

The Caput of this University has decided in favour of the latter.

Understand, that in talking of money, we mean the fees collected by the various undergraduate organizations, including the SAC.

Since none of the legally elected student government bodies have any power, it might be said that the power to enforce their own decisions would be a sufficient measure of limited power.

This University has frequently been declared a storehouse of Truth. It would befit the name more, we feel, if the heads of the University started telling the truth to the student body. How any process of thought can allow them to arrive at their amazing double standards, whereby they declare that all students here are adults, yet allot to them less freedom in student affairs than is enjoyed by the pupils of most private schools is beyond our comprehension.

The SAC is composed of senior students of the various faculties of the University. Most of them are allowed to vote even under the laws of this province. Presumably they were elected for their ability. Yet they are not allowed by the University to enforce any decisions they may make as the elected heads of the student body.

Hence the curious situation arises. Students, say the University, must be responsible for their own actions. Students, say the University, must not be allowed to achieve final responsibility for their own actions.

Someone's in the middle.

It's not the Caput.

There Goes Yesterday

There was a great amount of power generated out Burlington way last week. The Davis Bros. musical review "There Goes Yesterday" was electrifying audiences at the Brant Inn. The high voltage was developed by a group of young people who were sincerely attempting and succeeding in providing top-flight entertainment. Their enthusiasm was transmitted to the audience in complete satisfaction to all.

The review consists of songs, sketches and dances from the year 1900 to 1950. For each era appropriate material and costumes were presented. Murray Matheson, a talented English lad, compiled this hilarious effort and his sense of Anglo-Saxon self-ribbing was agreeably evident. In the sketches, "Death of a Salesman" and "Violetta," Mr. Matheson's vocal and comical attributes were also aired.

The highlight of the hi-jinks was John (Navy Show) Pratt's rendition of "You'll get Used To It." In this number Pratt achieves a pathetic, brow-beaten characterization that convulses the audience. This little offering in itself is ample reward for attendance.

"Adjudication," an original sketch by Miss Araby Lockhart, displays this young lady's keen sense of satire and timing. Her portrayal of a small-town, feather-brained vulture for culture marks her as one of the greatest exponents of this type of humour. Miss Lockhart is also somewhat of a magician, insofar as she is poured into eleven changes of costume in the two acts. To Araby goes my vote as "The Girl I Would Most Like to Escort To An SCM Meeting".

Two other young ladies of obvious talents are Charmion King and Teresa Gray. Miss King's monologue gives a back-stage view of the workings of a female mind while awaiting the arrival of her date, and Miss Gray's vivid presentation of a "Carmen" selection is the vocal highlight of the evening.

The Davis Brothers are bringing their show to Toronto in the near future. A treat is in store for all those that go.

Steve Barootes.

Transmigration

Have you ever given thought
To the lessons that are taught
By the people who write books on Transmigration?
It would startle you, it would,
If you thought of what you could
Reappear as in some future incarnation.

Did you realize that you're liable
To become a Gideon Bible,
Or a Lemon Chiffon Pie with custard dressing?
And though some may find it pleasant
To become a nesting pheasant
I would rather not, I can't avoid confessing.

Prithee, think, if hope you do lack
That you might become a Kulak,
Or a lady Carp that lays ten thousand ova,
Or some midnight 'way on high
Flash upon a star-swept sky
As a quite astounding type of Super-Nova.

You might be a movie starlet,
An Elizabethan varlet,
Or . . . but wait, I do not wish to be alarming!
And I trust my dissertation
On the art of transmigration
Has been adequately lucid, brief and charming.

Readers Write

Editor, The Varsity:

I read with avid interest Fagu's article on Balfour's black-list in your October 3rd issue. I do not wish in this letter to contradict Fagu's presentation of Controller Balfour's blacklist but merely to pass on to your readers a quotation taken from John Richard Green's "Introduction to Addison." He says, "In no department of human life does the law of supply and demand operate so powerfully as in literature. Writers and readers are not two different classes of men: both are products of the same social and mental conditions: and the thoughts of the one will be commonly of the same order and kind as the thoughts of the other Even in the form which a writer gives to his thoughts there will be the same compelling pressure from the world about him; he will unconsciously comply with what he feels to be the needs of his readers: he will write so as best to be read."

This would imply many things applicable to us here today. If we are to build a better world, we, the reading public, should force writers of "gay, risque and racy" stories to a higher standard.

I sincerely hope there is a majority on this campus who feel as I do — more power to Balfour and less criticism of his efforts.

Editor, The Varsity:

We, the five students from Europe who are studying on this campus, are writing to you asking you to publish the following letter. It is the only chance we have to express publicly our thanks to the students of this university who made it possible for us to come here.

We are all aware of the difficulties which had to be overcome in order to make this scheme possible. This gesture of yours has been greatly appreciated by all of us.

We should like to thank especially all the the International Student Service personnel for their efforts on our behalf.

ART — MUSIC — DRAMA

C. Laughton

In a far corner of the great platform at cavernous Massey Hall, bared and empty but for a portable lecturn and a worn table, an obscure door opened and plump, commanding Charles Laughton of Hollywood ambled to the worn table with the humility of an artist and all the majesty of a king.

With a cluster of thick books under his arm, and a glass of water in his hand, the softly gray-haired gentleman chatted into his programme with three fables of Aesop, punching the moral home at the end of each. By two chortling ditties he sparked his humour across, played audience resistance, to win their confidence from the first word.

"There was a young lady of Bright,
Who travelled much faster than light,
She set out one day in a relative way,
And came back the previous night."

Then Laughton rose to the sublime. He kindled a flame into the word-magic of Thomas Wolfe — his "Trains and the Moon" that flashed to the mind's eye. There was no question of technique. It submerged entirely in the actor's craft, his re-creation of the poet's spirit, sentiment and mood.

With Andrew Marvel's "To His Coy Mistress", Charles Laughton breathed afresh the court of love convention, wrapt himself in the passion of the poet's lines. Then turned to "Pickwick Papers" to relive Dickens' at Dingly Dell Farm. All the warmth and zest of the party consumed the actor from head to foot, to burst in all directions as he re-lived the parts.

From Shakespeare's Henry V, Mr. Laughton read the Chorus "O for a muse of fire", quickening the imagination by his lifted interpretation. He enacted Bottom, Titania et al. from "A Midsummer Night's Dream", played each part to the hilt, had his audience in spasms of well-earned laughter.

The Laughton reading of the Bible was the highlight of the night. In tones of intensive irony he portrayed the fiery furnace scene from Daniel. Here he revealed his great command of the spoken word. With a dramatic power that held his listeners in a spell, Charles Laughton spoke the Living Word. His Psalm 139 rose like a prayer in a quiet room. There was no applause.

In all poetic work, in fact in all literature lies a message — a hidden life. To discover that message and communicate it is to the creative artist the supreme task. As Mr. Laughton read the Gettysburg Address to close the night, we felt he had performed his task.

U.C. And Victoria In Rugby Opener Today

Intramural Loop Gets Under Way

The four o'clock footballers are at it again with the first clash in the Mulock Cup race slated for today on the back campus. U.C. and Vic will contest the opener and from all advance indications it should turn out to be another of the hard-fought affairs characteristic of interfaculty competition. Coaches Lew Fick of Victoria and Phil Downey of U.C. report their teams in fine shape and raring to go.

Worthy of attention in their own right are the new red and gold uniforms to be sported by the Vic aggregation. However Vic will have more on display than their new togs in the persons of last year's ace backfielder, Harry Damp, who was so effective in leading the Vic squad to the finals. Half Tom Dryden, snap Jim Kilgour and Bob Ludwig, an outside are also back from last year's crew.

Among the promising freshmen on the Vic list are Doug Mowatt from Lawrence Park and Jim Rogers a snap from Riverdale. Also starting will be Bob Ralph who handled the coaching chores last year.

Red and White mentor Downey has Pete Webb, who won the Most Valuable Player Award last year at U.C. along with middles Wilson and Grasser back from the '48 squad. Doug Kettle and Ian Smith just down from the Intermediates should lend strength to the U.C. backfield and Downey expects big things from Bruce Miles, a plunging half as well as freshman end Pete Hynbida.

The interfaculty league, in the past served as a training league and proving ground for some of the best intercollegiate competitors. It also serves the purpose of enabling many players who would not otherwise have an opportunity, to play the sport in league competition.

St. Michael's College were last year's winners after a gruelling schedule which was topped off by some really stiff opposition from Meds and Victoria.

Vic and U.C. played the opening game of the interfac loop last year with the red and white crew going down to an 8-5 loss before Vic. UC is out to even the score this year and tonight will tell the tale.

Senior Trackmen Will Meet Today In Varsity Bowl

Varsity Stadium will be the scene of the senior interfaculty track meet today as top track and field men from all over the university vie for recognition. Reed Trophy points are garnered at this meet and Hal Brown, Varsity track mentor, will be on hand to look over prospects for this year's intercollegiate teams.

Barry Lowes of the interfaculty sports staff has stated that the level of competition will be higher by far than in past years and records are expected to fall almost wholesale. The events are slated to start promptly at one p.m. and should run through 'till about three thirty.

E. Tulving, who took individual honors in the Jr. meet this year with three firsts, a third and a fourth place will be on hand as will be Paul Forrestel of St. Mike's who cracked the intercollegiate half mile mark by three seconds and placed first in the 440 at the same meet. Another Jr. meet winner, Mike Zuberec, who copped first honors in the 100 and 220 yard events will compete with such hotdovers from last year as Hryshko, Niblock and Kofmel.

Montgomery Tops Girl Racqueteers

Elimination matches for the contenders for the Women's Intercollegiate Tennis team were completed yesterday as Pat Montgomery claimed the interfaculty singles championship by virtue of a 6-2, 6-1 win over Bev. Downey. Miss Montgomery is in PHE II and Miss Downey in Vic.

As was the case last year, there will be two singles competitors and one doubles team to comprise the intercollegiate squad. The singles players are the winners and runner up of the interfaculty tourney and the doubles team is comprised of the two-semi-finalists. This year's doubles team is composed of Ev Aitken, Vic and Barb Allmond of Trinity.

PHE was the high scoring faculty in the interfaculty matches with nine points. Vic was second with seven and Nursing took third place with five points.

Coats Copped Police Blame Blond Culprit

The Toronto police have issued a bulletin requesting all students at the University of Toronto to be on watch for a young man, wanted for suspicion of theft.

He is between 24 and 26 years of age, and is 5'7" in height, slight build, and has blonde curly hair. He is clean-shaven, wears a light coloured gabardine raincoat.

The charge is theft, and the favorite article for his endeavors is raincoats. He confines his activities to the area around Hart House, making off with an average of one coat per day.

Many of the coats have been recovered by the police, and are being held at headquarters for identification in the properties department. Anyone who has lost a coat recently is advised to visit the station, and look at the coats there.

Hart House Comptroller Mr. Wilkinson said that many of the losses have been through negligence. "If students would avail themselves of the chains supplied for the purpose of protecting their belongings, and rent one of the locks which we have made available, the losses could be cut down to nothing."

Commenting on the losses, one of the building superintendents suggested that if students would place some identification on the garment it would make the thief think twice before stealing them. This same precaution would also enable the staff to return any clothing or books left behind after lectures. "I suspect that many of the difficulties arise out of the students themselves taking the wrong coat, and when they get their own back, just casually leave the other wherever they find convenient."

Of the coats recovered by the police, some twelve have been identified, and one of these has been claimed. The rest are pending. The main difficulty is identification, as most people have no special marks on their clothing, and those that do often cannot remember the mark when the article is recovered.

To stop the thefts the co-operation of the students is necessary. Use the locks and chains, and report any loss immediately. The police cannot do anything without your help.

Joan Eddis, Woman's Editor, The Varsity, experienced her first air journey with Bill Drinkwater, instructor. The plane, the Fleet Canuck, was used during the war as an advanced trainer by the R.A.F. This is the plane to be used by the U. of T. Flying Club in their Year's activities.

Hepner Leads Orchestra In New Choral Concerts

Every conductor of the University of Toronto Symphony Orchestra probably faced the season with the statement that it would be the best one yet. When Lee Hepner, the newly-appointed conductor, makes that statement, however, one definitely has the feeling that it will come true.

Although a young man, Mr. Hepner already has many accomplishments behind him in the musical field. After graduating from high school in his home town, Edmonton, Alberta, Mr. Hepner joined the R.C.A.F. and while in it he conducted a military band. At present he is in his 3rd year at the Royal Conservatory of Music.

This will be his first opportunity to conduct in Toronto, but he did a great deal previously in Edmonton. Last summer he conducted a series of Pops concerts there, all of which received favorable reviews.

Instead of specializing on one particular instrument, Mr. Hepner has endeavoured to acquire a good general knowledge of all of them, particularly the woodwinds and the brass.

Not only is there a new conductor, but the students will be confronted with a new program too, it is expected. The entire efforts of the orchestra will not be concentrated on one major concert, but will be spread out over five concerts. These will take place once a month and it is hoped that the first one will be in November. These will not be restricted to orchestral concerts but will include several choral concerts, the latter probably taking place in Hart House on Sunday nights. Although the plans for the main choral work are still undecided, it definitely will not be another Requiem Mass.

Mr. Hepner is being assisted this year by a fellow student of music, Elmer Eisler. He will conduct the orchestra for one of this season's concerts.

This is the first year that university students who are members of the Musicians' Union can participate in the U. of T. orchestra. Therefore, as well as a number of freshmen, there are many students in their senior years who are being given an opportunity to perform.

The orchestra is lacking only in string players at present but there are many openings in the singing chorus and all those interested are requested to attend the next rehearsal.

Co-operation Aim As Caput, Students Join On Committee

Final steps in setting up a Caput-Students' Administrative Council Liaison Committee were taken last night at the SAC meeting held in the Medical Board Room. A letter from the secretary of the Caput to the SAC informed the Council of the set-up of the Liaison Committee which marks the first direct contact between students and the Caput.

Five members of the Caput, including University President Sidney Smith, have been appointed. Five SAC members, Council President Bob Hetherington, Vice-president Ruth Comfort, Secretary-Treasurer E. A. Macdonald, Associate Secretary-Treasurer Miss A. E. M. Parkes, and one of the faculty representatives to the SAC, will make up the SAC part of the Liaison Committee.

The Committee, which is expected to meet in the near future, will be chaired by President Smith and will have jurisdiction to discuss "any matter coming under the head of general legislative functions, as distinct from judicial functions of the Caput, as referred to it by the Caput or the President.

The Liaison Committee, termed "a significant step in student-Caput relations" by SAC President Hetherington, results from negotiations begun by last year's Council. Among the first problems to be discussed by the Committee will be the problem of parking on the campus, which has become acute and is in need of immediate attention.

Moving quickly through a long agenda the Council also:

Unanimously elected Carmen Guild, Graduate Secretary of Hart House, as SAC Chairman for the coming year. Guild, who graduated from University College in 1948, will take office at the next meeting of the Council and will guide its discussions through the year.

Held some discussion on Varsity editorial policy. Objecting strenuously to an editorial in Wednesday's Varsity, SAC President Hetherington said that he considered the editorial "punk, immature and not worthy of printing in The Varsity."

Suggesting that The Varsity's editorial policy should "come under the jurisdiction of the SAC", Hetherington called for a full dress discussion of the relationship between The Varsity and The Council at the next SAC meeting. Also slated for discussion at the next meeting will be the aims of the SAC in the field of student government, the subject which the offensive editorial dealt with.

—Heard a report from the Music Committee who detailed plans for the University Symphony and All-Varsity Mixed Chorus for the coming year. The Committee also reported on the Carnegie Record Collection which will be re-opened with a concert on Monday, Oct 17, in the Mechanical Engineering Faculty Common Room. Because it is an "occasion" the committee announced that "tea will be served."

—Took steps to set up a Memorial Union Committee, to tackle the problem of organizing plans for the War Memorial Student Union. Five members will be appointed to assist Chairman Ian McClennan; three from the SAC and two students from the University at large.

English Fabians Lecture Subject Of Noted Briton

Mrs. Margaret Isobel Cole, noted British authoress and lecturer on contemporary politics will visit the U. of T. on October 17 and 18 on her North American lecture tour. She will speak in the Economics Building on the English Fabian Movement.

Mrs. Cole's husband, G. D. H. Cole, is chichle Professor of Social and Political Theory at Oxford, and is known for the books he has written on European and British politics. Together, they have written many books on politics, unionism and socialism, as well as detective stories.

Mrs. Cole was educated at the Rodean School, Brighton, and Girton College, Cambridge, where she received first class honors in Classical Tripos. She was Classical Mistress at St. Paul's Girls' School. She became assistant secretary of the labour research department.

Her articles have appeared in most well-known British papers and periodicals such as The Evening Standard, The New Statesman, Highway, and Listener.

She was elected Honorable Secretary of the New Fabian Research Bureau in 1935, and held that post until 1939. She is still a member of this Society.

Mrs. Cole has written and edited many books on politics, economics, labour, and Russia, such as the New Economic Revolution (1937), Our Soviet Ally (1943), the General Election and After (1945), the Rate for the Job (1946), and Makers of the Labour Movement (1948).

H. G. Wilshire, in his 'Fabian Essays in Socialism' writes that the "aim of the Society is the reorganization of Society by the emancipation of land and industrial capital from individual and class ownership, and the vesting of them in the community for the general benefit."

Flying High

Up In The Air Over Nothing

Suddenly the bumping stopped—we were airborne. The breakwater dropped away quickly and grew smaller and smaller. With one arm firmly hooked behind the seat, I settled down to enjoy the view from the window in the flimsy looking door at my elbow.

There was no sensation of height, but below me stretched a Lilliputian world filled with scuttling midget cars and candy-box houses. Maple Leaf Stadium would have fitted into the palm of my hand.

Toys Move

According to Ron, the pilot, our Canuck was cruising along at 95 miles per hour but we didn't seem to be moving. On the other side of the "Ex" a train inched along. What made it go I'll never know, but it was smaller than the electric trains my brother played with. But this didn't seem to worry the same little engine which kept right on going, puffing out thimblefulls of smoke as he went.

"How do you like flying?" Ron shouted above the roar of the engine.

"Terrific!"

"Like to learn?" queried Ron, who is an instructor for the University Flying Club.

"Haven't got the dough," was all I could take time to answer. I was too busy looking at what a little elevation did to Casa Loma. It looked just like those dime castles you buy in Woolworth's to stick in a goldfish bowl.

Give Lessons

Later Ron told me that it isn't so expensive to learn to fly if you belong to the University Flying Club, which is a revamped version of the Ajax Flying Club. As a member of the flying club you can get reduced rates from Lome Airways at the Island Airport.

Not only that but now the Department of Transport gives a subsidy of one hundred dollars to those who get their private license. This applies to those who have never had a license before or attained wings standing in the Air Force. Actually it would cost a club member about one hundred and fifty dollars to get in the thirty hours flying required for a private license.

Considering the fact that we didn't seem to be moving, it took very little time before the campus appeared below us. On the front campus something was going on that we surmised was a soccer game. Actually the Vic players looked like yellow crumbs going helter skelter across a discarded ping pong table.

The distance from Baldwin house to the Museum looked preposterously short. How could I have been late for Anthrop at four after my three o'clock group at Baldwin House? All you have to do is step over UC, pick your way through the trees on Philosopher's walk and you're at the museum.

At night, Toronto can be seen in technicolor all the way to Oshawa. According to Ron Drinkwater, the only way to get an overall picture of the country is to fly. This year, with the Ajax Flying Club becoming an all-Varsity organization, coeds will be able to join and reap the advantages of reduced rates including flying instruction, and free ground school training. Lloyd Wood, president of the club, said "Girls are certainly welcome in the club. In fact the flying club is looking for coed members."

How would you like to fly around the city of Toronto and get paid for it by the federal government? The University Flying Club will give flying lessons to any student desiring it and the Government will give $100 to the one who can solo in the club. Joan Eddis, Woman's Editor, The Varsity, and Ron Drinkwater are shown in the cockpit of a Fleet Canuck in which Joan experienced her first trip.

Federal Education Aid Urged By School Head

There is an urgent need for federal aid to Canadian universities, Dr. G. Edward Hall, president of Western University at London, said Tuesday at a meeting of the Montreal Rotary Club.

He also said the scope of the Royal Commission on Arts and Science is not sufficient for the many financial problems universities face.

Part of his address was as follows: "There is urgent and great need to provide much more financial support for the universities to strengthen and develop those phases of academic work spoken of as humanities and the social sciences, which deal with the human, the economic and the social factors around which the philosophy of the individual revolve."

Spare Two And A Half Cents?

Nearly everybody on the campus wants a Students' Memorial Union but nobody wants to pay for it.

The apparently justifiable line of reasoning is this: the Union is to be for the students, so the students should pay. The bind comes when it is to be decided which students. Some students feel that an increase in the SAC fees would be an imposition on them, since they won't be around when the building has been completed.

The Union as it is now planned will cost about a million dollars. A tentative schedule calling for an increase in fees has been worked out for financing the Union. Five dollars from each student would be set aside for the purpose of providing a building fund.

There are approximately 200 university attendance days in a calendar year. Divide your 200 days into your five bucks and you get two and a half cents.

Where else could anyone get a share in a million dollar building to give to the young'uns coming up just by stinting himself two and a half cents a day?

It May Be Nonsense

There are some insults that are best left ignored and unanswered. There are some statements that seem like insults but are actually so close to the truth that they defy contradiction.

We are wondering into which of these categories a news report published last spring falls.

The story told of a meeting of the Toronto Board of Education at which Board members discussed qualifications necessary for public school teachers.

The point was raised that most Toronto teachers were paid higher salaries than most university professors lecturing in Canada. Trustee W. E. Murdoch asked if there was not some danger of the public school field attracting professors away from the less lucrative business of "professing."

Director of Education Goldring's reply provides the pithy part of this otherwise uninteresting meeting. He said, "Most of them" (university professors) "could not qualify." Amid laughter from the Board he added, "It's a fact."

The questions raised by this statement are: If the professors are as poor teachers as Dr. Goldring has said, why do Canadian universities continue to employ them? If the Board of Education was making unjust references about the quality of teaching in our universities, why has the Board not been put straight? As yet, we have seen no report of a repudiation sent to the Board.

It may be that the Board's statement was one of those insults best left unanswered. Perhaps it comes too close to the truth for contradiction.

Readers Write

Unsportsmanlike

Editor, The Varsity:

If unsportsmanlike conduct is to appear as the subject of a column in the student paper, that column should not be a glaring example in itself. The column, "Speaking of Sport" by Bob Dnieper, concerning the Gaels-Blues game was the grossest act of ungentlemanly reporting that I have had the misfortune to read in The Varsity.

This article, written by one of the Assistant Sports Editors, I feel sure, has aroused the ire of many students on the campus, such that an apology should be forwarded to the students of Queen's University and also to the students of the University of Toronto for allowing such an article to appear.

Low Standard

Editor, The Varsity:

Bob Dnieper's column has never been particularly impressive, but in Tuesday's issue he managed to display the ultimate in poor sportsmanship and ill manners.

Perhaps the game was a little rougher than usual but it was a good game and we won. Beefing on the part of the losers is frowned upon; on the part of the winners is unpardonable.

If Mr. Dnieper doesn't like the Queen's team let him tell the players personally. Let's not permit his whining to drag The Varsity below its present low standard.

Board Rules DVA Grants Are Taxable

A DVA allowance for a student veteran can prevent his wife from being classified under income tax regulations as a married person supporting her husband, according to a judgment of the Income Tax Appeal Board made public today. Although DVA allowances are tax-free, the board ruled they are classified as income for taxation purposes.

Husband At Osgoode

The board was ruling on an appeal of Mrs. Celia Bergart of Toronto against her 1947 assessment. At that time her RCAF veteran husband was attending Osgoode Hall Law School.

Her husband worked part time as a clerk in a law office while attending classes. He earned $312 at this job and received $720 in DVA allowances. Mrs. Bergart worked as a stenographer.

In her appeal to the income tax board, Mrs. Bergart argued the allowances her husband received could not be considered income. Thus, she said, she was a married person supporting her husband and entitled to an exemption of $1,500.

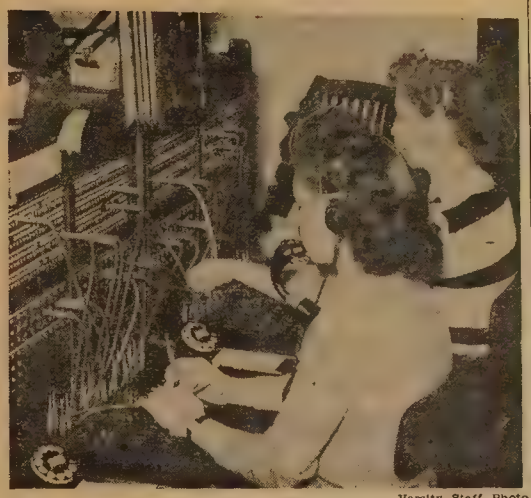
Board Chairman R. T. Graham, in a minority decision, said the allowances are capital grant, not income. Therefore Mrs. Bergart's appeal should be allowed in part, he said.

The board also made a decision on a similar case. Two members of the board, Fabio Monet and W. S. Fisher, ruled that Parliament had intended the allowances as income.

Debating Union's American Tours Topics Selected

The University of Toronto Debating Union will hold its first debate this year on Tuesday, October 18, at 8:00 p.m. in Brennan Hall. The topic: "Resolved that the refusal to admit a certain Queen's professor into the United States was a violation of human rights", will be defended by Wally Fram, IV U.C., and George Slater, III Vic, and opposed by debaters from Osgoode Hall. Any student speaking in this debate will be eligible for the American tour.

The first American tour will consist of debates at Rochester, Syracuse, New York and Fordham universities on November 29, 30, December 1 and 2 respectively. Annually, the American universities decide on a national topic. Once decided upon, this national topic is used in all intercollegiate debates pertaining to national issues. The U.T.D.U. decided that this topic be accepted. Since it is common to all American universities, U. of T. debaters need only to prepare to speak on one topic for the entire tour. The national topic for this year is: "Resolved that the United States should nationalize its basic non-agricultural industries".



During the latter parts of February, there will be another debating tour. Among the universities included in this tour will be Boston University. Boston U. has signified that it is willing to debate with Toronto. It is expected that a "home and home debate" will be arranged at that time.

Expert Cartwheel Squad All In "Very Good Shape"

UC-PHE's squad of seven cheerleaders (including two brunettes and THREE...count 'em...THREE blondes), all expert cartwheelers, were out at yesterday's interfaculty opener between UC and Vic, with Jon Christensen as head cheerleader.

The cheerleaders were chosen at the end of last week from a roup of 17 aspirants by June Pemberton, Varsity cheerleader. They have been practising hard since then, have had one 7:30 a.m. outing Tuesday, and Jon reports the squad rounded into "very good shape".

The five girls on the squad, all freshies, which includes three from PHE will be decked out in red and white cardigans, red skirts and, (shh-h), red panties. The two men, Christensen and Bruce McDonald, both of II Pol. Sci., will wear white trousers and red UC sweaters.

Tryouts last Thursday afternoon brought a strangely assorted group to the UC quadrangle; seven UC and PHE freshies, two Varsity reporters, a Daily Star photographer and a dozen interested male onlookers.

The flash-gun artist, Harold Barkley, tried several poses in order to do justice to the whistle-producing yell-conductors. One shot saw Phyllis Richardson balanced precariously on the husky left shoulder of Bruce Miles, UC foot-baller who had been practising nearby.

Another pose had the entire group, arms over each other's shoulders, executing a chorus line kick. Unfortunately, standing on one leg was not one of the girls' fortes, and the entire line fell backward with a gentle thud just as the shutter clicked.

Girls chosen for the squad are: Joan Ellis, I Art and Archeology; Marg King, I Pass, and Phyllis Richardson, Nancy Elliot and Barbara Greenstain, all of PHE I. Phyllis was head cheerleader last year at Oshawa Collegiate and Vocational School, Barbara was cheerleader at Bloor Collegiate, and Nancy led the Port Credit Collegiate rooters.

Globe Trotters Describe Tours To I.R.C. Today

Today's meeting of the I.R.C., to be held at four o'clock in the South Lecture Hall of Emmanuel College, will feature a round-table conference, in which four students who spent part of the past summer in Europe will be the principal speakers. Following their accounts of what most impressed them during their stay, an opportunity will be given for questions and discussion from the floor.

Jack Tinker, IV Vic, who was a delegate to the I.S.S. Seminar in Holland, brought back an abundance of experience and ideas, many of which he will present.

From a woman's standpoint, Reva Steinberg, III U.C., will tell of her visit to Hungary.

A month's stay in Czechoslovakia, as well as visits to France, Germany, Belgium, Holland, and England, have provided Harold MacDonald, I Grad. Studies, Trinity, with many ideas on the political situation in those countries.

Tom Pope, II St. Mike's, will speak on his visit in Germany.

"With so many viewpoints to be heard, a lively discussion, and an interesting meeting are anticipated," said I.R.C. official, Shaf Nadir, II Vic.

TWO DAILY PAPERS ON CANADIAN CAMPI

Vancouver — (CUP) — Only two Canadian universities have daily newspapers this year. These are the University of Toronto The Varsity, of course, and the McGill Daily.

The third member of the college dailies, The Ubyssey, at the University of British Columbia, has been cut down this year to a three weekly basis, publishing on Tues., Thurs. and Fris. Financial straits of the UBC Alma Mater Society are blamed for this cut.

Sweepers To Vote, Are After Union; Wait Nearly Over

A vote to be taken soon among University of Toronto employees to decide whether they want to be represented by the Building Service Employees' International Union in collective bargaining with the University is the climax of three years' work by the union, H. C. Hambidge, business manager of the B.S.E.I.U., said in an interview Tuesday.

Board Orders Vote

The vote was ordered last week by the Ontario Labor Relations Board. Those entitled to vote are all porters, cleaners, caretakers, maids, wall washers, groundsmen, truck drivers, night watchmen, firemen without papers and powerhouse trimmers. Foremen and those above that rank are excepted.

Hambidge said these workers included a greater number than the union asked to have in its collective bargaining unit. The union had asked to be recognized as the official bargaining unit agent of all employees under the supervision of the Superintendent of Buildings.

Petitions Board

The University applied to the government board to have the vote include all university employees, Hambidge said. The staffs of university residences, the Royal Conservatory of Music and other such groups were to take part in the vote, if the university's request was granted.

The union had opposed this request because the number of workers which support the union probably form a smaller proportion of the unit proposed by the university than they do of the one suggested by the union.

Labor Relations Board officials explained yesterday that the board ruled the union's proposed unit was not proper but this did not mean the one suggested by the university was.

Hambidge commented, "The university's demand that the over-all unit be the appropriate unit for collective bargaining seems to be more obstructive than constructive. It will make it difficult to make a collectve bargaining agreement."

Fears Difficulty

The union official explained that it will be difficult to make an agreement for all the workers because those who work for Hart House, the Conservatory and other such university subsidiaries come under the jurisdiction of separate governing boards. He said he fears these various authorities will not be able to agree on any settlement.

Hambidge said the union began to organize the univessity employees in 1946 when a small group of workers requested aid in organizing.

Get Test Case

At this time there had been doubt whether the University was an employer as classified under Ontario labor laws. Therefore the union had requested to be made the bargaining agent of a small group of employees, using the application as a test case to get a ruling as to the proper classification of the University.

The board had made no ruling because it had considered the group the union wished to represent as too few in number for certification.

In 1948 the university groundsmen, whom Hambidge described as the "nucleus of our present organizing drive", had asked the union to once more attempt to organize the employees.

Would Make Sure

"We decided that this time we would establish definitely whether the University is an employer under the Act," Hambridge said.

A request made in September, 1948, to the Labor Relations Board that the union be made the bargaining agent for the groundsmen was turned down, the union official continued. But the Board had ruled the University was an employer as classified under the labor law.

The union and the University are to decide within the next few weeks the place and time of the vote.

Labor Relations Board officials said the time and place of such votes are usually decided by the union and employer, even though the board has the final decision to make.

School Sessions Teach Teachers To Teach Skule

Members of the S.P.S. teaching staff are being given a series of lessons to improve their lecturing techniques, Dr. K. F. Tupper, dean of the engineering school, said yesterday.

The dean said the lessons are not compulsory and are meant primarily for junior members of the staff.

When told that the lessons are designed especially for junior lecturers, one engineering student, who preferred to remain anonymous, commented: "It's the older ones that need lessons. It's getting pretty bad when one even manages to get his finger caught in his slide rule." He did not explain what sort of lectures would cure such a habit.

Dr. Turner said the lessons are not restricted to junior lecturers. "In fact there were about 100 members of the staff at the first lecture," he added. The first lecture was given last week.

There are to be six lectures this year. Senior members of the S.P.S. teaching staff and Ontario College of Education teachers are presenting the lectures.

The lecture series was suggested to Dr. Tupper last spring by members of the S.P.S. Alumni Association, the dean said. But the idea was probably discussed before that time, he explained.

When asked if he had heard many complaints from students regarding his lecturers' ability on the platform, Dr. Tupper admitted there have been some. But most such comments had come from alumni who had been out of school for a few years.

"It is believed generally that university teaching should not be overstandardized," Dean Tupper said. "But we think most junior staff members could benefit from some instruction."

He emphasized the experimental nature of the lecture series. If the lessons seemed valuable they would

Bryn Mawr Professor Gives History Lecture On Classical Subjects

At five o'clock tomorrow, Miss Lily Ross Taylor, Professor of Latin at Bryn Mawr College, Bryn Mawr, Pa., will lecture on the First Consulship of Julius Caesar, in Room 8 of University College.

On Saturday, Miss Taylor will lecture on Pompeii after the earthquake of 63 A.D., at 2.30 p.m. in the same room.

In addition to being Professor of Latin, Miss Taylor is Dean of the Graduate School of Bryn Mawr College and is a most distinguished classical scholar who has devoted herself particularly to Roman History. She has recently been Sather Classical Professor at the University of California (an honor conferred on Professor Gilbert Norwood of U.C. a few years ago). Her lectures delivered there have just been published under the title "Party Politics in the Age of Caesar."

Miss Taylor has just returned from Italy, where she has carried on further investigations.

Both lectures are open to all members of the University.

U of T Women of Tomorrow May Yet See Campus Home

As far as the officials of the University of Toronto are concerned, plans for the new Women's Building exist only in the mind. They are, however, going through the slow processes which will eventually result in a fine structure.

The great need for a place where the six or seven thousand coeds on campus can meet for sports activities and other recreation has long been felt. Imagine how wonderful it would be to not have to traipse over to UTS for a swim or over to St. Paul's Church for a game of badminton.

But cheer up, little freshies, especially those of you enrolled in II year courses. At present the plans for this building are so indefinite that a site has not even been chosen, but this situation will be remedied shortly. The new buildings are being built according to a priority system and our building is getting closer and closer to the top of the list.

Here are a few undergraduate suggestions:—

Marianne Kokotow, I Pass: I am in favor of a half-decent gym and a deep, deep pool. A collection of good listening records would be wonderful, too.

Joan Isaacson, II O.T. Things like a swimming pool, coke machine, victrola, a lounge and other recreational facilities would be terrific.

Jean Irwin, III Soc. I would like to see girls' sports courts (basketball, volleyball etc.) a general common room and a library.

Fashion Fancies

Roaring Twenties Model For Hairdos, Waistlines

There is no denying it — fashion, autumn 1949, has skipped back to fashion, autumn 1920, for its pattern. The new, short hairdo, soft kiss curls, rising hemline (15 inches from the floor), big billowing greatcoats, and masculine-like suits all remind us of the roaring twenties.

Minimum of Expense

In the last quarter of a century since that era, however, the fashion industry has expanded from mother's dressmaker into one of the greatest industries in the world. One might well ask just how this world-wide industry affects us here at Varsity. Everyone will agree that most girls like to look smart and if their clothes can be up to date with a minimum of expense, they will take the trouble. Now let us see how we can dress up last year's cupboard with a few new pieces.

Separates are the answer for the fashion-minded College girl. Your old sweater and a new straighter skirt are good companions for that basic costume. This month's "Life" is showing the new "Zip-tease" hat by John Frederick which consists of a simple cloche frame of buckram over which are zipped separate covers of various materials and colours. It's a nifty idea for those of you who dislike peasant scarves but want to keep your heads warm in the windy days to come.

Snappy Touches

Jewellery, too, can give a lift to your tired wardrobe. A knotted string of pearls always lends a snappy touch, or if you are one of the many who are constantly losing the front door key why not have your local jeweller weld a hook onto it and add this new charm to your charm bracelet.

Earrings have come into their own with the shorter haircut, simple, sporty ones in silver and gold colours are displayed in profusion in downtown stores. The jet drop earrings are especially good looking for late afternoon wear and are priced as low as one dollar. Remember, earrings can be smart only if they are kept simple for school hours,—rhinestones are definitely out for French lectures.

Charms, chains, and the new leather straps look very smart with tailored casuals. If your last year's coat has that baggy, used look, why don't you nip it in at the waist with a dog chain . . . very smart.

Scarves Colourful

Scarves, of course, are an all time favorite. Paddy green, deep red and fall wine silks are tops for lighting up an otherwise sombre outfit. You can wear them in a loose knot at the neckline or at the belt. Paris loves these color notes to peek out from their new big pockets.

Increasing imports from France have made laces, corduroys, velvets and brocades great favorites this fall. Slim-in-the-front, fullness-to-the-back velvet and corduroy skirts go well with highnecked period blouses of linen or crepe.

Accessories and separates are fun. They can make a basic college wardrobe so much more interesting. All you need is a little imagination plus a good colour sense and you're on your way.

A STORY OF CAMPUS LIFE
By BRUCHOVSKY

(Any similarity to persons, either living or dead, on this campus is purely coincidental!)

(This serial has been endorsed by ten freshmen.)

SOCKO
CHAPTER I

Freshie Lolly Latimore slid into the back seat of the lecture room. Her eyes were fastened with their long, dark lashes on the handsome bald professor twenty-three rows in front of her. His shiny row of teeth sparkled in the brilliant radiance of the twenty-watt bulb.

"False, false joy," she murmured. "I know he's a grandfather, but—"

She whipped out a cream-colored hanky and wiped her mascara with it. It was then she became aware of the brush-cut in front of her, how fine and soft each bristle. By the force of her star-eyed gaze, the Brush Cut turned around and Lolly found herself staring into the limpid, blue eyes of Socko Jones, the campus football king.

"Pleased to meetcha," she sighed.

"Yup," muttered Socko, and blushed a crimson blue.

Looking up, Lolly found that she and Socko had been left conveniently to themselves. But, before she could stop him, Socko was up and away. She awoke from her reverie to find her best friend Mary, gently pounding her on the back.

"Say, Lolly, what are you doing here! The history lecture was in the next building."

"Really? I didn't notice."

"THIS is the Mechanics Building!"

"Well, that explains it! I wondered what had happened to all the girls. I come here every day!"

The two girls walked calmly out, at a fast shuffle, their cheeks pinkening at the entreaties of the engineers to "linger a little while longer." But, as Lolly stepped out into the damp morning sunlight, fate sent a thorn, Peanuts McKay, a senior, to shell her blissful joy.

"Ah say, Lolly, ah say, who are you all going to the football game with?"

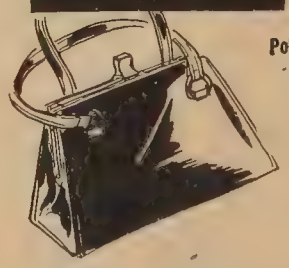
"Why——"

"Ah knewed you'd ask me!"

"But, I didn't! And, furthermore I won't!" She sighed softly. "My heart belongs to Socko Jones."

"Listen, Lolly, you can't do that to me!" Peanuts cracked.

"Oh, no ??"



"See here," threatened Peanuts, "I'll put rock salt in his drinking water at the game! I can, you know. I'm the water boy."

"But, then, he'll die of thirst—

Residents Love It

No Privacy, No Sleep, No Time, No Breakfast

"Golly I wish that I could live in residence." This lament is often heard as city coeds with a long streetcar ride ahead of them watch their resident classmates disappear into one of the large residences on the campus.

Mad Scurry

What is it about residence life that makes those who live in residence love it and those who can't live in wish they could? It's not just living on the campus, or the companionship, or the comfort, or the opportunity to have a dozen blind dates on the Saturday night of a rugby weekend, it's a combination of all these things and something more.

From the time a resident coed is awakened in the morning by loud clangings of bells and scurrying neighbours hurrying to get dressed she is a part of the university atmosphere. There is never time to be lonesome. At breakfast almost everything that will be happening that day is mentioned. Ticket sellers, magazine editors, college show producers, all need assistants and what better place to find them? Every resident who even has one eye half opened in the morning is certain to be asked what hours she has "free" that day to devote to some extra-curricular activity.

Got Any Cookies?

If you try to work in your own room in the morning three or four people drop in to see how long it is since you've been home and if perhaps you have some home-made cookies on hand. Dreadful things to eat in the morning but if you've missed breakfast, and that's not unusual, cookies even at 10 a.m. taste wonderful. Of course along with the cookie there's a lot of back news to be digested and you lay aside your book . . . until later.

And those days of rising with the sun to catch the bus to high school are over and gone. There's lots of time if you rise at 10 for a 10:10 lecture. After all you just have to scoot across the campus and professors never expect resident students to be on time — they don't have far enough to come.

Free afternoons are an academic loss in the fall especially for those living in a residence. A friend, also with a free afternoon, latches on to you and from then on it's a tennis game or a shopping tour, if you're one of those fortunate souls who know where to go and not get lost in the city of Toronto. Many freshies have walked to Simpson's a couple of times before they knew how the streetcars worked.

Dining-room Din

The din in the dining-room at dinner is wonderful. Everyone is talking at once, trying to borrow notes, football tickets or just discussing a point missed in a philosophy lecture. At coffee prospective dates or past dates are dreamt of and shared with sympathetic listeners. Those going out are given specific instructions on what to wear, what to say and what to do and when they finally leave a hundred eyes watch them go from behind doors and out windows. Ah, yes, nothing is private in residence and nothing slips by unnoticed.

At night any number of parties and confabs are held at this time of year. Come March and April the halls will closely resemble the city morgue and the tension in the air will make the least conscientious tremble but spring and exams are spectres in the dim and distant

"And now, Miss Clue," said the eager young Varsity reporter, his newshound's nose on the scent of a good (though dog-eared) story, "would you tell me just why you came to grace the ivy-covered ivory towers of U. of T.

And faced by this seemingly innocuous question, Susie Clue (less) is devastatingly nonplussed. She may hum and haw for a while, and murmur sweet nothings about the beauties of higher education, and her soul-searing passion for things psychological and politically scientific, BUT . . . our boy reporter, with the usual male preconceived notion of feminine motives, waives these (to his small mind) feeble excuses, and proceeds with his article:—

"FRESHIE ADMITS TRUTH! VARSITY SCOOP ROCKS CAMPUS!

U. of T., October, 49 — In a highly confidential interview with Miss Susie Clue yesterday afternoon, the truth about co-eds at college, was finally revealed. After prolonged questioning by your Varsity reporter, Miss Clue, a U. of T. freshie, said, "Yes, I think it's quite obvious to and should be admitted by university women that college is primarily an institution existing for the purpose of catching a man." This amazing statement by Miss Clue casts an entirely new light on . . ." And so the story goes, from crisis to scoop to flash, ad infinitum.

To counteract the results of this dangerous account, university women must be prepared to answer the famous Question in a convincing way. For example . . .

(a) Reply quickly that philosophy fascinates you, and plunge immediately into a rapid discussion of Aristotle's latest theory.

(b) Say brightly, "Honour Science is wonderful. I just adore watching litmus paper change from pink to blue — it maches my new sweater, you know."

What is a SAUSAGE-SIZZLE?
SEE THE VARSITY TOMORROW!

U.C., it's this way...

The column today will be devoted mainly to telling the Sophs and Frosh of the College a few interesting facts and figures about the ANNUAL SOPH FROSH BANQUET AND DANCE to take place next Tuesday night at the Royal York Hotel.

The Soph Frosh was instituted about 40 years ago, according to Principal Taylor. At that time, the Sophs discovered, to their horror, that the Freshman Class, "a bunch of big farm boys", outnumbered and outsized them. The regular initiation seemed out of the question. The wily Sophs, however, devised the Soph Frosh as the initiation for that year, and for some time afterwards it served as the only introduction freshmen and freshies had to their college.

Violence, however, was not to be outdone. It returned to the campus in the more modern era, and the Soph Frosh became the wind-up of initiation ceremonies which it is today. At the banquet, the lights are dimmed, Sophs and Frosh sing the Alma Mater Song "in subdued, dignified tones" and the Torch, signifying the spirit of the college, is passed from the Sophomore President down through the tables to the Freshman President.

Also at the banquet will be addresses by Dr. Taylor on the history of the college and by Dean C. T. Bissell on the subject, The University of Toronto. The newly-elected Freshie President will make the toast to the University of Toronto.

Men and women are paired off as they enter the banquet hall and eat together. Following the banquet, dancing is held in the hall with plenty of Paul Jones's and other mixers.

Music this year, by the way, will be provided by the Stardusters, a 12-piece outfit reputed to be one of Toronto's finest. Incidentally, they specialize in slow music.

It might be well to mention a few figures about cost of the Soph Frosh. Although many of you may not realize it, two dollars a person does not nearly cover costs. It actually runs in the neighbourhood of $3.50 a person with the slack being taken up by the Lit and W.U.A.

Also, ticket sale is being limited this year to 400 persons, although 550 attended last year and there are a total of more than 700 Sophs and Frosh in the college. The Lit and W.U.A. regretted very much that they had to limit ticket sales, but the subsidy depends to a great extent on how many attend and 400 was the top limit which could be afforded.

We should emphasize, thirdly, that it is strictly a come-single-go-home-double-triple-or-more-if-you can do it affair. For the sake of any simple-minded male readers, we point out that this involves buying only ONE ticket.

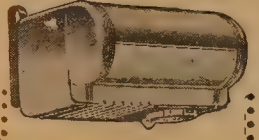
Results of the Frosh and Freshie elections will be announced at the banquet following the elections Tuesday.

Each of the seven candidates, nominated at Tuesday's Open Lit Meeting, will make a three-minute speech at a big ELECTION RALLY next Monday at 1 o'clock in the Junior Common Room. Voting will take place Tuesday from 11 to 2 o'clock in the LIT office in the J.C.R. Please note that all years can vote for LIT assistant secretary-treasurer.

The W.U.A.'s first Open Meeting was held yesterday afternoon with their elections also scheduled for next Tuesday in the W.U.A. Offices tentatively from 10 to 2. A NOMINATION TEA, at which each candidate will give a short address, will be held Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Women's Union Long Common Room.

Jack Novitsky, of the newly-formed Red and White Committee, announces that the first Red and White night will be held Wednesday, Oct. 26. The dance, a come-single affair, will take the form of an After-the-Football-Game "do" since U.C. plays a game that afternoon. Jack also would like volunteers for the few positions left on the Red and White. Apply to him personally at the Lit office from 1 to 2 o'clock any week-day.

The Music Club brings to our attention the meeting of the U.C. Singers this afternoon 5 to 6 at the Women's Union Theatre. The Record Hour, also sponsored by the club, will be held as usual Friday afternoon 4:30 to 6 also at the Women's Union. Classical and semi-classical music is played.



A closing note to publicity directors of the various U.C. clubs and to the reps of the different sports: This is your column. Please have any information on your activities in to the Publicity Director's box, U.C. Lit Office, by Tuesday noon. The deadline is necessary since advertising copy must be in to The Varsity a day ahead of time.

That's all for now. See you next week, meme place, meme temps.

Bill Francis, Lit Publicity Director.

Sleep, what a precious thing it is and how rare. Every morning you swear that tonight you'll go to bed early and you never do, something always turns up. You either succumb to the urgent plea for a blind date or discuss your new religious and political views half the night.

Finally you go home for a weekend, you tell your Mum and Dad about everything you've been doing. You never even mention your course and all you want to do is sleep and they wonder what they sent you to University for.

Film Review

Symphony of Life

In Symphony of Life, a Russian colour musical, currently showing at the King, music carries the picture. The interpretation of Siberian folk-songs can be appreciated and enjoyed even by those who cannot understand the words. The songs and the vigorous Russian dances are an integral part of the picture, rather than specialty numbers dragged in, doing nothing for the picture as a whole, as in a typical American musical.

There is no American emphasis on youth or cheesecake. There is instead an insistence on displaying full-bodied and contented-faced workers. Young, middle-aged, and old, all love music and sing together in warm comradship.

Although this one-sided view is undoubtedly propaganda for an "off to the frontier of Siberia" movement, it is less obnoxious than cowboy-pioneer-open-up-the glorious-west sagas.

The inconsequential plot of a musician giving up his career and love because of a war injury and returning to his native state is tangled by a double lovers-sweethearts mix-up which provides the interest and humour. In the end everything is straightened out happily and the four go on to help build a greater Siberia.

The actions of the leads—Andrei and Natasha, are formal and stiff. It is only in the secondary love affair of Natasha and Nurmal that the director achieves naturalness and plausability. He seems at a loss in depicting the love of a bourgeois aesthete. There is much clasping of hands, gazing into eyes, and abrupt turning of backs which savours of the melodramatic early 20's.

The movie is based on the life of a young musician, Andrei Balashov, played by Vladimir Druzhnikov, last seen here as the star of "Snow Flower."

This is a picture for those interested in a glimpse of Siberia revealing its folk dress, customs, and songs. Russia's industrial development is characterized by scenes of mechanized farm equipment and road transportation.

Freshmen Pharmacists Hold Annual Elections Plan Inter-Class Party

The annual elections of the frosh class of the Ontario College of Pharmacy were held on Friday. At that time, Dean R. O. Hurst was unanimously elected honorary president. Al Duesbury was elected president, Frances Findlay and Doug Lucas, vice-presidents. Joan Legate was made secretary and Tom McKennell, treasurer. A general committee of six was created to oversee class functions. The six are: Miss L. Chabak, J. C. Lounds, Hank Tamblyn, Nate Haber, Harry Zapp and W. C. Wright.

Immediately after the results were made known, the newly-formed frosh executive conferred with the sophs and made arrangements for an inter-class party to be held October 21st.

Art, Music & Drama

Peter Grimes

Yesterday evening the CBC's Wednesday Night program presented to us Benjamin Britten's opera "Peter Grimes." Already translated into eight languages and produced over 100 times, "Peter Grimes" has at last received its Canadian premiere.

It was a thrilling moment for us as we sat glued to our seats in the CBC's studio listening to this strange, often enharmonic yet compelling music. "Stravinsky with Benzedrine" said one critic. A cross between Delius and Khatchaturian," said another. Yes, I must confess that this latter was my sentiment; sometimes it was the Armenian lyricism of the Soviet composer and sometimes the sweet delights of the ex-patriot's "Brigg Fair."

Despite the cuts in the passaglia-interludes, of which there were six, the opera took some two and a half hours to perform yet those of us who were together in the Jarvis Street studio felt that it had been all too short.

"Peter Grimes" was a mile-stone and the beginning of a new era in Canadian broadcasting, yet this does not imply perfection; in fact, there were a number of faults which were none the less painful for their sub-dominance. The gasping of some of the female soloists, the addiction to a deficiency of pitch in one, and the overwhelming and amorphus noise created by the full force of the some ten soloists, the chorus, and the over-loud orchestra was another. On the credit side there were rhapsodic passages which recalled with almost painful vividness the Bach chorales and the choruses from Handel's "Messiah."

Yes, I know we are modern and uninhibited, but does this necessitate Pygmalionesque patter? Nor was the mammal-like moan of "I'll mary Ellen" wholly attractive.

The end of Act One was notable for that delightful show of simplicity and sophistication: "Old Joe has gone fishing and young Joe has gone fishing", which began as a round for three voices and finished up with the original trio, a chorus and the antivoice of Peter Grimes himself.

It was at Act Two that I was so fortunate as to be able to share a score and to this I will make a few references. Ellen's "Peter, we've failed, we've failed", (page 205), was not only a cri de coeur, but also a very beautiful song rendered with intelligence and feeling; a little later on was the mounting reiterative climax of "Grimes is at his exercise," and on page 259 the flute solo and the quasi-plainchant orchestration of the little song of the two nieces: "At the gutter why we should be troubled at their ribaldries?"

But then there is so very much to discuss that I can but beg you to listen when the opera is performed again on October 19.

GET McGILL HONOR

Montreal, October 4. — (CUP) — Field Marshall Lord Wavell, chief of command of the allied forces in North Africa in the early stages of the war, will be awarded an honorary degree at a special McGill convocation November 3.

In addition to the distinguished soldier-statesman, Prof. David Hughes-Parry, British lawyer, will also receive a degree.

• SKULESPOTS •

Lookout, you shirkers, it's back for another battle with the indolent, inhibited, indigent inhabitants of ye Scarlet Shrine. But turn ye not away in despair, for today the news is not all bad. In fact, I might say it's "fair to middlin' ".

The spotlight seems to be focussed on the glory sport of autumn, namely feetsball. Some of you may have seen a tiny write-up in the morning bladder of Tuesday referring to the exhibition game between Waterloo College and our own squad. Don't believe a word of it—some Artsman must have written it, because the boys did all right for themselves in spite of the torrid heat and very soft field. We should have won by ten though. But it gave an indication of possible great future doings by both teams where it counts. The sked births itself today at 4 of the pee emms, with the Seniors spieling with Meds, and then tomorow the young 'uns tilt about with Trinity, same time, same place.

Soccer got off to a roaring start with the senior squad winning 1-0, on a goal by Moffat, over some Arts opposition or other. The team played with but one single sub, thanks to the myriads of potential stars who haven't turned up.

There must be at least a score of characters around Skule who could bolster the team. Fer cryin' out loud don't wait longer, or it'll be too late.

The junior track meet of last Thursday proved we can show our superiority in that field too, for when the dust had cleared from the cinders, S.P.S. was discovered firmly entrenched in second place. I haven't had time to get the names of the gallant Skulemen who ran and jumped their ruddy old heads off, but congrats, podners, for a jolly fine effort. Now let's see what happens in the senior meet. We could sure use a victory.

Laurels to the golf team, led by Walt Tarasick, who walked off with the interfaculty honours last week. Another feather in the Blue and Gold cap. It's too bad that the intercollegiate team, composed of all Skulemen, couldn have done the same thing in their league.

Once more the cry is heard for lacrosse players, especially burly defensemen. This time the cry is weaker though, as Cully is beginning to get just a wee bit disgusted at the paltry turn out. We promised to enter three teams, but at the present rate, barely two are possible. Get cracking you lacrosseperts and show up for roll-call soon. You know where the dope can be gotten.

Volleyball practise times are posted, so whiffle off down to the board and get genned up. We have six teams entered, graded as to ability, so here is your big chance, all you slightly built guys who can't get into the rough sports. Forty-eight at least are required for the teams, so follow up your avowed intentions (I refer to the card you filled out) and forced me to fill up this costly space with violent exhortations. As hase been announced before, such exertions lead definitely to ulcers.

Once again may I use these columns to advertise for sports correspondents for Toike Oike. All we want is a half dozen jokers who don't play at the games themselves, but who are interested, to drop your name and number into the Publicity Director's slot at the office. You can have your pick of the games, and only need to hand in a brief resume of the joust, so that we can cover all the teams evenly, and report accurately to the masses the results of our quest of the fleece—namely ye Reed Trophy.

Au revoir,
BENNY

Victoria Wins Interfaculty Opener 13-6

Senior Track

The senior interfaculty track meet, originally scheduled for yesterday and postponed because of unfavorable weather conditions, will be held today at Varsity Stadium. Events will get under way promptly at 1 p.m. with the discus and pole vault slated to start the program.

Records are expected to tumble today as such swifties as Paul Forrestel, E. Tulving and Mike Zuberec take to the cinders. Tulving was the individual high scorer in the Jr. meet this year. Forrestel cracked the intercollegiate 440 mark and Zuberec was a double winner at the same meet. Coach Hal Brown will be out scouting for his intercollegiate team.

A. Campbell Conceives Novel Scoring System

By JOHN KENNEDY

A sensational new and different football scoring system has been devised by that well-known referee, raconteur a nd accordion player, Alex Campbell. Alex has been a student of the autumn pastime for these many years and has been often disappointed and chagrined at the final scores in games in which he thought the right team did not have enough points or the wrong team had too many.

To make up for the apparent disparity in the play and the final score Campbell has come across with a sterling idea that may well be given further consideration. While whiling away the long hours of Sunday evening, Alex came to the conclusion that the final score of the Queen's-Varsity tilt last Saturday was not truly indicative of the play. Any loyal Blue fan would naturally say that, but would any loyal Blue fan take the trouble to draw up an elaborate system to prove it? I ask you! Alex did and came up with the result that Varsity beat Queen's not 22-21 as folks would have you believe, but by a score of 33.6-27.2.

How it Works

Here is howthe "Campbell Merit Scoring System" works. Instead of a conservative five points for a TD this new system awards 25. A field goal nets 15, a convert 5, a safety touch 10. One point is awarded for a completed forward pass, and two for a first down. A rouge is five if kicked out of touch without a player touching the ball, if the defender is tackled the rouge is then worth 8 points.

This system if adopted would make the game far more exciting from the fans' sitpoint, and would also tend to keep them awake and intent upon the game. The higher mathematics involved would make for a nimbler-minded bunch of fans.

For fans who insist upon arguing after the game that such and such a team should have won but—there will be no out. The final score will be truly indicative of the play. It takes into consideration yards gained, passes completed as well as the actual score amassed.

True Score

For instance the game Saturday: Varsity—three touchdowns @ 25 points is 75. Three converts @ 5 is 15. One rouge (touched by defender) @ 8 is 8 points. One field goal @ 15 is 15. First downs @ 2 per, is 44. Completed passes @ 1 is 22. Total Varsity—168. Now for some unexplained reason (maybe to conserve space) Campbell insists that this gross score be divided by five and gets 33.6.

Queen's Score—Three TD's @ 25 is 75. Three converts @ 5 is 15. One field goal @ 15 is 15. 12 firsts @ 2 is 24, and 7 passes @ 1 is 7. Grand total 136. Divide by five you get 27.2. There you have it. We won more than we thought we did.

This system is good but has a few loop holes. It doesn't take into account penalties, yards gained kicking, or points for gentlemanly play. Aside from that it looks like a plausible system and should be looked into by the C.R.U. officials.

SPORTS REPORTERS

The interfaculty sports program now being in full swing, The Varsity requires sports reporters to cover football, tennis, golf, lacrosse, soccer and other sports. No previous experience is necessary and freshmen are particularly invited to drop in and register. Assignments are never obligatory and new people will find newspaper work both interesting and beneficial.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

Most students at the University of Toronto are entirely satisfied with the way the Athletic Department is being run; but there are also those who complain bitterly about alleged injustices done them. Chief among the complaints heard is "Why do the students have to pay to see the rugby games?"

Apparently some students think they are getting jobbed when they pay an athletic fee and then have to pay a dollar and a half for the senior rugby games. Last year when there was a play-off game in Toronto a tremendous wail went up when it was learned that the coupon book would not gain admission. "They didn't budget for the addition gate, they don't need the extra money, why should students be charged?"

If students think they are getting a raw deal here, they should look at other colleges. The athletic fees at Queen's, Western, and McGill are all between twelve and fifteen dollars. The students at Yale (where they have an 80,000 seat stadium) pay twelve bucks fee and pay the regular admission prices for their rugby games.

There are three sources of revenue for the Athletic Association here — fees ($3.00), senior football receipts, and stadium and arena rentals. Out of this the association has to support the senior and intermediate football teams, soccer teams, fencing, boxing, gymnastic, rugger, basketball, hockey, and swimming teams in intercollegiate competition.

The Athletic Association balances the receipts and the expenditures, then puts anything left over into a reserve fund. This reserve fund has to pay for upkeep and repairs on plant(stadium, arena, fields, etc.) which is a surprisingly large evpense. New buildings have to be put up, and they can't be built with peanuts. The association has planned a new gymnasium to replace the totally inadequate facilities of Hart House. The new gym is to have five courts, and will hold 3,000 spectators. This will take a big hunk out of the reserve fund.

There will be a four or five thousand seat addition to Varsity Stadium built this year. The arena freezing plant was enlarged last year, and a concrete floor is being installed. A reserve for a new roof on the arena comes out of game receipts. These fixed costs are so great, that if it wasn't for the stadium and arena rentals the association would have ended up in the red.

Then of course, these are the fat years. The games are well attended now, but it was not always that way, and may not be for long. During the depression, the Athletic Department was nearly at the end of their rope and were considering cutting out some activities just as Queen's (with their twelve buck fee) are forced to do even now.

It would do well for us to remember several things about Varsity athletics . . . we have the lowest athletic fees (including the cost of rugby admissions) on the North American continent . . . every dollar is applied to the needs of, and recreations for, the students . . . no money from athletics is ever used for any purpose other than athletics . . . the Athletic Association is efficiently run on the best of accepted business principles . . . the department is not getting rich on student ticket sales . . . if students were not charged, Varsity athletic would go into the red.

And by the way, anything we said in Tuesday's column is substantiated by pictures and press-box observations. Since nothing was said in the news columns of The Varsity about rough play, we feel that a column is the place for such comments.

Acorns: Freddie Thomas applied for admittance in Optometry but the application was too late. He intends applying next year . . . Archie Jones is now out with a bad knee . . . UC-PHE lost to Vic yesterday largely through fumbles. The team looks like they'd do better from a T-formation, but Tiger Downie will probably have them looking like a strong team before many moons in any case.

Bobbles Galore As UC Defeated On Muddy Field

By MAL CRAWFORD

After a spotty first quarter, the Scarlet and Gold got right into high gear and trounced University College 13-6 in the Interfaculty opener on the back campus yesterday afternoon. As is usual in first games, both sides made fumbles galore, but there appeared to be little room for doubt that Vic was the better team this time. They finished strongly, keeping the ball in U.C.'s end all through the second half.

The game opened with an exchange of fumbles, and Scott threw a long pass to Walker for what seemed to be a U.C. touchdown, but it was called back on an offside penalty.

A few plays later, the spunky Scott got it back when he grabbed Doug Moat's deflected lateral and ran fifty yards for a touchdown. Mitteff converted.

Vic went ahead in the second quarter when Al George took a touchdown pass from Harry Damp, and Lorne Lodge carried over after a U.C. fumble put Vic on the ten yard line. From then on Victoria had the game well in hand. Their line outplayed the Red and White's decisively, John Anderson, Bruce Ledger, and Brad Colbert being the most conspicuous line stars. Tommy Dryden, Chuck Fick, and Al George all went for big and frequent gains from the backfield. These are only a few of the standouts. After they got to know each other, sometime in the second quarter, the whole team played well.

Walker of U.C. went for several long runs, and along with Doug Scott, was the best back the Red and White showed. Kettle, a fine big end, Davidson, and Tom Webb played good ball on the U.C. line.

Penalties and pass interceptions were as frequent as fumbles. Both teams' pass attacks were rank, and one U.C. touchdown and two or three Vic scores were called back on penalties.

In spite of the nippy weather, the cheerleaders were out in full dress (or should we say undress?). There was a good sized crowd lining the sides, too.

Sportswoman

Drenching rains washed out the softball games slated for yesterday, but Norma Pinnock, Softball President, felt that they could be worked in next Monday and Tuesday.

Sports Cup

Yesterday was a very important one in the lives of all women sports at UC, for it brought into existence the Panhell cup to be presented annually to the woman who contributes most to college athletics in her undergraduate years.

Ball Games

Vic I was defeated in a close softball struggle against PHE I on Tuesday, with a score of 9-6.

However Vic piled up four runs in the first inning while PHE scored only one run and continued to trail the Vic team through to the end of the next inning when the points stood at 6-5 for Vic.

Then, with a spurt of energy, the Fizz Edders galloped in four runs to win the game.

PHE II walked all over St. Hilda's II, Tuesday, to pile up a score of 16-0. The Fizz Ed fielding strengthened by the able fly-snagging of Thelma Henderson, kept the Saints down to a hits and no runs, although they threatened to score in the third.

Elva Rampton not only played a steady game behind the plate but hit two homers, bringing in four runs for PHE.

The Trinity pitcher, Betty Southgate, hurled a hard ball but lacked support from her infield which allowed the Fizz Edders to steal their way around the bases and score on feeble infield hits.

The game between PHE IV and Vic II, defaulted last week was also played on Tuesday in the Stadium. Tension was terrific, but the final score was 10-9 for PHE.

Vic started with a bang bringing in five runs in the first inning but PHE, with the help of Eileen Dicker, second baseman, went one better. Eileen hit a homer with two on base making the count 6-5 for Fizz Ed.

Dorothy Ross' homer was Vic's single tally in the second.

PHE were trailing 9-6 when they came to bat in the third inning. When the game was called at two o'clock, four runners had crossed the plate and Vic was nosed out by one point.

Grant Trophyists To Defend Title

The annual regatta for the Colonel L. F. Grant Trophy, emblematic of supremacy among Canadian Universities in dinghy racing will be held at the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club, Montreal, this weekend. Races will be held Saturday and Sunday afternoons under the sponsorship of McGill University.

The Varsity Sailing Club, by means of a series of trial races, has selected Peter Pangman, George Cuthbertson, Mike Winlo and Bud Whittaker to repeat last year's successful defence of the trophy which the U. of T. has held since 1938. Teams from Queen's University and Royal Military College are also expected to compete. The University is co-operating, by arranging a special excursion train on Friday night, for the convenience of the Varsity supporters wishing to view the races.

Wycliffe In Draw With Pre-Meds

In a hard-fought game on the front Campus yesterday, Wycliffe tied with Pre-Meds in their III Div. game. McDowell scored first for the Medsmen, and Umpherville evened it up late in the second half. The Meds defence was outstanding, and Hesketh and Gerber shone for the Wycliffe.

Play was a little on the rough side at times, as each team tried in turn to put in the winning goal but the game was kept well in hand by ref. Smalley, and a draw seemed to be a fair result.

Legion Brief Asks Federal Education Aid

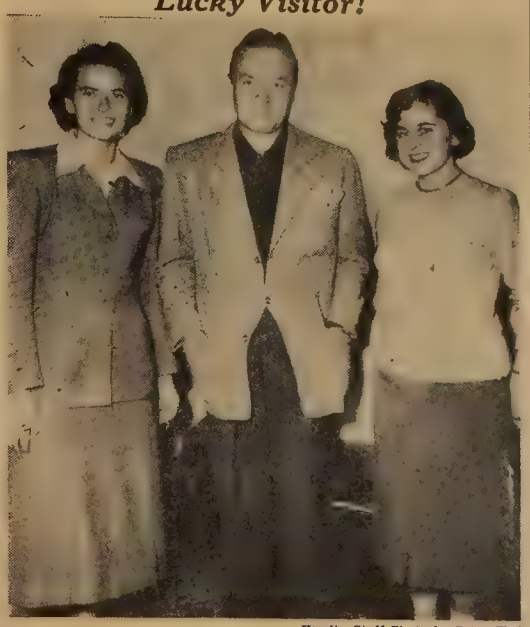
Winnipeg, Oct. 13.—Chancellor Vincent Massey, head of the Royal Commission of Arts, Letters, and Sciences, received a brief from the Canadian Legion making a strong plea for federal aid for education from elementary school to university level yesterday.

The recommendations made by the National Council of Canadian Universities, outlining the critical need for funds, and suggesting government grants and the establishment of government scholarships and fellowships in all Faculties, were supported by the Legion.

Lieut.-Col. the Hon. Wilfrid Bovey of Montreal, Honorary Councillor of Education for the Legion, said that if it can be done for Public Health there is no reason why it can't work with education."

Major-Gen. Bovey's scheme urged the setting up of a government scheme of University Scholarships for 1,000 young Canadians yearly. "If the most deserving young Canadians are to reach their peak of intellectual successes, some kind of bursary system is absolutely necessary," he said. "This country needs, more than anything else, the development of young Canadians."

Other recommendations of the Legion were for Federal Aid to the Canadian Foundation, a body for the promotion of knowledge and understanding of Canada at home and abroad and encouragement of cultural development, "exchange of teachers and students in Canada and other countries, and formation of Boards to advise the CBC and The National Film Board in the planning of educational material more suited to the cultural needs of the community."



The need for more elementary school teachers was also stressed and the shortage of 12,000 which now exists in Canada was stated. The provision for teacher training to be made a part of the federal plan was urged. The brief stated that qualified teachers were necessary "to build that Canadian society in which human rights, liberties, and a diversified culture can take root in the soul of the people."

There was no faith, but here was Hope for Charity. Jane Hill, chairman of the Red Feather Campaign for the University of Toronto, and Pearl Parnes, publicity director for the Campaign which opens next Monday, pose with Bob after his charity show.

Easy Enough To See Hope Girls Find After Going Mad

It really wasn't very difficult to see Bob Hope. All it took was two and a half hours of phoning, running madly around the downtown section of this, our fair city, one pair of torn hose and one traffic violation. Oh, well, it was all for Red Feather—go insane to save a life.

We set this morning for an appointment with Mr. McLaughlin, publicity director of the Red Feather Campaign for Toronto, reading a report of Bob Hope's show in town for the campaign. Broaching a vague idea to Mr. McLaughlin showed us the fallacy of suggesting a potentially dangerous idea to a newspaper man.

Telephones started ringing. We found out the number of Mr. Hope's room with relatively little difficulty. We even spoke to his manager. "Well, yes, dear, I think we can manage a few moments for a picture. Now, dear, you call me back in half an hour and when Mr. Hope wakes up, we'll see." Fine. Great.

Now all we needed was a photographer. Telephones again. The Varsity was very co-operative, but no photographer. Shrieks, threats of suicide, murder and libel, resulted in the loss of one lunch, and the procuring of one photographer.

At last. We frantically dialed the number of the Royal York Hotel. "One moment, please, I'll connect you with the special operator," purred a pretty young voice. Oh, well, another moment won't matter. Just one lecture gone. "This is the special operator, I'll connect you with switchboard," murmured another feminine voice, very seductively. After ten minutes of alternate purring and murmuring, during which we were told that "the li-un is busy," a slightly malicious voice informed us that the room did not answer.

We hung up. Mr. McLaughlin looked at us. We looked at Mr. McLaughlin. We stood up. We left the office. As we entered the Royal York, we smiled at a suspicious policeman and made a bee-line for the elevators.

A little bit of fast talking persuaded a house detective that we really did have an appointment. At this point the door opened, and a very polite gentleman informed us that no one was up. A man in pajama bottoms hovering in the background helped prove his point. Would we wait in the lobby, and phone the room in half an hour? We would.

We sat down beside the house phone. "Well, tell Hope that I called to say hello." We heard the man at the telephone and leapt. After a short conference with the man in question we learned that Mr. Hope was being mobbed, and his room was in siege. We also learned that he was leaving in twenty minutes.

Now there was no time to waste. The limousine and a motorcycle were waiting outside. We mumbled frantically for a few moments and swept our photographer, who had just arrived, to the right fender of the said car.

After another twenty-five minutes of rumors, rides on elevators, some violent activity by The Varsity reporter with us, and a wonderful calm on the part of our photographer, Peter Wade, we learned that the moment had arrived. We dashed up to the fourteenth floor, again. The door of the famous suite opened, and prepared to explain our case and request for Red Feather.

A good-looking, slightly grey-

SAC Music Council Will Reopen Carnegie Records

The Carnegie Record Collection is being reopened next Monday afternoon. This collection which includes over six hundred records was contributed to the students of the University about eight years ago by the Carnegie Foundation.

The reopening is scheduled for Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock and will take place in the Staff Common Room on the third floor of the new Mechanical Building. "Sir Ernest MacMillan will make the official address and tea will be served," Joyce Rous announced.

The SAC Music Council, which sponsors the record concerts, is planning to present them daily from 5:30 to 6 p.m. in the Mechanical Building. Bill Marwick, III Music, has been named official curator, and will appoint a committee to assist him.

The only list of recordings available at the moment is inside the cabinet which houses the recordings. Mimeographed sheets will be made available soon, however, to anybody who is interested, and a request book will be placed in a convenient location also.

The Carnegie Collection includes works of the most famous composers. There are symphonic works, operas and selected arias which are irreplaceable. The collection belongs to the students and because of its immense value, it never leaves the University.

The staff common-room which is being used by the Music Committee has been outfitted with a record-player and amplifier, and in addition the music will be piped through to the students' common room next door so that there will be lots of room for all the interested. There are acoustic ceilings in both these rooms, so that listening should be very enjoyable.

Up until last year, the records were played daily in the University College Women's Common Room, but when this was no longer possible the records were put away. When the New Mechanical Building was opened, the Committee requested that there should be space provided so that the daily concerts could be revived.

Prof. Allcut gave his permission and consequently the collection is being reopened.

Raid On Holwood: Amplifier, Records Stolen Last Week

The theft in broad daylight from Holwood Hall last Saturday afternoon of the U.C. Lit P.A. amplifier, turntable and records, valued at $180, was disclosed yesterday by Jack Hoolihan, Lit President.

"We had held back revealment of the theft in the hope that it was a student prank," Hoolihan said. "It now appears it is the real thing."

Notified Police

University and city police have been notified by Bruce Macdonald, Holwood Social Director who had rented the machines from the Lit for a dance at Holwood Hall last Thursday. No clues have been turned up yet.

Due to pressure of other business on the part of the executive, Macdonald said, the machine had not been returned to the Lit Office Friday morning as was the usual custom.

Time of the theft was definitely set as during the rugby game after Jim Shields, a member of the house last year and now a graduate, said he noticed it was missing on his return from Queen's-Varsity game. Several members of Holwood had played records on the machine Saturday morning.

French doors leading out onto a terrace from the room were open after the game and it is believed the thief or thieves made their escape through them.

"It is highly possible that it was an inside job by someone who pretended he knew a member of the house," Macdonald said. "On rugby week-ends the place is wide open and anyone could have wandered in if he knew the name of one house member."

It is believed more than one man is implicated since it would have been very difficult for one person to carry the heavy amplifier, three or four dozen records and the turntable.

Speakers Untouched

Speakers left up on the walls after the dance, were untouched, indicating the thieves were either rushed or interested only in the amplifier itself. One cord leading to a speaker had been moved slightly, Macdonald said. The amplifier and turntable do not produce any sound without the speakers.

House members also feel sure that an automobile must have been used to make a get-away.

At an emergency meeting Tuesday night, the Holwood executive expressed the opinion that payment of the replacement value of the amplifier, and other equipment taken was the responsibility of the house. The amplifier was valued at $130, the turntable $35 and the records $20.

A joint meeting of the Lit and W.U.A. executives Tuesday passed a motion that Holwood be requested to pay for the machine if it did not turn up by next Tuesday.

Residents at Holwood during the Summer have reported the theft of three suits and last Spring one house member was robbed of $30 by a daring thief who entered his room and removed the money from his wallet which lay in a dresser drawer.

Description of Equipment

A description of the equipment taken is as follows: Amplifier: Heavy, gray crackle-metal case, 30-watt output, two inputs for either microphone or turntables, tone control, built by Radio Trade and Supply Co. and bearing their metal label. Turntable: Dark red imitation leather case, with telephone plug to connect to the amplifier, 25 cycle turntable. Records: 30 or 40 in all, brown and bright red record books. Many of the records had "U.C. Lit" pasted on them with Scotch tape.

Ex-Lit President Grads Secretary Council Chairman

"I am honored to be chosen," was quiet Carmen Guild's response when asked about his election Wednesday night to the post of SAC Chairman.

Guild, Graduate Secretary of Hart House, will take office at the next SAC meeting. He will guide the Council's discussions through the year.

The new chairman was graduated from UC in 1947 with his BA in Psychology. He is a native of Lunenberg, Nova Scotia.

During his undergraduate career, he was Social Director of the UC Lit. and the President in his next and final year. Under the rules at that time he was automatically UC representative to SAC.

"I haven't seen the enthusiasm around the campus that was aroused during my final year over the barring of a Negro student from a national bridge tournament," Guild remarked. He described how the Council organized public meetings to protest the discrimination against the representative of the Hart House Bridge Club. He said little of his own part in the campaign.

Guild also was active in the Players' Guild during his undergraduate career.

Royal Physician Praises Toronto Medical Faculty

Sir James Learmouth C.B.E., surgeon in His Majesty's household in Scotland and surgeon-in-ordinary of the Royal Infirmary, Edinburgh spoke highly of the medical faculty of the University of Toronto in an interview here yesterday. He seemed favourably impressed with the development of medicine in this country.

Sir James, who was educated in Glasgow and the Mayo Clinic, received his M.D. degree at the University of Oslo. He was surgeon to the Mayo Clinic during the years 1928 to 1932, and has been the professor of surgery, University of Edinburgh, since 1939.

This distinguished physician came to this continent on September 23 to give a series of four lectures. One of them was given yesterday in Convocation Hall as a project of the Balfour Lectureship in Surgery. The topic was "Embolus and Thrombosis of the Aortic", and there was a large audience of medical students. Sir James will deliver his other three lectures at the Mayo Clinic, Chicago, and Halifax. He expects to complete the series this month and to return to Scotland on October 29.

UBC Televises Radio Students Pay Small Fee Watch Game In Comfort

Vancouver, Oct. 14—(CUP)—Televised rugby games made their first appearance on the University of British Columbia campus here recently.

Last Saturday, the UBC Radio Society presented a television broadcast of a University of Washington-Notre Dame game to the students.

Over 150 students watched Washington kick off to Notre Dame from the comfort of lounge seats in Brock Hall, the students union. The Radio Society charged the students a fee of $1.50 for watching the performance, and netted about $10 after the rental for the set had been paid.

As a result of the large turnout, the Society intends to repeat the venture, if anything of interest to the campus comes up

Political Clubs

What passes for ivory-towered detachment is, too often, nothing more than apathetic disinterest. This is particularly true in respect to student attitude toward political organizations on the campus.

Open meetings of the four political clubs are meagrely attended; often only a handful of students turn out to hear important and valuable discussions on political policy.

Since it will be the students of this and other universities that will have a major part in determining the future leaders in the political field, it is distressing to see the lack of interest shown in these meetings.

We are not advocating a mass movement wherein every student would join one or another of the organized clubs. But we are suggesting that an awakened interest in the activities of these clubs would be an asset to each student.

The need for keeping an open mind on political questions need not be emphaized here. But an open mind does not imply an empty mind. Ignorance of the precepts of the various political parties is a failing difficult to excuse in a group of people who will presently be expected to take important, if not leading, roles in the formation of political policy for the country.

In the past, fence-sitting has been a popular activity. Strict neutrality and impartiality on certain questions is a good and necessary condition before the questions can be answered. In this case, however, fence-sitting is a weak-kneed excuse to refrain from intellectual exercise. Neutrality in this instance is nothing but an attempt to escape from problems intimately affecting every one of us.

Lest what has been said be misinterpreted we explain that we are not beating the drums for any of the political parties or their campus branches. These organizations seem to have enough vociferous drum-beaters of their own without help from The Varsity.

We would suggest that students should, for the sake of the benefits to themselves, take a more active interest in the meetings of the political clubs on the campus.

The democratic system of government depends upon an intelligent electorate, fully aware of the principles it has to choose from. The first requirement for an intelligent understanding of the principles is a knowledge of the reasoning underlying these principles.

This knowledge can be at least partially realized by participation in the meetings of the University political clubs.

Dear Editor:

I was rather astounded when I picked up Wednesday's Varsity and discovered a picture of a co-ed kissing a bearded male. This in Toronto the good. Gracious me!

I was even more astonished, in fact positively un-nerved upon looking closer, for I recognized the man. It was none other than my old classmate at Moscow Sabotage Tech., the notorious Russian Agent Igor Beavor. Igor is known to the police of the world for his undercover work. He is famous as the man who once smuggled five cartons of American cigarettes into Canada by disguising them as narcotics. Such a character could be quite dangerous on the campus. He could steal, not only the Skule

Refuse Car To Leaders Of UC WUA

The executive of the Women's Undergraduate Association of U.C. does not need a car, it was decided on the debate at the first open meeting Wednesday.

Speakers wanting a car for the executive were Lib McKay and Margot Murray, who felt that a car would add to the prestige of the W.U.A., and be a real help to the executive. Opposed were Evelyn Bowden and Ross Creelman, who felt the costs would be too great, especially since it would benefit the executive rather than the body of the W.U.A.

Nominations for various offices were held, with the vote to take place next Tuesday. Nominees for first year president were: Muriel Chinn, Johanne Ratz, Nancy Porter, Marion Hogarth, and Joan Carley.

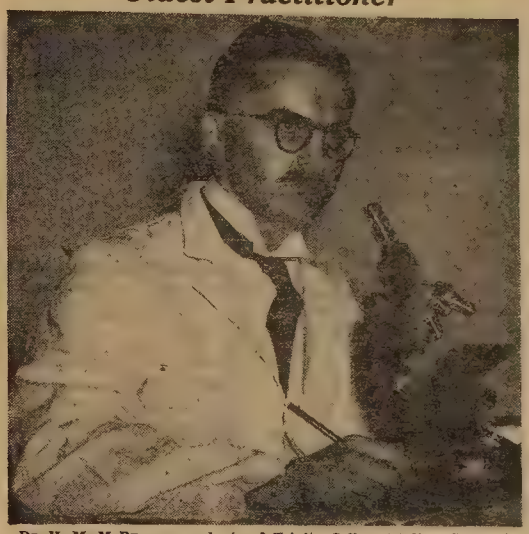
There will be a tea Monday for the first year candidates. There were also nominations for second, third, and fourth year directors.

The presentation of a silver cup to the W.U.A. was made by Margot Murray on behalf of the Panhellenic Association. This cup will be awarded annually to the student who has done the most during her college years for sports in U.C. A miniature replica will be given to each winner.

Copies of the proposed budget were passed out, and it was adopted without discussion.

Annual Banquet For Soph-Frosh To End Initiation

The Passing of the Torch, signifying membership in University College, from the Sophs to the Frosh will highlight the annual U.C. Soph-Frosh Banquet to be held next Tuesday, Oct. 18 at the Royal York Hotel.



The tradition had its origin more than 40 years ago, Soph President Jon Christenson, chairman of the banquet-dance, said today. "At that time, the Sophs found themselves confronted by a physically superior Freshman class so they instituted the Soph-Frosh to replace the usual initiation ceremonies."

A more violent form of initiation returned soon after, however, and the Soph-Frosh became the climax of initiations, the time when new members were officially inducted into the college.

Banquet hall lights are dimmed for the ceremony and the torch is passed, table to table, from one end of the room to the other. The newly-elected Frosh President then takes it up and Freshmen and Freshies officially become full-fledged members of U.C.

Speakers at the banquet will be Principal W. R. Taylor of U.C. and Dr. C. T. Bissell, Dean of Residences. The Stardusters will play for dancing following the banquet.

Oldest Practitioner

Dr. H. M. McBurney, graduate of Trinity College Medical School in 1893 and believed to be the oldest living practitioner in Ontario is shown above in a photograph taken in his younger days. The venerable doctor will be officially welcomed by Varsity Meds. on Monday, October 16 at 1:00 p.m. on the steps of the Medical Building.

Province's Oldest Doctor To Visit Campus Monday

Dr. H. M. McBurney, Ontario's oldest living practitioner, will be given an official welcome to this campus on Monday at 1 p.m. by Bob Hetherington, president of the Medical Society, on behalf of Varsity medical students.

Dr. McBurney, who is now 78, has spent most of his life in practice in the country district of Killaloe, graduated on June 18, 1893, from the Trinity College Medical School. His undergraduate days were crowded with studies and athletics, and he helped finance himself by waiting on tables in a local restaurant part time. After graduation, he did a year's post-graduate work in the Department of Anatomy, where the familiar McBurney's point still bears tribute to his memory.

Dr. McBurney's fiftieth wedding anniversary will take place soon, and if his wife is able to travel, he hopes to celebrate his golden jubilee in Toronto with his many friends here. He will leave his son and assistant, Dr. Bob McBurney, to look after the Killaloe practice until his return.

Queen's Park Bridge Ends Traffic Snarls

The construction which is going on at the entrance to the University from Queen's Park Crescent is a bridge being built over the Old College Road, the University Publicity Office announced yesterday. It will straighten out this corner of the Crescent and thereby improve traffic conditions. Cars entering the University will pass beneath the bridge.

At present the Old King's College Road is closed to motorists and pedestrians. The latter are still walking beneath the construction, however, at the risk of being hit by falling missiles from above.

The bridge, which is to be finished by Dec. 1 of this year, will be about 55 ft. in length. It is to be made of reinforced concrete and will have a rigid frame construction. The complete cost is estimated at $145,382.00.

Trial At McGill Raided By Body Of Dawson Men

Montreal, Oct. 13.—(CUP)—The trial at McGill of errant frosh was rudely interrupted yesterday by a surprise raid organized by 100 Dawson men.

Dawson is to McGill what Ajax was to Varsity.

The trial was held to judge offenders under the McGill Hazing Code, and a large number of senior students were assembled in the McGill Union, either in the capacity of officials or as spectators.

The party from Dawson fought their way into the crowded ballroom, and succeeded in carrying off the Chairman of the Freshman Reception Committee as well as the presiding judge. In a later raid the assistant chairman of the reception committee was also seized.

With the assistance of other senior students, the judge managed to make an escape and return to the scene of the trial to resume his duties. Since he was carrying the lists of the accused, evidence and proposed sentences on his person at the time of his abduction, the trial was delayed for about twenty minutes.

Dave Floyer and Boris Gardarvsky, the chairman and vice-chairman of the Reception Committee respectively, were dragged to Dominion Square, where a summary trial, followed by a mock hanging, on gallows stolen from the Union courtroom, took place.

The Dawson men then bundled Floyer into a car, with the intention of taking him to New York City. He managed to escape in the vicinity of Plattsburg, New York, from where he cabled hurriedly to Dawson for help, since he was slightly clothed and almost penniless.

After the trial was over, the condemned frosh, accompanied by most of the rest of the University, paraded through the streets of Montreal,

College Debaters See Definite Value In Frosh Initiation

The positive value of freshman initiation was upheld last night in the intra-St. Mike's debate in Brennan Hall. The resolution, "that initiation should be abolished" was defeated in a vote of the house. The government speakers, however, were voted to have the better presentation.

Quotes Webster

Fred Furlong, second year Arts, was the first speaker for the government. He quoted Webster's dictionary as defining initiation as "rites, ceremonies, or ordeals". Freshmen, he stated, are confused and frightened; they have no need of ordeals. A humorous and fictitious example was brought forward. Sara Jane Peabody, the typical dumbfounded Frosh, may become a neurotic because of her harrowing initiation. Her reaction will be to take it out on next year's freshmen. Bearing this ominous warning in mind the government speaker suggested that initiations be abolished.

Barbara Lyon, second year English Lang. and Lit., chose a circus analogy to illustrate her point. A circus returns year after year because it is amusing. Initiation continues because it is a means of having fun and a spirited introduction to college life. She maintained that initiations embody the college spirit, and that the experiences undergone together form a basis for future friendship.

She said, "For many people making new friends is not an easy matter, and here again, initiation steps in by providing an easy and natural means of introduction to each other. So many questions beset the freshman: What is NFCUS? and who is Kallinike? They must know someone to whom they will not be afraid to display their ignorance. The activities of initiation establish a feeing of comradeship between the Freshmen and the Sophs."

Criticizes Initiations

Kitty Sheehan, second government speaker, retorted that initiations introduce the worst aspects of university life, and develop a "sadist strain" in the Sophs. She deplored the element of physical danger involved, and the violation of the definition of a gentleman as one "who never willingly inflicts pain".

Dick Bussey, closed the debate for the opposition in a somewhat lighter vein. He pointed out that extraordinary talents and virtues are developed during initiation. He ascribes the ability to find one's way about the campus to the errands run during initiation, and the profound humility of St. Mike's men to the practice of sliding down stairs on their stomachs. "The abolition of initiations would take away from our college a very characteristic mark."

Movie Comedian Praises Toronto Liked Audience

In an interview yesterday afternoon at the Royal York hotel Bob Hope described some of his views and impressions of Toronto and life in general.

Mr. Hope's impressions of Toronto audiences compared to American audiences.

"I couldn't wish for a better audience considering that the show was practically an hour late in getting under way. In fact, it was one of the most polite audiences I have ever played to."

Who did he bet on in the world series?

"The Yankees naturally; I'm an American League man."

What happened to the Cleveland Indians this year?

"Just rehearsing," he said.

How about their chances next year?

"No comment."

His opinion of working with Bing Crosby.

"It's a living."

Throw Greased Tomatoes At Vic Bob Apple Battle

I shuddered behind a steel fence as I watched the first Vic Bob Apple Battle at the little Vic field yesterday afternoon. What is Bob?

It all started in 1872 at Cobourg where the new janitor, Robert Beare, entertained the residence men with "violin music and snow apples". From this function the Bab has for its purpose the initiation of the members of the first year. Through the years it has changed from an evening of violin music and snow apples to a day of initiation, Bob Apple Battle, mock court and ending with a dance.

Prior to the battle I watched the sophomores carry their ammunition to their end of the field. The ammunition consisted of twenty-five pounds of grease, many baskets of tomatoes and if you will pardon the expression a bushel of horse manure. Both teams were dressed in old clothes, bathing caps and some wore rugby pants. The cheerleaders emerged and put lots of spirit into both teams as they went through various cheer shouts.

In case you are curious the idea of the battle is as follows: The Sophs are to protect a pot at one end of the field while the Froshs are to bring an imitation apple (a painted ruby ball) down the field and place it into the pot. The whistle blew and the brave Frosh charged down the field amidst a barrage of greased tomatoes. Three times they tried and in their last drive managed to steal the pot.

Although the Sophs were outnumbered three to one they put up a valiant battle and in my opinion won. The Frosh were full of spirit and it is a miracle nobody was hurt. Referees were Dean Bennett, Dean of Victoria College, and Professor Robbins, head librarian. Dean Bennet stated it was decided by the referees that Frosh had better of battle but due to so many infractions of rules there was no official decision given. No other comment. Jack Whitely said Sophs won hands down. Few infractions of rules. Clare Greene, the chairman of Bob Committee, said Sophs won.

Will someone tell me who won?

Peace Council Shows Films Illustrating Work Of U.N.

Room 11 of UC was turned into a theatre yesterday at 4 p.m. Three films were shown by the Students' Peace Council—"Boundary Lines", "Highlights of United Nations Year 1947-48", and "Searchlight on the Nations."

"Boundary Lines" shows the different kind of lines that separate members of the human race from each other. It starts with two small boys arguing about who has won a small marble in their game. It progresses to show, how, through mistrust and selfishness, wars develop.

Mediation, food, relief work, health services, and aid for children, were only a few outstanding achievements of the UN outlined in "Highlights of United Nations Year 1947-48". A major achievement was the partitioning of Palestine and the bringing of a final peace to that country. During the cholera epidemic in Egypt, vaccine was rushed by various members of the UN to help stamp out the plague.

The actual working system of the UN was the theme of the last film, "Searchlight on the Nations". Some assembly rooms were shown with the delegates seated and ready for conference. Various types of cameras, television equipment, recording machines, newspaper reporters, are always at the scene, and record the happenings of the UN. In the press room immediately after an assembly, news is typed and cabled to all parts of the world.

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

Paul Nash

The exhibition of the English painter, Paul Nash, at the Art Gallery, arranged by the British Arts Council, is one of the most interesting of recent months.

The exhibition is about equally divided between oils and watercolor with a few wood-cuts. Of his watercolors I think "Sunflower and Sun," "Clouds, Hills and the Plains" and "Sunset Eye" the only wholly successful paintings. In the last two we have all the colors of the air, the spectacular reds, oranges and greys of sunset, and the changing greens of the field, all fused into a harmonious and reposeful whole. But it is all essentially water-color — the watery colors delightfully melting into each other. The "Eclipse of the Sun," on the other hand, shows the sunflower, as a flaming sun disc, spinning in space. Oils, thick and substantial, bring out its radiant heat and power.

The "Ghost of the Turtle," some pleasant splashes of grey and olive, shows an appreciative use of the blank spaces in its composition, in contrast to "Hampdens At Sunset" where every square centimeter is covered with paint. There is no nebulous or inchoate background. Flowers and sharply outlined leaves catch and hold our attention. But the straight ink lines in "The Elms" deaden the picture completely stopping the flow of color. The straight lines in his best pictures such as "Dead Spring" change into a rectangular geometry animated with the more intricate or sweeping lines of nature. "Riviera Landscape" shows a cluster of houses and a magnificent sweep of horizon.

Next to these two, "Landscape of the Megaliths," "Voyages of the Moon" (his best abstraction) and "Earth Home" are the best oils.

Leaving, one looks at the collection in a comprehensive view. The long shadows at night are not quite Chirico, the brown geometrical designs not quite Braque, nor the sunflowers Van Gogh. And yet there are half a dozen oils and two or three watercolors that it is hard to tear oneself away from. Paul Nash was almost a great painter.

John Grube.

Donna Grescoe

Donna Grescoe, young Canadian violinist, gave a delightful performance at the Eaton Auditorium on Wednesday night. Her program allowed her scope to exhibit her technical skill and control, and a warm, full tone. She won her audience by her stage manner which was free from drama and left most expression to her violin. Her bowing technique was outstanding, with long powerful strokes and amazing control; her staccato had strong tone and a neat dispatch. Occasionally her bowing failed to bring a rich note, and there were some small technical mistakes in her performance, perhaps caused by her enthusiasm, but her ability cannot be denied and her style development exceeds her years.

Her first piece was "Praeludium and Allegro" by Kreisler in which she was slow in starting, and had to speed up her tempo, which rather spoiled the effect. She made up for this in the Sonata in C Minor by Greig which she played next where she used beautiful expression and tonal contrasts, especially in the first movement where smooth flowing passages were abruptly contrasted by quite shrill tones and staccato.

"By a very special request" she played Bruch's Concerto in G Minor, rather with more expression than the precise technique required. In her interpretation of Schostakowich Miss Grescoe displayed a charming sense of humour and feeling for playful effect. One of her encores was a short "musical joke" as she explained, called "The Canary." This colorful piece was well executed and well received by her audience. Throughout her performance she demonstrated a welcome control of sentiment through careful straint of vibratto.

Her accompanist was Leo Mittman, who proved excellent port in everything they played

DO YOU KNOW.. how little it costs to buy protection at YOUR age?

Everybody knows that life insurance rates are affected by the age of the person to be insured . . . the earlier you insure the lower the premiums. But have you found out just how small the annual premium would be in your own case?

There is another very important reason why it is in your own interests to take out insurance while young. Good health is essential before you can be insured . . . and you may become uninsurable in later years.

The proper type of policy for you can best be determined in consultation with an insurance expert. Why not call the Mutual Life of Canada representative? He has been trained in adapting life insurance to each person's particular needs. Ask him to explain the many advantages of Mutual low cost life insurance.

"La Traviata"

On Tuesday evening a near-capacity house in Eaton Auditorium heard a fine performance of Verdi's tragic opera, "La Traviata." The Rosselino Opera Company, with James Rosselino conducting, proved again that Canada has a great wealth of fine talent.

Dorothy Ann McIlraith sang the heavy role of Violetta with warmth and sincerity. She played the final act exceptionally well — it never reached the ludicrous, a state of being which often occurs in poor presentation of this work.

Everett Rush sang the role of Giorgio Germont, Ella O'Hearne was Flora, and James Hawkins played Gastone. The part of Alfredo, the lover, was sung by Robert Doane.

Anything which Mr. Doane may have lacked in stage conduct, was forgotten when his voice was heard. Here is a true Italian tenor voice: clear, perfectly controlled and projected, and precise.

The sets and costumes were a bit elaborate but were adequate. The orchestra, with Berul Sugarman as Concert Master, gave the singers good support.

It was a genuine treat to listen to such a performance from a truly Canadian company. Mr. Rosselino's group, along with a few others, is doing a great deal to bring a high degree of excellence to the Canadian artistic scene.

Readers Write

Editor, The Varsity:

The rigid application of absolute standards in criticism to all forms of art can have the effect of discouraging and sometimes preventing young artists from displaying their talents and thus gaining the constructive criticism of the public. It could result in only the best artists having the courage to display their works and consequently, I fear Toronto might be subjected to a cultural vacuum. While I would not suggest the abandonment of absolute standards or the criticism should be within a certain standard, that is to say, the reviewer having clearly stated what he thinks is the absolute value of a work of art, he can then criticise it relative to the other works within that standard, and it is here that he has scope for his personal observations.

The review written on Tuesday, Oct. 4, by William Glenesk on a piano recital amounted to a rude personal attack. His continual use of emotionally colored words as in the opening sentence: "Poor old Beethoven was drawn, quartered pounded . . ." was deplorable.

Perhaps Mr. Glenesk wished to display his knowledge. I can think of no other reason for the length of the review if the recital was as poor as he stated. Perhaps he was carried away by his own verbosity. At all events he went beyond the limits of good taste.

In spite of provoking controversy let me say that I believe all criticism of art should be subject to good manners.

Michael Hamilton
Trinity.

Editor's note:
Perhaps Mr. Hamilton's absolute standard of good taste differs from mine.

The plans for this year's campaign have not been announced as yet, but the ISS are planning to concentrate more on international understanding within the University than has been done other years.

haired man with a familiar point at the end of his nose, came out. Our request came amazingly easily, the pose was taken, a bulb blazed, a wise-crack whizzed, and the thing was done. We rode down with Mr. Hope in the elevator, chatting about the show the previous night, and the excellent work the comedian was doing for the campaign.

As Bob Hope entered his car to go to Sunnybrook Hospital, an eager young reporter yelled to a colleague, "Hey, Al, has Bob Hope got any children?" A rather quizzical look was our last glimpse of the Great Man, and we hurried back to the campus, just in time for a three o'clock lecture.

cannon, but also the Skule itself. I set out to investigate.

I was lucky enough to run into Igor immediately. Rushing him to my secret underground hideout in the Hart House Tuck Shop, I questioned him as to the reason for his presence.

"It's simple, Themistocles old Comrade", he said, "I am here to get money. Ever since some of our old comrades at Moscow Sabotage Tech disavowed Communism and wrote best-sellers I decided there might be more money in free lancing. Espionage pays poorly at best and I want to make a pile and retire.

"But tell me, Themy, what are these peculiar women who walk about with clothes-pins on the bottom of their skirts? Do they wish to hang their clothes on a hickory limb, or is it that they are counter-spies?"

After calming his fears of the Vic freshies, I proceeded to find out the reason for his presence on campus. Here is the exclusive true story.

Igor is here as a spy for Western. He is trying to find weak links in our security system so that Western students can come down the night before the game and steal Varsity Stadium thus averting certain defeat.

We have been warned. On guard, Men of Varsity!

Yours,
Themistocles

Bushmen Bushed 16-6 In Bay Street Forest

BILL LLOYD

St. Mike's took up in pretty much the same way as they left off last year in Interfaculty football yesterday on the back campus. Due mainly to the passing of Tony Adams and the receiving of Jud Gibbs, the Irish overcame the Treemen by a score of 16 to 6.

The game was wide open with the ball being air-born on almost every third play. The ground attack was not outstanding, but occasionally the defenses were open enough for several good gains by Austin and Collict of Forestry and Adams and Washington of St. Mike's.

Poor Snap

A poor snap put Forestry back on their own fifteen and a short kick gave St. Mike's the ball within striking distance. A pass from Adams to Gibbs netted the first score for St. Mike's. The convert by Bud Brennan was good.

A short kick gave Forestry the ball on the St. Mike's 40 stripe. The lone Forestry score followed shortly after on a nice pass from Sheldon to Fox. The convert was good.

Good plunging by Lappetito and a Forestry penalty brought the ball into scoring range again, and another Gibbs catch of an Adams pass set up a plunge for a try from a yard out by DeGrassi. The convert attempt was no good.

Adams Stars

The final score of the game came after some fine passing and running by Adams and was climaxed by a short pass to Gibbs after the Forestry defense had been drawn in by line players. Again the convert was no good.

The second half was scoreless, but the play continued wide open. Both teams made field-length advances, only to lose the ball on pass interceptions, or fumbles.

Forestry were led in the second half by the passing and ball handling of Sid Sheldon and the running of Collict and Masterson.

The Irish once again showed a well-drilled team with good quarterbacking and tackling. Forestry played on even terms in the second half, but their pass defense and tackling were not equal to St. Mike's at times.

Lineups:
St Mike's—Gibbs, McRae, McKenna, Brennen, Kite, O'Keefe, Mauchly, Shoresi, Lappetito, Adams, Washington, McIntyre, Lawch, Wiechosek, Neville, Kennedy, Neil, Bergen.
Forestry—Masterson, Austin, Collict, Sheldon, Booth, Price, Clark, Julian, Tomasetis, Brockenbury, Winters, Dowsett, Honeyborne, Boake, Magnus, Deconkey, Davis, Seeley, Vernon, Bell, Dewies, Hundt, Beatty, McKay.

U.C. Takes Track Meet, Vic Jumper Tops Scoring

University College placed high point-getters in nearly every event at the senior track meet yesterday to walk away with the team championship by an overwhelming score. They nearly doubled the score of their nearest rivals, Vic. However, Vic won the individual scoring in the person of Bill Farlinger, who won the pole vault, high hurdles, and low hurdles, and got third in the discus for 17 points. His closest opponent was Tulving of UC, junior meet winner, with 13. UC amassed 66 points to win followed by Vic 35, SPS 17, Forestry 12, St. Mike's 12, Arch. 10, Meds 4, Law 4, Trinity and Dents 2.

A coach!

Just what does that mean to you in this day and age, when sports have become so very important. Teams, games, intramural competition, meets at other universities and last, but not least, the colours that are awarded at the end of the year.

In great-grandmother's time of long skirts with many petticoats, croquet was played slowly and modestly and tea was served in the drawing room at four.

Then, coaches were the plush seated vehicles, crusted with brass trimmings, which transported young ladies of fashion to their various points of destination.

But to-day a coach is much more than a useful structure of wood and wheels. A person, who gives up a great deal of time, yet with the same purpose—to carry "young ladies" to their goal.

Have you ever thought about what would happen to a team if there was no coach? He or she moulds together, into working order, a medley of personalities and abilities, building up strong points and covering the weak places.

A good team emerges after many practices and always the coach is there, showing you a quick pass, a dodge or a new play.

Tough Fight At Montreal Is Expected

The Blues are off to-night for Montreal and a football engagement at the Molson Stadium with the McGill Redmen. It is believed that the Montreal game this year will be no repeat of the 44-0 debacle of the 1948 season. In fact, it's darned sure it won't be the same. Last Saturday in London, the Redmen held the Mustangs to a 14-12 win, after leading 12-0 at the half. In view of McGill's reversal of last year's form, the Blues have been working hard all week, and emphasizing their defense.

Masterson was reasonably satisfied with the Blues offensive last week, but was rather perturbed at the defensive lapses at times. The movies shown Wednesday night only went to prove Masterson's position. The contentious plays (Dany's could-be touch, interference on Chorestecki etc.) did not come out largely due to the fact that some dolt got his shoulder in the way of the camera.

Blues captain Archie Jones may not play to-morrow because of an injured knee. In the event that he does not start, large Ed Fisher is being groomed for the job of replacement. If necessary Harry Hyde will take Fisher's old spot on the wingline. Adam Zimmerman is still having trouble with his knee and it is not known if he will be ready to go to-morrow. At long last it looks as if Murray Hadlow will be ready for action. His injured ankle has responded to treatment, and he has been kicking well of late. This game may not be the battle of the century but it will be darn close to it.

Blues Soccer Club Heads For Big Game

Friday the 14th will be the big day for Coach Barton and his brawny boys of boot. The keenly-awaited annual exhibition game versus the McGill team will put the boys on their well-cleated toes! Last year the Blues were defeated in the same fixture, but we hope things will be different this time.

With Reed, Evans, Thompson, Antoni, and playing-coach Barton from alst year's squad, the team will have a firm foundation. Newcomers include Alain Wyler, young inside-forward, who learned his football in France, and Alec Kuchkuda, flashy outside right, late of Toronto Ukrainians.

With Manager Bill Babcock and Coach Brian Barton again handling the team, the Soccer Blues are making their bid for a seventh successive win of the Blackwood Trophy, emblem of soccer sovereignty. The squad is reported to be "fit, getting into shape, somewhat weak in defence, but prepared for the heavy going which may be expected this season."

The selection for the McGill game is as follows: Goal, Newton Reed (Vic); Backs, Ali Beckwith (For.) and Ted Mercer (SPS); Halves, Bill Leach (Wyc.), Ted Evans (SPS) and Erri Thompson (Meds); Forwards, Alec Kuchkuda (Cand F), Brian Barton (Grad. Studies), Alain Wyler (Emman.) and Jim Allen (SPS). Alts., Glen Williams (Vic) and Jim Wotherspoon (SPS).

Intermed. Blues Meet OAC Aggies

Tomorrow morning at 10:30 the intermediate football team will take on the powerful OAC entry from Guelph. Our country cousins managed to trim Western Colts last week by a score of 25-0 and therefore are not to be taken lightly. It will be painfully remembered that our boys lost their opener last week 7-4 to McMaster.

Earlier in the season the Big Blues won a hard-fought struggle over the Aggies by a 18-7 score. After that game one of the seniors offered his good right arm should our seconds drub the Guelphs.

The Blues are all in top shape and have been working out very hard all week. In scrimmage they have given the seniors a good work out. A large crowd is expected.

Meds Lose To SPS 2-1 In Hard Fought Battle

By MARV HORWITZ

Sr. Skule edged Sr. Meds 2-1 in a loosely played game on the back campus yesterday afternoon. It was the season's opener for both squads. Skule gained their edge when Medsman Danny Vince was trapped behind the line on a bad snap late in the fourth quarter.

The first half opened slowly with both teams taking turns getting rid of the ball through fumbles. The passing and running of Al and Gabe Varga, for Meds, and the running of Bob Asare and kicking of Norm Folensbee featured a dull second quarter. Both lines were charging hard holding the backs to small gains through the middle.

In the third quarter play again see-sawed back and forth, with Meds outrushing Skule but losing in the kicking exchanges thanks to Folensbee's fine hoofing. At the beginning of the fourth quarter some good plunging by Adare and McKendrick put Skule into Meds' territory, from where Folensbee kicked to the Meds' 4. On the next play a high snap sailed over the Meds' line where Danny Vince fell on it for a safety touch and two points for school.

Meds fought back hard hard but time ran out on them. The Varga boys' plunges, and their passes to Dawson and Anderson carried play to the Skule 30 with one minute to go. Two successive passes failed to click and in the second last play of the game Meds tried an onside kick which sailed over the deadline for a single point.

Field Hockey

A special practice for all those interested in playing Field Hockey, will take place on the Trinity field to-morrow morning at nine o'clock.

Joyce Rous, Trinity, and Ruth Bynoe, UC, have been trying to get this sport organized just for the fun of the game and last year a match was planned with Havergal College.

McMaster has expressed their desire to play this year and it is hoped that the two teams get together.

Close Game

UC emerged victorious from their softball match with Vic I yesterday noon by scoring a 4-2 win.

Both teams were evenly matched and it appeared touch and go when the first of the fourth found the score tied one all. Nice team work was displayed by Vic's pitcher Dorothy Parkman and first baseman Denise Crowe. Three U.C'ers in a row hit grounders to centre field only to have them picked up by Dorothy and tossed to Denny for outs.

In the fourth inning Vic's only homer was scored by Di Rogers, but U.C. cinched a win when Barb Davidson hit a high fly to centre bringing in two runs. In the next play she came home making, the final score 4-2.

MORE SOFTBALL

St. Mike's were victorious over St. Hilda's I with a score of 8-4, in a closely contested game yesterday. The Saint's held the lead to the end of the second inning, but with a terrific spurt St. Mike's came through in a spectacular third in-

EMMANUEL EDGED BY KNOX IN GREAT SOCCER GAME

Showing some of the best soccer of the youthful interfaculty season, Knox squeezed past Emmanuel by 2-1 count on the front campus yesterday in the only game scheduled.

Walter Welch was a standout for the Knox aggregation and with his fine play counted one Knox counter while Ainslie potted the other on a neat passing play.

Art Chapple, an erstwhile Middle House star, fired the lone score for Emmanuel after a determined drive.

Varied Views About Europe Cited At IRC

Four different, sometimes conflicting, impressions of Europe were presented to a meeting of the International Relations Club held in Emmanuel College Thursday afternoon. Jack Tinker, IV VC, Reva Steinberg, III UC, Harold MacDonald, I Divinity, Trinity, and Tom Pope, II St. Mikes, each spoke of experiences in travelling through Europe this summer.

Sees Much Collectivism

Tinker, delegate to the ISS Seminar in Holland, spoke of the evidences of the compromise made between a love of freedom and individuality, and the necessity for some state controls in a country of small resources and rapidly expanding population. There is a good deal of collectivism, and a well organized reconstruction scheme that has resulted in providing homes for all, he said.

Strongly emphasizing the gravity of the population problem that Holland, like pre-war Germany, is facing, Tinker said, "The European peoples just can't understand why we won't open up our doors to these surplus European populations."

Reva Steinberg, who travelled with the Beaver Brigade, said reconstruction efforts in the rest of Europe were far behind that of Holland; she found little progress in building has been made in Germany, France or England.

In such countries as Bulgaria and Hungary, where she spent most of her time, "the people are happy in the thought that they are creating their own future". There is no fear of inflation or unemployment among these peoples, she said.

The workers and peasants in Czechoslovakia, as in Hungary, are helped by the government to produce at top efficiency, and the standard of living is good, she stated.

Compares Zones

Tom Pope concentrated on Germany, where he noted the differences between the western and eastern Zones.

He said the Russian zone had a generally lower standard because Russia could not afford to rebuild its section of Germany as the United States can. People in the western zone are hostile to the occupation forces, he said. They were angry at the dismantling program, and had little faith in the democratic system. "There seems to be a rebirth of militant nationalism in the country," he noted. "Germany is again looking for a leader."

Wrong-Way Brave Helps Varsity TD But Champs Lose

By JOHN KENNEDY
Sports Editor

Montreal, Oct. 15,—(Staff)—The re-vitalized McGill Redmen picked Saturday afternoon to win their first home game in four years, when they defeated the Varsity Blues 22-13 in a thrilling game that had everything from onside kicks to a startling wrong-way run. The Molson Stadium was packed for this beautiful afternoon, and more than 18,000 fans saw the game.

Blues Outplayed

Varsity trailed all the way through the struggle until the third quarter when they took the lead momentarily on a touchdown by the Blues reliable plunger, Wally London. Statistics show that Varsity was outplayed in almost every department, as McGill made 22 first downs to 10 for Varsity, completed four out of eight passes for a better average than the Blues who found it necessary to try 27 passes of which they completed 12. The overwhelming power of the McGill ground attack is shown by the yards gained rushing statistics; 416 for McGill to a mere 62 for Toronto.

"Wrong Way" Newman

It was a wide open type of game that saw some great playing and some great mental lapses. The kicking of both teams was very good and both used the quick kick to good advantage. There were several sparkling runs, and some terrific pass catching. The biggest boner of the day, and indeed of the whole season, was the hilarious "wrong-way Corrigan" act of McGill's John Newman at the beginning of the second quarter. After the change of ends, Newman intercepted an attempted forward pass and set out at top speed toward his own line much to the amazement of one and all, especially his team mates who ran after him beseeching him to turn around and head the other way. Newman came to at about his own five where he was finally brought down by the whole Blue team. That little mistake set up the Blues first TD after they had been trailing 7-0.

Blood, Sweat And Tears

At least one young man at this University is willing to lose his life blood for Varsity. Not only is he willing but he has already done so.

Seems he was broke. Montreal and the McGill-Varsity game was a must. What to do? The sale of four pints of blood at five bucks per, netted him the trip. Despite his sacrifice the game was lost.

Robillard Shines

Rocky Robillard turned in a superlative effort for the Redmen, with his towering punts, and deadly kicks from placement. All through the game, except near the end and for a while in the third quarter the heavy McGill front wall outcharged the Varsity line with the result that there were numerous slashes through the centre of the line that went for yards time after time. This same Varsity weakness was also noted in the Queen's game last week. The most thrilling run of the game was a 52 yard jaunt by Pete Robinson around his left end and up the sideline. He seemed to trip himself on the Varsity 30, after he had the whole field beaten. Robinson beat fleet Jack Parry of Western in the 100 yard dash two years ago and was the Intercollegiate dash champ in that year.

McGill showed right from the start that they were really out to

Meds Honor Oldest Medic With First Panacea Ticket

The oldest medical practitioner in Ontario will receive the first ticket to "Panacea", the Medical Society's All-Varsity dance to be held Nov. 4 in Hart House today at one p.m.

The presentation will be made on the steps of the Medical Building, to the sweet strains of an orchestra, as lab-coated ushers keep the crowd in line. Notables from all faculties will be on hand, as Dr. MacBurney is given the ticket.

Dr. H .M. MacBurney is a graduate of the University of Toronto, Class of '93, and has been practicing for 56 years in the Northern Ontario town of Killaloe. Until last year he was still making his rounds by horse and buggy. Then the townspeople showed their appreciation by giving him a new automobile. It is rumoured that the doctor still prefers his faithful horse and buggy to these "new-fangled" contraptions.

This is easily understood when one realizes that the buggy has carried the doctor to assist at more than one thousand births.

The president of the Medical Society, Bob Hetherington, will present the ticket to the doctor, and at the same time a large bouquet of flowers will be given to Mrs. MacBurney.

UC Political Campaign For Freshman President Features Band Stunt

A keen contest for UC Freshman President was forecast today as campaign posters, blotters, handshakes and other electioneering devices made their appearance around University College.

In the race for President are Lawrence Keay, Don Michel and D. J. Lyall Moran. According to the candidates several stunts, including a "40-piece" band, will be staged.

First year secretary-treasurer is being contested by Tony Slama and Terence Stott. Ted Fielder, Lloyd Freel and Blandford Kay are candidates for Lit Assistant Secretary-Treasurer.

Bill Lawrence was elected First Year Athletic Rep by acclamation in the nominations held last Tuesday at the Open Lit Meeting.

Voting takes place next Tuesday, Oct. 18 from 11 a.m. to 2:15 p.m. in the Lit Office in the J. C. R. Results are announced at the Soph Frosh Banquet that night at the Royal York Hotel.

Varsity Lecture

The second in a series of News Lectures for members of The Varsity staff will be given tomorrow in Room 11, University College at 1 p.m. All Varsity news staff and make-up staff are asked to attend: all others interested are welcome.

Stage Skule Nite Soon To Cut Exam Failures

Skule Nite will be presented in the first term this year, stated John Couse, 1st Vice-President of the Engineering Society. The switch in schedule from the traditional spring term show was designed to cut down the high failure rate among producers and directors of the show.

Preliminary casting took place Saturday for both actors and technical crew. Another meeting of all interested in taking part in Skule's annual revue will take place at 2 p.m. today in Room 32 of the Mine Building.

WHEREAS the work of the Community Chest of Greater Toronto commends itself to the attention and the support of every citizen,

AND WHEREAS all those associated with the University of Toronto, ever aware of their responsibilities in the community life of the city, have always contributed generously to the Community Chest,

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that a campaign on behalf of the Community Chest be launched on the campus Monday, October 17th, 1949, and that all members of the University shall respond to the appeal.

Who Has The Answer?

For years scientists have been telling us that the world's supply of raw materials was being rapidly depleted with very little precaution being taken for its replacement. Now the Federal Government is beginning to take action towards preserving one of Canada's greatest assets, her forests.

It seems a self-evident truth that the world's natural resources cannot indefinitely support a growing population. Only last year a world congress of scientists told us that population was increasing so rapidly that in fifty years there would not be enough food to go around. Last year, too, the United States Secretary of Agriculture warned that if present population trends and methods of soil wastage continue it was doubtful if the United States could feed its own people in twenty five years time.

It is heartening to see that action is at last being taken on the government level. The step comes late and will not replace losses already sustained but it is indicative of a growing awareness of the problem.

The indications are good but a complete solution for the question seems as remote as ever. Conservation of existing resources is a logical act for the present but what is the answer if population increases continue? Obviously, resources that are in the process of being conserved cannot withstand a growing demand upon them.

Always ready with a pat solution for most problems Dr. Brock Chisholm has come out in favor of birthcontrol as the answer. However admirable Dr. Chisholm's scheme is as a solution to the problem of diminishing food supplies and increasing population, the most apparent objection to it is the difficulty of putting it into practice. There remains the task of convincing a too-rapidly propagating people that they are endangering their children's food supply by giving birth to the same children.

The same objection applies to those who advocate a plan of sterilization for the mentally incompetent and criminally insane. Who is to draw the line between the competent and the incompetent? Who has the nerve to say which man is criminally insane and which is not?

This, say the proponents of the plan, is mere quibbling. Evolution, they say, has been circumvented by modern science and governmental control must assist in the restoring of the law of the survival of the fittest. The problem remains, in spite of possible quibbling, that to implement such a plan would require a daring far greater than has been displayed by any government of the democracies.

What, then is the answer? From all reports it appears necessary to find one soon. Perhaps the introduction of the forestry conservation bill into the House of Commons will prove to be the first step in the direction of official government interest in the complicated problem.

School or Skule Spirit?

Editor, The Varsity:

In last Tuesday's issue of the Artsman's Scandal Sheet, there appears an article regarding the honorable pastime of defending the University of Toronto goalposts.

This was obviously written by an Arts type suffering from the usual and well-founded inferiority complex. What other reason would he or she be defending something which has not up to the present been attacked?

Getting back to the goalposts (and most of them did get back), if you wish to see them drop around to the "Little Ole Red Skulehouse" some time, after dark of course.

Thanks for the tremendous support from the many Artsmen who merely stood back and watched. What's the matter, are they all chickens? We didn't hear them cluck but they sure laid some bad eggs.

According to tradition, nothing means more to a University's honor or dishonor than to capture an enemy's goalposts or have them capture your own posts. Now then, the crux of my letter is to ask you: since SPS is to be given the duty of defending the University's honor, should not the cheers and songs be officially changed to Toike Oike and Lady Godiva?

Endicott Misleading

Editor, The Varsity:

Mr. Endicott's letter, appearing in The Varsity of October 6, one of numerous attempts by Communist sources to vilify John Hladun is inaccurate or misleading in key details.

I have just contacted Hladun by telephone and understand that he will answer the charges against him in detail. From 1928-33 he belonged to the Communist Party of Canada, renamed during the War the LPP. To say that Hladun has never been a member of the LPP is to stretch the facts. Mr. Endicott's statement that Hladun was "dropped" from the CP "for incompetence' is, of course, pure diatribe for which we have nothing but the word of the Party itself. Until evidence shows the contrary it is just to assume that Hladun's own statement is true: that he left the Party because he could no longer support its principles. Mr. Endicott produces no evidence for his charge.

Mr. Endicott's account of his withdrawal from the debate is, I am afraid, inaccurate. Hladun did not telephone Tim Buck to ask him to support Endicott before the latter "had heard of the debate." Endicott agreed to speak two hours before Hladun called Buck. After this call, Endicott discovered at the LPP office that Buck had been invited and had refused. Endicott saw me an hour later, and withdrew. We talked for twenty minutes. The Hart House Debate never entered the discussion (or Endicott's mind). He told me that it would be prejudicial to Party interests for either Buck or himself to oppose Hladun. Mr. Endicott's implication that he withdrew because Hladun had called Buck before he (Endicott) had been consulted is sheer invention. The real reason is suggested at the end of the letter. Whatever one may think of Hladun's views, whether or not he is an "expert on Communism", it is evident from the Communist default that he knows too much for LPP comfort. Buck and Endicott, two well-known speakers, withdrew in the hope that in their absence Hladun's speech would receive less publicity. As readers of Tuesday's Varsity are aware, that hope was disappointed.

Who Won the BAB?

Editor, The Varsity:

Do you want me to become a martyr for the incompetence of Varsity reporters? If not, why print such a statement as was in your story on The Bob Apple Battle last Friday? I refer to your claim that I said "Sophs won hands down." With those few words all the Frosh class has begun collecting wood for my funeral pyre.

"My statement" is not only false but completely ridiculous. Do you think I had a grease job done on my eyes and my hair dyed bright tomato red so I could proclaim the Sophs victors? The actual story is slightly different.

After the BAB I telephoned your news office and informed them of Dean Bennet's decision, adding that in my estimation there was not the slightest doubt that the Frosh won the BAB. I enunciated as clearly as possible and at no time mentioned anything about "hands down."

I am not discussing who won the BAB, only wondering why my words were so badly twisted. Please set me straight about this misunderstanding.

J. B. Whitely,
Pres., Vic Frosh Class.

Demand and Supply

Editor, The Varsity:

I was shocked by Mr. Robert Gallivan's letter in The Varsity condoning censorship. I don't know what sort of people Controller Balfour is protecting from the corrupting influence of racy stories, but no one at this university, I hope.

Referring again to John Richard Green's law of supply and demand in literature, might I suggest that if there were no demand there would be no supply? The ever-present flood of pornography is merely a reflection of public taste, and censorship is a very superficial cure; in a country that still professes freedom of thought it is also an incongruous and eventually a dangerous one. Whatever Controller Balfour's qualifications as a literary critic or protector of public morals may be, if I should ever have the time and the inclination to read gay, risque, and racy stories I should be most depressed to find that he or anyone else had decided I mightn't.

his time in Czechoslovakia. He stressed that most of the Communists he met there were earnest, altruistically-minded people. Their zeal in working for the new system is very evident, he said.

However, those who oppose the new regime are in a difficult position. Savings in the banks had been frozen, and the monied classes had been forced into jobs that the government gave them. Fear for their jobs and the safety of their families worries those who oppose the government, he said.

Meds Stage All Varsity Circus Dance

The Medsmen will emerge from behind the Ivory Tower within the Ivory Tower, as they play host to the rest of the University at the "Panacea," a huge carnival dance to be held Nov. 4 in Hart House.

The affair will be on a grand scale, as the building is decorated to resemble a circus atmosphere. The entrance will be wreathed in a huge laughing mouth, and the halls are to be turned into a bedlam of attractions. Gypsies, a quick-sketch artist and a variety show in the Great Hall, which will feature the Medical Glee Club.

The whole of Hart House will be open for the dance. An aqua show will be presented in the pool, and three orchestras will provide the music for the dancers.

Bob Hetherington pointed out that the "Panacea" is the first large-scale attempt by any of the faculties to break down the barriers between the colleges of the University. "The purpose is to integrate the actions of similar-minded bodies; and to make closer friends amongst the various professions and arts" he said.

The Publicity Director of the Medical Society, Sid Wax, hopes that the students will appreciate the effort going into the preparations for the dance.

"We need the support of all the students to make a success of this dance. It is an innovation for the Meds to play host at an affair of this kind, and it has been planned on a large scale," he said. "This Ball is being run by the Medical Society, but not for profit. The price, two dollars, a couple, is the minimum for any dance like this. Students will get more than their money's worth, with the standard Meds' guarantee 'If you don't survive, we'll see your relatives about the bill,'"

The first ticket to "Panacea" will be presented to Dr. McBurney today at one o'clock on the steps of the Medical Building, as President Bob Hetherington of the Medical Society makes the official announcement of the Ball, "Panacea."

McGill Frosh Chairman Tricked By Engineers; Fracas Ends In Bar

Montreal, Oct. 13.—(CUP)—Two nights ago, the Frosh trial at McGill was rudely interrupted by a mob of engineers from the outpost campus of Dawson.

In the fracas, the chairman of the Freshman Reception Committee was abducted and carried off to Dawson for a summary trial and a quick conviction.

It happened as follows: Just before the Court convened, Dave Floyer, the aforementioned chairman, received a message that his presence was urgently required in the judge's antechamber. Those requiring his presence were some of the huskier members of the Dawson football team.

After a spirited scene at Dominion Square, at which the chairman and his assistants were the principal figures in a mock execution, the party broke through a police cordon, and made their way to the Dawson campus

The prisoners were retried and their sentences were confirmed. Floyer was confined in the bar of a local hotel to serve out his sentence.

The announcement that the unlucky pair were taken to Plattsburg, New York, proved to be unfounded.

The only official effect of the night's work was apparently a communal hangover.

OT REPS ELECTED

First year Occupational Therapy has elected as Year President Pat Shae, and as Athletic Rep., Betty Riddell. Jean Sheppard was elected Assistant Secretary-Treasurer and Pam Wickett, Secretary of the Lit. Club

Panacea—Backstage

Rod Box and Keith Bennet are preparing the decorations for "Panacea", to be presented by the Medical Society in Hart House on Nov. 4. "Panacea" is the All-Varsity dance at which medsmen are playing host to the rest of the University.

John Pratt In Stage Show Feather Drive Highlight

This is Red Feather Week on the Toronto campus. Beginning today, and continuing all this week the Red Feather Committee are asking for your support for the Community Chest.

Highlighting the week's activities will be a one hour stage show in Hart House Theatre Wednesday noon, and the annual Feather Fair and Tag Day on Friday.

Pratt to Appear

"It's a big show," campaign officials announced last night. Featured will be members of the "There Goes Yesterday" troupe, including John Pratt and Murray Matheson, who will do their "Gay Nineties" number from their current show.

There will be no advance sale of tickets for Wednesday's show, officials said. Those presenting the entertainment have donated their services and will bear all the costs of the production themselves, so that the entire proceeds go to the Red Feather Campaign.

Feather Fair Friday

Friday the annual Feather Fair will be held on the front campus. There will be booths from many faculties and fun for all, campaign officials state. University President Sidney Smith and Miss Red Feather 1949 will be on hand to greet students at the Fair.

The Tag Day will also be held on Friday when Toronto students will be asked to give their donation to this year's Community Chest.

ISS MEETING

There will be a meeting of all those interested in actively participating in the work of the International Student Service at 4 p.m. today in Room 1, Trinity College. People are needed for all eight committees of the ISS, particularly those interested in working on the coming ISS campaign.

SAC Offered Use Of Radio Station For Student Shows

The Ryerson Institute of Technology has offered the SAC Radio Committee the use of its new FM station for a half-hour program each week and is willing to train three or four students of this university in radio producing, Radio Committee Chairman Harris McPhail, II Institutional Management, announced Saturday.

Praises Equipment

"The equipment at Ryerson is excellent," McPhail commented. "They will provide us with a rehearsal room and give us technical advice. They are backing us 100%."

The Ontario Government-run school is for advanced technological training and is situated at Gould and Church, in and around the old Toronto Normal School.

McPhail said J. W. Barnes, lecturer at Ryerson in charge of the FM station, got in touch with the Radio Committee several weeks ago and asked it to use the station for a weekly program.

Get Freedom

"Ryerson is allowing us full freedom as to the type of shows we will present," McPhail explained. The FM station would be useful for experimentation, and talent developed in its shows would be sent on to the fortnightly CBC presentations being continued this year.

The Radio Committee will broadcast its productions from the FM station every Thursday at 8 p.m. The CBC shows will be presented every other Monday at 9 p.m., beginning Nov. 7.

"We believe the programs at Ryerson have great possibilities," McPhail said. "Right now their value is limited by the small number of receiving sets equipped to receive FM, but more and more FM sets are being bought and every television set can receive it."

"The Committee hopes eventually to branch into television," he added.

Student Starts Course

Speaking of the course in radio producing, the Ryerson Institute is willing to give to some Varsity students, McPhail said one student has already signed up. The Committee was looking for two or three more students with at least two more years of university ahead of them to take the 100-hour course and thus be of use in future Radio Committee productions.

"Students who take this course will not only receive lectures from first-rate instructors, but will be able to alternate theory with practice, using the best of equipment," the Radio Committee chairman said.

He said last year's lectures on radio producing given by the Committee were inadequate and poorly attended. He expressed the belief that the course, though presented by experts in the field of radio show producing, was weakened by the fact there was no opportunity for the students to strengthen their theory by practice.

May Subsidize

The Ryerson course costs $15. McPhail said the Radio Committee has suggested to the SAC Finance Committee that something might be done about subsidizing the course.

Enrolment Down, Fewer Veterans Major Reason

The total enrolment at the University of Toronto this year has dropped from last year's 15,684 to 13,772, President Smith announced recently. This is a drop of 1,912 students, but Toronto campus is still overcrowded due to the closing down of the university's Ajax Division.

Most Canadian Universities have reported decreases in their enrolment this year except Montreal's Sir George Williams College. This downward trend in the enrolment at the Universities has been pronounced since the peak of the post-war period. The chief reason for the decline during the past two years is the definite drop in the number of student veterans attending the universities.

The University of Toronto Arts faculty has showed the biggest drop in the number of students attending, from 6,859 to 5,709. There are 2,899 engineering students on the campus this year, 900 fewer than last year. Some of the courses show slight increases in student veterans enrolment. These are O.C.E. and graduate studies, the latter having an increase of 80 student veterans. Altogether there are 2,220 fewer vets this year than last year; 4,377, or about 32% of the enrolment this year are vets as compared to about 42% or 6,597 for last year.

The faculties of medicine, household science, graduate studies, law, social work, nursing, hygiene, and child study show increases in the enrolment for this year. It is expected that the final figure for the 1949-1950 session will approach 14,000 when the final tabulations are made.

CANADA SAVINGS BONDS

The campaign for the sale of the Fourth Series of Canada Savings Bonds opens on Monday, October 17, 1949. The University is co-operating in this campaign. We commend to members of the various staffs this investment.

Bonds may be purchased for cash or by means of payroll deductions.

Lab-Made Light

Engineers Have Many Dams

By ROCKY MARTINO

A flick of the switch and, provided you've paid your bill, the lights go on. That's all there is to it as far as you're concerned. Do you ever stop to think of the months of planning and construction that must be done before that bulb lights up? Unless you're an engineer, you probably haven't; if you're an engineer, you probably can't.

Four Dams In Basement

Unknown to most of the student body is the fact that on our campus, housed in the Mechanical Building, is one of the finest hydraulic labs in the world. In the basement lab are to be found four dams, exact replicas of projects soon to be commenced. Foremost among them is a model of a new $15,000,000 hydro development.

These model dams are made of plywood, cement, ingenuity, and sweat. After a complete survey of a proposed site has been made, and topographical plans have been laid out, the construction of the model begins. Plywood "ribs" are cut to the shape of the river bed and surrounding shores. The model is then completed with the use of cement. The dam is built and then test runs are made. Water is pumped through and detailed readings made of the flow, direction of flow after leaving the dam, and the force of flow. With this information, the engineers can adjust their designs if necessary.

Location Important

Another important aspect of this work is the choice of a position for the log chute. Thousands of dollars are saved by making a preliminary model and then experimenting with the water flow in order to find the best location for the chute. The log chute on the model of the Virgin Falls Dam was being changed when I went through the lab.

In addition to the dams, there is a long channel, about seventy feet by five feet, which is going to be used for experiments on water towing. There is a track built along the side of the channel along which a "tow-car" will run when the model has been completed.

Constant Water Flow

This channel, as well as the four dams, is fed by large water pipes which run under the floor all around the lab. All the pipes lead to a large head which rises eight feet above the floor. All the water is pumped through this. Inside, at the top, are a number of overflow sluices. The object of this is to maintain a constant pressure and hence a constant rate of flow in all the water system. When all the models are in operation, the water just flows out. If one or more models turn off their water flow, the water which would normally flow to them overflows. Thus a constant flow is maintained. This is very important since a fluctuation in the rate of flow would make all experimental readings useless.

Besides testing designs and verifying construction details, the model dams serve another purpose in testing new ideas. One of the models now in operation is testing a new type of water gate which automatically limits the water flow by adjusting itself in accordance with the pressure on it. There are still a few difficulties to be ironed out but it's expected that this gate will soon be operating properly.

Only A Part

All the work done in this lab is only a small part of the whole scheme of things. After the plans have been completed, the engineers have to build the dams and then the hydro has to set up a cross-country network of transmission lines. One project alone may take three or four years from the time the preliminary survey is made for the model to the time when the wires are all up. Then, with one finger you flick the switch and the light goes on.

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

RUDOLF Serkin

Nigh unto seven years ago at Eaton Auditorium I heard Rudolph Serkin for the first time. The Czechoslovakian-born pianist set a standard then that few pianists have since surpassed. Last Saturday night in a programme of Bach, Beethoven, Schumann, Mendelssohn and Chopin, Rudolph Serkin brought his standard of musicianship to a new height.

From the first note, slight, bespectacled Mr. Serkin forgot his audience was there. He was lost completely to the keyboard and its art. In the Bach Italian Concerto, he held an unflinching constancy in tempo by audibly beating time with his left foot. This departure from his customary restraint was characteristic of the whole performance.

His Beethoven F-sharp major (Op. 78) displayed the artist's deep insight into the composer's work, his sudden alternations in tempo, in tone colour and in mood. Serkin moved with the rhythm, captured the vigour and spirit of the piece.

High spot in the evening came in Schumann's Etudes Symphoniques. It was a coup de theatre for Serkin's flamboyant style as well as for his masterful interpretation. To the closing variation he emblazoned a jubilant parade of crashing chords, sparkling arpeggi and lucid runs the like of which I have not heard since Casadesus.

In Mendelssohn's Rondo Capriccioso, Serkin evinced an almost uncanny lightness in the leggero Rondo, built up the crescendos to a stimulating climax. Not until the closing Chopin did the pianist bring his pyrotechnical fireworks to the fore. In the E minor Etude he communicated the evocative dance rhythm, the waltz and the folk-tune, with a gay sense of abandon. Into the polyphonic A minor Etude Serkin poured tormented agitation that gives the piece its nick-name (winter wind). In the A-flat Ballade his deep, lyric touch sang the beautiful theme, first in a flowing calm, then in a passionate storm.

Rudolph Serkin is a pianist of the first rank.

Egbert says "Why Stop? We've got plenty of gas left"

Egbert may be slow to take a hint, but he hits on all six where money management is concerned. He's not the guy to run short of anything either — not even gas on a quiet country lane. His financial reserve at "MY BANK" takes care of that.

Thousands of students from coast to coast are following Egbert's example. They're finding how easy it is to lay aside some of that cash from spare time jobs in a savings account at the B of M. They're finding, too, that a "fatality fund" is a big help when an emergency arises — like that damaged fender or an unexpected trip with the team.

Radio: Stage 50

"Salome", Oscar Wilde's essay on the adage "Hell hath no fury . . ." after many vicissitudes last night reached its anticipated medium.

First presented in 1896 with Wilde in prison, it was banned because of England's law prohibiting the introduction of Biblical characters on the stage. Still, why would anyone want to see it? Never meant for the stage, its only action consists of Salome dancing with John the Baptist's head — an uninviting spectacle!

Wilde's interpretation (a deviation from Matthew and Mark) was described by him as music. This prose-poem is meant to be emotionally and imaginatively felt. Is the task of imaginative visualization, Dianne Foster's acting, Wilde's voluptuous verse, and Mr. Agostini's music were quite adequate; as also they were to the drama's main end, namely, that of creating emotional awareness of desire, etc.

But against this, what efficient opposition! Evidently Mr. Allan decided that the role of Herod, containing the best poetry expressive of lust, terror, hate and disgust, was to be read in an attitude of drunken, mumbling frivolity; and that such lines as, "Thy little feet will be as white doves," sound best if sounding silly. Hence, Mr. Knapp's effort. The lesser parts suffered a like interpretation which evoked obvious enthusiasm. Until the end, when Salome dominated, the effect was that of a careless satire.

Lord Alfred Douglas' translation of Wilde's macabre French gem in all its nauseous sensuality was left unchanged except for necessary and welcomed paring. The lamented Sarah surely was never more convincing and unnerving than Miss Foster in her portrayal of Salome's cunning, her erotic, irresistable lust and her final revolting madness. While he was in the cistern, John Draine's voice as Jokanaan captured the charismatic quality of the primitive prophet.

So, those who didn't hear it unfortunately missed a tour de force of acting's most difficult assignment: sustained, convincing passion. Luckily, however, they also missed some misplaced clowning.

'Freshmen Too Immature For University Life' Topic of Vic Debate

"That Freshmen Are Too Immature For University" will be the subject of Victoria College Debating Parliament's opening debate tonight at 8 p.m. in the Vic Co-Ed Common Room.

Says Fred McFadden, IV Mod. Hist., "Freshmen of today are not equipped spiritually or intellectually to cope with the necessary activities of the university. The continuance of this immaturity is resulting in declining standards of university education."

Opposing the resolution, Vida Taylor contends that the high school graduate has been given an educational background which prepares him to meet the requirements of the university, as it now exists, both socially and intellectually.

Roy Nehall will also speak for the affirmative and Diane Rogers for the negative.

beat Varsity and they broke into the score sheet early in the first on a 75 yard hoist by Robillard that carried from the Varsity 50 right past the dead line in the end zone. George Valois played a terrific game for McGill with his line drives. He got the first major score when he went around right end after a clever hand off by Dave Hackett from the ten. Robillard got the convert.

Varsity Leads

Varsity narrowed the McGill lead in the second quarter when Cummings threw to Jack Gray, who made a shoestring catch behind the line. Jack Gray incidentally played a wonderful defensive game too, making scads of lethal tackles on the McGill fast backs. McGill lengthened their lead in this quarter on a 25 yard field goal by Robillard. In the third quarter Varsity called on Dick Brown to provide the arm to move the team to scoring position, and Brown came through admirably tossing strikes to Dany to move the ball up to the McGill five from where London lugged it over, to give Varsity the lead 11-10. Choresteeki booted the convert.

McGill was not long behind however as they marched from their own 30 on ground attacks by Robinson and Valois. Wagner then nipped through the line and ran 50 yards for the score. Robillard converted making the score 16-12. Late in the third Brown singled to complete the Toronto scoring. In the last quarter McGill put the game on ice plunging over from inside the ten after repeated battering at the Varsity line. Again Robillard converted to end the scoring.

In place of the old wooden tub, wash-board and wringer the modern washing machine and the commercial laundry have come to the assistance of the housewife of today. "Monel," an alloy composed of ⅔ Nickel and ⅓ Copper, is today in general use for washing machine tubs, and for washers and other equipment in modern laundries. Being rust-proof and corrosion resistant, it eliminates trouble from stains and verdigris. Its hard, glass-smooth surface removes all danger of injury even to the most delicate fabrics. Because it is strong and tough as steel, "Monel" equipment is unusually durable.

Canadian Nickel sold Abroad brings in U.S. Dollars

Since more than ninety per cent of the Nickel produced in Canada is sold to the United States and other countries, it brings a constant flow of dollars back to Canada. In fact, Canada's Nickel industry is one of our chief sources of U.S. dollars so essential at the present time to maintain our foreign trade and make available products not produced in this country.

These dollars help pay the wages of the 14,000 Nickel employees, and help provide the dollars which make it possible to pay millions in freight to Canadian railways, to buy timber, steel, coal, machinery and supplies amounting to many millions each year.

These millions, flowing into all industries through the length and breadth of Canada, help create jobs for Canadians.

Free Shaving Cream As Varsity Lathered

By PHIL CALDER

Approximately 1,200 tubes of shaving cream and a feeling of violent let-down were about the only tangible souvenirs that the University fans brought away from Molson Stadium, Saturday. The shaving cream was the gift of a leading soap company and the let-down came with the compliments of Vic Obeck's surprising Redmen.

The variety of head-dress and costumes at the game included everything from straw boaters and raccoon coats to ten-gallon hats and the stadium ushers' long white coats, strangely reminiscent of the garb of the White City dog race track attendants.

The Toronto band outshone McGill's musical organization in every way. While the Montreal harmony men remained glued to their band-stand seats at half-time, Bob Cringan's aggregation put on a display of precision drill that left James McGill's children gaping in admiration. Side attractions at the midwaypoint were the failure of a McGill quarter-miler to break the Canadian record and the lack of success of the head linesman in trying to put out the flares a Toronto supporter placed on the field in the form of a T.

The Redmen were not the only ones to repulse a Toronto attack. Several attempts to capture the goal posts at the south end of the field were repulsed by a series of flying blocks that sent a band of valiant Skulemen hobbling to the Piccadilly room. A counter-offensive brought the northern posts from their moorings three times but it was the McGill men who finally carried them off the field. Crowning indignity was the sight of the words McGill 22 Toronto 13 spelled out on the seats — in shaving cream!

Toronto Girls Doubles Champs At Western Meet

This week-end the Women's Intercollegiate Tennis Team was very busy at Western where the meet was held.

Barb Allmond, Trin II, and Ev Aiken, Vic III, carried off the honours by winning all their matches in the doubles championship, while McGill, with a very strong team, managed to take first place in the final scoring of both doubles and singles matches.

However, the Blue and White Team was only one point behind, although last year McGill and Toronto tied for first place when the meet was held at Queen's University.

Western placed third, with Queen's and McMaster trailing them.

In the singles section, June Devaux from McGill won all her

Miss Slack has six competent archers from which a team of four will be picked today. This is in preparation for the Intercollegiate Archery Tournament that takes place in Varsity Stadium on Friday.

Exhibition Game

Vic II will play Institutional Management in an exhibition softball game on the Trinity field at noon today.

Meds Win

St. Hilda's second softball team was defeated 3-1 by the determined Meds, on Friday. There were no spectacular plays, but the low score does show that everyone was playing well.

Ann Hardy made the only run for the Saints, while Ruth Montgomery, Sally Sarles and Joan Fletcher scored for Meds.

Strong Team

St. Hilda's III and Vic II softball teams batted it out Friday noon with Vic winning 14-3.

The infield on the Vic team was strong, while Marion Laundry, Jackie Donnelly and Dot Ross made some good hits.

Liz Ketchum, first baseman for the Saints, compensated for some of her team members, who were not there when the game began.

Rugger Players Trounce McGill

The University of Toronto's rugger squad scored a handy victory over Vic Obeck's McGillmen on Friday at Molson Stadium, taking the contest by an 11-5 count. The rugger Redmen had their best chance in the first part of the initial half when a Toronto offside gave them a penalty kick on the Varsity fifteen. McGill failed to convert and the Toronto aggregation took command of the play.

Good playing by the scrum and the fine kicking of Don Glen advanced Toronto into McGill's half, from where Glen scored with a fine drop kick from forty-five yards out for Varsity's first three points. Glen converted a penalty shot later making the score 6-0 for Toronto at half.

The second half featured fine tackling by both sides and it took continual pressing on the part of Toronto to set up Miles and Gowdey in scoring position. Miles took the ball over after nice evasive work. Don Glen converted.

Ramsey, a speedy Australian center three-quarter, was the lone scorer for McGill. He scored after a Toronto fumble and the conversion was made by Dave Floyer.

Costly Fumbling Is The Major Factor In Second's Loss

By JOE KANE

The combination of a sizzling attack coupled with Varsity's ineffectiveness to score when in pay dirt gave the Guelph Aggies a 13-8 victory over the seconds on Saturday morning. The game, played at the Bloor Street Bowl before a near capacity crowd (of empty seats) saw the Intermediates throw away at least three touchdowns on misplays.

From the opening kick-off the U. of T. machine drove to the Aggie three yard line but had to settle for a single point when a Varsity fumble was recovered behind the goal line by an O.A.C. man. Varsity took a two point lead a few minutes later when Doug Treleaven was rouged on Haigh's long kick. Again in the dying minutes of this half an ill-timed Varsity pass from the Aggie two yard line was intercepted in the end zone to cut short a lengthy T.D. drive.

Between these two Varsity "faux pas" the Guelph men gave ample evidence as to why they are considered a good bet to take their third straight Intercollegiate football crown. Working out of a very deceptive T formation the Aggies showed a fine ground offense but had absolutely no aerial attack to go with it.

With Brooks as head man the visitors quickly detected the Varsity weak points and exploited them with methodical skill. Wide end sweeps by Treleaven and Brennan and the off-tackle smashes of Raithby spearheaded uninterrupted marches of 87 yds. and 59 yds. for touchdowns, Anderson and Brennan being on the scoring ends. Anderson also converted both touches and added a single later in the second half on an attempted placement.

In the second half the seconds, led by the deft passing of Al Haigh and the hard running of Tony Cecutti, caught fire and completely dominated play for the remaining part of the game. On a series of well mixed plays they moved into scoring position where Eric Hanson carried over from the one, Gawinski converting. It was during this half that the Intermediates gave proof that they are a team to be reckoned with both offensively and defensively. Coaches Bark and Brown have done a fine job with this year's squad but their work is wasted when backs and ends fail to hold on to the ball.

Along with the aforementioned Haigh and Cecutti, strong games were turned in by Howson, Bell and Birkenshaw. Up front the team was led by Errington, who spent most of the game in the Aggie backfield. Also turning in fine efforts were Sutherland and Shay.

Statistically speaking, the Varsity rooters may find consolation in the fact that the Blue outfit matched or surpassed the Aggies in almost every department except the score. Haigh showed a definite superiority in the kicking and clicked on 9 of 18 passes as compared to the opposition's 1 in 6. In first downs the Aggies made seventeen to Varsity's fifteen.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

Looks like it's going to be a close season this year in the intercollegiate race. McGill certainly deserved to win; from all reports of the game, they had Varsity coming and going. The Redmen's line was charging hard and the backs were scampering, whereas Varsity seemed a little bewildered after the first McGill touch.

The injuries on the Blue club are getting to be a serious matter. Archie Jones is out, Bruce Cummings was injured Saturday, John Chorestecki has a bad side, Ian Clark was hurt in the game: all this in addition to the host of injuries sustained prior to the McGill game. The snap situation was so bad in Montreal that Inside Pete Bennett, who has never to our knowledge snapped a ball in his life, was in at centre.

It seems that Varsity always starts out a little slowly in the early games of the season but wakes up nearing the finish to end strongly. Remember last year's Queen's and Western games? . . . the tie with Western at the end of the season two years ago? They got one bad game out of the system Saturday, but it looks like they have another one to come.

If they lose again, let's hope it is to Queen's or Western. A split is not too dangerous, but a double loss to one college is liable to put the Blues out of the running.

Western has a strong club again this season; they have won both their games, and look to be the team to beat. Varsity has a strong team on paper, and have the ability to win, but they haven't been clicking lately like they were against the Beaches.

On the basis of the Blues' showings so far, we would be inclined to say that Western will win by two touchdowns at least. The UWO is a strong home team, and they'll have plenty of supporters. If the Blues hope to win this one, they will have to show more fight and polish than they did in the McGill game.

It is hard to make predictions on football games, or on season outcomes, but it is fairly certain that unless the Blues start driving and playing heads-up football they are likely to blow the championship to any one of the other three teams. There are going to be no shoo-ins this year.

Music Hath Charms

NFCUS and ISS Combine Activities On Local Campus

Steps to clarify the position of The International Student Service and The National Federation of Canadian University Students in projects in which they are both interested were taken over the weekend by Toronto NFCUS Chairman Tom Symons and Toronto ISS Chairman Bill McDougall.

Toronto Example

Although the action taken by the Toronto committees will have application only on the Toronto campus, it is hoped that the move here will be a guide to other university NFCUS and ISS Committees across Canada to "get together and achieve a greater degree of co-operation," Symons said last night.

Foremost among the decisions reached was a clarification of the fields of interest in student exchange programs. Both ISS and NFCUS are interested in student exchange, and both are active in this field. In future the Toronto NFCUS Committee will concentrate on Canadian and American exchange, while ISS will handle international exchange.

Co-operation to Progress

The Toronto Committees acted on the belief that "co-operation, based on a common belief in the worth of these programs, will, through mutual assistance, lead to greater progress in the respective fields," the chairmen said. "We hope that by recognizing a division between the interests of ISS and NFCUS we will avoid duplication and turn out more successful exchange programs".

Implicit in the decisions reached was a "recognition that at the present time the ISS is the only international contact for Canadian students," ISS Chairman McDougall explained.

Also discussed were plans to have the Toronto NFCUS Committee actively assist the ISS in their program of bringing displaced persons to study in Canada. "It is hoped that from now on the Toronto NFCUS Committee will be able to help the Toronto ISS Committee in introducing the D.P. students to the campus and helping them wherever necessary to become part of the University community," NFCUS Chairman Symons said last night. ISS will retain full control of the administrative end of the program.

Five D.P. Students

At present there are five displaced persons studying at Toronto. The five were brought to Canada this summer by ISS as part of the national ISS program to bring displaced persons to study in Canadian universities. Twenty - five European students are attending eleven universities across Canada under the plan.

The Committee Chairmen also talked over plans for the coming Carabin weekend to be held in Montreal later in the fall. This year a joint committee of ISS and NFCUS are running the weekend.

Frosh "Mature" Says Vic Debate By Wide Margin

The Vic Debating Parliament decided that freshmen are not too immature for university by a 36-13 decision last night.

Fred McFadden, IV Mod Hist., first speaker for the resolution said that freshmen can neither read nor write. He supported this by citing tests done by the Psychology Department which said that only 25% of all material read was absorbed, and that any professor will testify to the illegibility of their essays.

Also supporting the motion, Roy Nehall contended that if freshmen were mature they would not permit being forced into initiations and parading around like the glorious belles of a Queen Street show. He concluded by saying, "Prove your maturity and vote for the resolution."

Intellectual maturity is something the university hopes to achieve, not something it expects of its new students the two negative speakers Diane Rogers and Vida Taylor said.

In replying to Nehall's statement, Miss Rogers asserted that the "mature seniors" forced the freshmen to conform to their immature traditions.

Welcome Sign No More Not Action I Expected

Vancouver.—(CUP)—The Student Christian Movement of U.B.C. recently announced that someone had stolen a large plywood "welcome" sign from the S.C.M. clubroom. The theft, which apparently was aimed at the S.C.M.'s advertising on Club Day, occurred last Wednesday.

"We expected action in the Movement," an official ruefully said, "but not so quickly nor in that particular way."

New Mechanical Building Home of Carnegie Records

The Record Club began the season in its new home in the Mechanical Building yesterday. Joyce Rous, IV Trinity, of the SAC Music Commission welcomed an audience of staff, students, and their guests. President Sidney Smith and Sir Ernest MacMillan.

A collection of records has been given to the club by the Carnegie Foundation which will form the main part of the collection.

President Smith addressed the meeting and suggested that the audience regard music not as an escape from everyday activities, but as something concrete and valuable: a revelation of truth.

Sir Ernest MacMillan suggested that the great value of records lies in the opportunity of playing them over and over to familiarize oneself with good music and develop an interest in symphonic concerts. He also suggested that the discussions held at each Record Club meeting cover the circumstances under which the music was composed as well as its content and quality.

Handy For Skulemen

Professor Alcutt, head of the Department of Mining Engineering, said he was happy to have the record collection in the building, so that engineers who, contrary to the common belief, are really interested in music and art, could conveniently hear the recordings.

Record Club meetings will be open to all students on third floor, Mechanical Building, Monday through Friday at 4.30 p.m. There is a list of records and a request book in the Faculty Common Room, and any requests are to be played.

VARSITY LECTURE

Second in a series of lectures on newswriting will be given today by the Varsity News Editor at 1 p.m. in Room 11, University College. All are invited. News and makeup staff members should attend.

ISS Hold Meet, Go To Montreal Talk On Pound

Effect of the pound devaluation on students at Canadian universities was one of the problems which arose at the ISS meeting held in Montreal last Saturday morning. Representatives from McGill, the University of Montreal, and the University of Toronto were present to discuss plans for policy during the coming year.

Bob Gill and John Ballon representing McGill played host to the meeting which was held in the McGill Union. Andre David and Louise Gauvin were present for the U. of M. while included in the Toronto group were Jack Tinker and Jane Hill.

Jack Tinker opened the meeting by stating the three reasons for calling together the reps.: the policy of the three universities, the possibility of expansion within the local ISS and the plans to raise money for the coming year.

Bob Gill of McGill stated that their biggest problem was the effect that the devaluation of the pound was having on the large number of British West Indian, and British students. The former is the third largest group on the campus, and their plight is urgent. It was decided to look into this problem more fully, and to prepare a report on it for the National Conference.

The conference it was announced would be held at the University of Montreal, from the eleventh to the thirteenth of November.

Revue Stars Come Here For Red Feather Drive

"Smart, slick and very, very funny," was Saturday night's comment on "There Goes Yesterday." Members of the show, which is a cavalcade of songs, dances, and sketches from 1900-1950, will present their "Twenties" number, this Wednesday at 1 p.m. in Hart House Theatre, in support of the Red Feather Campaign at the University of Toronto.

"There Goes Yesterday" is directed, and produced by Donald and Murray Davis. Murray is a U. of T. graduate and one of five ex-U. of T. people in the cast. The show is one of the few all-Canadian shows. Brother Don, who is this year's president of the U.C. Players Guild, has been seen in many Hart House Theatre productions, and most of the members of the cast have proved their talent in past years at the university.

The two stars of the show are John Pratt and Murray Matheson, both well-known for their work in musical revues, and stars of service shows during the war. Murray, who has had a great deal of intimate revue experience, compiled the show during the summer.

The group, who received raves from all the critics for their three-week stay at the Brant Inn, open in North Bay on Monday and will tour Northern Ontario. Their one week in Toronto is being spent on rehearsals and preparation for their return, and their gracious contribution to the Red Feather Show.

The show, as well as the feature number by the Davis group, which will be done in full costume and make-up, features a great deal of campus talent. Sylvia Grant and Ted Scott, two stars of this year's U.C. Follies, will do solo numbers, and Araby Lockhart, a well-known campus grad and a member of "There Goes Yesterday", will do her famous rendition of Dorothy

Western Game, Floats, Dance For Busy Homecoming Weekend

Last year for the first time, a Homecoming weekend, beamed specifically at the graduates of Varsity was started. The idea of the Weekend was to provide a time and place for graduates to get together to renew old friendships, as well as to let them help the undergrads voice their defiance of Western in the weekend football classic.

This year, the Western weekend here has again been selected as the official reunion weekend for graduates. Since the Western game here is probably one of the most spirited encounters in the Intercollegiate loop, it was considered appropriate that the spirit of the past and present members of the University should be symbolized by the teams' encounter.

Last year's program of a faculty Float Parade before the game will be followed, as well the Roam Around Dance after the game.

Alumni Assoc. Helps

Last year's weekend was achieved by the almost single-handed efforts of the Blue and White Society. This year, the Alumni Association is working in conjunction with the Blue and White to ensure that graduates will be drawn into all undergraduate functions and celebrations.

The first attraction of the Homecoming Weekend will be the testimonial dinner to Dean C. R. Young of S.P.S. on Thursday, Oct. 27. On Friday at 4 p.m., Kenneth Tupper will be inducted officially as the new Dean.

The annual meeting of the Alumni Association will be held at 6 p.m. on the same day.

The usual pre-game Pep Rally and Street Dance is slated to take place from about 8.30 on of the same night.

Parade Saturday

The Inter-Faculty Float Parade will take place at 10.30 on Saturday morning, with President Smith as the official judge of the floats. Thirty-five floats are expected this year, according to Blue and White Chairman Bill Turner.

The game will take place at 2.15 p.m.

After-game celebrations include the usual Roam Around Dance, with a special Blue and White Revue, with representatives from all faculties as an added attraction. The revue is planned to appeal especially to graduate students.

Three shows will be presented by the Blue and White Society after the game in Convocation Hall, beginning at 8 o'clock and lasting for about an hour and a half each.

Time For A Change

The following editorial is reprinted from the Queen's Journal, student newspaper of Queen's University.

Mr. Truman's recent announcement that Russia now has the atomic bomb is one of the truly significant landmarks in recent world history. For we of the Western World, it is one that should cause us to re-examine our attitudes and philosophies.

In the past, some have been lulled into complacency behind the myth of sole ownership of The Bomb. Others have been whipped into a frenzied fear that Russia may some day obtain The Bomb. In both cases we have blinded ourselves to what has been going on around us.

Mr. Truman's announcement has changed all this.

In the future, we must mold a new philosophy, one of friendliness instead of belligerence; one of understanding instead of the blind acceptance of the perfection of our own system of government and thought.

In the past, we have rather foolishly condemned any new trend in thought as contrary to our democratic manner of life. Belief in the sole ownership of the atom, or fear, has made reason come out second-best.

We have made mistakes, but we have refused to admit them as mistakes

The atom announcement must change this. It was not the most happy way of making us take a closer look at ourselves, but it has at least accomplished that purpose.

Now we must face up to the bitter truth that we are far from perfect. We must take the flaws, one by one, and correct them. We must make our democratic system a reality and work to eliminate the filth and poverty and stupidity that exist within our system today.

For surely the best way—and it may be the only way—to convince others that our system is the best suited to the human being and the human mind is to make that system work inactuality as it does on paper. Surely that is the best answer to Communism, a philosophy that grew out of the flaws in Democracy.

In addition, we must approach the problem with a mind that is open to foreign ideas; one that will take the good points of other systems of thought and work to incorporate them into ours.

The War of Nerves is now gone: Let us not now replace it with another frenzied hysteria, but rather with one of open-mindedness. Let us look out and in at the same time, bringing reason, and not emotion, to the forefront.

It can be done; it must be done. If it is not done, we are surely headed for another world war. If it is done, we can at least make strides towards that Community of World Opinion that has been man's goal for thousands of years.

History has shown that force has never succeeded. One alternative remains

It Can't Happen Here

The day was foggy and damp. Herr K shivered as he stood on the ferry wharf of the Toronto Island awaiting the Sam McBride. It was to be his first day at the University. Herr K looked about him in hope of finding some friend, but nowhere could he see anyone familiar. Even the two clean-cut stalwart young men who stood a little to one side were strangers.

Later, on the water, as he read the ship's motto "We sail, if rainfall normal," Herr K tried to strike up a conversation with his benchmate. "I'll have difficulty riding my bike to school this morning—the traffic jam, you know! I don't suppose that they have got the new road down yet." His benchmate grunted and pulled out a newspaper. One of the stalwart young men began to do a little writing.

At last the dock was reached and Herr K prepared to disembark. He noticed that all the passengers were getting blue transfers. When he was about to pass the gate he was handed a red transfer and asked to step into the male room.

Wire Fence View

Herr K was terrified. He had heard of such things happening, but . . . In the room he tearfully contemplated the symbol of democracy, the tallest building in the empire, through a wire fence.

Then an official began, in a soothing voice, to question Kerr K.

Suddenly the mask was dropped and the official said sternly, "You were heard to make an inflammatory speech aboard ship against the manner in which the new civic works program is progressing." Herr K was astounded. "But this is impossible," he shouted.

"Don't call me a liar," screamed the official, "There's a Star reporter nearby." Then K noticed that the two clean-cut stalwart youths had emerged from a cubicle. They were now wearing grey uniforms and silver buttons.

"Surely you don't believe that I who have shed blood, sweat and clothing during my association with the TTC would now bite the hand

Pep Rally To Feature Year's Dance

The House Committee of Hart House has announced the Dance of the Year, the All-Varsity Dance to be held in Hart House on Oct. 28, the night of the Western Pep Rally.

Gerry Hart, secretary of the House Committee, disclosed that there will be three orchestras in attendance at the dance. There will also be a French Cabaret in the Lunch Rooms in the basement, featuring the Jewison Show.

Hart also emphasized that the All-Varsity is a non-profit dance, and is aimed at unifying the university. "This has been more nearly realized than we had hoped. The Medical Society has launched a campaign advertising their All-Varsity dance, and their theme would seem to be along the line of our own. We aren't complaining about this, but rather are pleased, at the unexpected boost for our aims."

Each faculty and college is contributing to the decorations, with each of them giving some insignia or plaque symbolic of their faculty. Charley MacCurdy is in charge of the decorations, and all the contributions are being sent to him.

The price, $1.50, is set so low as to make it possible for more students to attend. House Committee members have noticed the trend to higher prices, and intend this as a measure to cut the inflationary movement.

Institute Of Psychiatry Needs Student Spotters For Disaster Research

Disaster spotters are required by the Allan Memorial Institute of Psychiatry of Montreal. Dr. Seeley of the Dept. of Psychiatry of Toronto, has issued an appeal for students, particularly in their third or fourth year, to act as spotters in situations of acute disaster, in major Canadian centres, particularly in University communities.

The duties of the spotters will be to notify the field survey team who will send a psychologist and sociologist to the scene, and keep track of the disaster until the team arrives. The spotter is to act only as a first contact.

The Institute is studying "the management of the individual in situations of acute or community disaster". Students interested are asked to get in touch with Mrs. Currie, at the Psychiatric Hospital, 2 Surrey Place.

Giddap!

Line-Up Starts At 5 a.m. For 1510 Western Tickets

At 9:15 a.m. yesterday morning, the 1,510 available Varsity tickets to the Western game went on sale at the Athletic box office, Hart House. 500 had already been allotted to the train buyers.

This was the climax of hours of waiting in the silent watches of the morning for several hundred students, who arrived warmly clad, with blankets, food and playing cards as early as 5 a.m. They were only to be exceeded by those ambitious but very tired football fans who came straight from the Montreal train, about midnight, and spent the night in bed-rolls on the steps.

First Girl At 5:45

At 6 a.m. the doors were opened to let the shivering students inside to get warm, and by 6:45 both sides of the long Athletic wing corridors were lined with sleeping, eating and card playing early birds. The first girl arrived about 5:45 and was greatly cheered.

About 7, the ever expanding line-up had overflowed into the gymnasium, and the noise had become so loud that Warden Nicholas Ignatieff came down to request a little common sense, on behalf of several visiting professors sleeping upstairs. But the noise grew as the crowd did, goaded on noticeably by one group who were blocking the passage with a card table.

Gym Full At 8

By 8 o'clock the entire gym was filled by a long snake of reclining students, who still had hopes of getting to the front before the tickets ran out. As it so happened, only a handful were turned away without pasteboards, at 11 a.m., when the supply was exhausted. Their chances weren't improved any by the hundred odd students who arrived much later and chiselled places in the line nearer the front. Warden Ignatieff expects measures will be taken before the next game to ensure a little more order

When it was all over, the Athletic wing looked like it had been hit by a tornado. The corridor was ankle deep in newspapers, dixie cups, food containers, and playing cards but, according to Bill Thompson, caretaker who has to clean it up, it was not unusual. "It happens four times a year," he said. "Before each away game. I'll have the paper out in a few hours, and the dust will settle again in a couple of days."

Tremendous Spirit

Mr. Ignatieff contrasted the spirits shown in these lineups with the usual good behaviour of students in other activities at Hart House, and believed some of the noise might have been caused by freshmen, sent to buy tickets at early hours by seniors. He had heard rumours that this practice exists.

At least the team should be elated over the tremendous spirit shown by fans who will line up for tickets at 5 o'clock on a cold, damp morning.

Metras Men First; McGill, Blues Tied

Western Ontario Mustangs came out of the Kingston engagement with the winless Gaels, as the only undefeated team in the league. They had to go all out to pull the game out of the fire after Queens lead 11-10 in the fourth quarter. Once again it was star half Jack Parry who put the Mustangs back in the game when he sparked the team to a last quarter TD to make the final score 16-11. Now Western hold down the first spot with two wins, Blues and McGill are tied for second while the Queensmen are in the cellar.

"Oldest" Doctor Arrives In Style As Panacea Hoax

If the dance, "Panacea" is anything on the scale of the publicity for it, it should be a tremendous success. At one o'clock yesterday afternoon there was a reception for Dr. 'MacBurney', held on the steps of the Medical Building.

Welcome, Dr. MacBurney

"Dr. MacBurney' arrived in a horse and buggy, drew smartly up in front of the steps, and descended in majestic style, and helped his charming 'wife' down from the vehicle.

To the familiar strains of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" "Dr. MacBurney" struggled up the steps, leaning heavily on the arm of one of the ushers — dressed in impeccable blood-stained labcoats.

Arriving at the top of the stairs, he was greeted by the Publicity Director of the Medical Society, Syd Wax, who introduced the President of the Medsmen, Bob Hetherington. A procession of characters met the venerable doctor, and amidst raucous cheers he cackled a stream of wry jokes.

Alias Dr. Cure-it-all

Syd Wax asked Dr. MacBurney if he had any specialty, to which the medico answered in a tremulous voice, that he did — brain surgery. Gripping his cane firmly he teetered perilously as he stepped too close to the edge of the top step.

His backwoods experience has developed some fine old remedies. Out of his battered old bag he hauled out a bottle of Highland Teacher's Cream — guaranteed to cure anything from ruptured appendix to a broken leg. The only other cure he had with him was for ailing engineers, and he produced from his well-stocked medicine bag a bottle of Borden's Best.

Accepts First Ticket

The first ticket to "Panacea" was presented to Dr. MacBurney, which was printed on a huge piece of cardboard. The cherished billet was handed into the custody of two medsmaidens, and the doctor's wife observed the transfer with the eagle eye of a woman accustomed to her husband's wandering eye. When the doctor primly bussed the young lady detailed to hold the sacred document, his wife poked him in the back with her gnarled cane.

Controller Bumfair was introduced to the doctor, and launched into a tirade of self-praise. After repeated interruptions he managed to relate his many valorous deeds, but was hurried off the stage when he claimed credit for having erected the Skule Building.

Attempted Theft

The meeting broke up when the Skulemen tried to steal Dr. MacBurney's horse. Brandishing bones recovered from the cadavers of dead engineers, the ushers recaptured the horse and buggy, and a parade started up the campus to Hart House where the doctor addressed the gathered lunchers.

A la Kingston Hospitality At RYH

Kingston, Oct. 17 —(CUP)— The story is told at Queen's of a student of that University in Toronto for the Queen's-Toronto week-end.

He was registered at the Royal York, and was making his way through the lobby en route to his room, when a totally unfamiliar inebriate threw his arms around said student and shrieked, "Don't miss the party in 729 — it's the best in the hotel."

The student was dumfounded. 729 was his room.

More Spirit Said Need Of College

More college spirit was the platform advocated by nearly all the candidates at the pre-election University College pep rally held in the Junior Common Room yesterday. The actual frosh election will be held in the Junior Common Room from 11 a.m. to 2:15 p.m. today with the results announced at the Soph-Frosh Dance at the Royal York tonight.

Lyall Moran, first-year presidential aspirant, likened the College to an empty bottle with all the spirit missing. Don Michel, candidate for the same office, though also referring to the lack of spirit, dwelt mostly on his lengthy experience in student government at high school. Lawrence Keay, third candidate, also advocated more school spirit, more co-operation between the city and resident students and support of the Student Memorial Union.

Tony Slama, candidate for secretary-treasurer, promised the best first year in the history of the college should he be elected. His opponent, Terry Stott, gave a brief resume of his school activities and went on to assure that, if he were elected, he would pay particular attention to the first year books.

Ted Fielder, also in the race for assistant secretary-treasurer, was unavoidably absent. Lloyd Freel spoke of his personal experience in such work and introducing comedy, stated his intentions if elected.

Blanford Kay, the third participant, declared that he too, was disturbed by lack of school spirit and that if elected, he would do everything within his scope to remedy this defect. He added an appeal to the electors that they get out and vote, regardless of their sympathies in the elections.

At the end of the speeches, the various candidates passed out election blotters to the crowd.

Pep Rallies Expensive Queen's Students Fin(e)d

Kingston, Oct. 18—(CUP)—Two Queen's students found attending pep rallies an expensive pastime last weekend.

They were fined $41 each for stealing two construction lanterns while attending the Pep Rally preceding the Queen's-Western game.

The presiding magistrate originally sentenced them to 10 days in jail for removing public property and endangering human life, but the sentence was changed after the students told him that their years would be jeopardized by a ten-day jail sentence.

So far, 15 lanterns have been stolen in Kingston.

Newman Club Has Talk From Father Azubalis

Father P. Azubalis addressed the European Group of the Newman Club at their meeting last night. The Lithuanian priest spoke on "The Religious History of the Baltic States".

Two films, "The French Foreign Legion in Africa" and "England—the Background of its Literature", were shown by President Murray Lount, an engineering graduate of '46. The club's fifty members are drawn from discontinued students as well as those who are still in attendance.

Float, Float, Float

Aqua Antics Aim At Annual Attraction

To the re-echoing strains of a rhythmic melody, four white-capped heads burst out from the greenish depths, four pairs of arms slice the water with smooth regular strokes and then, as the music rises to a crescendo, four legs appear, poise for an instant, then sink slowly beneath the surface and the music fades and dies.

Splashing and laughing, four dripping figures clamber from the pool to stand breathless and weary before Miss Baxter, their coach.

"Good work, girls—your timing has improved immensely. But! You need work on your 'catalinas' —get those legs straight, toes pointed, and keep together!

Float! Float! Float!

"And another thing—when you're floating in your circle keep your feet still! Let them sink if they must, the audience will be none the wiser if they're a few inches farther below the surface. Remember, if you straighten out and keep your head back you won't have that difficulty.

"Now, let's see it right through again—and remember it's supposed to be synchronized!"

This has been a brief picture of the work going on in the U.C. pool every evening during the past three weeks. the girls that we have already met are only four of a roup of ninety swimmers who are rehearsing there for the All-Varsity Aqua Show.

On Show Oct. 20

All-Varsity Show? Yes—that's the ater show that's being presented on Thursday night, Oct. 20th at 8:30 in the Hart House pool. The name "Dawn to Darkness" has been given to this watercade which is the first of its kind to be presented to the students of Varsity as an entire production.

Girls from almost every college and faculty on the campus have been chosen to take part and even SPS has lent a hand by its contribution of Mike Spense who is to act as lighting technician for the evening

The guiding figure behind the scenes has been Miss Winnifred Baxter who, during the summer months, dreamed up the whole idea of an all-girls swimming show. With the able assistance of Jackie Tobiah, who planned four of the numbers, Miss Baxter arranged the choreography with the idea of highlighting rhythmic ballet-like swimming.

Tickets 50 Cents

Comedy relief is provided by a number called 'Penguins at the Waldorf' which was included in PHE show of last year. However these penguins will perform their antics in their environment, the water.

Tickets, which are fifty cents, are scarce and may be obtained through members of the cast.

The girls have swum hard to make this—the very first All-Varsity Aqua Show—a success, and they hope that it will become a permanent feature in the round of Varsity entertainment.

They have been really aided in their endeavours by Miss Foster and Helen Davies who did the costuming, and by the assistants Charlotte Sholm, Virginia Webers and Gail Hutchinson who worked just as hard as the actual participants in the show.

Women's Page

Both Reading Rooms Open To Both Sexes — Wallace

Remember when you entered the University Library for the very first time . . . when you settled yourself at a study table . . . when you suddenly sensed a certain charged atmosphere . . . when you looked around — and the room was full of MEN?

Then you will be very pleased to know that there was no need for you to rush from the room as though pursued. You, a female, have just as much right to read in the "men's" reading room as any mere man has. Librarian Wallace stated Friday "there are absolutely no restrictions on the use of the reading rooms." If she wishes, a girl may use the other room, and the men are also free to use the "women's" reading room. A few intrepid males (probably freshmen) have already screwed their courage to the sticking point and used the "women's" room. They have the right idea because this room is usually much quieter and much less crowded.

Paper Darts

Mr. Wallace recalls in his undergraduate days there was only one reading room in use. What we call the men's reading room was divided down the centre by a row of bookcases. Boys sat on one side, girls on the other. Over the obstruction flew a continual fleet of paper darts. When a beautiful girl appeared in the doorway, a hundred feet stamped in rhythm. On occasion the librarian would appear to restore order.

Perhaps this behaviour served to

Sidewalk Engineers

Coeds Charm Way Through

— By LENORE KERT —

"What's the matter, Mac? You look awfully sad. You say you have been looking all over the campus for your girl friend and you still can't find her? Did you try the JCR, the Vic rotunda, the Library (a ridiculous place to be!)? You did? Well, if you really want to find her, how about trotting over to the eastern end of the campus where they are building the new Queen's Park bridge.

Yes, the men who know sidewalk engineers best (referring to the builders, naturally,) maintain that the majority of onlookers are coeds. They comprise the majority of the students who spend their between-lecture hours keeping a watchful eye on the construction that is going on at the entrance to the University from Queen's Park Crescent. This bridge which is being built over the Old College Road will prove a great boon to students, especially those who are hurrying to lectures and cannot spare the time to cope with oncoming traffic.

Numerous holes in the road make it fairly obvious to motorists that the road is closed to through traffic. Pedestrians, however, are not so easy to convince. Those big yellow barriers are merely considered as part of an obstacle course and passing travellers who wish to avoid the long way around, take their choice of climbing over or crawling under them. The other alternative is to follow the example of some people who run up the hill and around to the part where they can jump over the barrier—a most satisfactory way, we might say.

The builders say that it is easier to refuse to let a boy through than a girl, which speaks volumes about a coed's natural ability to charm. Soon, however, work will commence on the upper part of the bridge and the danger of falling missiles will prevent everyone—even those with winsome smiles—from walking under the construction.

The entire project is expected to be completed in approximately six weeks and its success as a time-saver then will surely make up for any inconvenience it is causing now.

First Western Ticket Bought By Kallinike

At least three enthusiastic Blues supporters slept on the steps of Hart House Sunday night in order to be sure of tickets for the Western game. One of them, the first to buy a ticket, was no other than our hero Kallinike who said he woke up on the steps feeling "like an icicle". Besides getting a ticket for his pains, Kallinike was dealt a seven no-trump hand which he bid and made on the floor of Hart House gym.

Fashion Fancies

Tweeds, Sweaters, Scarves Good Campus Combination

"Just how should one dress for College?" is a familiar question. Of course, we all have our own taste and favorites, but everyone does agree that casuals and suits are a must for the campus.

The honours diploma goes to tweed for tops in College costumes. Tailored suits, pegged skirts or finely spun wool tweed dresses always look "just right". Fringed shawls of matching wool tweed, although not a necessity, are striking additions to anyone's wardrobe.

Tweeds come in many lovely shades—from heather tones, mustard yellows, rich plum shades to speckled beige tones. Remember to choose a shade which is most flattering to your own colouring. You will be living a good deal of the year in this suit, and so it is important that you choose a shade that you will not tire of.

Of course, sweaters are indispensable, and can give great versatility to any wardrobe. Wear them with your suit skirt one day, and on the next, wear the suitcoat with a scarf tied in at the throat. You now have two changes with the same basic costume. Over this two-piecer, wear a matching shortie coat. High collars which are flattering to the shorter hairdo, and little capes are perfect for the in-between lectures rush. Light as a feather, and fastened in a jiffy by a single button, you will keep warm and smart looking on the windiest day.

We now come to the question of gloves. Although many of us don't wear them in these warm days, a good pair of brown or black ones for October days are definitely a good buy. Fabric gloves in many colours, can do much to brighten an otherwise sombre suit or coat—why not try them for yourself?

Complete your outfit with an over-the-shoulder bag, that is definitely roomy. Pencils, pens, your compact, and even clippings from The Varsity can be stowed away here, safely and neatly.

We Disagree...

By DOROTHEA NYBERG

. . . with those people who are afraid to let each person decide a question, such as what to do with his Sunday, for and by himself. Of what possible use is any action if taken under compulsion? Who is to say "This is right" or "This is wrong" to a university, a city or a country? Is not such a responsibility too colossal for even our august circle of distingue in this city to take upon themselves? Perhaps we are wrong. Perhaps they do have the moral strength and firmness of purpose to wield with safety the weapon of religious and social conscience for the whole of Toronto.

Can Choose Church

The majority of those of this campus believe, assumedly, in self assertion and self respect. Students who want to go to such-and-such a church do so. Students wishing to go to such-and-such another church do so with as free a will, and those who do not attend a church on Sunday feel that such is their personal right. If the choice of church is open, and no one has yet suggested that it be limited, why should free choice be limited to the church-going among us. Such a policy is impossible no matter what faith you do or not hold, for an unrestrained atmosphere disappears as soon as any group in society is restricted. So the Pilgrim Fathers believed, so the Fathers of Confederation believed, and so we believe.

University life trains men and women to assume the responsibility of deciding issues and actions for themselves. Such moral responsibility leaves it up to each person to decide "This is right" or "This is wrong" for him as far as we can see.

A Mass Conscience

In glaring contrast to this attitude of university life, a certain group of citizens, who are afraid to let each individual be sovereign of his own conscience, are today advocating a civil life of regimentation under a mass conscience that would leave us without a decision to make and consequently without the ability and character to make a decision. And one of the important questions to be settled in our lives is what we do with our Sunday. No person and no government should be allowed to dictate our answer to such a vitally personal question.

We disagree, as we have said before, with the present obsolete restrictions that a few worried individuals have placed on Sunday activities.

Do you agree or disagree?

Pictured above are three typical skulemen who are busy surveying the campus for the enth time. They may trip us with their tapes, and spy at us through their three-legged telescopes but we love them all any. One coed saw a skuleman squinting through his spy-glass and waving his hand. He may have been waving at his comrades to move their marker but the saddle-shoed coed was delighted anyway and waved right back. The gallant engineer (or was it a "bleary--eyed surveyor") and his comrades reciprocated her wave with great enthusiasm. Right now the men from the little red school house are looking for girls to shake a leg in Skule night on November 19. It's kind of hard for them to find girls as there are very few registered in Engineering. Anyone interested should contact Dave Armour in The Varsity Office.

VIC'S CORNER

There is one advantage in being a turtle! When you go walking in city streets you are low enough down that you don't have to gaze into the expressionless maps that parade every day.

Since you can't become a turtle, there is one solution to this pouting problem. By some means or other we must get everyone to smile. Get out your musty, old toothbrush and clean those tusks for Smile Week at Vic.

And after the first week is over, you'll like the taste of tooth-paste so much that smiling might be a habit.

Shades of McGill: welcome banners and canned Molson's descended from great heights after the game; and of the game but one comment, why do women want hot-dogs in the 3rd quarter? (—)

An anonymous quip "I think that I'll never tee.

Now to Western!

Vic's Bob and Bab plus Mock Court proved an unexpected success. Of the Bab nothing need be said. The Bob was great too. Congrats to Director Greene and "our fresh man", Bill Wood., who put it on with one rehearsal.

Athletics at Vic what a week it was! The Footballers proved their worth, the track men shone both in Sr. Meet and Freshman Harrier, and golfers kicked in too.

The brightest spot was in the Freshman Harrier. Under Mon leur Norm Laidlaw the boys took top honors. Chuck Wortman, Ross Towler, Bill Angus, Warren Morri., Jim Bir and Bob Sheridan deserve credit in order named. Chuck won in 10 min. Watching for you in the Junior Harrier now! Yea 513!

Bill Farlinger topped Sr. track with 17 points, taking the individual championship. Backed by Rowlinson, Rumball, Rname, McMacken, McIntosh, Milne, and Gregory the Vic entry took 2nd place.

Vic Golfers took a 3rd in Intramural Wat. Pridham (Freshman rep on WCAU) was low with an 82, closely followed by Lloyd, Walton and Britnal. Vic had 28 men finish under alloted number of whiffs.

Lou Fick's rugbyites are really after the Mulock Cup now. They take on Skule tomorrow, and a win should put Scarlet and Gold on easy street. Just keep driving gang ... and cheering too!

Next time you go to the game, stand by the cheerleaders! That's an invite! Grrrrrrr!

And in lacrosse, Vic II need a goalie ... so we hear. The First and Second teams start swinging this week.

Everyone talks of the new Vic Show. But no one knows anything ... yet. Listen. After weeks of struggling, encouraged only by Dean Bennet and students, Producer John Finaly has found an auditorium, and a name.

The Scarlet and Gold, A Review By Victoria College, will be presented November 30 in Eaton Auditorium. The show itself will be terrific, worry no more!

But remember, the show admission is going to be low so all can afford to go. That means all must go! We must pack the house, and wo will.

Casting and rehearsals immediately. Watch the board and The Varsity.

While still in a dramatic mood, the production, All My Sons, asks for a plug. Must be a dilp among them! Seriously, they are rolng on stage Nov. 3, 4, 5. Rehearsals every nite, kids. Tickets next week.

A scruffy old note from the music club, (in pencil), reveals the fact that Gilbert and Sullivan have written another show for Vic! Special request.

Ruddigore, a lesser known but yet a brilliant work, has been cast and rehearsals are under way. Talented folks like Marg Carmichael, Paul Dilks and Dit DeCarl will guarantee the quality.

The Glee Club is hot onto their schedule, and will make the December deadline ... providing they can find some nice young boys or tenors. Can you help?

The "tongue twisters" of the Debates Club had a go at it last nite. Now you, too, may have the chance of doing likewise!

The Impromptu Debates, a real success last year, are being organized again this year. Sign the list on the board. Then report on day appointed, get a topic and after five minutes preparation you sound off.

And remember there is a major debate every month to which all are invited to attend.

suggest separating the rooms but a matter of fact the division of the rooms came about "as an accident." When the library was enlarged, the stacks were moved from what is now known as the women's reading room to the back of the building and the authorities decided to use the extra space as a study room. And, men being more set in their ways, the women were the ones to move. Wallace says he believes the segregation has continued this long because "many people prefer it that way."

Nineteen Eighty-Four

The most disturbing, and at the same time, the most important novel published this year is George Orwell's Nineteen Eighty - Four (Reginald Saunders — $3.00). In this book, Orwell has created a terrifying world in which three great superstates are engaged in endless, though small-scale, warfare; a world in which "bureaucrats, scientists, technicians, trade-union organizers, publicity experts, sociologists, teachers, journalists, and professional politicians," devoted to power for its own sake, have created a "collectivist oligarchy" impervious to any rebellion of its subjects; a world in which every human value is either negated or perverted to the use of the Party. "Who controls the past controls the future; who controls the present controls the past" is a Party slogan, and the occupation of Winston Smith, the protagonist of the novel, is the falsification of records. The Thought Police, the educational system designed to purge the adolescent of any notion or instinct contrary to Party doctrine, and the transformation of the language into "Newspeak", all have the same end in view — to make impossible the holding of heretical opinions. And the ultimate purpose of these activities? A quotation from the novel provides the answer: "The object of persecution is persecution. The object of torture is torture. The object of power is power." For Winston, these horrifying ideas become truths in the torture chambers of the "Ministry of Love."

While the characters of the dictator, "Big Brother", and the arch-conspirator, Emmanuel Goldstein, bear resemblances to Stalin and Trotsky, it is a mistake to see Nineteen Eighty-Four solely as an attack on Russian communism. Many of the ideas in the book have their source in Western civilization. C. S. Lewis, in a pamphlet entitled The Abolition of Man, points out that psychologists, working without reference to a traditional set of values, can produce any type of personality they desire. The idea of continuous warfare designed to consume material goods and thereby prevent economic equality among men is already being discussed by political thinkers. (Just as is suggested that the steel industry in the United States provoked a strike in order to create artificially a shortage of steel and hence maintain the present price level.) For examples of the falsification of history we need only point to current practices in Russia. What is important in Orwell's novel is that all the extremes of the grim world of Nineteen Eighty-Four are present in an unorganized form in 1949. What is disturbing is the ruthless pessimism with which Orwell develops his story. Perhaps no character in fiction has ever been so crushingly defeated as Winston Smith is in his rebellion against the Party.

This very pessimism is possibly a defect in Orwell's book. Christian society, accustomed to looking for its celestial paradise in the future, also tends to see the terrestrial future as better than the present. Even readers in this not too optimistic era may resent Orwell's gloomy conclusions. If the literary genre of the Utopia gone sour flourishes best in a godless, materialistic age, Nineteen Eighty-Four is a sad commentary on 1949. Nevertheless, its power, intensity, and suspense, combined with its drastic political implications, make it a must on everyone's reading list.

Film Review

Ichabod And Mr. Toad

Well, Walt Disney has done it again. "Ichabod and Mr. Toad" is something to take your mind from Communism, murder, and immigration restrictions. Here is a delightful fantasy in two parts. Mr. Toad, narrated by Basil Rathbone, is a "tally-ho" type Englishman, always filled with some mania of which the latest is automobiles. He is accused of stealing a car and his ensuing adventures make him a reformed toad—that is until aeroplanes come along. Among J. Thaddeus Toad's loyal friends are Rat, a stuffy "old chap", Mole, meek and unassuming, and McBadger, whose Scotties accent is doubtful.

The second half of the film, as told by Bing Crosby, is about a strange and fabulous school-master, Ichabod Crane, who came to Sleepy Hollow, a town in early New York. Here he charmed the ladies with his gallant manner and wonderful dancing, especially Katrina, with whom he seems to be making great headway until the big, bad rival starts relating ghost tales of the Headless Horseman, which proves Ichabod's undoing. This section of the movie, however, was not as appealing as the first. Ichabod and his friends are cleverly drawn as usual, but they are "unlovable". Only Bing's singing and easy-going story-telling soften them up.

Disney seems to have a mania for putting terrifying spectacles in his films. In this one it is the Headless Horseman. He not only terrifies Ichabod but also the audience in the theatre. At the showing of "Bambi" children were heard sobbing over the fire scene, and in Fantasia many were hysterical over dinosaurs. Perhaps it would do Walt good to drop such horrors.

One thing, however, that seems to be for the best is the exclusion of humans from the picture. Animated characters lose much of their charm in the presence of human beings. The figures are as real as ever; the little animals are human more so than Ichabod who appears only as a caricature. But on the whole it is good entertainment. Take your brothers and sisters to see it and also take yourself.

Marg World.

U. S. Interference

Editor, The Varsity:

I have been astonished recently by the apparent lack of interest shown on the campus—and in The Varsity—over the banning of Professor Barker Fairley and Dr. Glen Shortliffe by United States Immigration officials. This action, together with that taken against students Ruth Comfort and Omar Walmsley, represents an attempt by the U.S. to interfere in the affairs of Canadian Universities. To accept this interference passively would make our own University a tacit accomplice; we should be warned by the experience of Dr. Hunter at the University of Alberta that the failure to challenge attacks upon individuals because of their opinions will lead to further pressure on Universities and attempted control of academic thought. Having just returned from England, where the traditions of freedom of thought are still respected to a considerable degree, I am shocked at the complacence of the premier Canadian University in the face of discrimination against one of its senior members based on allegations about his personal beliefs.

The fact that the discrimination was exercised by another nation does not excuse us from our duty to protest against it, especially since any information on which the discrimination was based must have been supplied by the Canadian Government, unless we wish to consider the possibility that there are U.S. spies in Canada. If a University allows this step in the direction of thought-suppression to be taken against one of its own professors and does not raise a voice in protest, the default will give confidence to those who would wish further to control our thinking and fight academic freedom.

I hope yet to see, in spite of the long delay, some expression of student and staff indignation on this important question.

Jazz Review

JATP One-Nighter

Norman Granz' Jazz at the Philharmonic played a one-night stand at Massey Hall Oct. 8, replete with honks and two-note riffs on the one hand, Lester Young and Ella Fitzgerald on the other. An undercapacity audience hooted and howled its appreciation for two and a half hours of a concert that was always entertaining and often musically satisfying.

Foremost in Granz' front line of famous tenor men was Lester Young. Lester, the "great influence" without whose ideas the course of modern jazz would be different—— Lester of the long melodic line, the plaintive accents, the sinker codas, the forceful beat, the "dead" tone. Because of the lack of sensationalism is his playing he did not corner his share of applause. However, his beautifully conceived interpretations of ballads like "I Cover the Waterfront", "I Can't Get Started" and jump tunes like "Sax-O-Be-Bop" and "Lester Leaps In" were by far the most consistently creative performances of the evening.

The only other inspiring feature of the concert was singer Ella Fitzgerald who certainly received the ovation she deserved. While not possessing the ultra-sophistication of the Sarah Vaughan school, Ella has a polish and subtlety and sincere jazz feeling all her own. The crowd, surprisingly quiet during her singing, let loose with appropriate noise every time she finished, whether it was a novelty such as "The Huckle Buck" or "A Tisket, a Tasket", or her more significant arrangements, "Robins' Nest" and "How High the Moon."

Tenor man Flip Phillips received more than his share of applause by an astute combination of drive, good ideas, and the necessary honks and repetition for the crowd. Flip may be subject to spontaneous inspiration on occasion, but his solo on the finale "Perdido" was note for note that in the recent JATP album of the tune.

Coleman Hawkins, introduced modestly by Granz as "the greatest musician of our time," displayed his facile but monotonous horn work on such favorites of the maestro as "Talk of the Town", "Body and Soul", and "Stumpy". The "Hawk", too, heard the "call" from the audience and responded to it in inevitable JATP form: screaming phrases, etc.

Drummer Buddy Rich almost rocked the foundations of the Hall with his amazing display of technique and energy in a three minute solo. Rich, while admittedly a top technician, and a strong driving force, left something to be desired in the way of modernist's conception of percussion. Jones and Brown were also featured separately, but were at their best in the section work of maintaining a firm swinging foundation for the horns. Tommy Turk of the serious mien, the youngest member of the group, blew alternately original and unoriginal phrases.

The raucous remarks of the audience that evening, rather than contributing to informality, which is certainly the keynote to appreciating music such as this, are in fact more harmful to a young art form which is fast trying to mature.

In retrospect the concert was one of the more worthy efforts staged by impresario Norman Granz in the last couple of years, and once again afforded jazz afficionados in widespread areas to see some of the great or near-great in modern jazz.

Mister Roberts

Thomas Heggen's novel, "Mister Roberts," a humorous account of a particularly blank and stupid unit in the war—a cargo ship in the back areas of the Pacific, travelling from Apathy to Tedium—concentrated on the officers and was very frank. The stage adaptation is stripped to a much larger extent by the men and is even franker.

Toronto the Good was screaming last night at some of the most unvarnished language ever heard on stage. The drawing-room set (in the orchestra with me) find the navy lingo an uproarious and probably slightly dangerous experience, but it is not real comedy and yet it is most of the comedy the play has to offer.

Yes, the situations are still there — the telescope-birthmark incident, which threatens to become famous, the Captain's pet palms, and Pulver's "firecracker" which sounded like the Royal Alexandra falling down,—they were there, but the fine edge of Heggen's off-hand narration can't go on the boards to charm the spectator as it did the reader.

There is one other fault—special to this company, perhaps—and that is the portrayal of Mr. Roberts himself. "Mr. Roberts" is a funny book (or play), but it has a sad hero—unheroically sad—who dies as stupidly as he lives, unfulfilled to the end, rebelling against a negative force. The actor in this company, John Forsythe, has not the depth beneath the cynical surface of Roberts. His absence would not have meant "the dissolution of the group," and his hunger to fight a war seems only a childish lust for action. He is indistinguishable from those around him. The rest of the cast, however, whose requirements are more simply comic, are expertly so down to the last bit part.

You may find the play entirely to your liking. The criticisms I have made sound very lonely through the uproar that still rings in my ears.

Lauritz Melchior

For twenty years in the Metropolitan Opera, Danish Wagnerian tenor Lauritz Melchior has reigned supreme. Last night at Massey Hall in a magnitudinous program of Schumann, Wagner, Strauss, Mr. Melchior retained his crown.

Towering and magnificent like Zeus on Mount Olympus, a row of sparkling medals extending across an expansive chest, Lauritz Melchior was monarch not only of all he surveyed but also of all that he sang.

His program was in four parts: German lieder, sung in English; Wagner, sung in German; German lieder, sung in German; and snapshots from his experiments in Hollywood. Melchior's rich, ringing voice abounds in the stirring, resonant tone, requisite to a Wagner role. As Tannhauser his "Hymn To Venus" transformed the Hall to the cave-like grotto where Venus held her court, to sting the air with exultant song. As Tristan he dreamed the "Traume," lulled forth the langorous strains of Tristan's revolving soul. As Lohengrin, he proclaimed himself the keeper of the Holy Grail in his piercing delivery of Lohengrin's narrative as the Stranger Knight.

From the Wagner, Melchior turned to lieder of Franz Schubert, Robert Schumann and Richard Strauss. Intrinsic to the heroic strain in the tenor's rendition of "Ich grolle nicht," "Cacilie," and "The Two Grenadiers" was a fusion of great power and masterful restraint. His "Erlkonig" bore all the feverish terror of the father and child that the narrative portrays. His Jester's Song from "Twelfth Night" brimmed with the energy and vitality of a singing actor. Each of the lieder was a performance in itself.

In recital Lauritz Melchior sings for the most part in full voice. It rolled like a thunder cloud in the Erlking and soared like a white flame in Tannhauser's "Hymn of Praise." Through the English 'Songs' (The Rosary, You Are My Heart Alone) Melchior's tangy Danish accent flavoured the words to enrich them considerably thereby.

Currently slumming in Hollywood (Thrill of A Romance, Luxury Liner, This Time For Keeps), between Metropolitan roles, Mr. Melchior sang four numbers from his motion pictures. None of them were in keeping with the stature of his preceding songs nor with the noble quality of his exuberant voice. With these Lauritz Melchior descended from the Valhalla of great music to the Lower Place.

Medea

In view of the fact that the Ontario College of Education and the Ontario Classical Association were the sponsors of The Medea of Euripides (Saturday night, U.T.S.) it is surprising that the collaboration could have been so unfruitful. Certainly Euripides was not the uninspired partner, but even his good name suffered in the translation used. His double-edged tragedy of vengeance — vengeance that maims with its corroding hatred the avenger as much as the oppressor — degenerated to a mere evening of violence, and a very brief evening at that (a little over one hour) This was the major cause of the failure.

The tragedy of character was lost through the performances of the actors playing Jason and Medea. The one was almost a burlesque and the other was superficial, and neither suggested the dimensions expected of the leader of the Argonauts and the savage princess he spurned. The hypocritical side of Jason was emphasized to the complete exclusion of his glorious past and lost ambitions, and Medea remained, for all her suffering, not a figure awful in her hatred but a spiteful shrew. The set of this production which could have been just as simple and still dramatic was barren to the point of boredom; it gave the finishing touch to a production sadly undistinguished in every respect.

Small Mistake Maybe

Herr K's eloquency and desperation at being cut off from civilization must have influenced the questioner, for after a day or so he magnanimously admitted that there must have been a small mistake. The two of them became quite chatty, and Herr K began to notice that actually the official's uniform was a trifle too large, and that underneath his aggressiveness, the official seemed to have a deep fear —which not even union wages, and old age pensions and owning all the surface conveyances in the world could assuage.

Herr K asked if there was any literature available. The now affable official gaily handed him a traffic map, with the Art Gallery framed in large letters, and an illustrated brochure for the next Sunday's mystery tour (no passport required). Then Herr K was ushered through the gate, with his blue transfer.

He rode his bike up Bay Street carefully avoiding all red lights, and never once looked to the East — where ant-like workmen announced that someday you might get to heaven on a Yonge St. car.

The Casavant

On a March night back in 1931 the lights dimmed in a new, ultra-modern concert hall seven storeys in the air. The grand opening of Eaton Auditorium was a significant event. It was here that the first great organ was installed of its size and kind outside of a city church.

Casavant Freres of St. Hyacinth, Quebec, were the craftsmen. In the organ are 90 stops and a total of 5,804 pipes over 4 manuals and a pedal. In addition to the usual registers there are chimes, celesta and harp.

Sir Ernest MacMillan was the first to play the instrument, at the opening concert. Six years later the Casavant Society formed to present series recitals devoted solely to the organ. Among the great organists to have played the Casavant are Alexander Schreiner, Flor Peeters, Courboin and E. Power Biggs. This year the Society will present a series of 5 musicales. First to appear will be Fernando Germani, organist of the Vatican, this Wednesday, October 19. The Casavant Society invites all interested students to membership.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

ing would have thought that a destructive hurricane had blown through. Papers and litter covered the floor to a depth of two feet all along the halls. This was the result of a night-long watch for Western Tickets. There was plenty of beefing about wise-guys taking a place in the line because they knew somebody already in line. One student was the fiftieth man in line, and got the hundred and twenty fifth ticket sold. This "butting-in" was in evidence at the fee-payment lines, too, and it seems that University students should have more common decency than to do things like that.

By the way, that was the first time in ten years that McGill has had the thrill of seeing their team beat Varsity. Not to detract from McGill thrills, but we hope it will be ten more years till they see another.

The McGill Daily, in an analytical column, calls the Redmen as the should-be favourites to take the championship this year. Unless our Blues beat Western this Saturday, the McGill organ may not be very far wrong, (as they sing in Jingle Jangle Jingle).

Soccer Reds Taken By UT In Montreal

By BILL LEACH

Boys oh Boys! What a team! In as fine an exhibition of football as could be witnessed, the University of Toronto Soccer Blues defeated the University of McGill at Montreal last Friday. The upper field of Molson Stadium was the scene where the strongest forward line yet to be seen in Intercollegiate competition made hay while the sun shone sweetly. Four of the five front men each bagged a goal in a most impressive display.

McGill Outclassed

In the first half McGill endeavored to play football as it ought to be played, but found themselves completely outclassed in every department, until the halftime score stood at 3-0. Later however, the Redmen switched both their style and their tactics, and indulged in the kick-and-rush type of football which could generally be calculated to upset a less experienced team than the Blues. Play was much more even in this half, and holes were found on occasion in the Varsity defence, but the team as a whole was not to be denied, and though suffering a temporary rebuff in the nature of a penalty goal, regained their three-goal lead and maintained same until the final whistle.

First Goal

The first goal of the game came after five minutes of play. Kuchkuda came in for a shot which hit the upright, the ball rebounded into play, and Bob Antoni was Johnny-on-the-spot to bang same into the empty net. Varsity one up.

Dujon of McGill left the field after a slight knock, and the McGill defence fell to pieces. Barton, taking a smart pass from Alain Wyler, beat a lone defenceman and scored to put Varsity two up. Soon afterwards Kuchkuda scored a sensational goal while practically on the goal-line, having been sent in on a pass by Antoni, and his bullet-like shot rocked the net, leaving the McGill tender helpless. At the Varsity end, Reed was called upon to make two good saves, and Moffat shone as he nodded the ball on the goal-line from an empty net, following a McGill corner. Ted Evans was a standout in the Blues defence.

Defense Tightens

The second half saw a tightening-up of the Reds defence, and Dujon and Carter were outstanding in this respect. Following repeated McGill attacks, their forwards were at last rewarded by forcing a penalty for roughing in the Blues penalty area. Taylor made the kick good, leaving the score at 3-1. Play was now pretty even, and at times pretty rugged, but near the end of play, Leach took the ball following a throw-in by Thompson beat some defenders and pushed a pass through to Wyler, who neatly turned and potted the fourth Varsity tally—and there the scoring stopped and the game was ended.

Line-Ups:

Varsity: Reed; Moffat, Mercer; Leach, Evans, Thompson; Allen, Wyler, Antoni, Barton, Kuchkuda. Alts.- Williams, Delfosse.

McGill: Fainstat; Dujon, Carter; Skute, Taylor, Hutson, Ortege, Lemily. Kadar, Hendrickson, Reballedo. Alts., Heller, Falconer.

Varsity Sailers Retain Grant Cup

Extremely light winds eliminated all opportunity for good racing, at the intercollegiate dinghy regatta held at Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club, Montreal, on Sunday, Oct. 16, under the sponsorship of McGill University. Only one race was run off, and as this exceeded the specified time limit, the series was declared no contest, and Varsity was conceded the Col. L. F. Grant Trophy for another year. In the one race sailed, only two boats finished, Pete Pangman and George Cuthbertson of Varsity winning, with a good lead over one of the entrants from Queen's University. McGill and RMC boats, as well as the other two from Queen's and Varsity were left wihtout wind, while still far from the finish line.

Vargas Spark Sr. Meds As Collegers Laced 24-6 Anderson Majors Twice

By MIKE FURLONG

University College gridders underwent an operation at the hands of the Medsmen on the back campus yesterday afternoon, and when the operation was over, the Red and White were on the short end of a 24-6 score. The Varga boys, Gabe and Al were the big guns for Meds and they received able assistance from Hobson and Anderson, mainly as pass receivers.

Kettle Injured

UC had trouble getting untracked after they lost one of their offensive threats, Doug Kettle, early in the game and they never seemed able to match Meds after Doug left, although Morris and Jewson did some nice passing.

A first quarter Meds' drive was sparked by Gabe Varga's passing and running but UC held at their ten yard marker and Meds lost the ball.

A Meds' penalty and a short kick by Denny Vince gave UC possession on the Sawbones' forty but the Red and White could not pay off.

A fumbled kick gave UC the ball on Meds' twenty, but again the College boys couldn't tally. Vernon of Meds then dribbled a loose ball up to UC's 33, and from that mark Gabe tossed a nice pass to Hobson who was finally stopped on the three yard line. Gabe Varga crossed on the next play on a wide buck. Gabe also converted this score from placement.

A Red and White drive led by Morris' passing and the running of Walker and Miles was halted by the half time whistle.

Blocked Kick

To start the second half, the College made a short drive which was ended at midfield when the Meds' line poured through to block a kick and give them the ball on UC's twenty stripe. Gabe Varga again passed to Hobson on the three to set up Al Varga's plunge for Meds' second touchdown which Gabe converted.

Some fine passing by Morris with Hynbida as the main receiver, carried UC into Meds' end but for some reason the aerial route was then abandoned, and Meds blocked a kick when UC could not advance the sticks on the ground. Some hope returned to the College boys then when Miles gathered in an "Argo bounce" from a blocked kick and sped forty yards to score for UC. The convert was no good.

UC Takes To Air

Midiff's fine kickoff then scored the final point when it bounded into the end zone where Gabe Varga was dropped by Hynbida. Midway through the last quarter, Al Varga intercepted one of UC's desperation passes at mid-field. Al then tossed about twenty to Anderson who took the ball from the midst of three defenders and crossed standing up. Al converted this one.

The final scoring of the game came when Anderson gathered a flat pass thrown by Morris and raced to paydirt from about forty yards out.

Line-ups:

Meds—Halves, Sims, Vince, G. Varga, Anderson; quarter, McKee; Ends, Ricci; Vernon; middles, Rosen, McMillan; insides, Dawson, Freeland; snap, Dorak. Subs: Martyn, McLeod, Roberts, Nobie, Smith, Varga, Thompson, Hobson, Darby, Stocker, Hopkins.

U.C.—Halves, Walker, Jewson, Miles, Kettle; quarter, Midiff; ends, Wass, Hynbida; middles, Grasser, Dougall; insides, Ellis, T. Webb; snap, Stettenberg. Subs: P. Webb, Terry, Saraburn, McKenzie, Scott, Cullen, Hynshyn, Lawrence, Taylor, Law, Morris.

UC Edges Medicos 9-7; Renew Lacrosse Rivalry

Meds and UC took up where they left off last January when they went at each other yesterday afternoon with their dusty but trusty lacrosse sticks. UC won the fast and well-played contest by a 9-7 score. Meds were the Dafoe Cup winners last year beating UC two out of three, but UC took no notice of that impressive title and behind the deadly fire of Jack Raymond and Frank Chambers, imports from Fergus, Ontario, the very heart of the lacrosse industry, they indicated that they were out to be the champs this year. The aforementioned players, fresh from three days solid training in Montreal, scored thrice. Dutch Young also put in three to account for the UC total.

Axa Haliburton, veteran mainstay of the Meds, did nearly all the scoring for his outfit, putting in six out of their total seven. Ted Beaton snared the remaining one. The game was very well-played considering how early it is in the season.

St. Mike's Take UC II

The other scheduled lacrosse game was one between St. Mike's A and UC2, which the former team took by a 11-4 margin. This game was considerably rougher than the noon affair, but as usual not many penalties were dished out. Pat Duffy was the outstanding scorer for the Double Blue, sinking five counters. Joe Prendergast got two and the rest of the scoring was limited to one apiece for every member of the team. Stuckey, Keegan and Cummings were the UC scorers.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

Department of sweet memories: The lead sentence in a story in The Varsity of October 25, 1948, reads: "Varsity Blues unleashed prodigious scoring power in Molson Stadium Saturday to pile up a 41-0 win over the highly touted McGill Redmen in the most one-sided rout since the resumption of Intercollegiate Football after the war."

The lead sentence yesterday: "The re-vitalized McGill Redmen picked Saturday afternoon to win their first home game in four years when they defeated the Varsity Blues 22-13."

What a change! And the results of the game were nowhere more evident than on the faces of the Varsity players this morning. They did not feel much like talking, and Bill Danylchuk, who takes his football as seriously as religion, couldn't crack more than a half-smile all day. The loss really hit the boys.

The London Life announcer pulled an awful boner Saturday when he described Pete Bennett as snapping in Clark's spot. It was not Pete, it was Ed Fisher. Ed, by the way, played extremely well in the centre spot, considering that he is a foreigner to the position.

Dick Brown played a good, steady, game Saturday; it seems the only thing that can make him lose his customary coolness is a crowd waiting for him to say something.

* * * * *

The U. of T. Tennis club should be in for some congrats .... they beat both the U. of Buffalo and the U. of Niagara last week-end by decisive 6-1 scores.

Bruce Cummings had to be taken out of the game Saturday not because of an injury to his shoulder, but because he was a little woozy after a knock on the head. He'll be back to go with Western.

The Intramural department has some tennis balls for sale at a ridiculously low price. They are turnament balls that have been bounced only one or two times and they all are in brand new condition. They are being sold at six (6) for fifty cents. And they are not all sold yet!

The Physical Training Credit sessions have started, bringing with them the annual headaches for the PHE staff. Lou Smith tells us he dreads the rush of frosh and sophs on Monday mornings, but it looked yesterday as if the PT-ers forgot all about coming. It's not bad in the fall when they play Borden or Speed Ball, but it's awful in the winter!

Sportswoman

Last night saw the opening of the Basketball season at the OCE gym. Four games were played with two from League I and one each from Leagues IV and V.

A score of 27-15 ended the UC Sr.-Jr. A and the PHE III game with UC the winners. It was definitely a win throughout the four quarters.

Rosanna Kelly, UC IV, and Karlyn Hollis, UC IV, showed outstanding ability in all their plays, while their coach Bev Morrison, PHE III, played full time as a guard on the opposite team.

Senior Saints Win

The Senior Junior Saints team, sparked on by fast-moving forward Pauline Smith and the strong defence playing of Nan Sootheran defeated Vic Seniors 18-10.

This was the second basketball game of the evening and it became very exciting when Vic put on the pressure in the last quarter.

Busy Girl

Bev Morrison was kept hard at work last night when she finished up by refiring the last two games.

PHE I, in a rough and tumble game, just managed to beat St. Hilda's Freshie team by one point. It was a close struggle and the final score stood at 28-27.

In League IV the Nurses team displayed a lot of smooth playing to outstrip Vic Soph B team and win by a large margin. They emerged at the end of the game with a tally of 34-8.

Close Struggle

Meds edged out a hard-fighting PHE III 12-10 in a softball battle on Trinity field yesterday noon.

Due to the sensational pitching of Betty Line, the Meds team were leading the Fizz Edders 9-3 at the end of the second inning. However they came back in the third inning with seven runs to pass the Meds.

When the Meds came up to bat they added three more runs to the final score and the game finished. Stars on their team were Dawne Jubb, Betty Line and Irene Hain, while on the Fiz Ed team Joan Rogers did a fine job.

Sticks! Bully! Turning!

Each Tuesday and Thursday morning, these strange cries can be heard by any early riser sauntering down Philosopher's Walk. Momentarily terrified, the stroller usually gains sufficient courage to investigate the source of these war cries, and is much relieved to find that it isn't a battle of ancient Britons, but merely some ground hockey enthusiasts taking their morning excercise on the Trinity campus.

Twice a week at 8 a.m., this eager group gropes its way from beds and hastily eaten breakfasts to the hockey field, where it indulges in ground hockey for the sheer love of the game.

Just now, the group is rather small, and is hoping for reinforcements in the form of women students from every faculty and college of the university.

Have they an object towards which they are working? Not really, they play for fun and exercise. However, it is hoped that they will be able to play a game with the McMaster team in the near future, and later, with those super stick handlers, the Havergalians.

So, if you find it hard to make that 9.00 lecture, if you have that morning-after feeling, or if you are watching with alarm your fleeting school girl figure, rise from your beds with the dawn, and join us in a bully!

We will now put in another anti-climactical plea for a non-playing coach. If any of you have played ground hockey in the past and feel that, although you are not equal to the rigours of a game, you would still like to participate in the sport as an instructor, you would be a most welcome addition to our early morning practices.

CHARGES AD POLICY 'UNFAIR'

Planned Bus Trips But Refused Space In Varsity Is Claim

Charges that the Students' Administrative Council's advertising policy for The Varsity is "unfair, discriminatory and not in the best interests of the student body" were leveled last night at the SAC by Bill Thompson, II Law. Thompson's charges followed unsuccessful attempts to place advertising in The Varsity to promote a scheme of bus transportation for away from home football games which would have competed with an SAC scheme of rail transportation.

Refused Space

In a statement released last night Thompson stated that he had repeatedly been refused space for his ad. When "I went to see Mr. E. A. Macdonald, who I understand is in charge of Varsity advertising . . . he informed me . . . that the reason the ad was not carried was 'it is against the policy of the SAC to run competing ads at the same time the SAC ad is in the paper.'"

Thompson had hoped to run an excursion by bus to London this weekend for the Western game. He planned to charge $4.00 for the round trip, as opposed to the $4.90 fee being made by the SAC for rail travel.

Will Go To SAC

Thompson said that the bus fare, if run on a no profit basis, would cost each student about $2.62. Part of his statement reads: "I intend to take this matter directly to the Students' Administrative Council to clear up the policy of that group on advertising, and to present to them a proposed plan for taking students to away games which would save the student up to 40% on the rate they are charged at present."

"Mr. Macdonald said that I could run my ad in tomorrow's, Wednesday's Varsity, and could use the SAC office to sell my tickets if I wanted," Thompson said last night. He also said that the SAC would refund money to any students who wanted to exchange their train tickets for bus tickets. But of course, at this late date the plan is out of the question.

Buses Used Before

"Buses have been run in recent years but Mr. Macdonald said that because it is necessary to take cheerleaders and the Blue and White Band to the games that the buses have proved unsatisfactory," Thompson said. "He claimed that people hadn't returned on the buses and that the SAC had been stuck with the bill for a double return fare. I think it would be as easy to catch a bus on time as to catch a train on time."

Mr. Macdonald, who is the secretary-treasurer of the SAC had no comment to make on the charges last night. SAC President Bob Hetherington, commenting on the charges said: "The SAC is very satisfied with the way Mr. Macdonald administers SAC business affairs. He is an awfully good man for the position and the students of this university are fortunate in having him."

Swedish Students' Program Beamed At North America

First of a series of shortwave broadcasts dealing with Swedish University life was aired on Sunday evening, October 9, by the Swedish Broadcasting Corporation in co-operation with the Swedish National Union of Students.

The programs are being broadcast every second Sunday of each month and programs to come yet will deal with the possibilities for foreign students to study in Sweden, student exchange, and student's cultural social and sports activities.

Programs are being broadcast on those Sunday nights at 0730 hours (Greenwich Meantime) on the wavelength 27.83 and 49.46 (k.c. 10780 and 6065), and at 1530 hours on the wavelength 19.80 and 27.83 (k.c. 15155 and 10780).

Frail Femmes Fight Five

Would the woman or women who kicked out the engineers please come forward?

Five spirited (or spirituous) engineers were rudely repulsed on Friday night when they tried to break into Mulock House, Whitney Hall. One of the invaders got one leg into the house — through a first-floor window — only to be pushed out.

Clanging burglar alarms and screaming residents reinforced by the night portress repulsed his next attempt. When last seen he was zigzagging across the lawn with his companions.

Good rugby material is needed by all faculties. Would the frail femmes who evicted the ebullient engineers please come forward?

U.C. Elections

A heavy vote was recorded in the University College Elections yesterday, U. C. Lit officials reported last night. More freshmen voted this year than in any recent election at UC, the count showing that 40% of the elegible members had cast their ballots.

U.C. Freshman class election results as announced last night at the Soph-Frosh banquet are: Executive of 5T3, Pres., Lyall Moran; Sec-Treas., Anthony Siama; Athletic Rep., Bill Lawrence (accl'm.)); Lit Assn't Sec.-Treas., Lloyd N. Freel.

In the women's elections, Johanne Ratz was elected first year president with Muriel Chinn, Marian Hogarth, and Joan Carley as her executive.

Ann Gostling, Ann Burton, and Mary Carter were elected as Literary Society representatives from second, third, and fourth year respectively.

Noted Artists To Appear At Red Feather Concert

On Thursday, October 27th, the Faculty of Music will do repeat on its concert in aid of Red Feather which last year netted $917.80 for the University fund.

The concert, to be held at Convocation Hall at 8:15 p.m. will feature some of last year's artists plus some new-comers. Among those appearing again this year are Edmund Hockridge and Dr. Healey Willan, University organist. Dr. Willan is well-known as organist and choirmaster of St. Mary Magdalene's church, where his choir is considered one of the finest in the city. Edmund Hockridge, whom many have heard on his own CBC programme, recently played Balstode in the CBC's production of "Peter Grimes." At this year's concert he will again be accompanied by Leo Barkin.

Two New-Comers

Among the new artists appearing will be Nellie Smith, well-known Toronto contralto and Bela Bozsormenyi Nagy, Hungarian-born pianist. Both are familiar to Toronto audiences through concert and radio appearances. Miss Smith also appeared in "Peter Grimes" as Miss Sedley.

Dr. Mazzoleni, principal of the Royal Conservatory, will lead the string orchestra. Dr. Mazzoleni is a leading figure in Canadian music, not only through his activities as principal of the Conservatory, but also through his appearances as conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra.

Commodores Will Play

In the field of vocal ensemble, the "Commodores" quartette, well-known CBC group, will be featured. This ex-service foursome is made up of four personable young men, each of whom is a fine showman in his own right. The quartette, besides its numerous CBC appearances, was twice featured as guest artist with the Bell Singers in their

Radio Drama Voted Money By Committee

The SAC has voted prize money for a radio script writing contest, Thurston Smith, Radio Committee publicity director, announced yesterday.

The first and second prizes will be $25 and $15 and the two winning scripts will be broadcast, Smith said.

The $25 prize will be for an original script, a board of judges deciding whether a script is truly original. The $15 prize script may be original or may be an adaptation of another script.

Only a drama script may win the first prize. The competition for second prize is also open to musical productions.

All scripts are the property of the Radio Committee and will be returned to the students at the end of the school year, Smith said. The scripts which do not get prizes may however be broadcast, since there are to be over two dozen shows to be produced this year, he explained.

Prizes have been allotted to take the place of the $25 paid by CBC last year for each script used.

Smith emphasized that decisions of the judges will be final.

The Radio Committee also plans to publish a radio column once or twice a week in The Varsity. The deadline for the script writing contest will be announced in the column.

Hart House Theatre

Gill Plans Crime . . . And Punishment

By DON STEVENSON

Few people ever see a stage play in rehearsal. Monday night Hart House Theatre Director Robert Gill held a rehearsal of "Crime and Punishment," to be presented Oct. 22 to Oct. 29, that illustrated an aspect of acting spectators rarely dream of in their plush seats in front of the stage.

This was the first time they had attempted to act out the whole of the play, Gill said. Ladders and pieces of lumber were scattered in front of the partly completed set.

Set Most Complex

Gill described the set as "one of the most complex" he has ever used. It is a sort of cross-section of a St. Petersburg (Russia) boarding house. It thus shows four rooms and a hall and stairs, making it possible to portray several separate actions at once.

"But it causes great problems in the timing of cues," Gill explained. Sometimes the actors must get their cues seven or eight seconds ahead of time in order to give them time to weave their way through several rooms to their required positions, he said.

There was also a unique lighting problem. Sometimes several rooms would be lighted while the others would be in darkness.

Makes Traffic Problem

Gill described the task of moving the 40-member cast through the various rooms as "a major traffic problem".

As rehearsal time (7.30 p.m.) approached, Gill paced around more and more nervously, moving furniture and conferring with two or three people at once. When he called the roll some of the cast had not yet arrived. He puffed on his cigaret ever more rapidly, at times mumbling what sounded vaguely like curses to himself, before he was finally able to start rehearsal, ten minutes late.

One moment there were 15 of the cast casually talking and laughing. A blast of Gill's whistle and they burst into the passionate argument of the opening scene.

Who Dunnit With Philosophy

"This is the classic of detective stories, with, of course, more philosophical content," Gill said in an interview afterwards. "The major conflict is between the student murderer and the detective. The murderer is eventually redeemed through the love of the prostitute Sonia."

The rehearsal was punctuated by Director Gill's cry of "cut", as the student actors missed cues and hid themselves behind doorways. "This is the most difficult of the rehearsals," Gill explained later. "We've rehearsed parts of the play many times, but this is the first time we have put it all together."

The play is the Rodney Ackland dramatization of Dostoievski's novel.

Some members of the cast are: Evan Scott, as the student murderer, Raskolnikoff; Helen Armesto, as the prostitute, Sonia; Kate Reid, as Sonia's mother, Katerina; Alvin Crow, as Porfiri; and Clarence Jackman, as Amalia.

Our Lack Of Interest

Yesterday in the columns of this newspaper, we carried a letter from a student in Graduate Studies berating The Varsity for lack of interest in "the attempt by the U.S. to interfere in the affairs of Canadian universities."

Specifically, the letter accuses us of "apparent lack of interest" in the banning of Professors Fairley and Shortcliffe, and the action taken again students Comfort and Walmsley.

When this sort of thing can be seriously charged against The Varsity, it is time, we think, to re-state our stand on the whole affair.

Firstly, our "apparent lack of interest" amounts to carrying news stories or letters on all the cases mentioned. Further, mention of three of the four cases cited was made in editorials in this column. In point of fact, five editorials made direct or indirect reference to the implications of these actions.

Secondly, our statement of policy. With the writer of the letter we feel that the cases mentioned represent, among other things, an attempt to limit and control academic freedom. That a limit is being placed and control attempted is the important thing, more important than the direction from which the control is coming.

We have registered our protest of the American Immigration Service's policy. Until such time as we have something new to say on the same question we shall remain silent. But we have not forgotten nor do we lack interest.

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

Boszormenyi—Nagy

Monday evening's recital by the Hungarian pianist, Bela Boszormenyi-Nagy, was a rewarding experience for concert-goers who appreciate subtly-played piano music without sensationalism.

Bach's Partita in C minor opened the classical part of the program. Passage-work was excellent, often reminding one of a clavicord's fragile resonance. Less use of pedal would have made the Sinfonia and Sarabande even more enjoyable. Beethoven's Variations in C, Op. 120, while too long for most audiences, were musically satisfying. Mingled with episodes of a Mozart-like humour were some which approached the grandeur of later sonatas. Though losing the waltz rhythm in more complicated sections, he possessed feeling for chord movement, and retained in the dynamics a well-preserved restraint.

Possibly the highlight of his concert was Schubert's Sonata in B flat. Made possible by the pianist's acute understanding of the chord progressions and a well-balanced tempo, the second movement especially was sombre and beautiful. Although Schubert was a contemporary of Beethoven, in this sonata he shows himself to be more romantic than classical, and produces a pleasurable effect.

Modern work of the evening was the Marosszek Dances by Hungarian composer Kodaly. Here was a parade of stark impressions, a touch of Gershwin wistfulness in the mid-section, changing to a steadily growing fever which only relaxed at the finale.

Mr. Boszormenyi-Nagy is a senior member of the faculty of Toronto Royal Conservatory of Music.

Vic Revue Finds Home In Eaton Auditorium, Casting Starts Today

The new Vic show, the first of its kind at the college, is now well in hand, producer John Finlay has announced. Only the lyrics remain to be written for the music. Tomorrow casting will get under way under directors George McCowan and Ted Snider. No graduate talent will be used on stage but their talent will be used in the writing of songs and behind the scenes.

Dean Bennett has approved a plan to present the show in Eaton Auditorium. The move off the campus was made necessary by a full fall schedule at Hart House Theatre. A special V. C. U. meeting held Monday has accepted any financial loss that may be incurred.

"Scarlet and Gold—A revue by Victoria College" is the name under which this new show will run on Nov. 30.

Condemns Students

Editor, The Varsity:

It is possible to understand the behavior of certain professors of philosophy who repeatedly make derogatory allusions to religion, because in a land of free speech, and especially under the protection of an academic gown, they have a perfect right to carry on a crusade against what they consider to be a fallacy or even an evil. The lecture room is the best place for them to carry on their campaign, because there is no trained spokesman of religion present, and their accusations therefore go unchallenged. The best vehicle for their odium is undoubtedly the "humorously cynical remark", in which they select their evidence, give it the stamp of cleverness and leave no basis for a proper reply.

But what I cannot understand is the attitude of undergraduate honour students who almost invariably titter foolishly on such occasions, and frequently laugh outright, thereby encouraging the "philosopher."

The Marquess of Salisbury believed that he was addressing "a vast majority of Christians," and if any part of this vast majority attends the philosophy lectures to which I refer, their duty is surely to remain silent when offensive remarks are made deliberately and maliciously against religion, and if they possess the skill they should raise their voices in protest.

In brief, I support the right of any lecturer to say what he wishes, whether pertinent to the course or not; but I would condemn the conduct of a Christian Student whose giggles encourage the vilification of religion by the professor, instead of making a firm and honest stand against it.

W. R. Bazley,
Grad.

Forestry, SPS, Winners In Interfaculty Contests Downing Meds, Trinity

SPS vs. Trinity

Junior Skule downed a determined and hard-fighting team from Trinity last night on the back campus by a score of 6-0. The game was very cleanly and keenly contested, there being only one penalty handed out. It was the first outing for both teams and understandable jitters were evident, especially in the Red and Black back-field.

Prendergast of Skule was the hero of the game getting the lone major score. This score came off a pass from about the Trinity 30 and Prendergast went over standing up. The convert attempt failed.

The other SPS score came after a field goal attempt went for a single. Armstrong got the credit for that score. Gritton blocked two crucial kicks.

Wardrop was the stand out player for the Buttery Boys with his running, passing and kicking. He sparked the team in the final minutes when they drove to the Skule 15 but lost possession on an incomplete third down pass. SPS ragged the ball as time ran out.

Meds vs. Forestry

Forestry ran away with Junior Meds in the rugby game on the west field last night, laving the Medsmen by a 20-5 score. The game featured lots of hard running and good passing by the green-shirted ones, lead chiefly by Fred Collict and Phil Austin, large guns back with the team again this year. Austin last year was runner up in the individual scoring department.

Meds didn't have very much to offer in the way of either pass defence or line backing up, as the Foresters pounded their way through the line time after time for large gains. Wilson was the lone Meds scorer, snaring a TD in the second quarter that went unconverted.

Fred Collict plunged his way for Forestry's first touchdown which was converted by Phil Austin. Clark was the high scorer of the epic getting a TD and a single. Dowsett cornered a Medsman behind his own line for a safety touch. Boake was the next scorer for Forestry getting a touchdown. Vernon ended the scoring with a towering punt that went for a single.

Terrific Match In Mural Tennis L. Turner Champ

Len Turner is the new intramural tennis champion, winning an extremely hard-fought round from intermediate star Jack Coles yesterday afternoon. In the three out of five final session Turner, the favorite due to the fact that he was number two ranking on the senior team, found it necessary to go all out to turn back Coles.

Turner Hot

Turner continually burned base line drives and other shots that seemed impossible to return, but Coles always seemed to be on the right spot and managed to get most of the shots back. Turner was so unnerved at one point in the last set that he was heard to remark 'I'm not playing a tennis player, I'm playing an octupus with a racquet in each tentacle.

Results:
Reid beat Biddell (1-6), (7-5), (6-4).
Taylor beat Little (6-4), (6-2).
Hendra beat McKnight (6-4), (5-7), (6-4).
Stewart beat Kagawa (1-6), (6-0), (6-4).
Coles beat Howard (6-3), (8-4).
Andreson beat Reid (6-4), (6-2).
Dawes beat Powell (6-3), (6-1).
Quarter Finals: Turner beat Reid (6-0), (6-1).
Taylor beat Hendra (6-2), (6-0).
Coles beat Stewart (6-3), (6-1).
Dawes beat Andreson (6-3), (6-3).
Semi-finals: Turner beat Taylor (6-1), (6-2).
Coles beat Dawes (6-3), (6-4).
Final: Turner finally beat Coles three out of five, (6-2), (4-6), (3-6), (6-4), (6-2).

The senior intercollegiate track meet will be held in London this afternoon. The Toronto team was selected after the interfaculty meet last week. They will have to compete against such notables as Parry and the McFarlanes of Western.

Softball Games

With the able pitching of Merry Cochrane, PHE I defeated UC I 15-6. The UC team put up quite a fight, but were definitely outplayed by the close co-ordination and the amazing batting powers of the Fizz Edders who tallied the 15 runs in their second inning.

PHE II displayed their strength yesterday when they defeated St. Mike's 8-3. The Fizz Edders got off to a wonderful start in the second inning by chalking up five runs to St. Mike's no score. After this the game went more evenly and both teams showed exceptional ability on the flies.

The softball game between St. Hilda's III and PHE IV scheduled for Thursday in the Stadium has been cancelled because of the track meet.

Basketball

Physio A started off right by whipping Vic Sr. B, score 29-3. In spite of the score the game was even and the absence of Phil Wilks, who netted 23 of her team's points, would have changed the final outcome. Throughout the game was capably handled by Physio, whose passing was deft and accurate. The three forwards Lois Cossar, Jean Ascot, and Phil Wilks worked like a precision team, darting quickly to receive and shoot. Lois Cossar set up most of the points scored by her teamates. Penalties fell heavily to both teams.

Physio B didn't fare as well in the second game bowing to O.T. 29-6. This game, too, belonged decisively to the winners who led throughout. They out-passed, outguarded, and definitely out-played their opponents, who seemed at a loss what to do with the ball when they did get it.

Shooting was poor by both teams. Kay Young and Mary Stackhouse were high scorers for O. T. while Mary Craig put them in for Physio.

Debaters Conclude USA Is Justified In Shortliffe Ban

That the United States was justified in recently refusing entry into that country of Professor Shortliffe of Queen's University was the decision reached at the first meeting of the U. of T. Debating Union Tuesday night in Brennan Hall, St. Michael's College.

Motion Defeated

The motion, "resolved that the refusal to admit a certain Queen's University professor into the United States was a violation of human rights," was defeated by the House. Upholding the motion were Wally Fram, IV-U.C., and George Slater, III-Vic. Opposing were Jim Skells, II-Osgoode, and Joe Crooke, II-Osgoode.

The negative attempted to point out that no Canadian has any right of entry into the U.S. and that insistence upon such a claim would be a violation of the soverignty of the U. S.

The affirmative, alluding to the right of free speech and thought and the right to trial by jury mentioned in the American Bill of Rights, insisted that these were innate and a part of the heritage of western civilization. The barring of Professor Shortliffe, without proof that he was trying to undermine the government of the U. S. by force, was, they said, a violation of these rights.

U. S. Was Right

In answer, the members from Osgoode insisted that rights were not innate, but came from the government. They maintained that Professor Shortliffe had taken a pro-Communist and anti-U.S. stand. Therefore, the U.S. did right in refusing him entry. It was further pointed out that he had not been permanently barred from that country, that his case was still under discussion in Washington.

The speeches from the floor of the House centred mainly about the elucidation of points made by the main speakers.

Blames Ad Policy Not SAC Official For Plan Failure

The following letter has been received from Bill Thompson, II Law, who yesterday charged that the Students' Administrative Council advertising policy for The Varsity was "unfair, discriminatory, and not in the best interests of the student body":

"Upon reading Mr. Hetherington's remarks regarding my charges presented in yesterday's edition of The Varsity, I received the impression that he may be labouring under a false delusion as to the object of the said charges. The purpose of this letter is to define the issue clearly for Mr. Hetherington's benefit and for those who may also be misinformed. It surely is quite clear that the policy of the SAC regarding suppression of competing ads is the intended recipient of my charges and not Mr. Macdonald personally. I understand that he is only carrying out the policy as laid down by the SAC. No reflection on Mr. Macdonald's ability or as to his proficiency in his capacity as SAC secretary-treasurer was intended.

W. H. J. Thompson."

Thompson has indicated his intention of taking his charges directly to the Students' Administrative Council.

Middle House Wins Events But Loses Beauty Contest

Middle House frosh proved themselves the best of Vic residence freshmen in such sports as string-eating, chamber pot charioteering, and nosing peanuts along a dirty floor, at Vic Stunt Night in the college gym last night, but they failed to convince the judges their candidate for the title of "Miss Burwash" was tops in feminine beauty.

Ryerson House prevented the Middle House men from making a clean sweep of the events when their "girl", a statuesque redhead with the trimmest ankles of all the contestants, won out over Miss Nelles and Miss South House, who tied for second and third.

Cries of "What is it?" and "Can she canter?" were heard among other comments it might be better not to print, as the "girls" paraded around the room.

Master of Ceremonies Bev Johnston, II Emmanuel, had to warn the onlookers, "There will be no fraternizing with the ladies."

The beauty contest is a regular part of the Stunt Night and the entrants are dressed by the girls of the Vic women's residences. The "girls'" high heels caused them to walk at a slow, unsteady pace. The bare midriff dress of Miss Middle House revealed a figure greeted by the query, "Is it muscle or fat?"

Seats Unsteady

In the chamber pot race the shortage of vehicles forced the running of the event in several heats. The riders found it nearly impossible to keep their seats.

Emcee Bev Johnston was repeatedly drowned out by shouts of "We want Bob Hope" when he told such stories as the one about the man who, when met by a drunk while carrying home a grandfather clock, was asked, "Why don't you buy a watch like other people do?"

Doug Mellwish, C & F, and Eric Perrott, M, P & C, registered Middle House's first victory when they came in far ahead of their stumbling opponents in the wheelbarrow race.

Win Twice

Bill Cooper, Soc. and Phil, had to win the string eating contest twice before the victory was permanently awarded to Middle House. The Middle House men shouted their loud disapproval when it was ruled the contest would have to be repeated because the audience had got too close to the competitors.

Steve Legate, Pass Arts, and Tom Manning, MP & C, carried off the honours in the chamber pot race.

Jack Ellis, Soc and Phil, won out in the peanut pushing by sweeping along with the side of his nose.

The whole evening was comparatively peaceful, except when the Middle House men tried to make off with the South House cow bell.

Opera Singers At Hart House Sunday Concert

Highlight at this Sunday evening's concert at Hart House will be Nicholas Goldschmidt conducting members of the Royal Conservatory Opera School (of which he is musical director) in excerpts from George Bizet's opera "Carmen". Mr Goldschmidt will conduct the same work for the CBC Opera Company in December. The Hart House preview will feature four young students in the Opera School who shall appear on the CBC Wednesday Night: Margaret Kerr as Carmen, Pierre Boutet as Don Jose, Marguerite Gignac as Micaela and Gillies Lamontagne as Escamillo. To complete their programme, the four singers will include a group of art and folk songs, as well as operatic arias and ensembles. The Hart House concerts are held on alternate Sundays at nine o'clock in the Great Hall.

Varsity Receives Invitation For Pep Rally At Western

Varsity students are welcome to attend the Pep Rally to be held this Friday night at 8.00 p.m. in Convocation Hall, University of Western Ontario. Mel Platt, Western Meds student in charge of the Rally, phoned yesterday from Western to extend an invitation to Varsity to attend. He regretted that an announcement had not been made earlier.

"We are trying to get the Varsity cheerleaders, Bob Masterson, and the Big Blues to put in an appearance at the Rally too," he said.

"I don't think either team, Western or Varsity, will win the series," he commented. "McGill is the school to beat."

RCAF Reserve Flight This Year At Queen's To Enrol Twenty-Five

Kingston, Oct. 17 —(CUP)— Queen's will have an RCAF Reserve University Flight, similar to that at Varsity, sometime this year. This announcement was made by the RCAF and Principal Wallace of Queen's.

The RCAF University Training Plan calls for three winter and three summer sessions for all cadets. They are paid during this training period.

Twenty-five applicants will be given training this year, with an additional 25 taken in for the next two years to bring the flight up to its full complement of 75 cadets.

Upon graduation, the trainee may enter the Regular branch of the RCAF, the Reserve or the Supplementary Reserve.

A Little Girl Learns To Dance

By HERB WOOD

Two little girls sat on the step twisting the laces of their slippers that dangled from their fingers, making believe they were ballerinas performing a pirouette.

"Gee... isn't Moira Shearer pretty?" said one little girl. "I want to be like her when I grow up."

"I want to dance like Cyd Charisse - she's wonderful," said Susan.

Susan and her friend were not awaiting a dance lesson at the Boris Volkoff studios. They were sitting on the step of the University Settlement House waiting for Cynthia, their dancing instructor.

Little Money

Before Susan could remember why, her father died suddenly leaving a family of six with very little means of support. The family had to move from the nice neighbourhood to one where you could set your watch with the nearby factory whistles.

Susan is tall for her age. Her large dark eyes heighten the whiteness of her thin face. As second youngest her clothes are hand-me downs and make-overs from her older sisters.

Plenty Of Enthusiasm

With a family of six, Susan's mother has no money left over for such things as dancing lessons. Susan made up for this by a world of make believe. At every opportunity she practised some of the steps she had seen performed by her favourite dancer in the movies. Even while waiting for the street car she whirled or did a few steps in imitation of a dance.

Her friends soon caught her enthusiasm. On Saturday they would play on Susan's veranda. To any on-looker their jumping about and posing had no relationship to ballet.

As the warm summer days melted into fall the days became too cold to play outside. One Saturday it was raining. "Let's go to the Settlement House and see if we can play," someone suggested. The little group trooped down and that was the beginning of regular dancing classes.

Settlement Helps

Those at the Settlement were impressed with the little group's enthusiasm. A dancing instructor was found to come and teach the children. At first the dancing was purely expressive; very much like the running and jumping of the Saturday afternoon periods.

Later the group became interested in more intricate dances. Their interest spread and included composing poetry. The girls devoured all the news about local ballet. During last year's ballet festival held at the Royal Alex., they searched the papers till they found the picture of Cynthia. They proudly pointed her out to their friends as their dancing teacher.

Successful Night

With a curiosity heightened by a desire to imitate as closely as possible their professional sisters, the group felt they needed a regulation costume for rehearsals. The Settlement enlisted the help of interested women to make flaired jumpers. The girls immediately fell in love with them; wearing them even to school.

When the annual parent's night arrived at the Settlement there was a special interest in the dancing group. They prepared their own program, composed their own choreography and announced their own numbers. Half way through, Susan's mother turned to her neighbour and proudly said. "That's my daughter..."

All this and happiness too was possible through money given to the Red Feather Organization. Will you help too?

Human Rights: Do They Exist?

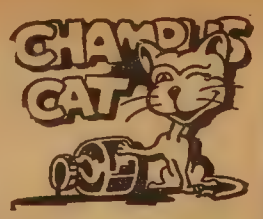
At its first meeting on Tuesday night the University of Toronto Debating Union chose as its topic a question that has been bandied about a good deal in recent weeks. That the refusal to admit a certain Queen's University professor into the United States was a violation of human rights was the way the motion was worded.

Only yesterday we expressed our opinion on this subject. We said then and we repeat now that we feel the American policy in this particular case was needlessly strict. But we do not think the objection to the action should be based on an argument about human rights.

We cannot work ourself into a frenzy over the simple fact that the United States Government chose to refuse admittance to Dr. Shortliffe. Any sovereign nation has as much right to refuse admission as any private citizen has to refuse to admit whom he will to his home. It is a matter of preference.

When other facts of the case are considered we admit of a certain prejudice against the American Immigration Service's policy. Even then, however, our feelings are not dictated by what is called a "violation of human rights."

"Human rights" is a pretty vague term and until its meaning is more clearly defined it is a slippery subject to debate.



The part of the action that disturbs us is this. Dr. Shortliffe was invited by an American university to lecture to its students. The United States Government stepped in and prevented those students from hearing the professor.

Government intervention in the freedom of academic expression sets a dangerous precedent which could easily extend to other fields coming under the area covered by the United States Constitution and there more rigorously defined than as "human rights."

The American State department has accepted a broad and flexible definition for those persons it considers inadmissible to its country. Taking the formula laid down by the Washington legislature, the State Department can exclude any member of an organization which "advocates the overthrow of the government of the United States by force or violence."

The definition has probably worked very well in excluding certain labor leaders and organizers whose presence could possibly have been dangerous to the country.

When the same definition can be used to restrict academic freedom we begin to worry about the consequences.

O'Casey Clipt In Crapgame By Gods

This is a little fable my father told me one day as he dawdled me on his knees and leathered the tar out of me, merely because the geography I learned at school had contradicted what he held to be right.

"Don't come that line with me, my boy," said the Old Man. "What you learn today is only hearsay. We Irishmen know the truth but nobody will listen to us. But just you listen to me for a minute." And so, emphasizing each point with tender, loving care (and a lusty wallop), he told this tale:

Gods Shoot Crap

It seems that a few of the Gods were hanging around one afternoon shooting a game of crap. Zeus, Thor (no relative of the washing Machine), Apollo, Bacchus, and O'Casey made up the little group, while Venus and Aphrodite kibitzed. O'Casey, you know, was a leprechaun who had risen, by good behavior, to the rank of God—God of Blarney, that is.

Zeus was using his own dice and doing a neat job of fleecing the boys, but he finally gave up the bones and let the rest of the lads have a chance. Thor made a couple of points and then crapped out (Much like some of the lecturers I know). Bacchus was far gone with grape and seeing double, so that when he rolled he thought he got a point and made it all in one roll, with the result that he passed out in a spasm of delirious joy. Apollo made two passes but was slapped by Aphrodite both times, so he went back to the game. The dice came to O'Casey; he put the Irish Curse on them and rolled, but this time the luck of the Irish wasn't with him. In two words: he lost.

O'Casey Digs Drain

Not being able to pay, the Gods decide to punish him. Besides, Zeus was glad to get rid of him for a while, because the little Irishman had been beating his time with Venus. The God's decision was that O'Casey was to dig a hole and drain the Atlantic Ocean into the centre of the earth.

Now, at this time, Ireland was situated in the sunny south Pacific, far from Europe, but O'Casey had a hate on against an "English fairy" as he called him, who claimed to have found a shamrock growing in England. (Everyone knows they only grow in Eire.) In consequence of this, O'Casey decided that the best place to dig the hole was beside England, in the hope that the island would be sucked into the earth. He threw a lot of mud at England as he dug, and when the hole was finished, lay happily down to sleep.

Punish Irish Knavery

The Gods laughed at this piece of Irish knavery and decided to punish O'Casey. They uprooted his little island in the Pacific and damned up the hole with Ireland.

When O'Casey awoke, he was beside himself. (This is a neat trick, but one must be a God to do it.) He called down all the black Irish curses ever known, he used the sweetest flattery ever heard, he pleaded, but all to no avail. The sacrilege went unrepaired.

The Gods had a hearty laugh, but Venus saw the tragedy of the horrible event and shed a tear which fell on Erin, which accounts for the beauty of the Irish lakes and how they came to be.

But the moral of this story is that even though Ireland wasn't always in the pestered spot she is today, the people won't believe the Irish or a God dammed thing about it

Dogface.

University Needs Still Increasing Says UWO Pres.

Montreal, Oct. 13—CUP—Canadians are taking their universities for granted, Dr. G. E. Hall, president of the University of Western Ontario told Montreal Rotary Club members at a meeting in the Mount Royal Hotel last Tuesday.

"The people of Canada need to be convinced that the needs of students have not decreased and that the needs of the universities are greater than ever," he said.

Research being carried out by the universities was national in scope, he said, yet, "for every $1,000 research fellowship held in a university, it costs the institution an additional $300 in additional services, apparatus, assistants, space, and administration expenses."

"The additional money must be provided by the universities and I do not think that research, so vital to our country, should be paid for by students' fees—as it now is," he said.

Student fees accounted for 50 per cent of current total income, he said.

Although primary and secondary responsibility, universities were not only provincial in scope. Therefore it would see only "natural then that the federal government . . . should have a direct and vital interest in the support of our universities," he said.

The policy of aiding universities by providing generous grants for the tuition of veterans had been of great aid. With the departure of the veterans from the classrooms, the need for aid had not decreased.

"The cold Canadian winter is upon the Canadian universities," Dr. Hall said, urging that Canadians protect "the universities, which serve them so faithfully and unreservedly."

Music Undergrads To Present Concert To Benefit Red Feather

An informal Red Feather Benefit concert with the entire proceeds going to augment the Red Feather campaign will be presented by the Undergraduate Association of the Faculty of Music on October 27. The concert will be held in Convocation Hall that Thursday evening at 8:15 p.m. with Sir Ernest MacMillan as Master of Ceremonies.

Much along the lines of a similar program put on last year, the Undergraduate Association is promising an excellent show.

Artists donating their services are Dr. Healy Willan, Nellie Smith, Edmund Hockridge, The Conmonores Quartet, Bela Boszormenyi-Nagy, a string orchestra with Dr. Mezzoleni conducting, and Mr. Leo Barkin, accompanist.

Shine Please!

University undergraduates can now get a nifty shoe shine for the price of one thin dime at Hart House. The complete job is handled by a new machine recently installed and which is shown in above picture.

Feather Fair Here Today Campus Turns Into Circus

Tomorrow at 1 o'clock the front campus will erupt in racetracks, gambling dens and side shows as the Red Feather Fair opens for Quest business.

That tent with everybody around is Skule's den of iniquity. Inside you will discover a crown 'n' anchor game, numbers game, and a roulette wheel. Everybody is welcome but bring your money and put one car ticket in a safe place. You may have heard unsavory reports about these games but don't believe a single word. This is being run by Skule . . . besides it's only money.

They go on to say that there is a kissing booth with a kick. Now here is where you have to really watch your step. Anything could happen at a time like that and probably will. Hum . . . wonder who's mule they're using this year?

Say girls, are you radio-active? Has your one and only ever called you The Atom Bomb? Skule, with typical native sagacity, has set up a device to test your sex appeal. But they try to gloss the whole thing over by calling it a radio-activity-tester. Come to think of it, I'm a walking radio-activity-tester too. You'll find me . . . oh never mind, I don't think my wife would approve.

Contrary to what you may think, this isn't a Skule affair only. Everybody gets into the act. University College is featuring the South Campus parimutuels. Six thoroughbred fillies will run sex races, oops, I mean six races. Each of these spirited animals will represent a different college.

Doctors Sy Atica, famous nerve surgeon, Lum Bago, renowned vascular surgeon, and Luke Emia will be in charge of the Med's open air clinic. Pretty young nurses will aid the distinguished old practitioners in the Neurology, Psychiatry, Surgery and diagnosis departments. There is a special prize for the damsel with the lowest blood pressure.

A hoop game in which "If you don't miss-er, you get to kiss-er" is Victoria College's offering. The Blue and White cheer leaders are the targets. To keep everying nice and air ankle clamps will be used . . . we hope. Remember, practice makes perfect.

Only Two Days To Collect Cash Says Book Mart

Those to whom a portion of the $1,500 remaining from the sale of books at the SAC Book Exchange belongs, have only two days left to pick it up, it was announced yesterday. The Exchange will be open from 1-4 p.m., Friday of this week, and from 1-4 p.m. Wednesday of next week.

Of the total $8,000 which has been taken in by the Book Exchange, $7,200 goes back to the students; the exchange keeps only a 10% discount.

The books that are left when the exchange closes next Wednesday will be stored and insured until next fall when they will be put on sale again.

Burnes, IV C & F, who is in charge of the exchange, said that it has been a great success this year, probably because it is student-governed.

Pooling of Assets By Liberal Party Will Aid Meetings

A resolution calling for a system of pooling assets to the end of financing delegates to conventions from every part of the country was passed at the Third Annual Convention of the Canadian University Liberal Federation held in Montreal October 13. The convention was held in conjunction with the National Young Liberal Convention in the same city.

Other resolutions passed included the thought that Canadians be considered for the position of Governor General; that "O Canada" be declared Canada's national anthem, to be sung in both English and French; that the Canadian Universities approve the abolition of appeals to the Privy Council; and that they endorse the establishment of a National Library.

Representatives at the convention from the University of Toronto Liberal Association were Hank Bradley, IV Law, Miss Georgia Riddell, III Arts, Miss Phyllis Huehn, III Arts, Don Kempthorne, Graduate Studies, and Jim Service, IV History.

Mr. Brooke Claxton welcomed both conventions to the city of Montreal on Thursday afternoon. The Prime Minister, Mr. St. Laurent, spoke at a banquet Thursday night, his subject being the current status of Canadian sovereignty.

Friday, Mr. Bradley of Newfoundland addressed the delegates at a luncheon, discussing Newfoundland's entry into Confederation, and the cardinal prospect of Liberalism — freedom.

The Canadian University Liberal Federation held a late night session after the Prime Minister's speech. During this session Mr. Abbott welcomed CULF and expressed the thought that many eyes were on CULF's resolutions, since university resolutions are usually carefully and thoroughly thought out.

The convention was attended by some thirty-five delegates representing fourteen universities across Canada. Mr. Sam Cook of Carleton College, Ottawa, was elected President and Bill Strathopalus of University of Western Ontario was elected Secretary-Treasurer.

Will Soon Pick Rhodes Scholars For Next Year

Montreal, Oct. 17—(CUP)—Ten students from Canadian universities will be selected shortly after Nov. 1 as Rhodes Scholars from Canada for 1950. Opening of the competition was announced Saturday by the Rhodes Scholarship Trust.

Closing date for applications is Nov. 1.

The scholarships are tenable at the University of Oxford with a basic annual value of £400 increased at present by temporary grants to £500 yearly. They are granted for two years with the possibility of a third year. Scholars may follow courses of study of their own choice and are required to go to Oxford in October 1950.

Selection is made on the basis of school and college records without written examinations.

Scholarships are alloted on this basis: two to Ontario, two to Quebec and one each to Alberta, British Columbia, Manitoba, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Saskatchewan. Newfoundland awards a scholarship separately.

Application forms and full information may be obtained from university registrars, secretaries of provincial selection committees and from the general secretary of Rhodes Scholarships in Canada, Roland Michener, K.C., 5 Rosedale Road, Toronto.

A candidate must be a male British subject with at least five years residence. He must be unmarried and marriage after election causes the award to be forfeited.

Surrealism Film On Movie Club's Sunday Program

"Blood of a Poet" was the feature of the U. of T. Film Society's first program Sunday afternoon at Museum Theatre.

"Canadian Scenes", a colour presentation of the works of E. Y. Jackson, one of the "Group of Seven"—the well-known Canadian artists, and "Pearls of the Crown", a humorous "documentary" (in which Sacha Guitry acts, produces, and directs) on the history of the four matched pearls set in the top of the British crown from the time of Henry VIII to the present rounded out the two and a half hour program.

The Society is using the Museum projection booth this year, and clarity and sound are improved over last year.

"Blood of a Poet" is a French surrealistic film directed by Jean Cocteau. Any frame of the picture could pass as a photograph of one of Salvadore Dell's creations. Everything takes place in the time it takes a chimney to fall to the ground. It contains living statues, passionate, dissembodied lips, and magic Alice-type mirrors.

It is not intelligible on the realistic level, but it is possible, on a higher level of allegory to interpret it as showing the interrelation of Art, the Poet, and Civilization—if you dig far enough.

COMING EVENTS

U.C. GERMAN CLUB

There will be a meeting of the University German Club on Tuesday, Oct. 25 at 8:15 p.m. in Wymilwood, with the important election of officers.

Kallinike Prowls With Pick, Shovel

That erstwhile Greek, Kallinike unheard of since the last pep rally is once again engaged in skullduggery. He has been seen prowling late at night through a downtown cemetery, armed only with a pick and shovel. When questioned as to his activities, he only replied in poignant phrases, "Rho, rho, rho, (your boat)."

A full-scale investigation is being carried on, and further developments will be reported as they occur.

Serious

The situation of adequate supply of electrical energy for light and power to the University of Toronto is serious and may become more difficult in the months to come, W. H. Bonus, Assistant Superintendent of the University, announced recently. This applies to purchased as well as generated power.

Explaining that the total electrical load now is in excess of last year at this time, Mr. Bonus asked that special attention be paid to lighting and power loads by switching off any unnecessary lights and motors.

Particular care should be given during peak load periods. These are from 11 a.m. to 12 noon, and from 3 to 5 p.m., Monday to Friday inclusive.

Mr. Bonus concluded his statement by saying that the co-operation of all concerned by taking action to reduce unnecessary use of electrical energy is essential.

Godiva Was A Lady, Say Skulemen Toast Her Name And Fame At UWO

The Diplomatic Corps of the Engineering Society are travelling to Western en masse this Saturday to spread the gospel of Lady Godiva. The trip is planned to coincide with the Memorial Day to be celebrated in Coventry England, this Saturday, Oct. 22.

They have chosen Western for their evangel for two reasons — first, that the Engineers recently learned that there is no Faculty of Engineering at UWO, and secondly, that there is a rugby game there this weekend.

Cable Coventry

The Engineering Society has been in communication with the Lord Mayor of Coventry, having sent the following cable to him:

Lord Mayor,
Coventry, England.
Please cable date Godiva unveiling. Propose celebration here for Saint Toronto University Engineers. Best wishes for successful ceremony.

Engineering Society,
University of Toronto.

to which they received the following reply:

Engineering Society,
Toronto University.

Unveiling of Lady Godiva Statue in Coventry 22nd October, 1949, by Mrs. Lewis Douglas, wife of the United States Ambassador. Thanks for good wishes, heartily reciprocate.

Mayor of Coventry.

Present Token

The Diplomatic Corps will present, as part of their good-will show, a token of their esteem to the Western Drum Majorette. To perform this function, the Corps will be dressed so as to show the dignity and formality of the Engineers at Toronto.

All engineers present are requested by the society to give frequent and loud renditions of "Godiva" followed by "Toike Oike". The Ajax yell, banned by University officials for good reason, will be officially allowed at the individual's own discretion and with due regard to the proximity of the London Constabulary.

Dry-Diving Again

There will be a repeat of the demon-stration of dry land diving by members of Skule. The Engineering Society is depending on the great assistance of the head of the diving team in dealing with the sometime stodgy citizenry of London.

With his help, there should be a reduction in the number of hotel owners who succeed in ejecting Skulemen. Last year they suffered severe loss of face as the narrow-minded inn-keepers objected to the loss of sleep caused by rowdy celebrants and threw siren-sounding engineers in the streets by the dozens.

"With the good wishes of the Mayor of Coventry, 3,000 engineers can't go wrong," said Engineering Society President Bill Walker.

Movie Reviews

Christopher Columbus

"Christopher Columbus" is an interpretation, of rather indifferent quality, we fear, of the trials and tribulations that beset that intrepid explorer, none other than—you guessed it, Christopher Columbus. This movie—one could hardly call it a film—provides an evening's entertainment, of a sort, but fails utterly to present a sincere portrayal of Columbus' life, or his times. Atmosphere is completely lacking, although the sets convey some impression of the exotic architecture of medieval Spain.

Fredric March plays Columbus as the robust, red-blooded her type, and he plays his part to the hilt. He uses every acting cliche in the book. Examples: (1) Mutiny has broken out, and at least a hundred extras are lustily clubbing each other to death. One has fought his way to Columbus' side, and is about to plunge his dagger into our hero's heart, when "Land Ho-o-o" floats down from the crow's nest, and the situation is miraculously saved, for Columbus and the crew forthwith kiss and make up. (2) Columbus has been informed that the landfall was merely a mirage, whereupon he thumps his fist upon the table, snaps his fingers, and cries "I knew it, by San Fernando!" Pure schmaltz, I calls it.

The photography, while competent, is by no means outstanding. Only one or two sequences rise above the surrounding level of mediocrity — notably a brief sequence in which a sail is raised. Here the editing creates a true sense of the joy and high hope attending the departure from Spain.

The plot is both hackneyed and inconsistent. Columbus, usually the dashing hero, at one point upbraids a seaman for attempting to defraud a native in a barter for a chunk of gold, then snatches a trinket from the seaman, gives it to the native, takes the gold for himself, and stomps off in righteous indignation.

Francis L. Sullivan, as a conniving Spanish courtier, and Felix Aylmer, as a monk, are far from their best, and their best can be very delicious indeed.

This picture, although it will probably be palatable enough for the average moviegoer, has little to recommend it to audiences at the university level.

R. Alan Douglas.

I Was A Male War Bride

Cary Grant is an alien spouse of female military personnel (Ann Sheridan) enroute to the United States under Public Law 271 of the Congress. All of which would be quite proper were it not that Public Law 271 pertains to war brides. But since this piece of legislation is the only one under which French army officer Grant can hope to accompany his Wac wife to the States, (something about inability to support, you know), Sheridan sets out to make certain that her alien spouse qualifies. The result is an immigration, or emigration headache that's almost as splitting as that created by the recent arrival to America's shores of the kigmies.

Against a background of mountainous red tape, rubber stamps, army brass, and post-war Germany, runs the comic frustration of two lovers who haven't had a single moment's privacy since their wedding. This frustration seems to have got Actor Grant down very early in the film. Or perhaps he read the gags in the script too many times. At any rate, his performance is the first unenthusiastic, and even sluggish, job we have ever seen him do on the screen. Despite this, Miss Sheridan seems to be getting a great kick out of the whole zany affair and we suspect that her attempts to straighten out her French Captain go often above and beyond the call of the movie script.

There is a long opening sub-plot in which the Captain and the Wac collaborate to break up a black market ring. This is used, I suppose to give the producers a chance to throw in a lot of stock slapstick and give Grant and Sheridan time to fall in love with each other. If this portion of the celluloid were ever to burn, I think the picture could carry on quite well nevertheless.

Probably the best word to describe "War Bride" is "cute". At times the situations are hilarious, at other times maudlin, but always they are cute. Sample: A commentator is briefing the ship-load of brides (among whom sits Grant) on the latest fashions in the U.S. "The trend is to the natural bust line," she states, whereupon Grant dutifully removes his wallet from the breast pocket of his jacket and sticks it elsewhere.

This is the sort of picture that makes girls of eighteen and bald-headed men of forty-five smile and nudge each other knowingly.

A greased-pig-catching contest provided the perfect occasion for a tour de force by Bill Appleby, president union president at Manitoba U. And he rose to it nobly.

He was scheduled to act as referee and M.C. at a contest between the Engineers and the Aggies, in which a greased pig had to be caught and crated.

When the dust of battle settled it was found that Appleby had been mistaken for the pig, and had been crated by several eager Engineering students.

Explain Changes Made Last Year In SAC Rules

Yesterday at a coffee party in Loretto Common Room a Joint Assembly of St. Joseph's and Loretto women was held to acquaint the first year students with the various organizations of the campus.

Mary Agnes Wilkinson, III Pass, St. Mike's women's S.A.C. rep, on the University council, explained the changes initiated in the organization last year, such as the formation of a Joint Executive Council and of the new office of Women's S.A.C. rep. on the University council as separate from the reps of each college council.

Dick Brown, III Pass, president of St. Michael's Music and Drama Club outlined the program of activities, explaining the need for talented, interested members.

Joanne McWilliam, St. Mike's women's rep. for National Federation of Canadian University Students, stressed the fact that N.F.C.U.S. was not a club but an organization with an important job, being the only bond with the other Canadian universities.

Stan Wiechoreck, II Pass Arts, outlined the past and future of "The Trireme", St. Mike's own publication.

Fran O'Brien, III Eng. Lang. Lit., explained the system of awards from third M to the silver spoon presented to the girl voted the most outstanding athlete in the college each year. She invited all those interested to come out to try for it.

The work of the Co-op was explained briefly by Ksanera Jarema, III Pass Arts, in the absence of Bill Brennan.

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

Fernando Germani

Last night in Eaton Auditorium a large audience heard Fernando Germani, organist of the Vatican, and the Aurora United Church Junior Choir under Illtyd Harris present one of the most impressive concerts in the history of the Casavant Society.

Germani could best be described by two words: precise and expressive. As such he opened with the familiar Bach Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor, followed by the delicate Noel No. 3 by Daquin (which to me seemed to produce more monotony than interest). But the organ suddenly became alive with the sonorous roar of the mighty Fantasia No. 1 of Mozart. Here was majesty; here was the true spirit of organ music in solemn salute to the genius of composer and artist.

With the Pastorale of Roger Ducasse, Mr. Germani painted a scene. Standing on a hillside one could see the green fields dotted with sheep, the old wooden fence, and the distant mountains. Then the portentous storm broke in an ominous pedal theme, but quickly subsided as the piece faded away with the dusk.

In the "Concert Study" of Manari, Mr. Germani displayed a pedal virtuosity that could hardly be called great — it was nigh unto fantastic. The appreciative audience demanded three encores.

The generous choral program would at first seem destined to tax to the absolute the talents of such a prodigious group of young people, but, ably assisted by Mrs. Harris at the piano, they proved their worth with much to spare. From sacred to secular they never failed to achieve the maximum in quality and quantity. Although tending to be too dramatic, Mr. Harris at all times had the utmost control and response from his choir. What more could leader or audience expect of those so young and yet so capable?

U. C. Players' Guild

The U. C. Players' Guild successfully opened their season last night with a bill of one-acts.

The play of most interest to a university audience was Bruce Eboy's "Louise," a drama of the French revolution. Mr. Eboy, who also directed and acted in his play, is in third year English Lang. and Lit., and wrote "Louise" in England during the war. It has been performed also this summer, and more recently in Hamilton. The plot is not a totally unfamiliar one, but the interest of the audience lies in the dramatic skill of the writer. The situations are almost painfully dramatic; however, Mr. Eboy lives up to them. He is perhaps too wordy, but builds his climaxes effectively and has vigour and continuity in his speeches. His acting, too, more than adequately meets his demands as a playwright. Bonnie Okun's Louise, though, was forced, but held the essence of a difficult characterization. She lacks subtlety and a skill of body-movement, but has a good voice which she uses well, and the best scream heard here in years. Larry Heisey, in a small part, turned in a nice performance as did the rest of the cast.

"The Artist" by A. A. Milne is a bit of sophisticated whimsy, and was a perfect foil for Aila Filpulla who unfortunately was let down by her co-star, Ivan Eaton.

Robertson Davies' "Voice of the People" which closed the program was admirably handled by everyone in the cast. John Howe's one-word declarations were superb, but he dropped in his final speech. Marlene Rosner as Aggie and Bob Osborne as Shortie deserve special mention for consistent and skilful characterizations.

McGILL DAILY MAN HERO OF NORONIC

Montreal, Oct. 15 —(CUP)— Louis Eddy, McGill Daily desk editor and Arts student at McGill, was called upon last week to give evidence in Toronto in connection with the Noronic disaster.

Eddy, who was employed as a bell boy on the vessel during the summer vacation said that his efforts to rouse the passengers were to shout "Fire" in the social hall and he "may have yelled that afterward." He said that he saw so few persons about on the top three decks that he got the impression all the passengers were off the ship.

The witness told of rousing members of the crew and of their flight by ropes down from A deck to C deck, then to the freight deck by the crew's stairway.

Eddy said that he had been told of his fire and boat drill stations by the steward staff, but he could not recall any instructions of training on how to fight various types of fire.

"WHERE THE VALUES ARE HIGH BECAUSE THE OVERHEAD IS LOW." DROP IN ON YOUR LUNCH HOUR—WE ARE ONLY 5 MINUTES FROM THE CAMPUS..

U.C. it's this way...

As the lighted torches were handed down from the Sophomore presidents to the Freshmen at the Soph Frosh Banquet on Tuesday night the class of 5T3 was formally welcomed into the College Second Year presidents Barbara Davidson and John Christianson are to be congratulated for arranging such a delightful affair, a wonderful dinner, followed by an even more wonderful dance.

After dinner John Christianson announced the results of yesterday's elections. The new first year president of the W.U.A. is Joanne Ratz and her executive will be Marian Hogarth, Muriel Chinn and Joan Carley. D. J. Lyall Moran is the first year president of the Lit. First year secretary-treasurer is Anthony Siamma and Athletic rep is Bill Lawrence by acclamation. Lloyd Freel was the successful candidate for assistant secretary-treasurer of the "Lit". Congratulations to you all.

Congratulations also to the other successful candidates in yesterday's elections. The Second Year executive which will be helping Barb is Ann Gosling, Joan Langlois and Ross Creelman Anne Burton, Wilma Booty and Betty Hutchison will be the new third year executive and Marg Carter, Elizabeth Ross and Ann Boswell compose the fourth year executive. The fourth year executive was elected by acclamation.

In case Follies tickets are hard to get it might be a good idea to know your executive.

It seems that one big social event is hardly over before the next one comes along and this time it's not just for the Sophs and Frosh but the whole college. Next Wednesday, that's October 26, at the Women's Union is the first Red and White night. In case you haven't heard the Red and White nights (There are going to be three this year.) are informal U.C. gatherings where everyone in the college gets togther and has a wonderful time. Of course, they have acquired University fame now and hundreds of Engineers and Medsmen have to be turned away. Next Thursday's Red and White night is going to be a special one to welcome the Frosh and Jack Novitsky and Zi Murray have arranged a terrific program including a skit from the Follies (I must remember to tell you about ticket sales) and the introduction of our U.C. rugby team. Another thing it's free and it's at 8 30.

Today at 4 U.C.'s political year begins with the opening of Parliament in the J.C.R. Dr. Hayne will deliver the speech from the throne and the speaker will be Elmer Sopha. The subject to be debated is "Resolved that this house is in favour of the 'Open Sunday' in Toronto". We urge as many first year students as possible to come out to watch and participate in the oratorical gymnastics of Parliament. The government will be headed by Harold Carter and Jack Geller will lead the opposition.

Another important notice for the Freshies and Seniors. The Freshies' Formal Initiation will be held in the Women's Union on October 27. Following the Freshie skits which will be presented at 7 30 there will be a Candle Light ceremony and each Freshie will sign the College register while the seniors are lighting their candle. You will all be contacted during the week so keep Thursday night open.

And now the Follies—the chorus lines are better this year than they ever have been before and John Bull and Jane Young have arranged two Matinee performances so that everyone will be able to see them. Tickets won't be on sale for about a week but watch the Rotunda for the opening day of ticket sales. The Follies are November 11 and 12, that's only three weeks away and the cast is working hard to perfect their routines.

From all appearances the U.C. Music Club has been doing a fine job in organizing and co-ordinating the activities of the U.C. Singers, the Record Hour and the Operetta.

The Operetta especially seems to be moving forward, with chorus and leads in full voice and the men and women behind stage full of ideas. A Business Manager is still needed. If you have any ideas on business would you phone Ward McAdam, HU. 0314? He'd be very happy to hear from you.

Tomorrow is the Red Feather Fair on the Front Campus. The U.C. booth will be known as the Red Feather Raceway. Every loyal U.C.-er should be out at the Fair and especially at the races. That's tomorrow from 12-1.

Special plea to the girls. If you have an hour off on Friday could you tag? If you like tagging around U.C. and Hart House report any time you have a chance to the Undergrad Office Friday between 9 and 2 or if you prefer the south end of the campus around Skule report to the Engineers Store Room during the same hours.

We seem to remember seeing great numbers of you in the wee hours of Monday morning in the Western ticket line-up. Hope you all got tickets and if you and we survive the week-end we'll see you at the same time same place next week.

Hladun Replies

Editor The Varsity:

Mr. Norman Endicott's letter published in your issue of Oct. 6th is grossly misleading and insulting.

I have not solicited an appearance at the recent debate as Mr. Endicott suggests. I was invited in the usual manner, just like Messrs. Endicott and Buck. According to Mr. Endicott's letter I entered into collusion with the student body in quest of personal publicity. This is entirely untrue and is an insult to the student body and myself.

Equally unreliable is Mr. Endicott's statement regarding my former Communist Party affiliation and the conditions under which I severed my relations with it. Had he not found it convenient to absent himself from the debate by a pretext of having to be some place else, I would have obliged him with official documents of the Communist Party relating to that incident, which show that I was not "dropped." Mr. Endicott knows as well as anybody else that the Communist Party of Canada and the LPP is one and the same thing, a Canadian Section of the Cominform.

The most primitive eyewash concocted by Mr. Endicott is an excuse former Communist Party affiliating to participate in the debate because they did not wish to publisize me and that I have no standing with the labor. Their real reason for refusing to meet me on the platform was the fear of an exposure. They had their chance to "expose" me. Why did they not take it? In so far as the standing with the labor is concerned, I never once attempted to speak in the name of any labor group but at the same time I never expressed any anti-labor sentiments. However I believe that I have some sympathy amongst labor circles, at least I am not being thrown out of the labor unions like the followers of the LPP. Trade unions are beginning to recognize the fact that Communists are the most reactionary force that has ever imposed itself upon the labor movement and in due time they will be cleaned from the ranks of labor. I would therefore suggest to Mr. Endicott to stop hiding behind the back of labor and find some other camouflage.

Mr. Endicott's letter and the style of his polemic strongly indicates the Sovietised way of approach. It is a pity that a bright young lad, having involved himself into something that he knows very little about, will have to spend several years in this embarrassing situation until he finds out that he has been duped.

John Hladun.

Democracy Hysteria

Editor, The Varsity:

Very recently a new wave of democracy-hysteria flooded the campus. (What a pity our drainage system is so rotten.) This state of vigorous mental unbalance has unfortunately developed into the fashionable disease of our times, everybody participating with moans and groans!

The whole fuss is usually caused by certain incidents branded as "undemocratic." What the exact characteristics must be for an event to be honored with the above title is far from clear (if not hopelessly obscure). Such trivial realities for example, like the treatment of numerous negroes in the States, appalling poverty and slums, the glorious co-operation of capital and politics to cheat the public (to mention a few of the items on the long list) are discreetly accepted as de facto features of a democratic paradise. On the other hand such world-shattering happenings like the lucky detention of Miss X on Ellis Island (imagine all the publicity dearie!) or the difficulties encountered by professor so-and-so in dumping his socialist theories over the border, are outrageously denounced as scandalous. Not long ago even the generous lashing of some riotous hounds by their ambassadorial master was interpreted in Ottawa as undemocratic!

Apart from all these hilarious and obvious inconsistencies the argument of "undemocratic behaviour" contains certain implicit fallacies which it might be interesting to reveal.

First of all it does not mean that any undemocratic act is necessarily bad; for there is no proof whatsoever that democracy is the best form of government. In some countries it may work admirably well while in others it may lead to admirable chaos; and whether the country is backward or not has nothing to do with it either. It is purely a question of environmental conditions and a nation's mentality.

Second, one can go still further and entirely reject the existence of good and bad human actions altogether (or if you wish to call them democratic-undemocratic, moral-immoral, etc.). For no human deed has any intrinsic worth whatsoever. (In that respect they are all the same.) Merits (or lack of them) are attributed to an action by the social environment it was performed in. Let us take two human activities that nearly everybody (without thinking as usually) would immediately classify as one being good and the other bad. For example, going to church on Sunday morning and committing a murder. However shocking it may sound both these performances have exactly the same value, insofar as intrinsically they have none. They will be given their moral and ethical valuation by the environment they happened to be performed in. So it happens that in Canada going to church is considered "good" whereas murdering somebody is branded as "bad" and punished. In Russia again (especially immediately after the revolution) going to church (if any were left open at all) was branded as "foolish" and bad, while murdering in cold blood a bourgeois (even if it was your own father) was heroic and honored!

All this argument indicates how choldish it is for people to have absolute confidence and trust in certain rules and principles which they use as a standard for interpreting life as a whole. For all political, theological and ethical theories are as imperfect, vague and limited as the human mind that conceived them. Absolute faith in one of them only indicates narrow-mindedness usually promoted by traditional sentimentality and indirect fear of the essential fact, namely that there is no truth in anything.

Consequently such popular concepts as freedom, liberty, democracy, equality, etc., over which millions waste so much emotion and rationality are as worthless as painted totem poles. One should judge life with complete criticism and bare existentialist facts. This is perhaps the only way that peace could be established in this world, since there won't be any ideals left to fight for. Apart from that, individuals will be immune to such shocks (like the ones recently experienced on the campus by the lovers of democracy) whenever reality grins ironically behind the mist of illusion.

Philosophy Dept.

Wrong Quotation

Editor, The Varsity:

In your issue of Oct. 12 you published a letter written by Robert J. Gallivan, II Pass. Mr. Gallivan made reference to a previous article concerning Controller Balfour's "blacklist," and by reference to a passage from John Richard Green's "Introduction To Addison," tried to defend the efforts of Mr. Balfour.

It is regrettable that Mr. Gallivan did not study the quotation more carefully before he selected it. He seems to consider it as support for his statements. However, the author of the selection, Mr. Green, does not imply that the way to build a better world, or to raise the standards of the people, is to force writers to raise their standards. He states rather, that the standards of writers are a measure of the moral standards of society. The quotation detracts from rather than supports Mr. Gallivan's point.

Mr. Gallivan also expressed the hope that there is a majority on the campus who feel as he does — "more power to Balfour, and less criticism of his efforts." It is indeed well that the criticisms referred to are of his efforts and not to his goal. Mr. Balfour's efforts, which include of course, his blacklist, are strongly reminiscent of the efforts of a certain group of people after World War I. This group believed that the effects of alcohol were lowering the moral standards of the nation. They resolved to stop this trend by banning the manufacture and consumption of alcoholic beverages. The rest of the story is history. These people learned, or at least were shown, that changes in moral standards come from within the individual, and not from outside legislation or coercion. It might be well for Mr. Gallivan and his hero, Mr. Balfour, to reflect on this example.

The ultimate aim of the Prohibitionists was worthy. I think most intelligent people will agree on that. The ultimate aim of Mr. Balfour, namely the raising of moral standards of society, is equally commendable. But "gay, risque and racy" novels are only an effect, not the cause, of lowered morals.

I would close by expressing the hope that the morals of society will soon improve, which will result in a corresponding improvement in, among other things, literature.

E. Channen,
II P & C.

Flying Club

Editor, The Varsity:

Regarding your article pertaining to the "University" Flying Club (Oct. 13 issue). Several points mentioned in this article need clarification and I feel the following statements will serve that purpose.

1. Contrary to the implications of the article, the Flying club is in no way connected with the University, directly or indirectly.

2. The official name of the organization is the Ajax Flying Club, not the University Flying Club.

Existing conditions necessitate the clarification of these points and it would be very much appreciated if the foregoing could be printed in your publication.

Optometry Class Visits Rochester

Dean E. J. Fisher accompanied 88 members of the graduating class of the College of Optometry when they took their annual trip to Rochester on Monday, Oct. 17. Fred Griffith, III Optometry, said that the trip is an event which has taken place every year since 1932, with the exception of the war years. Expenses for the trip were borne by a leading Optometrical firm, whose plants in Rochester the class inspected.

The class arrived in Rochester about noon, and after lunch, toured the bifocal plant, seeing the manufacture of bifocal lenses from the first piece of raw optical glass to the finished lens.

From the bifocal plant, the group went to the instrument division where all types of photographic as well as optometrical instruments are assembled. "We were impressed," said Griffiths, "by the way the instruments are put together by highly-specialized technicians."

"The trip gave us a greater insight into the problems of the supplier", said Griffiths. "We have only been familiar with the finished lenses up till now. After having seen the entire process from optical sand to completed lenses, we are able to realise some of the problems with which the manufacturer has to cope".

SKULESPOTS

Hey, not bad kiddies — for a start anyway. Two football wins, ditto for soccer, one for two in volleyball, second and third slots in the track meets (see ye honourable TOIKE OIKE, soon at all news-stands) golf meet tooken, swim win. And all in ten days or so. At this rate we'll have the Reed Trophy clinched in. . . .

Who now, dobbin, this is only the beginning, we ain't seen nothin' yet. Only about a quarter of the sports have started, but the rest are imminent, and their pundits want the gen word spread around. "Give Joe a couple of lines on the Tiddley Winks squad," or "Jake starred in last night's rugged chesterfield rugby tilt with the mighty O.T. team," they say. I'm tryin to be fahr 'n' squahr, so here goes, for next week:

The much-talked about golf school is finally getting under way next week, says Don Grant. The classes will be from 9 to 11 in the mornings, Monday to Friday, up at the C.O.T.C. Drill Hall. Only four students will be taken each hour, which makes for the great total of a mere 40 in the first term. Because so many of you have shown interest in learning the game, I'd suggest getting your application blanks right now at the Eng. Soc. Stores, or you'll be left out in the cold.

In case you didn't know, the lessons are being given by two of the most outstanding of Ontario's pros — namely Joe Noble of Thornhill fame, and Gord Delaat, pro at Weston. With but four students per hour, everyone is assured of lots of personal attention. The A.A. is subsidizing the effort heavily, allowing you to get at least $12.00 of expert tutelage for a mere $3.00, that is 75c per lesson. So sign up now at the Stores, for the first class hits the links at 9:00 a.m. next Monday, the 24th — equipment supplied.

One place where we can stack up a lot of points is the indoor scene. If enough beginners get out and try to learn to box, wrestle, swing like a monkey, dive fancy-like, or fence, we're all set. And you can enjoy yourself learning, too. Hart House is chock full of expert instructors waiting for you.

Wrestling beginners can get instruction on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 5:00 p.m That allows most of you to finish off lectures for the day, and then get up to Hart House for a workout. The experienced grapplers have Monday, Wednesday, and Friday reserved from 5 on.

Boxing classes, where Skulemen have always excelled, begin on Monday, and continue on Wednesdays and Fridays at 5:00 p.m. also. The assaults are coming up soon, so don't delay. Fancy diving instruction will be given on Mondays and Wednesdays at 1:10 p.m. Fencing classes will be Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays at 5. For those interested in Water Polo fundamentals and speed swimming, see Mr. Clayson at the pool.

Well, there's the list, the equipment's awaitin', and the times for classes are sensible enough to allow a lot of Skulemen to get out.

In order to save you a lot of eyestrain, I've been asked to list all SPS games for the coming week. Without further ado, behold:

FOOTBALL — Wed.: Sr. UC vs. Sr. SPS; Friday: Trin. vs. Jr. SPS, both at 4.

SOCCER — Friday: Sr. SPS vs. Sr. UC.

LACROSSE — Tues.: UC I vs. Sr. SPS; Wed.: Vic II vs. Jr. SPS, both at 1.

SWIMMING — Mon.: SPS II vs. Meds II; Tues.: SPS III vs. Arch., both at 4; Thurs.: SPS I, II vs. UC I, II, both at 5.

VOLLEYBALL — Mon.: St. M. C. vs. SPS VI at 1; Tues.: Sr. UC vs. Sr. SPS at 5, and at 7, Trin. A vs. Jr. SPS; Thurs.: SPS VI vs. Mus. at 4, SPS III vs. Dent. A at 6, SPS IV vs. Trin. B at 7; Friday: SPS vs Vic III at 4.

Let's have no defaults, keeds, 'cause they cost points as well as dough.

Du Pubatchinu,

BENNY.

VARSITY SPORTS

Soccerites Meet Mac

While the World Cup series of the world's most widely followed sport is nearing its completion, and the Soccer season here in Canada is drawing to a close, keen enthusiasm is being shown in Varsity as the Senior and Intermediate Blues tackle their brief schedule. Incidentally, watch The Varsity Friday, for an innovation on the part of the Senior Blues — something SPESHUL has been added!

The International quality of the Senior squad is something which never fails to attract attention. For the second consecutive year we are fielding a team that has no Canadian born-and-bred participants. Two of the boys were born in Canada to be sure, but were unfortunate enough to be "bred" elsewhere. On the train to Montreal last Thursday could be heard voices in French, German, Slav, Gaelic, and of course English, with some Barbado ballads and South American ditties thrown in.

Next game scheduled is for the Intermediates, at MacMaster, in Hamilton, Friday. The bus leaves Hart House at 1.30, and the following have been selected: Kane, Broadhurst, Raymond; Friele, Moffat, L., Schuler; Wilson, Rigabert, Montemurro, Williams; Comrie. Subs, Osadchuk, Des Santos. Those unable to play are to contact the Coach or the Athletic Office.

Speaking OF SPORT

By BOB DNIEPER

oronto, Ont., November 5, 1901.—(BUP)—The University of Toronto yesterday held their pre-homecoming game ceremonies to wish their team well in their forthcoming exhibition with the University of Western Ontario. The ceremonies were held in West Hall of University College, an dmost of the 3,000 registered students were present.

Mr. Hal Whittit, director of athletics, made the first speech, in which he extolled the virtues of the University, and emphasized the inferiority of Western Football players. The students listened attentively, except for a wildcat faction who kept yelling "Ollum te chollum." These were soon quieted, however, with several well thrown tea-pots from the Trinity section.

Next speaker slated was the president, Dr. J. J. H. McDonald, Ph.D., D.C.E., F.R.C.S., D.O.P.E., who came unprepared for a talk. In place, he offered to do a soft-shoe dance on the lecturers' platform. This suggestion met with unanimous approval, and the learned president was accompanied by three boys blowing rich tones on whiskey jugs.

One student exhibited certain pro-Western tendencies, such as "the devil with Toronto," and "down with Varsity." He was dragged gently through the dust to the Medical Building. He did not return, and rumor has it that he was escorted to the dissecting room for political education.

* * *

The cheerleaders then directed the crowd's attention to the fireworks on the back campus. The fireworks were run off in great style, with firecrackers, rockets, and "Fourth of July" Specials. The students liked the display and clamored for more. Unfortunately there was no more, so the SPS students retired for a conference.

The result of the conference was that an announcement was made to the effect that the fireworks would be continued at the Library Building. Towering flames from the south-east drew the students to the library, which was burning quite fiercely.

* * *

The Toronto fire department succeeded in putting the conflagration out. President McDonald reported that damage was slight, amounting to little more than the total destruction of several thousand books. (ed. note — the library was rebuilt on the original foundation the next year.)

* * *

The rally broke up in favor of a snake dance to the St. Lawrence Market. On the way Officer McCagerty attempted to stop the dance, but his motion was overruled when several of the rugby players dragged him from his horse and stuffed him down the coal chute of the Sick Children's Hospital.

* * *

Three or four horse-cars were then overturned and several store-windows smashed, but the dance proceeded without any real disturbance to the Market.

Farlinger Tops Varsity Wins Sr. Track

London, Ont., Oct. 20—(Special)—The University of Toronto senior tracksters and McGill's entry in the 42nd annual senior intercollegiate track meet, held yesterday at Little Memorial Stadium in London, battled stride for stride to a thrilling close finish with the Varsity aggregation taking first honors by a slim two-point margin.

Toronto piled up a score of 60 points to annex the Tait MacKenzie Trophy with McGill's 58-point performance running a too close second. Western compiled 38 points to take third place and Queen's wound up at the bottom of the heap with eight.

Bill Farlinger was the top scorer for Varsity, breaking the existing pole vault record by a quarter of an inch as he soared over the bar at 123 and three-quarter inches. Bill also captured first honors in the 220 low hurdles and the 110 high hurdles to complete a stellar performance. The only other record broken yesterday was the McGill shot putter Bob Bartlett's toss of 44 feet, 7 and three-quarter inches.

Other Toronto winners include George Doull, perrenial top man in the intercollegiate mile competition who beat out teammate G. Webster to win. Doull finished second to Dunc Greene in the three mile event.

Sportswoman

Softball, basketball, swimming, field hockey and archery are swinging along quite nicely this week.

To-night the Aqua Show takes place in the Hart House pool and it's bound to be good after all the work the women have been putting into the practices.

Tickets are 50 cents and the spectacle begins at 8:30.

Hockey

Joyce Rous and Ruth Bynoe are still holding their ground hockey work-outs at 8:00 in the morning on Trinity field, every Tuesday and Thursday, and are interested in all those who want to play, or learn.

Archery

The archery team has been chosen and the big meet takes place to-morrow morning in the Varsity Stadium. Those defending the Blue and White colours will be Helen Prendergast, St. Mike's IV, Ruth Campbell and Barbara Neff, both from Vic.

A member from last year's team, Phyllis Burke, St. Mike's II, will be on again this year, as well. Phyllis has had one Intercollegiate Archery Tournament is her favour.

Softball

The muscle gals from the PHE III ran roughshod all over the St. Hilda's maidens yesterday in a lop-sided softball encounter. To the vast delight of the partisan crowd the Phizz-Edders jumped into an early 20 run lead that was never diminished. In the first inning behind the stellar slugging of Long and Cochrane, the PHE team showed that they were out to run up a terrific score. The final score was something like 25-6. The Saints fought hard but lacked punch at the plate.

In the other corner of the Trinity field PHE II took the honours from St. Hilda's 1 by a score of 10-2. Donna Haley played sparkling ball for the losers both at the dish and in the field, but their rally came too late and produced too little.

Basketball Games

Vic Freshies A defeated UC Freshies by a score of 17-10 last night. Vic sparked on by Joyce Robbins kept the lead with little difficulty during the four quarters. Mary Lewis played a good defensive game for the losing team.

In the second game of the evening PHE II downed Vic Soph A by a score of 20-13. The game was fast, but became a little rough in the last quarter.

Pat Montgomery, PHE II, was high scorer for her team, with ten points to her credit. Cathie Wood played a strong defensive game for Vic.

St. Mike's A team came from behind to defeat UC Jr. Sr. B 21-7. At half time St. Mike's was losing 6-2 and both teams displayed terrific team-work.

Kay Schenk, St. Mike's bagged thirteen of the team's total points. Joan Eddis, a guard for UC played hard to keep the score from rising higher.

Vic Linemen Stop Skule Offensive In Football Battle

By BRUCE MACDONALD

Paced by a hard-charging front wall, the Victoria College football squad romped to a 7-0 win over Senior Skule on the back campus Wednesday afternoon. The Vic goal line was never in peril as Red and Gold tackling kept the Skule men bottled up in their own end.

With the Vic line, spearheaded by big Brad Colbert, tearing holes in the Engineers' defense, and speedy backs like Sumner and Damp scooting for large gains through the center, Vic seemed to have no trouble covering ground, but were plagued by penalties every time they rolled into scoring position.

From the opening whistle Skule tacklers could not seem to get their hands on Vic ball-carriers who marched down into position for a field goal attempt which went wide of the posts, but was made good for one point. Little was the kicker.

Another Vic kick into scoring territory in the second quarter was ruled no point when the tackle behind the Engineer line was ruled too high, and the Skule men were given the ball on their own 10 yard line.

As the second half rolled around, a rough play penalty to Skule gave Lodge of Vic the chance to smash across the line on a quarterback sneak to rack up the first major score of the game. Little converted to make the score Vic 7, Skule 0.

In the final stanza, a strange bounce taken by a Vic punt, and a 15 yard penalty for no yards on the kick put S.P.S. deep in the Vic zone. However after completing only a pro pass, Skule fumbled on a wide sweep around end, and Fairley recovered to put Vic out of danger. Vic once again took the offensive, and held it until the final whistle.

Scoring:

1st. Quarter—Vic rouge 1 point

3rd. Quarter—Vic t.d. 5 points.
Vic convert 1 point.

Line-ups:

Victoria—Little, Gore, Damp, Lodge, Sumner, Barford, Howard, Anderson, Colbert, Ledger, Kilgour, Williams, Fairley, Rogers, Zimmerman, Martin, Allen, File, Fick, Walton, Ralph, Rumbel, Reid.

S.P.S.—Adare, Jones, Crandall, Folimsbee, Wood, Rowe, Gordon, Watson, Firth, Rickaby, Keen, McColm, LaPrairie, Bernstein, Lumsden, Richards, Maunder, Cole, Scott, Weaver, Babcock, McHendricks, Brown.

SPORTS REPORTERS

The interfaculty sports program now being in full swing, The Varsity requires sports reporters to cover football, tennis, golf, lacrosse, soccer and other sports. No previous experience is necessary and freshmen are particularly invited to drop in and register. Assignments are never obligatory and new people will find newspaper work both interesting and beneficial.

on the sideline

By CONN SPARROW

On time!

The spectators had gathered around the softball diamond, the managers were trading team line-ups and the scorers were set to tally the runs.

But where, oh where was Susie, the first baseman, and Jinx and Athie and Leta? Some of the players were ready, while others hastily pulled off skirts to reveal summer shorts.

Nevertheless the game couldn't begin because both teams lacked a few of their players. Everything was held up and everybody was waiting for that handful of vital people who just weren't on time.

However the minutes and seconds of a noon hour never cease, even though they have the quality of stopping during lectures, and the time left to play the game became steadily shorter.

This is the sort of thing that happens nearly every day at almost every game. Still, there are some teams that believe in getting out at the prescribed time.

Games starting on time, have a much better chance of being played out to the end of the fourth inning and besides there is an opportunity to reveal the full strength of a team. Often the last round holds the most runs.

You owe it to yourself, your team-mates and your manager to be on time. So when it says 1:10, let's be there!

WIN AT WESTERN SEEN FOR VARSITY

Watch It, Red!

McGill University's Dr. Hans Kalmus is combing the Montreal campus for redheads.

But his interest is as a geneticist, not personal. He suspects a certain chromosome—chromosomes produce or transmit hereditary characteristics — may link red-headedness and blood groupings.

He has studied this branch of genetics for several years and has dozens of McGill redheads assisting him.

"It is difficult to explain in non-scientific terms the intricate problems involved in this piece of investigation," Dr. Kalmus said recently.

"However, the two factors responsible for a certain blood group and red hair may lie in a single chromosome. I need more quantitative data in order to further the investigation. I expect to be able to obtain sufficient redheads on the campus but if I do not, then I may issue an appeal for outside aid."

Each volunteer contributes a few drops of blood and a hair sample.

Pep Rally, Dances To Precede Game

The University of Western Ontario doesn't seem to have much trouble in filling the Little Memorial Stadium when Varsity plays there; 15,000 spectators are expected—twelve inside and three on the hill overlooking the stadium. People who drive to Western without tickets are in luck if they get to London soon enough. A thousand rush seats will be put on the block Saturday morning.

London Money Cagey

The loyal Londoners will be out in force, but they are not putting too much money on the Mustangs, as evidenced by the odds. The London papers are calling the Mustangs to win, though.

There is a giant pep-rally scheduled for Friday night on the campus with a dance to follow.

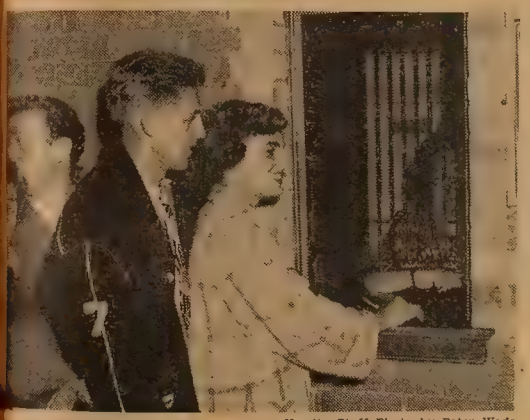
The Westerners have invited all Varsity students to attend, and have asked Masterson and his team to be present for introductions. It is doubtful, however, if the Blues will arrive in time for the rally.

This game is important to both teams. Western are undefeated in two league starts, and if they win this one they could lose the next three without being out of the picture completely. If they do win, it will leave Varsity with their backs to the wall, forcing them to win their remaining games to stay in the running.

If Varsity wins the load will be eased and their chances for the cup would be much greater. A win for Varsity would free the Blues from dependence on splits in the other league games for contention.

This week-end is the Western Homecoming, which will get off to a flying start on Friday afternoon when the Varsity intermediates take on Jack Fairs' Colts for the first time this season. There will be numerous dances after the games, to welcome alumni and team supporters. Blue and Whiters have a cordial invitation to attend these affairs as well as the rally.

There were about two thousand tickets sold in Toronto, so Varsity will be well represented.



Will Guard Goal-Posts

Western has taken precaution to save the posts and prevent their falling into Blue hands as in past years. With all these trimings, and two well matched teams that are addicted to open play, Saturday looks to be a wonderful day for the spectators.

The Blues feel confident of a win, and intend to come out blasting. There is an aura of cautious confidence on the Western team who think they will continue their win streak.

This is the big week for London —the annual Varsity-Western game always is, and especially so this year as Varsity puts their championship on the line in this battle.

What Are They Going To Do?

These six Western lassies are out to do their best to help the Mustangs regain the Yates Cup this year. Deprived of the time-honored practice of 'hip-swinging' by a Western edict enacted earlier this year, it is expected that they will experience the greatest difficulty making an appreciable showing against the Blue and White girls. They are Carol Swertz, London; Ruth Summerlin, Hamilton; Margaret Chandler, Toronto; Ruth Moffat, London; Janie Edwards, Ridgetown; Donna Alford, London.

What Price Education?

We see that federal subsidies to Canadian universities are back in the news. Dr. H. J. Cody, former chancellor and President of the University of Toronto, has suggested federal subsidizing of universities by establishing more scholarships for students. We believe this to be only a partial solution of current school problems.

In a brief submitted to the Royal Commission on The Arts, Letters, and Sciences, last summer, the universities pointed out quite clearly that they could not hope to function properly on present student fees. For example, it takes $1600 a year to train medical students. The fee is around $500. Obviously the discrepancy must be met from some other source. But the other sources, revenues from endowments and provincial grants, have not been sufficient to more than cover minimum operating costs. And the three-per-cent-of-revenue dominion research grant is scarcely adequate to maintain the many research projects that are being carried out.

So, if we understand Dr. Cody's scheme correctly, in giving more scholarships to young Canadians, we are indirectly aggravating the already acute financial situations at Universities.

It is apparent, especially in view of the fact that the Province can give no further aid, that there is a need of a straight federal grant to the universities themselves. Of course, such a suggestion always brings sinister prophecies of federal domination of schools, curricula, students etc. Such has not been the case in the provincial secondary schools, and would not seem dangerous in this case.

But the people of Canada would possibly object to gilding what many already consider an ivory tower, of providing more facilities for freshman pranks and long-hair antics.

Therefore it becomes the duty of the universities, and the students, to more fully acquaint such people with the facts. Canadian universities, in many respects, rank with the finest educational institutions in any land. One of Canada's greatest products is the well-balanced graduate of her universities. This does not imply it is necessary to go to university to be a well-rounded citizen—it merely restates the fact that, in this world of technical specialization, the university graduate is best equipped to serve.

Service .... possibly that is the key-note on which the true value of Canadian universities, and the subsequently imperative need of adequately financing them, may be brought home. Canada needs every well-trained man she can get. Our country is crying for development—by Canadians. Not all graduates are aware of just how much public money has gone into their education — however many students, not of that class, strongly feel that their awareness of the situation can best be shown by working for the public welfare.

Surely, if the students who receive Dr. Cody's scholarships could also be persuaded to undertake to work for a number of years for that same public welfare, the average Canadian could see a tangible good resulting from the federal subsidization of universities, which The Varsity advocates.

I Was Transitted

It happened! I had been careful for weeks, but it finally happened. The engineers transitted me.

I can't exactly describe my feelings at the time because the mere thought of being in the vicinity of Skulemen had drained me of all emotion. However, I distinctly recall that the sun was shining beautifully until I started to walk across the campus. Then things became very dark. It seemed almost like a huge blanket of nothingness had spread itself over the world about me. Surprise was soon replaced by understanding when I heard that strange foreign language peculiar to SPS. In phonetics, it went: "Hey, you. Get the -/-£-%-!- out of the way." My reply was immediate: "Yea, kaprushnick. Sie sind vorboten. Checkmate." Hardly had I uttered this strange jargon which I had picked up in the chessroom, when I felt something tugging at my pant leg. I looked down and saw an engineer. (Mother, bring the soap. I've got to wash my mouth out now — that word!)

They Grovelled

For a moment I thought he was grovelling in the dust at my feet, begging me to forgive his very existence. That idea didn't last long. I can't say exactly what made me change my mind but I think the peg he was driving through my pant-leg had something to do with it. I decided that the situation called for drastic measures. With one roar I scared the ????!! away. As he ran off I heard shouts of: "Bombard him with the cannon."

Four engineers rushed up with tape measures and tried to find the range. I asked where they had lost it but they couldn't see the point of the joke. This didn't surprise me since they can hardly see anything unless they use binoculars anyway.

I Got It

Pulling the peg out, and brushing the engineers off my back, I started walking across the campus again when it happened. They turned their transits on me and let me have it. I can't remember anything after that. I drifted off into a sweet dream in which engineers were hanging by their sliderules from every No Parking Sign. As I drifted merrily along my dream I noticed on every side the intelligent appearance of the people in general. Obviously there were no engineers in this society. At a small gift shop at

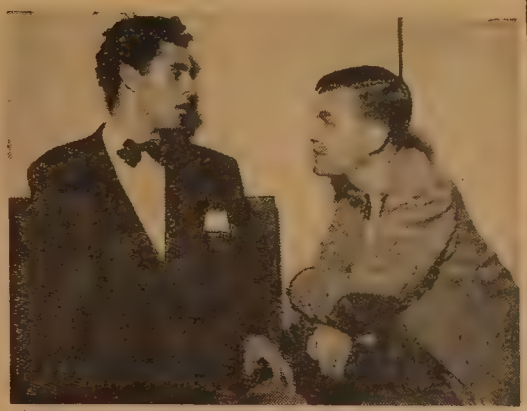
Skulemen Honor Retiring Dean At Testimonial

Dean C. R. Young, retiring Dean of SPS, will be the guest of honor at the traditional Skule dinner this year. In the past it has been the custom to procure speakers of national or international repute from outside the university for the dinner. This year, however, the dinner will take the form of a testimonial to Dean Young, who, besides having served for the last eight years as Dean of SPS, is famous in his own right as an engineer and as a spokesman for the profession.

Dean Young graduated in SPS from the old three year course in 1903. He took his bachelor's degree in 1905, and joined the teaching staff in the same year.



He was on the staff of the Faculty for 42 years, climaxing his service by his appointment as Dean eight years ago. During his time, he was responsible for the introduction of liberal Arts subjects into the Engineering curriculum, and was one of the moving spirits in the establishment of the large Engineering extension campus at Ajax.

An authority on Civil Engineering, Dean Young is the author of several books dealing mainly with structural problems. He has been active in the Engineering Institute of Canada, as well as being a prominent member of the American Society of Civil Engineering.

The Skule Auction will be held a few days before the dinner. Among this year's loot are the following interesting items: the Meds building (plus inhabitants), a perfectly matched set of goal posts (courtesy McGill University), an as yet unidentified Vic residence, containing, among other valuable trivia, some 40 servile Vic students and other articles too numerous to mention.

Tickets to the Dinner may be obtained from the Engineering Society Stores.

Midway Features Galore At Today's Feather Fair

It's here! The annual Red Feather Fair is back again. It's the biggest midway attraction that has ever hit the Varsity campus—it may be the biggest thing ever. There will be organ grinders, gambling dens, a la Monte Carlo, lunch counters, the Varsity band, and other attractions too numerous to mention.

The weatherman promises a good day. Excitement is running high, and features will be many. Sidney Smith and Miss Red Feather '49 will officially open the Fair. They will arrive at the campus through the courtesy of a Skuleman's jalopy. They'll be riding in the rumble seat, so watch for them.

Have you read the Medmen's ads the last few days? Their open air clinic, set up to choose Miss Low Blood Pressure '49 will be busy too. There are going to be lots and lots of go-o-orgeous gals (excuse me, nurses) in attendance.

Have the co-eds here ever had ambitions to gamble like those men of theirs do? The engineers will be only too glad to assist you girls in learning games of chance. Who knows, you might have beginner's luck, and if not, the money that you lose all goes to a good cause. For you men, and the gals too, the Skulehouse inmates have come upon a device to estimate your sex-appeal.

There is going to be an organ grinder too with the cutest monkey this side of the Riverdale Zoo Competition for the U. of T band, no doubt!

You men won't be able to ignore the lovely taggers who will be after you to wear a stylish Red Feather. They are going to be on duty from nine to two, stationed at various convenient places around the campus.

It promises to be a good show, so let's see everybody out at one o'clock today.

Forget Cliches, Leave 'Rut' Book Scribe Advises Writers

Concern of most Canadian writers with the "cliches" of critical opinion inhibits the growth of better writing. This was the argument of James Scott, Evening Telegram Literary Editor, in his talk: "Cliches In Canadian Writing," at the first Hart House Library Evening last night.

Scott commented on the cliches enumerated by Professor E. K. Brown in his introduction to "On Canadian Poetry": lack of a truly Canadian literature, impossibility of a writer making a living in Canada, the colonial attitude, Canada being a "frontier" society, Canadian Puritanism and Canadian regionalism.

Inhibition Common

Canadian writers are a "particularly inhibited lot," said Scott, partly because the Canadian reading habits are "pretty well stereotyped."

For the last five years, Canadian writing has been mainly in a "rut," Scott suggested. This may be the result of continual harping of writers and critics on the "cliches" that have grown up about the question of "truly Canadian" literature.

Not A Problem

Whether Canada has a national literature or not matters very little, said Scott. At any rate it is not a problem for the writer to worry about. The Canadian Authors Association should stop having meetings to see what is to be done about a Canadian literature we have not got, the speaker said instead, a professional writers group to get more writing done, should be the CAA aim.

False Fable

To insist that a writer cannot make a living in Canada but must migrate is just another cliche, Scott said. In the United States, there are something less than 1,000 writers who make over $2,000 yearly. But in Canada, many writers give up jobs, professors in particular, to make their living by writing.

To judge by their work, those Canadian writers who have migrated to the United States are no serious loss to our culture, the speaker suggested.

'Improve Selves' M.P.P. Advises Commerce Club

"Business Morals" was the topic of Charles E. Rae, M.P.P., when he addressed the Commerce Club on Wednesday evening.

The address was divided into two parts, outlining first the position of the Commerce students as "budding executives", and then going on into detail of their responsibilities as "budded executives".

As executives they will face problems peculiar to themselves, the speaker said. He talked on "human relations", as opposed to the usual "public relations". The weaknesses and problems were discussed by Mr. Rae, and he suggested "keys" to solving them.

At one end of the scale he used as example the man who is always right. As the solution he recommended that we keep in mind that "it is not who is right, but what is right".

At the other end of the scale indecision is paramount. Mr. Rae suggested that "it's better to hurt and heal" than to have a person go through life in a second rate position.

He concluded with a discussion of an over-all solution for the troubles besetting the executive. "The trend has been toward improving the world and not the individual. We should therefore take on responsibility as individuals."

City Aids Anthropologists In Dig For Indian House

The Royal Ontario Museum is conducting another Anthropological Expedition to Woodbridge this week-end. This is a sequel to the expedition that discovered the site of an Iroquois long house there two years ago.

Over 200 students leave at 8:30 Friday morning from the Museum by bus, while others will proceed to the southern Ontario town by cars. As a long house is 30 feet wide, and anywhere from 90 to 120 feet long, the students have a good deal of earth to remove before their search on Sunday evening.

The diggers, mostly in Arts courses, several graduates, and seven guests from Hamilton College, in Canton, New York, will be under the direction of J. N. Emerson, lecturer in Anthropology at the Museum. The project is under the sponsorship of Professor T. F. McIlwraith.

The Museum has received co-operation from various organizations. The city has loaned 200 shovels, and 20 wheelbarows. A department store has donated groceries, and each student on the expedition has put up $3.00 to help defray expenses.

The unearthing of the house is an important step in the retracing of the pre-historic life in our province, and it is expected that representatives of several periodicals and a film company will be on hand during the week-end.

Require Statistics To Prepare Brief On Text Reductions

Any campaign for lower text book prices must fail if not supported by accurate statistics regarding comparable prices of American texts in the United States and Canada was the decision reached by the NFCUS executive at its meeting yesterday.

Use Statistics

Tom Symons, NFCUS Chairman, said "a barrage of statistics" to use in arguments for lower American text prices is the aim of the Toronto chapter of the National Federation of Canadian University Students. He asserts that there is evidence American text books are being kept at an unreasonable price level, possibly because certain distributors have monopolies in the Canadian market on various lines of these books.

It was decided a brief should be sent to other Canadian universities suggesting plans similar to the SAC Book Exchange as useful in bringing lower priced texts to students. "The Exchange is an enormous success," Symons commented.

The chairman advised the executive's committee on text book prices to study previous NFCUS reports and a university faculty members' report on the matter.

Need Better Organization

The executive discussed the need for better organization of NFCUS exchange scholarships. Symons described the case of one University of Toronto student who had his scholarship denied by the Senate after he had every reason to expect he would get it.

To study the problem it was decided to question NFCUS exchange students on this campus, find out how many such students there are, and discuss the question with other universities' NFCUS groups.

Hetherington said the national NFCUS conference in Ottawa this September advised local committee to contact their university registrars with the idea of setting up better liaison on the question of exchange students under the Federation plan.

Says Seminar Sure

Hetherington also reported it is certain there will be a Seminar sponsored by the International Student Service in Quebec to discuss questions of interest to Canadians. The seminar was planned last year but did not materialize.

It was recommended that a suggestion be sent to the national executive that 60,000 rather than the proposed 15,000 copies of a booklet, "NFCUS and You", be printed. The concensus was that the additional printing costs would be small compared to the usefulness of the publication in future years.

Valerie Carson, IV UC, accepted the job of keeping a record of campus newspaper reports on NFCUS. Plans were make to set up bulletin boards in each college and faculty for news of NFCUS work and announcements.

Norm Endicott, IV Vic, asked for a study of the conference of the International Union of Students held in Sophia, Bulgaria this summer.

Change System To End Thefts At Hart House

There has been a change in the system of coat-checking in Hart House, Warden Ignatieff announced yesterday afternoon.

"We have opened a new cloakroom just outside Great Hall and have a staff of three men to operate it during rush hours. This is in addition to the original checkroom, located at the foot of the stairs from the upper hallway to the tuckshop.

"With the aid of these new facilities we hope to be able to keep up with the students who want to leave their coats and belongings in safe keeping," he added.

These steps have been taken to put a stop to the present outbreak of thefts in the house, as a large number of coats have been taken from the racks which used to occupy the area now taken over for the new cloak-room.

There have been still more thefts since the police were called in to aid the University officials in putting an end to them.

For a period after the publication of an article in The Varsity there was a reduction in the number of missing articles, but this is accounted for in the more careful habits of students who would ordinarily have left their coats behind in lecture halls.

Ralph Rimmer of the Athletic staff said that the biggest worry for the department was the careless habit of people who come in for a shower, and are too lazy to lock their lockers. "They are asking for trouble, and you can hardly blame a person of weak personality who submits to the temptation when it is so flagrantly waved in his face."

It was reported that someone had been arrested yesterday afternoon, after he was seen in the men's locker room. A wallet was found to be missing from one of the lockers which was left unlocked while the owner went for a shower.

Police investigating the matter could not find enough evidence to support any charges and the suspect was released after questioning.

"This is an example of what can and does happen when the students are so careless about their belongings. I feel worse about the conditions which make this sort of thing possible than I do about the actual theft," said Mr. Rimmer.

Warden Ignatieff stressed that the added facilities will not help

Donate Medical Fellowship For Pathology Research

An anonymous gift of $50,000. to set up a graduate medical fellowship in honour of the late Dr. Helen L. Vanderveer was announced today by Dr. Sidney Smith, president of the University of Toronto. During her lifetime, Dr. Vanderveer anonymously donated $100,000. for fellowships, and her will, probated last year, provided another $50,000. for this purpose. The latest gift makes the total $200,000.

Dr. Vanderveer, whose home was in Brooklyn, N.Y., came to Toronto for her medical course, but never practised. After graduation, she worked in Pathology for two or three years, and then took up residence at a country home in King township.

Dr. Smith said the new fellowship is to be awarded annually for post-graduate study, and for the promotion of research in pathology.

The President also announced establishment of the Sandoz prize in Pharmacology for annual competition among third year medical students; the winner will receive an opthalmoscope, an expensive ($100) instrument used by eye specialists.

Beginning this year, Kellogg Foundation travelling scholarships will be available for University of Toronto students at the advance graduate level. Worth $2400., they cover the cost of study at any approved center in the United States. Dr. J. A. MacFarlane, dean of the Faculty of Medicine, said that one and sometimes two such scholarships would be awarded annually.

TALKING SHOP

TEASDALL'S, your men's shop at 804 Yonge Street, is now offering time payment opportunities to the lad who doesn't want to put it all down in one payment ... they've special concessions to the student incidentally, and it's a good shop to remember for the sort of small items that build up a better wardrobe. Socks, shirts, pyjamas, dressing-gowns, shorts are easily accessible to the short-cut shopper ... Teasdall's, all in all, is a pretty solid base for practically anything you've on the male want list. Just above Yonge, left side.

EVER HEARD OF JEAN COURTOT? Well, if you haven't, don't say so. Courtot is a big name in the fur designer category, and he's opened a Canadian shop on the second floor of Kent Fairweather's downtown at 90 Yonge Street. One of the things you'll like about this French designer is that he's made provision for the girl without a bankroll to squander in a large way ... you're invited, cherie, to take a look at the muskrats that look like mink, the Persians that look like a lot of money, and some of his other new coats ... they add up to nice comfy days ahead, AND less money to pay than you'd think.

BUSY AS USUAL, and a lot to be busy about is the Third Floor at Northways, where the college gal comes into her own shopping territory and no fooling. Those college items are inviting one and all to really make the most of what nature did for a girl, and the separate skirts with matching blouses make it easy to build a wardrobe without too much sudden jar on the financial surplus. Nice warm jerseys come in so many soft shades and winning designs it restores your faith in practically everything!

SUITS IN IMPORTED FABRICS are the news at the F. J. Watt Sportswear Shop ... they come in impeccable tailored styles, sturdily plain as to cut but with the perfect fitting which does not just happen, but is the heritage of experienced craftsmanship. These days, Watt's popular corner attracts the college crowd for accessories, suits, coats or the "just looking" shopping that goes to make up a well-educated eye. Remember ... you're always welcome to window-shop inside Watt's as well as outside.

THERE'S NOTHING so useful as a shop that specializes in the small items that can go together to build up a costume without too much outlay at the start. The Evangeline Shops have always been specialists in suits for the college girl; but as well as for suits, they pride themselves in selling the sort of items you can collect slowly and alternate to make up any number of campus costumes ... separate skirts and jackets and blouses that can be worn together or in various combinations. Remember, the college Evangeline is on Bloor near Bay, where everything from lingerie to class-room suits has been chosen for the gal with a campus life to lead.

Lots of Floats Being Prepared For Homecoming

Thirty-five entries have been received for the Float Parade, said Doug Thomas, Public Relations Commissioner of the SAC yesterday. The Parade will take place on Saturday, Oct. 29, and will coincide with the Homecoming Weekend.

The Float Parade was started by the Blue and White Society last year as part of the Homecoming Weekend celebrations, and will have entries from all major faculties and Colleges.

President Smith will judge the floats from a reviewing stand set up in front of Hart House.

An added attraction this year will be the Blue and White Revue, composed of representative acts from the various Colleges and faculties. The show will be given on Saturday evening, Oct. 29.

ART ⇔ MUSIC ⇔ DRAMA

Ballad & Ballet

Soft-voiced ballad-singer Richard Dyer-Bennet and pert Iva Kitchell, dance satirist, gave an excellent and different co-recital in Eaton Auditorium last night. It was excellent because both artists are almost perfect in their fields, and different because one hardly ever hears ballads or sees satirised ballets.

Ballad and folk-singing is an almost forgotten art on this continent. It is only kept alive by such singers as Dyer-Bennet, Burl Ives, Woody Guthrie, and Susan Reed.

Dyer-Bennet is far ahead of the others as a singer and as an instrumentalist, for in folk-singing the accompaniment is just as important as the lyric; in fact, it is really part of it.

His voice is a high tenor which almost becomes falsetto in the high register, and then shows a husky quality at the low end of the scale. It also has a beautiful silvery quality so necessary for folk songs. Dramatic and soaring, he showed he had control and power in the "Rising of the Moon," an Irish song calling the rebel army to arms against the English. A change from pianissimo to fortissimo and back to pianissimo is difficult for any singer. In the "Lonesome Dove," an American ballad, Richard Dyer-Bennet did this several times. His other songs showed the same good singing.

Broad parody was the theme of Iva Kitchell's dancing. By violent contortions and ridiculous facial expressions, she interpreted a number of types of ballet.

"Grand Pas de Deux" by Luigini would probably make the ballet-omane shudder, but it would eventually make him laugh. As the novice ballerina she looked so beautifully happy when it was all over. A take-off on Martha Graham and an exhibition of a Ziegfield Folly Girl showed Iva Kitchell to be a very good serious dancer or else she could not have parodied so well.

A Pass Course

From Ontario collegiates since 1944, (the first music paper in Upper School) comes a host of students who have been subjected to a five-year course of music in their respective schools.

If they should choose to enrol at the University of Toronto in the Faculty of Arts, in the eminent, all-purpose Pass Course, these worthy freshmen find that they may continue any subject from Upper School: Botany, History, Zoology, Enblish, Latin, French, Physics, Chemistry, or Greek—but Music is not there.

To enroll in the Pass Course means their collegiate course in music has reached an inglorious deadend, unless they enter the Faculty of Music, or the Arts Honor Course. Both the Faculty of Music and the Honor Music Course are specialized; both aim at preparing musicians. To enter either faculty one must have a specific instrumental skill. The great number of students entering the Pass Course, by virtue of enrollment, do not desire specific training. If they wish to continue their music, they are forced into extra-curricular activities, not officially recognized.

Surely a curious anomaly arises in respect to a university which, in the interest of the student body, encourages a chorus and a symphony orchestra, yet makes no provision for music in the Pass Course.

Too often forgotten in the drive to train high-calibre musicians is the audience before whom they will perform. The performer is fostered and the listener ignored. Yet composer, performer and listener are integral partners in music as an art. If we strive to attain a high standard in musicianship, an equally high criterion in appreciation must be attained by those subject to that musicianship.

The introduction of music to the Pass Course in the Faculty of Arts would be a valuable step in the achievement of that end.

Under Capricorn

In "Under Capricorn" everyone is very touchy about his social background which is liable to be very colourful, being that of Australia in penal days. Ingrid Bergman and Joseph Cotten have a particularly dismal time living in a house called "Why Weepest Thou?" where they are frequently joined by Michael Wilding, who is rehabilitating Miss Bergman, who is drunk. The cause of their tears is really the house-keeper, an unscrupulous sort who figures she'll get Mr. Cotten all to herself if she throws enough booze and scares into Ingrid. Towards the end of the picture she even manages to throw a scare into the audience, but such lethargic goings-on preceded this chilling moment that not everyone may be awake to enjoy it.

This servant wench, whose reform obviously isn't progressing too well, is busy persuading Cotten that his fine lady and her gentleman companion are putting one over on him; but he just isn't quick enough to see what's really wrong, for, as he keeps reminding himself, he was brought up in a stable.

Everything turns out fine in the end though. Cotten has one of those understanding flashes so often vouchsafed people in pictures about misunderstandings; Ingrid makes a strange confession to the effect that she still remembers the Sydney slums; and Wilding, smiling sadly, goes back to Ireland.

Warner Brothers had this one made in England and it's hard to believe that they or Alfred Hitchcock had much to do with it, although it's a handsome enough thing to look at, with technicolour and all. The ads will tell you that "This is the Bergman you never hoped to see", which is approximately right, and that goes for the others too, all of whom are probably heartily embarrassed with their transatlantic turnip. The exception is Michael Wilding ("An Ideal Husband") who characterizes

Book Review

The Plant In My Window

"The Plant in My Windów", an adventure of the spirit (Ambassador, $3.25) by Ross Parmenter is written in a simple, quiet style which is completely deceptive as the meaning is disturbingly ambiguous and indefinite.

Either the author does not know what he is saying (which I rather suspect) or his language does not express what he knows. If you grant Mr. Parmenter the indulgent understanding you would give a friend who says that he does not know what he means but he'll say it anyway, you can make good sense out of "The Plant in My Window"; but I do not think an author should make such demands or have such expectations — it is a hazardous method.

Mr. Parmenter's purpose is twofold: to tell the story and the effects of his experience. The experience seems to have taken an important part in Mr. Parmenter's readjustment to civilian life and he recounts it with honesty and dignity in the first section which is the best piece of writing despite occasional colloquial and journalistic solecisms. The experience is somewhat less "spiritual" that you might expect, for the author confuses the spirit variously with the mind, consciousness, and a physical force. But what he learns from his spiritual adventure is derived not so much from that experience as from popular intellectual platitudes which have not been critically examined.

Nevertheless, the author presents himself as a rather pleasant and interesting intellectual and his book, which is the result of the play of his fancy on a plant, partakes of the same qualities. There is a gentle humor and an occasional brilliance of thought and expression which is impaired, however, by cautious qualification: "Just as we are all indoor gardeners, so, in a sense, those of us who live in cities are potted plants".

Red Feather Show

Anything Else

From the midway barking outside to the drop of the final curtain, the Red Feather show in Hart House Theatre Wednesday noon proved to be an outstanding success.

Advertised by the barkers as "just a little bit tantalizing", those who thronged to the theatre were not disappointed in the opening number by Dennis and Maxine. The dance by these two outstanding artists left the audience trembling in their seats.

The next number by Araby Lockhart, "The Waltz", will be remembered by all those who have stumbled around on a dance floor with a new friend. Sylvia Grant, star of U.C. Follies sang "Ouvre ton Coeur" and "Begin the Beguine", and while it is the first time we have heard Miss Grant sing, we shall be looking forward to listening to her again.

The star performance of the show was "Pansy Faces" by John Pratt and Murry Matheson from "There Goes Yesterday". It brought the audience to their feet in a thundering burst of applause. Matheson followed this number with his presentation of "Only a Glass of Champagne" and "A Cup of Tea" done in his own inimitable style. We feel that we saw two of the greatest musical comedy stars to come to Toronto in many a long day.

Earl Simard's piano rendition of "Sabre Dance" was excellent, and we feel that the only disappointment with the show is that it was not long enough. Oh yes, Evan Scott also sang.

Oldest Doctor

Editor, The Varsity:

In a recent issue of The Varsity there was a photograph of a doctor who graduated in 1893. The question was raised whether he was the oldest living practitioner in Ontario.

We find that among the graduates of the Faculty of Medicine of Victoria University the following gentlemen are living in Ontario. In each case the year of graduation is given:

1885, Bascom, Horace, M.D., Whitby; 1888, Anderson, Robert King, M.D., Milton; 1888, Carruthers, John, M.D., Little Current; 1888, Sisley, Opie, M.D., Toronto; 1889, Bull, Emerson, M.D., Toronto.

Women Archers

St. Mike's II, takes her place again this year on the team. Phyllis has her eye on intramural swimming, once the archery season goes indoors.

Last, but not least, is Barbara Neff, Vic III, who was nominated target captain for the meet. Since each team has its own target, any questions about the Toronto bull's-eye should be directed at Barbara, whose steady shooting has claimed her as the fourth member on the team.

The position of "Lady Paramount" goes to Miss Slack, and this title makes her supreme on the field of action. A blast from her whistle starts the shooting or stops it. Actually the men use the phrase "Field Captain" to designate the same position.

As far as shooting is concerned, every contestant has four rounds, consisting of six arrows each play, from three distances on the field. This makes a total of 12 rounds with a possible 72 arrows to be scored. The bows have a 28-pound pull, so that at the end of the meet everyone will have moved the equivalent of 2,016 pounds.

The first distance is 50 yards from the target, while the next is 40 and the last is 30. According to reports, the first is the most difficult and everybody heaves a sigh of relief when they move closer.

Spectators are quite welcome to come and see just how an official tournament is worked out. However, they are requested to keep out of the shooting range as a flying arrow can pack a terrific wallop.

Archaeological Search

The colonial attitude results in a lack of national self-assurance and a "heli-bent-for-leather" search for a national character, as "if it were a fossil to be dug up," Scott charged. Again, the writer should not be bothered, if he is a writer at all, by the chains of frontier scorn of "intellectualism" or the "genteel age" Canada is passing through.

Regional literature should not be attacked as not being Canadian enough Scott said. In fact it should be remembered that the regionalism has given birth to some of the best of Canadian writing: humorists like Leacock, and Herbert Earle Birnie's forthcoming 'Turvey' was suggested by Scott as an excellent example of gentle satire, which is above the usual "rut."

Dig Loses Key Shovel Man To Gastroenteritis Attack

The anthropology dig scheduled for this weekend has received a serious set-back, according to Professor Emerson, of the Anthropology Department, of the University of Toronto, commenting on the sudden attack of gastroenteritis sufferred by Fred Taylor, III Vic.

"Fred was going to relieve me of many of the details so necessary to smooth operation of a 'dig' of this sort. Now I guess I'll have to get used to the idea of doing some of the work myself," Professor Emerson said.

Fred is a resident of Middle House, Burwash Hall, and comes from near Barrie Ontario. He felt ill Wednesday night, but when he went to see Dr. Stiver of the University Health Service yesterday he felt better.

He was persuaded that there could be nothing wrong with him, and when he was ordered to bed for the day went back to his room, and insisted on looking after himself.

Professor Emerson fears that his desire to go on the 'dig' might have made him neglect his health.

When a friend went in to visit him he found Taylor so ill that he could not move. Calling Dr. Diae of the Sunnybrook Hospital, the friend had an ambulance come to remove him to hospital.

"He was the number two I.C. of our party, and much of the organization was left in his hands. Now we will have to ge cracking to get caught up with the work." With this, Professor Emerson hurried down the street, and Fred was on his way for Sunnybrook Hospital.

the corner of a street I noticed a curious crowd. They were all looking at a strange instrument of destruction which was labelled "Skule Cannon. Relic of the Skule Rebellion." To me it looked like a cork pop-gun. In fact at the time I doubted if it could even shoot a paper-ball.

SPS Abolished

What deeply interested me, however, was that phrase on the "Skule Rebellion." I didn't quite grasp its meaning since I was quite sure it was humanity that had expelled the engineers and not the other way around. All my doubts were dispelled when I read further on the sign that the rebellion in question had occurred when SPS (Silly Prattling Sprouts) was abolished and re-christened Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering. The rebellion had been quashed. The engineers had become human—they now studied history, economics, and the very special subject of engineering and society. At this point I woke up. It was a bucket of water that brought me to my senses. Looking around I noticed that the sky had lightened and the campus was empty.

"What happened?" I said to my friend.

"You were transitted."

Sr. Soccer Team Meet Ukrainians Tomorrow At 5

Something new has been added! At 5 p.m. tomorrow the Varsity Senior Soccer Blues will tackle the Ukrainian Soccer Club of the Toronto Senior League. This is the first game with a public team on a public field to be played by a Varsity squad. The site will be the Broadview field behind the Broadview Y.M.C.A. Admission will be: Gentlemen 50c; Ladies 25c.

This Ukrainian team, composed entirely of European players, is one of the strongest in the league. In fifteen league games they have lost only one. They tied both the Ulster United and the East End Canadians, two of the finest teams in Canada, in Cup competition.

The Ukrainians should have eight or nine hundred supporters out for the game; now let's see if we can have on hand more than the usual crowd of Varsity rooters (i.e. the two substitutes and the bus-driver). Let's go! Win or lose, this is your team, playing for the Blue and White—and they are the intercollegiate champions.

LATE SPORT FLASH

Toronto golfers lost an exhibition 18-hole tournament to University of Niagara Falls (N.Y.) yesterday, 9-6. Out of five twosomes, Varsity won two. Charlie Pavanel (76) was one winner and Bob Masters (80) was the other. Other players and scores: Dave Greey (81); George Smalley (81) and Porky Gouinlock (77).

the victors in a hard tussle against PHE II. Nerves were taut while Betty Jane Fraser and Ann Harland, the respective pitchers made every ball count.

It was touch and go to the end of the second inning with the Fizz Edders leading 2-0, but spurred on by their coach, St. Mike's came through to win the game.

Fizz Ed Wins

The Fizz-eders IV team took a close softball decision from the Vic seconds Wednesday to win 15-13. Vic piled up a commanding six run lead in the first only to have it shattered by a ten run rally by the PHE girls in the third.

Schedule

Two more softball games have been added to next week's time table. Monday Vic I plays UC and Fraser umps, while Tuesday PHE II plays St. Mike's with Dillon and Van Camp as umps. Both these games will take place in the Varsity Stadium.

SOCCER RESULTS

Trinity "B's" and Knox played to a 1-1 tie Thursday in a fourth group soccer match. Both goals were scored in the first half, with Tim Clarkson blasting in a hot shot from the left wing to put Trinity ahead in the first ten minutes. Laurie Sutherland then countered for Knox on a penalty shot after a nice rush was broken up by a Trinity foul. The outstanding feature of the game, which at spots tended to be ragged, was the great playing of John Pettigrew, the Trinity goalie, and of Walter Welch, the Knox captain and center forward.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

defence can hold. And that hole through centre defence, all the way down the line, will have to be plugged up.

The Blues will have to do all these things if they hope to win; Western is a tough team. We are not making predictions without saving clauses, and we repeat, if they play like they played at McGill, our beloved Blues will lose by two touches; if they play like they can play, they will win by two.

Team Fighting Mad

The team right now is fighting mad; mad at themselves. The boys intend to show some drive tomorrow, and win or lose they're out to give Western a beating. As one player said . . . "I'd hate to be on Western's team this Saturday, they'll see some hard rugby!"

We have a feeling the team will rectify earlier mistakes with a creditable showing; they're the kind that bounce back.

And that's our prediction: click—win by two; flop—lose by same. But the team will (we think) click.

W W W

We have been reported dead by our contemporary, the Western Gazette. (no, Noodniks, it's not spelt with an "s"; it's a "z"). They claim we committed suicide after the Queen's game. Ha! we can think of better ways of dying than suiciding.

Everybody, including London, seems to be betting on Varsity. Last heard from the sporting fraternity it was five or six to two against the Metrasmen.

SOCCER

There will be a soccer game on Broadview Y M C A. Field on Saturday, October 22nd, at 5 p.m., between Varsity Soccer Team and the Ukrainian Soccer Team.

ENGLISH RUGBY GAME

There will be an English Rugby game Saturday, Oct. 22nd, 1:15 p.m. Back Campus. The Varsity team vs Toronto Wanderers.

Varsity Intermediates Win Track Trophy

VARSITY SPORTS

Seconds Meet Colts; Hunting First Win

Tuned up to a high pitch and in top physical shape, the Varsity Intermediate Blues will march out onto the gridiron at Western this afternoon in an attempt to gain their first league win of the season.

Although the team dropped its first two games, one to McMaster by a close decision, and the other to OAC, coach Don Bark feels that the boys will come out on the right side of the scoring in their encounter with the Colts. The Western squad lost to OAC, but defeated McMaster in its two league games this season.

In their two meetings last fall, the Colts and the Intermediates each won a game, so rivalry is very apparent as the clubs prepare for the first clash this season.

The Blue team travelled to London Thursday night in order to be well rested for the game today. They will all have rooms in Hotel London for the weekend too, the lucky dogs. However, if they set the precedent for their big Blue brothers by trimming the Colts we will not begrudge them the space.

Line-up for the game will be:

Centres — Murray, Sutherland.
Insides — Hyde, Hames, Dowsett, Brown.
Middles — Shay, Whitehead, Howard, McLennan.
Ends — Russell, McCagherty, Kleczor, Buleychuk.
1 Backs — Green, Howson.
2 Backs — Davis, Hansen.
3 Backs — Ceccutti, Leeming
4 Backs — Bazos, Haig.
5 Backs — Bell, Birkenshaw.

Women Archers Try For Scores At Intercoll Meet

Today, for the first time in the history of the university, a Women's Intercollegiate Archery Tournament will take place in Varsity Stadium. The first round begins at 9:30 this morning.

McGill, Western, McMaster, Queen's and MacDonald Hall in Guelph are sending teams to compete with our own Blue and White archers, who were finally picked last Monday after many practices under the able guidance of the coach, Miss Slack.

Campbell High Scorer

In discussing the team's potentialities, Miss Slack felt that Ruth Campbell, Vic III, was the highest scorer so far, although she still cannot reach the standard that Bernice Muir established last year when the Toronto team competed in the meet at McMaster.

Helen Prendergast, St. Mike's IV, has been shooting longer than any of the other members, while her other claim to fame is competing on the St. Mike's Intramural Ski Team.

With the experience of last year's meet in her favour, Phyllis Burke,

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

The picture for tomorrow's game at Western needs come clarification at the moment. Most fans are a little bewildered and confused by the hot and cold showings of our football team. After careful thought and consideration we have come to definite conclusions about the team and especially tomorrow's game.

They Have The Stuff

In the first place, the team has the stuff. The natural ability is there, and the team has been as well-coached as any team can be. It is the belief of this department that no coach in Canada, and probably no coach anywhere, could have done more than Masterson.

They showed what they could do when they walked all over the Beaches by thirty-four points. They were clicking that day, and the Balmies are in the cellar of the ORFU; but the fact remains that the Blues can click, and that the Balmies are in the Senior league. They even beat the strong Windsor club.

What Happened at McGill

Why, then, did the Blues not show so well against McGill? We don't know. We doubt if anybody, including the players themselves, know. Certainly the Montreal game is not the criterion for measuring the team's potential.

The Blues have a solid front wall to start with; guys like Clark, Jones, Mustard, and the rest of the linemen are good enough for any Canadian league. The backfield is fast and well versed in the intricacies of the forward pass and kick; well enough balanced with experience and new blood. Bruce Cummings, of course, is still the mainspring of the offence, and he is a boy that coaches would be quite willing to have on their team any time. They have a good team, but let us hope they are not overly addicted to bad days and half-steam games.

Down To Cases

But down to the immediate case for consideration—the at-Western game. Western has several of their star men out of commission. Their front wall, especially has been hard hit with injuries to McKinlay and Grant. If the Varsity line gets in and drives hard, and we do mean hard, they have a fair chance of breaking up some backfield plays.

The defensive backs will of course have to go hard and quick to keep Parry and 'les McFarlanes' from completing too many passes. It remains to be seen if the Varsity pass

Crucial Test Faces Blues At London

The Blues are on the road again this week as they entrain tonight for London and a football engagement there tomorrow with the first place Western Mustangs. The loyal Blue fans who have not got tickets for this no doubt great game will just have to sit tight and wait until next week before they can see the team in action.

The Blues are fresh from a one game losing streak in Montreal and from all reports are beginning to get mad. Let's hope it is Western they are mad at. Bob Masterson is very gloomy at the present time and is making no rash predictions of the outcome of the contest. When interviewed yesterday he was the very picture of the coach who was getting ready to pull out the crying towels. However, he desisted and contented himself with terse mutterings about who would start and who wouldn't. He claimed that the team was not ready for the Montreal game, but offered no excuses.

Replacements

But that was last week, and in the words of the sage, tomorrow is another day. Ian Clark, Arch Jones, captain of the team; Don Longmore and Hubie Sinclair are all sidelined. To replace Sinclair, Masterson will use Murray Hadlow, former triple threat from Vaughan Road. Hadlow has not been used in league games to date due to an ankle injury. Joe Errington has been summoned up from the intermeidates to fill the hole in the line left by Longmore. Scott, also from the seconds has the job of taking Ian Clark's place at centre. Harry Hyde, up with the Blues last week, will rejoin the intermediates and his place will be taken by Ford.

Masterson has been concentrating on pass defence and plunge defence mostly this week, besides having heavy scrimmages on Tuesday and Wednesday. Last night the team ran through a light practice and tonight they will not practice at all as they are catching an early train that will get them to London by about 10 p.m.

Scout Opines

A slight change has been made in the defensive line-up as Jimmie Bell will be playing in the safety slot besides taking his regular turn on offensive right end. This is a move to tighten the Blues' defense on the secondary. If the defence is strengthened there is no reason why the Blues shouldn't take the high-flying Westerns. In the opinions of the Blues chief scout (whose name for reasons of security will not be mentioned here) Western were lucky to turn back McGill two weeks ago, and equally fortunate in eking out a win over Queen's. He said that the play that sunk both teams was one destructive pass play that was set up by Jack Parry.

Those who aren't fortunate enough to see this game will have an opportunity to see the same two teams in the same type of game next Saturday here.

Sportswoman

Now that the Aqua Show is over, women swimmers are turning their thoughts towards the business of competition. Starting on Monday there will be try-outs for both the Intercollegiate Swimming team and Intramural teams.

Swimmers Needed

Zaira Murray, President of Women's Swimming, hopes that all those who are interested in this sport will turn out to these practices, as there is need for lots of swimmers.

Actually all faculties are able to participate and it has been decided to hold the Intramural meet this fall, rather than after Christmas, which has been the tradition for many years.

Thus there will be no excuses about overdue essays and term exams. Zaira does want a large turn out and feels that the change will increase interest and rally a more favourable response.

Two pools are to be used for the practices on Monday, as several different types of swimming will be going on at the same time.

In the UTS pool Intercollegiate speed will take place at 5:30, while at 6:30 trials for Intercollegiate diving and Intramural style will be held. At 7:30 those interested in Intramural speed and diving should be there.

Intramural synchronized swimming is at 6:30 in the Lillian Massey pool and at 7:30 the Intercollegiate synchronized swimming takes place.

Carry Off Guthrie Cup; McMaster Runners-Up

By MIKE FURLONG

The Varsity Intermediate tracksters won the Guthrie Cup, emblematic of the Intermediate Intercollegiate Track and Field Championship in Varsity Stadium yesterday afternoon by successfully meeting the challenges of teams from McMaster, OAC, and Western.

Points By Tracksters

Varsity ended up with a total team score of 78 points while McMaster was runner-up with fifty, and OAC third with 35; Western came up with a resounding two markers. Most of Varsity's point score came from the cinder track men while McMaster strong men dominated the field events.

It was not surprising to see the name MacFarlane among the winners since Western was taking an active part, but it was surprising in this instance, because this MacFarlane is a very good sprinter from McMaster who walked away with both the hundred and the 220 yard dashes. It is to be hoped that the Western footballers put up a better show or there will be a lot of people screaming for their money back on Saturday. Western was hard pressed to gain even the two meagre points they were awarded, in fact one of those points was automatic since the Purple and White boys were fourth in a four team relay.

Most of the races were fairly easy races for the winner, but the quarter mile was a real thriller with Warga, of McMaster nipping McMackon of Toronto in the last few yards.

Adare of Varsity was the only other double winner along with MacFarlane. Adare scored in both hurdle events for Toronto.

BLUES BUMPED IN TIGHT TILT

Comfortable Son?

Last Wednesday night some wags over at Vic decided to show Skule how to invade a girls' residence without resorting to the open window technique. After dressing up Walt Stuart as a pretty young miss, with the willing co-operation of some of the co-eds from the Vic residence at 151 Bloor Street, he was sneaked into Annesley Hall where he had dinner, learned some things about the inner life of a girls' residence, and fled from the house as soon as he was able. He managed to have his picture taken first: (l to r), Marie Salter, IV Hist. and Moderns; Barb Clarke, II Pass; Miss Stuart, II Pass; and Pat Ewing, II Hist.

Early Mustang TD Proves Blue Knell In Dramatic Battle

By JOHN KENNEDY
(Sports Editor)

London, Ont., Oct. 22—(Staff)—Not a single person with two eyes in his head left the dramatic football game here this afternoon before the final whistle blew indicating that the ex-champs had defeated the present titleholders by the close score of 11-8. The Blue team was somewhat stunned with the rapidity of the Western attack, led by Jack Parry, that netted them a touchdown within four minutes of play

Mustang's Score Early

The Blues received the opening kick-off on the 20 and ran it back to their own 40. On the second down the Blues tossed a pass that was intercepted by Parry and run to the Varsity 20. Two plays later Fitzgerald cashed the leather for five points. The over-capacity crowd of 15,000 sent up a terrific roar as captain Jack Parry made sure of the extra point. So, within half a dozen plays the Blues were behind —a 6-0 deficit as was the case in both previous league games. It was like giving the strong Mustangs a 6 point handicap.

Blue Line Terrific

As the game raced on, it became more and more obvious that the Westerns would need every point that they could muster as the superlative Blue line, playing inspired ball, held the Mustangs to small gains through the centre. Jim Fraser (Moose) Mustard played a magnificent game on the line, nothing new for him, but in this game he was even more outstanding than usual. The rest of the line, Bill Lloyd, Pete Bennett, Ed Fisher, and John Evans all were playing up to the terrific standard set by the "Moose".

Masterson tried a new defensive system in this game, using Hadlow and Bell as deep safety men and sending Cummings and Danylchuk on whenever the Blues gained possession.

Pass Attack Fails

All through, Varsity attempted pass after pass that failed to be completed largely due to the excellent pass defence set up by the fast Western backs. Varsity passers usually had lots of time on their heaves. Varsity got into Western territory for the first time late in the first quarter on passes to Danylchuk and good running by freshman Murray Hadlow. Varsity's best running play was an end around by fleet Bill Danylchuk behind outstanding blocking by Bill Lloyd. On a shovel pass from the Western 26 Dany shook loose and ripped to the 14. At this point the Blues sold out while in scoring position with fruitless passes, the last being off a fake field goal.

In the second quarter with both Cummings and Brown on, the Blues made yards through holes by Mustard and Evans. Brewer and Stevenson also made some nice gains in this second quarter thrust. Western got one of their big chances to lengthen their lead in the second quarter when Parry threw to Arnott who got behind the safety man and went to the Varsity five before he was pulled down by Dick Brown. Don McFarlane then pushed to the 2. Parry was stopped cold by the hard driving Toronto in a terrific goal line stand. Bennett, Ford, Errington and Roberts were in on that defence.

Blue Standouts

John Evans, playing courageously on the line for the Blues was taken off the field on three different occasions but insisted on coming back for more. Jack Gray played another sparkling game on the end making most of the downfield tackles, as well as snarling a couple of passes. In the third quarter Western made it 11-0 when Parry went over from the five. The Blues were all pulled

New UWO Gym Is Opened Sat. By Alexander

London, Ont., Oct. 24 — (CUP) — "Sport is capable of making a valuable contribution in building character and developing leadership," stated Viscount Alexander, Governor-General of Canada, Saturday, officiating at the official opening of Thames Hall, the new University of Western Ontario Athletic Building.

Viscount Alexander lauded the achievements of Western athletes in past years, and predicted that they "would remain invincible", especially with the enlargement of athletic facilities.

Sports, he declared, played a very large part in the lives and traditions of Anglo-Saxon nations, and had given these nations a sense of sportsmanship and fair play which other nations lacked. He considered that participation in athletics was an essential for a rounded education at university or anywhere.

The Governor-General also praised the athletic achievements of the 141 high schools in the London area. He expressed hope that the new Western Athletic Building would lead to an increase in the help which the university had offered to the schools in past years.

Feather Tally

Well over $2200 will have been collected from students and staff at The University of Toronto for the Community Chest this year when final returns are in, Red Feather officials announced last night.

Incomplete returns put the total to date at $2224.34. The listings: Feather Fair—$418.50; Tagging—$1103.49; Noon Hour Show—$98.35; Staff Donations (incomplete)—$604.00.

Hotel London Calls Cops Quell Fans Bottle Brigade

By BARBARA HARRIS

Western really made a week-end out of their win Saturday — and were ably helped by a boisterous (to say the least) contingent from Varsity. The festivities started on Friday night when the Hotel London was forced to call out three carloads of police to keep the joint from being wrecked. The students, both Varsityites and visiting UWO'ers, took, it seems, to throwing empty whiskey bottles at the people in the street and at Hotel London mirrors. The Hotel didn't mind the bottles, but the noise kept other guests from sleeping.

The highway into London was packed on Saturday morning with Varsity cars; in fact about nine out of ten wore Blue and White streamers.

The Western cheering section had a "new" stunt. They pulled out purple and white cards that made a "W." We wonder where we saw that before. Perhaps here in the blue and white section last year. At half time a plane flew mighty low over the field. It appeared that the pilot was trying to get the southern goal posts.

The desk clerk at the hotel was overheard saying to an elderly guest that there was some football game going on so the hotel was packed. "The only thing," he said, " is that they don't stop at 4:30, they go on all night." What could he have meant?

The dance in the Armouries seemed to be a great success; its proximity to the hotel may have had something to do with it. Anyhow, it was decorated with the purple and white, with a "Welcome Varsity" banner above the band. It was a big place and packed with football fans all evening.

The hotel authorities took precautions Saturday not to have a repeat performance of the Friday

ISS Chairman Outlines Plans For This Year

"The first thing to say about ISS is what it is not," said Warden Nicholas Iganatieff in his address to the ISS liaison committee Friday. "The ISS does not attempt to preach international relations, while the relief aspects of this organization are becoming less and less important," he said.

Bill McDougall, chairman of ISS, announced that the meeting had been called in order to tell the faculty representatives about the plans for the impending campaign. He said that this year the campaign had been divided into two sections — activities which interest the student such as dances, and individual campaigns which will be sponsored by the colleges and faculties.

Jess Pearson, IV Trinity, spoke on some of the experiences of the students who were at the seminar in Europe last summer. He said

Passport To Annesley Hall

As Told By WALTER STEWART
To ROCKY MARTINO

Wednesday morning dawned quiet and serene. I was getting dressed and at the same time dreamily wondering what would happen at Stunt-night. Before I was in my room again, I was to have one of the most breath-taking adventures possible. I was to be an Annesley Hall co-ed.

It all started as a stunt-night affair. I was over at 151 Bloor St., a girls' residence, being dressed by the girls for the Miss Burwash contest. The girls measured me up, measured me down, wrangled over me and finally agreed that a long ankle length skirt, a jacket, and a kerchief would be just the thing.

Girls Enthused

They gave me a pair of shoes but let me keep my own T shirt and socks. Pat Ewing, II Vic, applied my lipstick then stepped back to admire the result. Then it happened Somebody got the idea that I looked good enough to pass in a women's residence . . . as a girl! The thought swept the girls like a chain reaction.

Glad For Skirt

The trip from Bloor St. filled me with foreboding. I walked as slowly as I could, but the girls kept urging me on. For the only time all evening I was glad to have that ankle-length skirt. It slowed me down. Boy! What I can say about the New Look now!

Well, we finally got there. Norm Bell, who had kept me company all this time, left me at the door with a look of mingled pity and laughter in his eyes. At that point I would gladly have traded places with a toadstool — anything.

Arrive Late

Skirt or no skirt, the girls had hurried me quite a bit. We were ten minutes early for supper. With gleeful grins and giggles they led me into the common room. I sat down as quietly as possible, trying to drown the thunder that was my heart beating in my throat.

Every once in a while some girl would walk over and stare at me. My escort casually introduced me as Rosemary, a new student in Soc. & Phil. I just beamed at everybody and kept my mouth shut. Everything seemed to be going so well that I began to enjoy it. When I saw another girl coming over, I was even considering saying "Hello" in the most girlish voice I could manage. She came closer and closer and began to stare. Then she said it. "That's a boy!"

Feels Trapped

I stopped breathing. And sank back into the sofa cushion, trying to hide behind my lipstick. Thoughts of tarring and feathering ran through my mind. Thoughts of esape — but how? What could I do with that skirt on? I was trapped!

Salvation came at last. That girl's friend came over and said: "Don't

When Does Fun Stop?

"U. of T. Fans In Hotel Fight" is what one of Toronto's evening newspapers ran in big black letters across the top of page one in its home edition Saturday afternoon.

The only group involved in the incident that deserves praise for its action in the circumstances is the management of the Hotel London. The Telegram, and the Western bloc Varsity supporters, we think, are all deserving of censure.

The management of the hotel tried to stop disturbance, called the police when it became necessary, and declined to lay charges. It will, then, itself meet the damage expenses, considerably greater than the "between $60 and $100" estimated in The Telegram.

The policy of the Telegram in exploiting such an incident in the manner it did is not easily understandable. In the first place, there are many happenings of more impotance in the world today than a brawl among university students over a football game. In the second place, owner and publisher George McCullough warned his staff against the growing trend toward blatant sensationalism in a special meeting hardly over a month ago. We agree with his taking this step, but feel that he has somewhere shirked his responsibility in not carrying out his apparently good intentions.

The Western supporters who went to the Hotel London on Friday night to welcome Varsity fans registered there can be accused of at least acting rashly and without sufficient forethought. We do not state that the reported 150 Western rooters were organized for the express purpose of causing Varsity fans an uncomfortable night, but we do believe that a group of Western students that large is not usually to be found in the corridors and rooms of the Hotel London. Any lecturing to them from us, we hope, would be superfluous. Surely there are people in London with the good judgment to perform the task.

What has been said is not intended to place the blame for the brawl in any place other than squarely on the shoulders of the Varsity students concerned. When young men of university level find that they cannot control themselves while visiting, they should stay at home.

Members of the community at large have a right to expect that their welfare and property is safe from unprovoked attack by supposedly one of the most enlightened groups in the community. Varsity supporters who participated in the drunken brawl—and that is what it was—that occurred in the Hotel London last Friday night have violated all of the rules that make living together in society tenable. Such actions on the part of animals is expected. Similar actions by children who have not yet learned to live in society is tolerated, but discouraged be foolish. How could a boy get in here?" I started breathing again.

When students of university age, who in some cases actively demand that the community recognize them as mature, practice such self-indulgence, then there are no words of censure scathing enough to express society's disapproval.

At this point the dinner bell sounded. We trooped into the hall and I sat at the table with the girls from 151. They even went so far as to introduce me to their house Don. She smiled; I smiled back. She turned away and I gave a sigh of relief and started looking around.

Worried By Giggles

Quite a few girls were staring at me but I don't think they suspected. I was the only one there wearing a kerchief but evidently such an appearance wasn't that unusual. There was a lot of talk and giggling going on around me and the more they giggled the more I worried. They could give it away with their giggling. The food saved me.

When the food hit the table there was a deep silence. I started eating and then reached up for a slice of bread. There wasn't any left. I looked around. Most of the girls had finished and here I was just starting.

Finally Escapes

I kept on with my meal, deciding that I would at least get a meal out of it. The talk started up again and I never heard anything as silly in my life. Everybody was giggling or laughing. I looked over to Miss MacPherson's table and saw her smiling at me. The moment to leave had arrived.

The coffee was just coming in when my escort sneaked me out. As we left I heard terrific shrieks of laughter and shouts of "Where is he?" go up in the dining hall. I tried to hurry as much as I could but that skirt kept getting in my way. I almost broke my neck going up the stairs at 151. I didn't mind; I was safe again.

Feels Thankful

I still can't figure out how they didn't suspect. They must have noticed my hands and my awkwardness with that skirt. But they didn't and for that I'm thankful.

I went back to Burwash Hall for stunt-night and then to the party at 151. Everybody toasted me to the skies as the only man ever to attend Middle House. They promised to reward me greatly. They did. Nine of us were taken in our pyjamas at 1:30 a.m. to Port Perry. We got back at 4:30 in the morning.

Varsity Scores

Shortly after in the same period Varsity broke into the scoring column when Jimmie Bell recovered a blocked kick and ran from the Western 40 all the way to the five before he was brought down by Parry. On the next play Nick Purdue carried over and Bell got the convert. The next Varsity point came when Cummings hoofed a single from the Western 50. A towering 65 yard quick kick from the Toronto 50 completed the scoring.

Varsity had a chance right up to the end when they tried passes from the Western 40 that failed to click.

Bad Snap

Dents' first touchdown was scored by Woolidge on a quick-opener after a bad snap on Meds' third down put Dents on the five. Mewha converted. In the second quarter Dents drove for three straight first downs from centre field, Simpson finally carrying over. A field goal by Mewha in the same quarter ended the scoring.

The Dentists began the second half with another drive, but the Doctors' defence suddenly stiffened when their opponents started throwing passes, and held them for the rest of the contest.

The not-so-smart took the hard way, namely the fire escape. Again the police were on their toes — all the way up to the top floors at the "fire escapes."

TRINITY SOCCERISTS WIN

Last year's cup-winning Trinity "A's" gained a good lead in the first group on Friday by turning back Senior U.C. by a score of 2-0 in a rugged, but sometimes spotty exhibition of soccer.

Trinity scored once in each half, Bob Glen beating the goalie on a screened shot in the first, while Barry Britton-Foster scored on a neat pass from Dennis Snowdon in the second.

Know Evangelism, Nature Of Man, Says Dr. Shields

The Rev. Dr. T. T. Shields, pastor of Jarvis Street Baptist Church spoke on Evangelism Friday afternoon to over one hundred students crowded into a Trinity College lecture hall. He has been in the headlines for his stand in the Toronto Baptist Seminary schism, his moral denunciation of a Hamilton minister, and his resignation from the Baptist Union.

Purpose of Evangelism

Dr. Shields held first of all that we must know the purpose of evangelism, and the material on which the evangelism has to work, explaining that the Scripture says man in his natural state is dead in trespasses and sins. "Conversion", asserted the speaker, "is a spiritual resurrection, it is a new creation, it is something that only God can do."

He pointed out: "It is absolutely necessary for anyone who would do the work of an evangelist to be himself the medium of Divine Power, the instrument in the hands of the Holy Spirit." Pastor Shields said God has reserved a point in all realms at the genesis of life for His own direct appearing, and therefore without Him we can do nothing. He declared: "there was no substitute for the power of the Holy Ghost, that great choirs, great organizations bringing together great masses of people might produce only a kind of mass hysteria, a stirring of the emotions, without touching heart or conscience, and leaving those affected still dead in trespasses and sins."

Word of God

Dr. Shields maintained that as the Holy Ghost was our energy, so the Word of God is the instrument, that there is no substitute for the faithful exposition of the inspired Word of God.

"God has not promised to make the word of man fruitful, but He solemnly declared that His Word shall not return unto Him void. The one theme of the evangelist must be that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, and Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures."

Dr. Shields admonished the students to be able ministers of the New Testament, and in order to be such to keep these three principles in mind: that man by nature is without spiritual life and must be quickened by Divine Power; hence we must depend upon the recreative energy of the Holy Ghost; and we must use the only instrument which God has ordained, namely, His own inspired Word.

Holy Spirit Necessary

He warned his audience against unconscious substitution of personal persuasive force for the quiet work of the Spirit of God. The pastor declared: "Any man really called of God to be a preacher would be a man with some personal force that would make him a success in any field. If he were a salesman he would be able to sell anything, and get his customers to sign on the dotted line. If he were an industrialist he would command an army of workers. If he were a financier he could inspire confidence in himself so that others would trust him with their money — and there was danger therefore that men endowed with such power might use mere human persuasion instead of depending on the Holy Spirit in the hearts of men."

Include Students In Art Gallery Plans For Year

The Student Branch of the Canadian Federation of Artists will be linked this year for the first time with the Art Gallery of Toronto. The initial meeting in the 1948-50 series will be held at the Gallery, Wednesday at 8 p.m.

According to its director, Martin Baldwin, the Gallery plans to provide the students with a meeting-place, artistic support, and guidance. The Gallery, he said, was becoming increasingly aware of the needs of the as yet unrecognized artists of the younger generation. U of T Students, who make up part of the membership of 150, come mainly, so far, from the Art and Archeology course, but membership in the Student Branch is open to any student interested in painting, sculpture or architecture. Other institutions represented are the Ontario College of Arts, Central Technical School and Northern Vocational.

Programs co-sponsored by the students and the Art Gallery will centre around discussions of the problems facing artists of the new generation. The migration of young Canadians to the US, and the scope and future of Canadian art will take prominent places. Exhibitions, lectures, studio tours, and debates are also planned. Members will participate in Wednesday Open

Alchemist Theophrastus To Be Met By Kallinike

A special guest of the university for Homecoming Weekend will arrive at the campus Tuesday at one o'clock it was announced last night. Theophrastus Bombastus Von Hohenheim, graduate of Oxford University, Class of 1249, Honors Alchemy will be greeted by Kallinike. Theophrastus, world renowned alchemist and sorcerer has been spending the last 300 years in a coffin, sunk in a meditative trance. The location of the coffin had been unknown until yesterday afternoon when the staff of S.P.S. surveyors, who have been searching the campus area with their transits for several weeks, announced successful completion of the search.

Kallinike has issued a call for experienced grave robbers who can supply their own tools to assist in unearthing the coffin. They will be paid union scale wages for the night's work, he stated, asking all interested to meet in front of U.C. tonight at midnight.

Theophrastus Bombastus Von Hohenheim is considered one of the leading alchemists of all time. The Blue and White Society has declared that the purpose of resurrecting and reviving him at this time is to request his aid against Western in the Homecoming Weekend game.

A graduate of Glasgow University, Mr. McNeill participated in a Hart House debate in 1932 as an undergraduate on the British debating team touring Canada that year. In that debate he supported the establishment of the British Empire as an economic unit and was defeated.

Engineers' Dean To Be Honored At Annual Dinner

The annual Skule Dinner this year will be in the nature of a testimonial dinner for C. R. Young, retiring Dean of Skule, the Engineering Society announced yesterday.

In past years, the Engineering Society has staged the traditional event with a guest speaker of national or international repute from outside the university. Since Dean Young has contributed so much to SPS in his term of office as Dean of the Faculty, and in addition is famous in his own right as an engineer, the Engineering Society decided to combine two attractions in one. Hence the testimonial dinner.

Dean Young graduated in 1903 from the old three year engineering course, and took his bachelors degree in 1905. He served on the staff of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering for 42 years, and climaxed his career by his appointment as Dean of the Faculty eight years ago.

Dean Young was responsible for the inclusion of liberal Arts subjects in the engineering curriculum and was one of the moving spirits in the establishment of the extension campus at Ajax. He is the author of a number of text books on engineering subjects, dealing mainly with structural problems.

Tickets for the dinner will go on sale at the Engineering Society Store in the Skule building this week. The dinner will take place on Thursday, 27th October.

We Attend The Feather Fair

—By SHIRLEY SHERBOURNE

Cries of "Red feather? — Bought your red feather yet?" greeted the lunch - conscious throng that swarmed up the Hart House steps. A hungry student would pause in full flight now and then, slip a few coins in the slot, utter a hasty "Thanks", and then resume his place in the mealtime scramble.

I was stationed in front of Hart House last Friday noon — one of the many taggers who dotted the campus to aid the annual Community Chest drive.

My money box and stomach grew respectively heavier and lighter but another tagger arrived to relieve me just in time. After disposing of sandwiches and apple in jig time, I joined another Varsity reporter to tour the Red Feather booths.

Vic Booth

At Vic's "Ring-em, Kiss-em" booth, Jim (my reporter friend) encircled the legs of two lovelies with amazing accuracy. His disappointment, however, knew no bounds after he pushed his way 'round to a rear cubicle and collected his "kiss".

"Fraud — counterfeit" he kept muttering as we edged our way toward the next booth. "Can't even get to kiss a cheerleader in aid of this Red Feather fund!" (I wonder whose brother they're using this year.)

Meds Clinic

In the Med's Clinic, as I was carefully scrutinized, prodded, hammered, and questioned, Jim got a big kick out of my embarrassment. To the delight of the curious onlookers, Drs. Cy Atica and Gus Tation confronted me with personal questions of all sorts:

"Are you interested in sex?"

"No — well perhaps you might say I have a normal interest in the subject," I replied vaguely and squirmed uncomfortably.

"How many boys have you kissed before you met this handsome young man?"

My mumbled reply was inaudible as I scrambled to my feet and forcefully wriggled from the clutches of the leering "Doctors".

"Let's try some or those games of skill on the other side of the fair" I gulped frantically and elbowed a hasty retreat from the amused crowd surrounding the "Clinic".

A Real Success

In the time remaining before my two o'clock lecture we threw balls, munched fudge, pitched pennies, drank cider, shot darts, fished, and even won some money on "Sigh Tation, the Vic entry in the races.

A rapid inventory revealed the following items: 1 package of Pall Mall cigarettes, 1 Neilson's chocolate bar, 1 pair shoe laces, 4 sticky hands (from two taffy apples), and a combined expenditure of $2.50.

Here's hoping they continue to have a Red Feather fair every year — I think they're fun!

Crime And Punishment

Fedor Dostoievsky's master novel, or rather significant parts thereof, took to the boards at Hart House Theatre Saturday night under the direction of Robert Gill. In the original novel every word and incident contributes to the impact of the whole. In the Rodney Ackland version, or perversion by deletion of scenes most crucial to the action, the novel's thundering impact is reduced to a detective melodrama, a far cry from Dostoievsky's original work.

Ackland's adaptation brutally twists the plot. In the novel Raskolnikov goes to his friend, Razoumikhin, in the play Razoumikhin comes to Raskolnikov; while the magistrate, Porfiri Petrovitch deals with Raskolnikov at the station and elsewhere, in the play their meetings are confined to the student's room.

Most flagrant violation to the original is undoubtedly the suppression of the novel's pivotal episode (Raskolnikov's hatchet murder of the money-lender) and the subsequent reaction of the murderer to his crime and to the people with whom he lived and moved. Neither are brought out in the Ackland play. Result: a great sociological and psychological study of a murderer's mind is compressed to a pulp thriller.

The souls of Dostoievsky's characters are like a monstrous cabbage plant with fold upon fold of outer appearance concealing a hidden central core. To turn the pages of Crime and Punishment is to peal away layer after layer of the murderer's mind to reveal his true punishment and nemesis in the unrelenting anguish and delirium he cannot escape nor rationalize. He trembles in insecurity and constant fear. Dostoievsky leads one into the innermost secrets of Raskolnikov, his struggle with the moral law. Ackland's dramatization sets forth only his legal struggle, and precious little of that. Both struggles are partners to the novel's tremendous depth and power. Thus robbed of play inevitably becomes superficial-pia yinevitably becomes superficially shallow and correspondingly weak.

In spite of all, however, of the play's lost perspective, its perversions, its fusions and its infidelity, the Hart House cast survived to come through with a sensational performance of what was left. Gill's setting, vividly contrived in four cutaways, enhanced by an ingenious decor (in harmony with the morose action) served to set off the action, increase its force and magnitude.

Excellent was technical pathetic fallacy in the director's skillful fusion of lights with the drama's mood and its crises, as in Raskolnikov's turning pale with the chief of police, in his unheard revelation to Razoumikhin with lights out but for the murderer's face.

Stage movement, grouping, and timing all gave evidence of a strict, powerful directing hand that subjected individual performance to the action as a dramatic whole. Yet rising well above the limited play in their portrayals were Kate Reid as Katerina Ivanovna, the consumptive wife of the drunkard, Marmelador, played by Christopher Taylor. If any one factor is responsible for the stark, shocking realism it is the consuming acting of these two. Over against these were Clarine Jackman's grandiose Amalia Ludvigovna, Helen Armesto's Sonia, Alvin Shaw's coldly calculating Porfiri, and James Hamelin's Andrei Semenovitch, the socialist. Raskolnikov, the one character whose performance demanded sincerity and strength, had neither in the play. Evan Scott's interpretation depended too often upon gesture and expression, and rarely upon that inner flame of creation that stems from the true actor's soul.

TSO Pops

Friday night was Pop Night at Massey Hall so we bundled ourself together, gathered up our aesthetic component and set out for the Field-day, the epiphany of lower middlebrow KULTCHUR.

Now it has been hinted by methods too multiform manifold and menacing to mention that we are not sufficiently down-to-earth, let us therefore dispel such a wicked rumor at once.

Lurching ecstatically into our seat we were heard by the assembled multitude to mutter: "I WILL like Pop Concerts, I WILL like Pop Concerts." The Nietzschean Will To Live . . . ooh, sorry everybody; I only meant that Pop Concerts are awfully nice and cosy, that as it is nice to be nice we should syl-log-ist-ic-al-ly like Pop Concerts — see?

Well folks it was such fun, we began with a lovely piece by Victor — yes-you've-guessed-it — Herbert called "The March of the Toys," which was followed by the ever-popular Russian and Ludmilla Overture by Glinka, played I fear a trifle sluggishly. Hard upon the Glinka was Eric Coates' London Suite which is truly an evocative affair, the three movements: Covent Garden (Presto), Westminster (Andante Cantabile) and the Knight's Bridge March (Allegro Vivace) were smoothly performed and speak well for that marvellous breadth of repertoire for which the TSO is so justly famed.

As we sat there we closed our eyes and indulged in nostalgic reverie (I mean we streamed with consciousness in a delicious dozey sort of way), "Cherry Ripe, Cherry Ripe," the bells of Westminster (the Abbey not the Cathedral of course) and lots of other beautiful tunes.

It was at this juncture that Signor (Mister) Giuseppi di Stefano, the soloist, a delightful Sicilian tenor who sang songs out of a mixed bag, no it wasn't really a bag but a little black note book which he clutched to his breast throughout the thrilling performance.

Oh yes, a good time was had by all and now we are all keyed up for Nan Merriman next week.

Mihail Dumbeliuk.

Radio: Stage 50

Lister Sinclair's "St. Augustine of Canterbury" had an abortive start as an historical burlesque. The tastelessness of this technique as applied to the subject matter soon became obvious and was gratefully abandoned. Mr. Sinclair supplied his own verdict on this when he called himself a "trivial blasphemer." Still, it was all the more pleasant to settle back to an example of what he seems to enjoy best and certainly does best of any writer I know, namely, the serious, though not solemn, conversation; this time examining the problem faced by an ideology achieving political ascendancy.

The historical example chosen is the triumph of Christianity in Britain at the end of the sixth century. St. Augustine certainly had immense success. Sinclair suggests that it was done mainly to the emotional appeal of what Shaw called salvationism, and also that the king's acceptance set the mode. But St. Augustine found to his sorrow that a church is not a religion; that the attractive aphorisms of Jesus can be twisted to suit any occasion; and that the problem of casuistry is the church's great concern.

The play left St. Augustine with the job of converting Christians still ahead of him — where it still is! It seems that the successful organizational adaptation of a creed may mean its moral degeneration, a fact paralleled in biology by parasitic degeneration. This was noted by the late pope when he said that he felt that the best Catholic church was a minority one. The curious dialectic of success. Our contemporary example has been examined by Koestler. So the attention displayed by Mr. Sinclair is not historical pedantry (nor does he, any more than Wilder in "The Ides of March," stick to the facts), but rather a discussion of the current popular dilemma. Hence he uses no archaic language, but rather some brilliant, affective and graceful dialogue. His humanistic clarity and sanity were best expressed in the role of the Woman of the Marshes, played as usual with Ruth Springford's effortless perfection. Still, all the cast was excellent. While not an eclectic, Mr. Sinclair owes a good deal to Shaw. But his ability to achieve character consistency without transparency marks his work as significantly his own as well as makes it an effective entertainment. This play would make rewarding and stimulating reading as well as exciting, satisfying drama.

Murray Pashler.

H. H. Concert

If we can judge by the enthusiastic and well-trained foursome who sang last night at Hart House, we feel prepared for the coming CBC production of Carmen by the Opera School under the direction of Nicholas Goldschmidt.

Margaret Kerr as Carmen has greater affinities with the Snow Queen than with the torrid Spanish dancer. Although she possesses the conventional Swarthout throatiness associated with Carmen, her interpretation does not feed a flame within. The Strauss lieder and the two Bizet triumphs, the Sequidilla and the Habanera, were stripped of their soul and draped in nothing but technique. If Gilles Lamontagne had had a red cloak, the illusion of seeing and hearing Escamillo the Toreador would have been complete. We do not mean that Mr. Lamontagne would have terrified any normal toro: we mean that his dramatic conception of the swaggering toreador was completely convincing. The fine vocal shading, control, and keen musical insight of Mr. Lamontagne will help to make the opera a great success.

The character of the dragoon, Jose, becomes more poetic than military in the interpretation of Pierre Boutet. Perhaps, it is the light and liquid vocal quality of Mr. Boutet coupled with a grace and ease of delivery which create this impression.

Dramatic in appearance and lyric in voice, Marguerite Gignac combined these two qualities to perfection in her singing. We can imagine her as Madame Butterfly fluttering ecstatically among the apple blossoms yet terribly capable of destroying herself. We are anxious to hear her again.

After being introduced to the rather esoteric Strauss, then plodding through an arty labyrinth of operatic passages and finally being flung into the life and loves of Carmen, we emerged into the realms of pure air and sunshine, the French-Canadian folk song.

Our Readers Write

THERE IS TRUTH

Editor, The Varsity:

After recovering from my amazement at Mr. Vorres' letter (October 20 issue), I feel impelled to write a reply.

Contradicts Self

Let us pass over the peevish exclamations with which Mr. Vorres opens, and the anthropological analysis with which he continues, and come to his earth-shaking conclusion: ". . . the essential fact, namely, that there is no truth in anything." Obviously, then, there can be no truth in Mr. Vorres' letter. He contradicts himself by writing it, and our judgment of it must be purely a question of environmental conditions and the author's mentality.

Sees Inconsistency

Not content with stating this blatant relativism, the implications of which place his own arguments on the same level as the incoherent babblings of an idiot, Mr. Vorres plunges deeper. Another paragraph . . . another inconsistency. "One should judge life with complete criticism and bare existentialist facts," he says. But judgments are not made in a vacuum; they must have general principles as their basis. To judge life as it is (especially to do so with complete criticism), one requires some broad conception of what life should be: an ideal, that is to say, such as those which Mr. Vorres ruthlessly dismisses as "worthless as painted totem poles." The same equipment is necessary for dealing with facts. There is nothing more bare than a bare fact; until it is interpreted and clothed with significance by its observer it remains completely neutral, particular and meaningless.

His Fallacy

Of course, despite all of his protests to the contrary, Mr. Vorres has an ideal, his own private totem. He believes in truth, even though his pursuit of it is doomed to failure by the nature of his method, a shallow, anthropological naturalism. All such attempts to weave a metaphysics out of the fabric of the social sciences are plagued by the same fallacy and must end up in the same mess as did Mr. Vorres. The fallacy is the belief that an event (or, if you prefer, a fact) has significance only on the mechanical level of cause and effect, stimulus and response, action and reaction. I do not deny the value of investigations in this area; I merely state that they cannot, by themselves, do justice to the manifoldness and bewildering complexity of our universe.

Cause and Content

An event may be described in terms of its genesis, its immediate cause, but at the same time we must not neglect its content. My weird dream of last night, for example, may be attributed to the fact that I ate fried potatoes before retiring, but this is not the whole story of the dream. A consideration of its content by a competent psycho-analyst may reveal significant and hitherto unrealized truths about my personality. To take a more exalted example, the utterances of the great minds of the past, the Platos, Augustines, Miltons and Whiteheads (all of whom are contemptuously brushed aside by Mr. Vorres) may be explained scientifically as proceeding from certain psychological mechanisms such as compensation. But the factors which impelled these men to speak and the validity of their insights are two different questions. Similarly the writing of this letter of mine can be explained genetically by my reading of Mr. Vorres' letter and disagreeing with it. The truth of what I am saying is a different problem altogether, a problem beyond the scope of the social sciences.

So, Mr. Vorres, before you settle down into a life of nihilistic relativism, think again. You may discover that something is true after all; until you do, of course, you can't consistently write any more letters. Look for reality; it may be grinning ironically at you behind the mist of delusion.

Inquiring Cub Gleans Campus Grapes

Once upon a time a young man came into The Varsity office and said he wanted to be a reporter. He also said he liked doing public opinion polls. So we sent him out to ask questions and some time later we received the following story:

By JACK CAMPBELL

It was one those quiet summer afternoons when the sun comes out and shines lazily between the cold, grey buildings of the campus. Down in the cellar of University College where the dreary yellow light melted into the hazy cigarette smoke strange things were evolving. The future of modern journalism was at stake. Revolution was in the wind. What would be the outcome of this historic day? The world must know, so I will tell them what forces were at work.

Our Brave Hero

Above the low mumble of the editorial room was heard the voice of a blue-eyed freshman. He raised his hand and in a rustic tone he said: "We'll reverse the procedure of modern reporting. Yes, we'll let our readers write about themselves instead of writing about them." His voice fairly reverberated from the sullen walls of the semi-dungeon. The bearded veterans of the reporting world sat up and focused their cold steely eyes on this atrocity from the outside world, and with sad smiles they spoke to one another saying: "Little does this small time yokel from one of those buried villages in Ontario's farm land know of the difficulties to be encountered in polling students at The University of Toronto. Students opinions are not just there for the picking."

With bulging eyes, the small town freshman shook hands with the staff; with dirty grins they waved goodby and he was off.

Walking along the whitened paths on the campus he fairly reeked with the spirit of alma mater, smiling at everyone he met, saying hello to people he didn't know.

First Contact

"Ah," he said soothingly, "this looks like a man who has ideas. Pardon me sir, I'm taking a poll on what you don't like about the University of Toronto. Could you give a few comments for the press?"

"Who, me?" was his rapid reply. "I love it here. What are you guys trying to pull, trying to make a mountain out of a molehill, eh? What do you guys take me for, sour grapes? On your way buddy." My word! Our all-Varsity reporter certainly got out of there in a hurry. "Just one of those things," he told himself, as beads of sweat trickled off his nose onto the path. "Anyway, he looked a little queer."

Little Bruiser

Along came a two-hundred pound bruiser, something out of "Your Physique" magazine. Reluctantly, up walks our brave little martyr and in a shrivelled up squeak said: "What's wrong with the University of Toronto? For The Varsity that is."

"Who me? came the thundering reply. "No sir, not me. Youse guys aren't making me sign no name to some beef about professors of the University. I want to pass. I've been here too long now. My kids are half way through high school, my wife nags me. Oh no." In the meantime he had crawled half way up the wall to get away, and you would have thought he was going to break out in tears at any moment.

Later, sipping his King Cole beer he said desparingly: "They will laugh at me. I will taste the dregs of shame. I will do the ultimate, a sacrifice for the cause. Jewels of wisdom from the learned professors. Yes, those ethereal Jems from the greater minds will suffice to save the day. "Mustering his last spark of courage, he shoved aside his beer, and rushed out to finish the job.

Tears of Dispair

One hour laater we find our hero in one of those tombs in the east wing of University College, squeezing in the wailing tones of a ing in the wailing tones of a drowning man: "Oh please sir, please, just a small thought, a measly idea for the needy, a sentence for the press. P-l-e-a-s-e!"

Little Bruiser

In a gruff voice the man began to speak: "The moral values of our contemporary society have degenerated to an all-time low. The University of Toronto is a typical example." And on he goes, into the dying hours of the day. A new-light was seen in the youths eyes as he scribbled notes like a famished animal. "Ha ha ha ha", he thought to himself. "Success at last."

But later we see our simple chap, still in the East Wing, and beginning to cry again. But why? He has what he went after. In a sobbing tired voice the youth pleads for the professor to unlock the door and let him take the story back. The unwavering man never seems to hear him, and on he goes: "Man must seek a new religion to satisfy the findings of science."

Success

That evening the haggard looking boy wonder entered the depths of the press office and said with a victorious smile: "I've done it sir. Mission accomplished." No one could understand what he had written. There were words, but no meaning. Out of sheer sympathetic understanding they agreed to publish the comments of the professors and a few student views he had squeezed in between all the embarassing events of the day.

"Poor fellow," they said, as he collapsed on the floor. "Little do the public realize the number of brave men that go down for every feature article that's published."

THE QUESTION AND THE ANSWERS

Question: What don't you like about the University?

The Answers:

—We need another door open at Hart House. The idea of being trampled to death by an inhuman horde of 1:00 p.m. rush students is not my exact conception of heaven. (N.D. — I Mech).

—We have gone far to out date the philosophy that education is the perogative of the aristocracy, but there is still a great deal of room for improvement, especially in the present medical set-up.(A Professor).

—We need more lockers at Hart House. Being an easy going Westerner I find the women suitable to my taste, the food straight from heaven, but trying to squeeze all my equipment and clothes with another guy into my locker just makes me cry. D.T. Pass Arts, UC).

—The ratio of students to professors is far out of proportion as stated so nicely in Cardinal Newman's book. This results in a notable deficiency of personal contact defeating the basic ideals of a University. (H.S. 4 Psy.)

—With our library of approximately 430,000 volumes we rate 36th on the continent, comparing unfavourably with most universities of our size. True, in Canada we have less accumulated capital, necessitating a smaller budget, but in spite of our hard working librarian, our university has grown up around a library that has remained a child. (A Professor)..

—We need a pub in Hart House. After struggling through an average of two lectures a day it would be rather convenient not to have to walk for your brew. (B.L. Pass Arts).

—Just why should pass arts students suffer from an inferiority complex because a few idealistic professors and honour students look down on them as lazy curs who want an education without working for it. After, all, it stimulates you in many fields and gives you a broad picture of life aiding you to decide upon your future career, which upper school can never do as long as it maintains its present system dictated by University standards. (I.V.P. Pre-Meds.)

—We need a larger gym pool with a seating capacity comparable to other universities. The part of my unworthy life I'd enjoy to forget most is my shocking introduction to Hart House Pool. I remember vaguely going up, in the air from the three metre board, a splash, a bang, the whole pool resounding as my head smashed against the bottom. Just how shallow can a pool get. (G.N. I Pass Arts, U.C.).

—University is a compromise between the idea of a liberal education and the idea of earning your daily bread by a practical training. The former being more important, seems to be losing out with the introduction of the new arts program (A Professor).

—We need a common room and a residence for the medical faculty. While the richer arts types with their abundance of spare time lounge lazily in their soft and soothing chairs, we of the impoverished meds are forced to light our buts behind the wind-swept trees of the campus. Hart House is not enough. (C.K. 2 Pre-Meds).

—Although it is amazing how far our university has avoided trade school specialization so widespread in the United States, I do feel there is room for certain courses in literary expression such as journalism, co-ordinated with The Varsity. Can the individual from a broad mackground adapt to specialization or should he be taught nothing but the practical work in his own tiny field. The evening lectures under the extension plan offer a partial soultion to the problem. (A Professor).

—We need more phones in Hart House and in the Colleges. Although the situation has not yet reached the state of an emergency in Hart House, up here at Vic the women keep those wires busy all day. In an appeal for men's rights, who after all say less and mean more, I make a plea for more phones. (T.H. I Pass Arts).

—Although the staff of The Varsity deserve a great deal of credit for giving an interesting account of the student's life, there are still many failures resulting from the time and energy that the paper saps from some students study routine. A Professor).

—We need a sumpler system of registration. Half dead with fatigue I arrive in this fair city and tramped the hot pavements looking for a decent room. After two days I get my 2 by 4 cell for seven bucks a week, with running cold water and a bed like an oak beam. So I'm on my way to register at Vic. After three hours lining up to pay my incidental fees at Simcoe Hall, I repeat the same process at Vic and warse at the Book Store. That's a one day shot. All transactions should be carried on in one central location or in their respective colleges. W.D. I Pass Arts).

—To secure a broad education, the new pass arts course takes the wrong attitude. If anything should be changed let us raise the percentage standards and not change the subjects. Queen's and Western have somewhat better conditions, where additional courses are given in place of the isolation that has been made of the pass arts course at The University of Toronto. (A Professor).

—The library system of mixing foreign language texts with those of the English language is quite inadequate. Each respective language should have its own respective department, impossible with our present capacity. (A Professor).

—We need a paid or volunteer group to organize a warmer welcome for all first year students. By a

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

Well, the Western week-end is over, and the Blues came out on the wrong end of an 11-8 count. The victory goes into the books as a defeat, but Varsity looked like anything but a losing team on the field. As long as we have been watching football with any regularity, we have not seen a line that played as well as the Blue wall. And that includes Big Four competition.

The line played what might be termed in understatement a helluva good game. They drove, they fought, they smashed, and they gave no quarter. The intensity of their play was reflected in the number of injuries to linemen on both teams—they were being carried off wholesale.

The line blocked a kick which led to the only Toronto touch, and they blocked a convert that might have easily decided the game. They blocked, they tackled, and they played hard ball. As far as we are concerned, they can't get too much praise.

The line's spirit was exemplified in Johnny Evans. He seldom gets his name in the papers, and more often than not, he doesn't get the credit due him for his work. But yesterday he showed what he was made of. His jaw was broken, the doctors think early in the game, but he kept on right in there fighting until carried off the field unconscious. Guys like that don't lose ball-games no matter what the score.

The reason for the defeat is graphically shown in the passing statistics. Varsity passed 23 times and completed six. Western passed 20 times and completed ten. This wouldn't be so bad, but the Blues passes averaged eight yards gained while the Western boys counted 27 with each, completed throw. A twenty-seven yard average is exceptional; but to add to this they came at opportune times, pulling them out of holes when Varsity threatened to score.

If the Blues could have plugged the long pass defence, they could have brought home the bacon. In spite of seventeen incomplete passes and several fumbles, the Blue line managed to keep piling up yardage with good blocking to offset Western's passes.

Neither of Western's touches were what one might call worked for. The first one came off an intercepted pass and the second off a fumble.

Bruce Cummings had his knee injured in the game, but continued to boot long hard ones in spite of the swelling.

It was a wonderful game; clean, hard, and close. The Western supporters didn't stop their cold sweat till the flag was lowered and the play over. For next week's Western game we predict . . . . . that the stadium will be sold out and that Warren Stevens won't be able to get another spectator in at game time with a crowbar.

Toronto didn't lose everything this last week; both soccer teams won. The intermediates revenged our rugby loss by trouncing McMaster. The senior soccer Blues took a close one from the Toronto Ukrainians, Toronto senior league champions, Saturday night to prove their ability. Uke coach Sam Maskewich said it was one of the finest exhibitions of football he had seen. "When the teams play like that," he said, "it doesn't matter who wins."

Afterthought: We swore that never again would we beef about Hart House meals. At McMaster they have 15c meals at 65c; or anyway, that was the case when the soccer intermediates ate there.

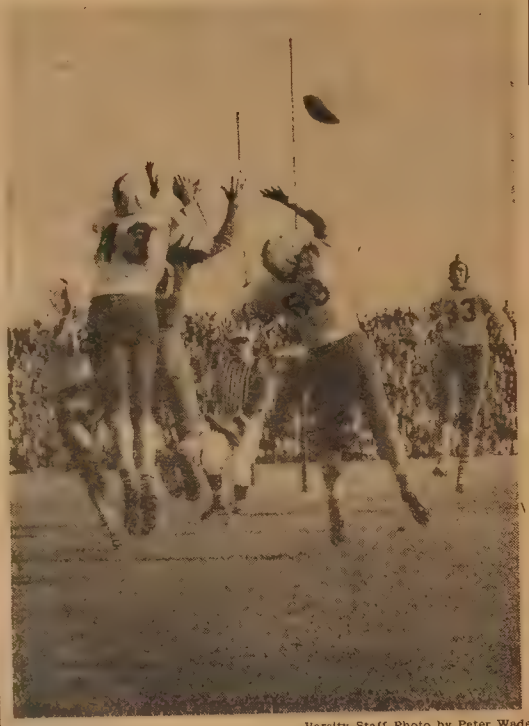
Dentists Drill Pre-Medicals To Win 14-0

By MAL CRAWFORD

Driving on a strong and deceptive brew of Double T imported all the way from Regina, Dents scored 14 points in shutting out Premeds on the back campus Friday afternoon. The Dentists' coach, Ken Thompson, who formerly played for Regina Roughriders, has two quarterbacks up under the centre, a type of play which he says has been in use for quite a while out west.

Dents Speedy



The Dents' attack showed plenty of speed and power, though little consistency. Occasionally blocking assignments would get mixed up, it seemed, especially on pass plays, but this is understandable considering this was their first real scrimmage. Wes Moore and Ray Stefaniw looked the best in the backfield, Moore having several runs of fifteen yards or more to his credit.

What really made their attack look good, though, were the holes their line was opening. Heit, Webster, and Picard were outstanding on the line, which outweighed Meds' by a big margin. The Meds' line had spasms of fight and at times looked very sharp, piling up several plays for losses. Danny Jones played a good game at end, and Armstrong and Don McKenzie did a good job in the line. Their backs couldn't get loose for any big gains, while those playing back to catch kicks appeared to have pre-game jitters all through the game.

Neither team showed much in kicking, and the passing wasn't much better. Dents completed 3 out of nine, Meds 2 out of 9, the

Varsity Offensive Weak Colts Gallop Into Lead; Rain Halts Pass Attack

By BRUCE MacDONALD

In a game marked by fumbles galore and a downpour of rain, the Varsity Intermediate Blues were defeated by the Western Colts in Molson Stadium at London last Friday.

Both squads seemed to have difficulty in hanging on to the ball, and when the rains came at the end of the first quarter, matters became even worse.

Couldn't Capitalize

The Blues however, could not seem to capitalize on their breaks, and although they were on the Western 6 yard line with three downs to go on three separate occasions they did not manage to hit paydirt.

The Colts, on the other hand, made the best of nearly every opportunity. Early in the first quarter, after intercepting a Blue pass, they marched 30 yards to the Varsity line and Beatty carried the ball over for a major and converted it himself to make the score 6-0. Just before half time, a colt punt was fumbled by the Varsity receiver and run to the Varsity 4 yard line. Gerome took it over on the next play for the Colts. The convert was no good.

Green Scores All

The final Western score came in the final stanza when Black carried the ball across and Porter kicked the convert. Little Johnny Green scored all of Varsity's points. He booted a perfect drop-kick from the 30 yard line at a tricky angle in the First quarter, and kicked the ball far anough into the Colt zone at the half time kickoff to gain a single point.

Standouts for Varsity were Keicor, who played a beautiful defensive game at his end position, Bill Davis, who backed up the line strongly in his secondary spot, played a strong offensive game, and recovered three Colt fumbles, and Tony Ceccutti, who did most of the ball-carrying for the Blues.

Lineups—

Varsity: Russell, Whitehe... Himes, Sutherland, Dowsett, Sk... Keiczor, Davis, Howson, H... Birkenshaw, Ceccutti, Mur... Brown, Hyde, McLennan, How... Bullychuk, McCagherty, Green, B... Hanson, Leeming, Bazos.

Colts: McNichol, Shelley, Co... Gallow, Farlay, Burgess, Allen, V... cent, Carroll, Porter, Beatty, M... Phee, Black, Floyd, Melnick, Ste... bel, Davidson, Gossage, Gall... Sokol, Escaff, MacDonald, Robe... son, Chisolm.

BOXLA, SOCCER RESULTS

LACROSSE

U.C. III and Vic II lacrosse tea... played to a two-all deadlock in a keenly-contested game on Friday.

Al Robertson played well for U... and Colquhoun and Washer did the scoring. For Vic, whose passing was a bit weak, Maynes netted both items.

SOCCER

In a very poor game played on the North Campus Friday, Wycliffe and Vic played to a 2-2 draw. Lack cohesion was apparent on either side, and play tended to be scrambly throughout. Cheeseman and Brightling scored for Wycliffe, who seemed to hold a slight edge in the play.

Jr. Skule Beat St. Mike's When Pass Goes Astray

By JOE BENUTTI

The once mighty St. Michael's football team, winners of the Mulock Cup last season, couldn't approach the passing form of that team as they bowed to the fighting outfit from Jr. Skule by a 6-1 score. In the first quarter Tony Adams, only holdover from the all-star backfield, kicked a single in the first period. For the rest of the game the St. Mike's offense was limited to bullet-like passes that the receivers never could receive.

The lone touchdown of the piece came when SPS intercepted a pass and ran over. Dave Brown was the point-getter and Gritton intercepted the pass. Prendergast converted. Skule showed a very powerful line and a fast-running attack.

In the last quarter St. Mike's blocked a Skule kick behind the latter's line. The ball rolled out of touch and the Double Blue had the option of taking two points for a safety or taking possession on the centre stripe. The Mikemen decided to take the possession in the hope of getting a major. However the determined SPS team held the last moment attack of the St. Mike's.

Line-ups

St. Mike's — Halfs: Robertson, Ross, McRae, Bergin, Tierney; outsides: Belak, Mauchly; middles: O'Keefe, Washington; insides: O'Heany, Prendergast; centre: Carr; alternates: Sullivan, Brennan, Kito, McKenna, E. O'Keefe, Dowling, Grossi, Lapettito, Adams, McIntyre, O'Hara.

Jr. SPS — Halfs: Prendergast, Bush, Carr, Pullan, Brown; outsides: Perry Beattie; middles: Riddell, Slattery; insides: Hotchkiss, Stoyan; centre: Muirhead; alternates: Campbell, Wansbrough, Grinton, Royce, Laubitz, Fluerty, Greenly, Snider, Bolton, Bernhardt, Armstrong, Mowat.

Sportswoman

Softball, basketball and swimming are keeping many women sports busy these days, while the Archery Tournament held the spotlight last Friday.

MacDonald Hall, in Guelph, entered an archery team for the first time and they walked away with the highest score that has ever been chalked up in an Intercollegiate bull's-eye meet.

McMaster came second, with Queen's, McGill, Toronto and Western following in this order. The individual winner, the two who tied for second place, as well as the third position, were women from Mac Hall and their deadly aim added up to 1355 points.

Meds Win

After the first inning of the softball game on Friday between Meds and St. Hilda's II, the Saints were winning 5-2, but when the game ended the hard-playing Meds had come out from behind to take the game 9-6.

It was definitely a close game and both teams were playing well. Howover Meds pitcher, Irene Ham, did a good job in the field as well as at the bat, when she hit two homers.

Medicals

Both basketball players and those going to swimming trials must have their medicals as soon as possible. Managers of the basketball teams are checking medical categories before any more games are played, while swimmers are requested to pay a visit to the Health Service if they have not already done so.

Managers

Cay Catto would like all basketball team managers to turn in the scores and game attendances to the Women's SAC Office immediately after the games have been played. This also should apply to the softball managers.

Reports have been slow reaching their destination and as they are the only official record of the games, there is need to get them into the files so team places can be calculated.

Varsity Downed By Wanderers In Rugger Tilt

Wanderers turned out a mighty strong team on Saturday to trounce the Varsity team 14-0. Toronto's scrum suffered from a very heavy opposition and the "threes" were outplayed consistently. So when Wanderers come again next Saturday to fight us for the McTier Cup ((Eastern Canada championship to you) we shall have a real fight on our hands. By the way, the McTier Cup, in case you didn't read last Thursday's Globe and Mail, is being revived after ten years idleness in that outpost of civilisation, Glace Bay.

The winning Toronto team will play the best Montreal team, and the winners of that will play the best Maritime team. So next Saturday's game (which should be over by 1:30) is really important, and Varsity needs a few supporters on the touch-line.

About this game on Saturday last. Wanderers' tactics in the back-line were brilliant, as their centres cut through the less experienced Toronto three-quarters for two 'tries'. But the noticeable improvement of their scrum and a certain advantage in weight gave Wanderers the possession of the ball without which their fast three-quarters would have got nowhere.

Toronto was by no means outclassed—in the second half there were some very serious threats to the enemy and through some very bad luck Jack Gibbs just missed a penalty kick on Wanderers' twenty yard line. Remember the McTier Cup when you are passing by the back campus next Saturday noon and get into cheering mood for the Western game.

Senior Soccer Blues Win Beat Ukes In Close One

By BILL LEACH

In a grand exhibition of soccer, Varsity defeated Ukrainians of the Toronto Senior League 3-2 at Broadview "Y" field on Saturday. A crowd of approximately 600 people were on hand to see the Varsity team playing for the first time in a public pitch, and were well pleased with what they saw.

In contrast with the Ukrainian team, who were inclined to be somewhat over - confident, and tended to over-use the ball, the intangible quality known as "fight" was shown throughout by a lively and alert Blues.

Defeat McMaster In Soccer Game First League Win

The Varsity Intermediate Soccer Blues chalked up their first win for the season when they inflicted a 2-1 defeat on their McMaster counterparts at Hamilton on Friday.

On the general run of play the Blues had the edge over their opponents, dominating play during the first half; slightly quicker shooting by the forwards might have resulted in a larger margin of defeat for McMaster. In the second half, however, McMaster's forwards found holes in the Blues' defence and resorted to a short-passing game with marked effectiveness but without adding to their score.

For Varsity, Montemurro scored both goals within three minutes of each other after five minutes of play. The first was scored off a pass by Rigabert while the second was the climax of a movement started on the left side by Delfosse. McMaster's goal was scored by Pete Johns who converted a penalty kick about midway of the first session. Outstanding players for the Blues were Moffat, Montemurro and Comrie while McMaster's keeper, left-back and rightwinger shone to advantage.

Thief Foiled, Escapes Ire Of Wrestler

At four o'clock Saturday morning Ken Laundry, III C & F, and Ken Keating, III Law, Osgoode, foiled an attempt by an unknown intruder to rob them in their bedroom at the Delta Chi fraternity on Bedford Road. The fact that the men were light sleepers foiled the burglary attempt.

Aroused by a slight noise, Laundy awoke to find an intruder in the room. At first Laundy thought it was his roommate coming in but this notion disappeared when Keating stirred in bed. Laundy looked again to see a man rifling a wallet. As Laundy rose out of bed Keating snapped on the light.

Laundy, a Varsity wrestler, confronted the burglar. Dropping the wallet, the intruder spun around and fled. Laundy checked the contents of the room and wallets while Keating, after donning a bathrobe and slippers, chased the burglar.

Out on the street Keating intercepted a man running toward Bloor Street but was disappointed at the man's apearance — wrong man. Upon returning to the house, he telephoned the police who sent up two officers. No signs of the intruder were found. A check of the room's contents revealed nothing missing.

Keating claims he would be able to identify the man on sight, and described his as being about forty years of age, poorly dressed in a shabby brown suit and tie-less shirt, and about 5'3" in height.

Alberta Students' Dream

A sight to gladden the hearts of University of Alberta students is the proposed students' Union as an artist conceives it. The planned addition to the Edmonton campus is another link in the chain of modern and adequate Canadian student unions which include the spacious Brock Memorial Hall at U.B.C., and Western's Thames Hall opened by Viscount Alexander last Saturday.

American Philosopher To Conduct Colloquium Grads, Staff Invited

Professor Sidney Hook, distinguished philosopher from New York University will conduct a colloquium in the School of Graduate Studies on Thursday morning at 11, a.m. announced Professor Goude of the Philosophy Dept. last night.

The colloquium will be held in Croft Chapter House, University College. All graduate students and members of the staff are invited to attend.

Card Tricks Game Stunt Saturday

Cheering a la carte is on tab for the forthcoming Varsity-Western game this weekend. The Blue and White Society, with student co-operation intend to repeat last year's highly successful card display. As will be remembered, the initials "U of T" were spelled out with blue and white cards by Varsity students sitting in the south section of the stadium.

Success of the stunt may be judged from the fact that Western students copied the practise at last weekend's game. Using purple and white cards, the Mustang rooters spelled out a purple "W" on a white background.

Students sitting in the south section of Varsity Stadium Saturday will find cards—blue on one side, white on the other—with instructions for using them.

Fuller details of the procedure to be followed are to be revealed later this week.

Panacea Blotters Find Way Around St. Mike's Chapel

When the Meds students were distributing the blotters advertising their All-Varsity dance, they ran into a little competition over at St. Mike's.

As they tried to put a few blotters in the pews inside the chapel, a priest confiscated the blotters and the Medsmen were glad to escape without them.

However, a little later one of the boys went back to find that there was a blotter tucked in each of the pew-racks.

One of the engineers trying to obtain more than a blotter from the Meds co-ed giving them out over at SPS was convinced that the Medsmen weren't fooling when they printed "Poison" above their prescription for a Cure-All, Panacea.

Parking Of Bikes In Tower Alcove Charged Harmful

Parking of bicycles under the alcove of the Hart House Soldiers Tower has come in for attack recently. Complaints that these bicycles not only hide the names of the fallen war dead but also scratch the carved names have caused University Police to leave tickets on the parked vehicles.

SAC Secretary-Treasurer E. A. Macdonald said this week the action was probably due to student thoughtlessness, "If it were not for the sacrifices of the fallen soldiers, where would the university be today? How must a parent of one of these boys feel if he should see a bicycle covering up the name of his or her son who was killed in action?

"We appeal to the good sense of the students," concluded Mr. Macdonald, "to refrain from leaving their bicycles parked under the tower."

Dr. C. D. Rouillard Made Full Professor In University College

Promotion of Dr. C. D. Rouillard to the rank of full professor of French was announced today by Dr. Sidney Smith, President of the University of Toronto. Dr. Rouillard joined the department of French of University College in 1937.

Previously he had taught at Harvard University, Amherst College, and put in a year's study abroad on a Belgian-American fellowship. Dr. Roullard has been honoured twice by France, receiving the bronze medal of the Alliance Francaise in 1947 and being named Officier d'Academie in 1947. He is the author of "The Turk in French History, Thought and Literature, 1529-1660."

Cave-in Ruins Partly Ready U of Man. Gym

Winnipeg, Oct. 24—(CUP)—Collapse of the walls and beams of a partly completed gymnasium building at the University of Manitoba this week, has postponed the opening indefinitely. Over $100,000 have been spent on the building already, and the Board of Governors of Manitoba had planned to spend at least an additional $20,800.

The final contract for the building and completion of half the structure was let 18 days ago.

The work to be done included finishing the exterior of the complete hangar, installing a hard wood basketball-dance floor in one half, bleachers for 2,000 students, offices for the University of Manitoba Students' Union and the Athletic Department lockers, showers and tote-box rooms.

The main damage was caused by a cave-in of the northwest corner of the building. The walls and wooden beams of this section gave way very suddenly.

The Board of Governors, with the builders and the architect plan an immediate enquiry into the cause of the catastrophe.

The building was to have been opened in January, but under the present circumstances, it is not known whether the building will be in use this year or not.

Political Crisis Coming In Next Thirty Years Says Vic CCF Guest

"Within twenty years, Canada will have to choose between communism, fascism, capitalism and socialism," said Harvey Hay addressing the Victoria College CCF Club last week. Mr. Hay, ex-president of the University of Toronto CCF Club, spoke on the topic "Basic Principles of Democratic Socialism."

Outlining the development of socialist thought, Mr. Hay pointed out that capitalism has almost disappeared, and that the best and only defence against nucleus fascist and communist organizations in Canada is democratic socialism. New Zealand's control of the housing situation as contrasted with that of Canada was given as an example.

The Vic organizer, Graeme Ferguson, II Poli. Sci., stated that this talk, pointing out the ethical and political differences between socialism and communism, was one of a series of bi-monthly meetings at Vic, given for those interested in CCF party politics.

Dr. Hook was one of the chief organizers of the Committee for Cultural Freedom, the Conference on Methods in Science and Philosophy, and the Conference on the Scientific Spirit and Democratic Faith. He was a University Fellow in Philosophy, was twice awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship for research in Philosophy; and upon the publication of his "Hero in History" received the Nicholas Murray Butler Silver Medal for distinction in the field of philosophy and education in 1945.

Skulemen Take Up Hammer To Auction Meds Building

Are you in the market for the Medical Building? A Vic co-ed? A bit of the Western goalposts? Half a multiplying machine? These and many other articles of doubtful value will go under the hammer at the annual Skule Auction today.

Bargain seekers are expected to congregate at the Skule building noon hour today to enjoy this 80-year-old Engineers' custom.

Since this year has been officially dedicated to Lady Godiva, patron saint of Skule, there will be an unveiling of the Lady Godiva, memorial on the steps of Skule. (It will be remembered that the Faculty made a pious pilgrimage to Western in honor of their patron last weekend.)

The Lady Godiva Memorial Band will be on hand to blow triumphant fanfares; the Cannon, under the direction of the Ancient and Honorable Order of Skule Cannoneers will fire salutes from time to time and the Four Flushers will be on hand to sing "Cigarettes and Whiskey."

All profits from the Auction will be used to subsidize the Skule Dinner on Thursday, Oct. 27 at the Royal York.

Installment Plan Fees

It is becoming more apparent that there must be an adjustment in the fees that students at this University pay for student activities. For the services received, the three dollars charged to each student for support of SAC activities is a ridiculously low figure. The same fee at other Canadian universities runs between twelve and twenty dollars.

There is bound to be some protest about any attempt to raise the cost of a university education when it is already at an all-time high. The arguments are best answered before they are voiced by a simple statement of facts.

Last year, for the first time, graduating students were charged for their copies of Torontonesis. Two dollars was not an unreasonable price to pay but it did seem steep to most students when previous years had had copies paid for from SAC fees. With the cost of printing and engraving going up it is likely that this year's price to graduates will be even higher.

Not so long ago a Students' handbook was given to each student who could produce an admit-to-lecture card. To cover increased costs, the SAC must now charge twenty five cents per copy.

The student body has indicated that it wants a co-ed Union building. The project is to be a student affair built out of student funds. How can a building fund be established out of a three dollar SAC fee?

It has been a long time since The Varsity was first accused of losing its identity as a student newspaper and becoming an advertising pamphlet. The revenue of this paper comes from advertising and from contributions from the SAC fee charged each student. When one is short, the deficit must be made up from the other. It is many years since advertisers were hard to find but the SAC fee remains at three dollars.

These examples are only a small part of the problem. The same situation holds for almost all activities supported by the Council.

Some will say that it matters very little how they are charged; that paying twenty five cents for a Handbook or two dollars for Torontonensis when they receive them is the same thing as increasing the SAC fee two dollars and a quarter to cover the cost. But that argument is only partially true.

We feel that every student would rather pay his fees in a lump sum at the beginning of each year than to dole out expenses in an "Installment-plan" manner. Secondly, a larger fee would allow certain Council activities, now run on a comparatively small scale, to expand.

It is not too early in the school year for the SAC to begin discussions on a fees increase. The facts are plain. But the matter it not simple. Any change in fees will have to be approved by the Board of Governors before it becomes effective. Some action is needed very soon so that body may pass on the measures before next year.

Mame To Blame

When there's a nip of frost in the air and the multi-coloured leaves are cushioning themselves to the ground on the wings of the soft fall breezes, the football season is here. (Might be a direct steal from Wordsworth, but don't go to sleep yet.) With the trees in their stately nakedness, I think of Mame.

You don't know Mame? Well, let me give you the goods on her. (This was on the record book but was suppressed some time ago by Controller Backfire.)

It was a long time ago, and though I wasn't around then, I remember it well. Mame was a co-ed at Varsity and was possessed of all the attributes necessary for a female to get a top-notch liberal university education. That is, she wasn't too smart, she was good-looking, she had money, and to top it all, her figure was as good to look at as those in her bankbook. Mame was the athletic type, too, which is another way of saying that she collected athletes.

Her first love was football. She came by this interest quite naturally, though, because her mother was an excellent quarterback and called all the plays at home — her father having married for money.

Mame's story really begins, however, on a cold, snowy, day in November: the last game of the season and the Big Boos were playing Weans, with the title riding on every play. Came the last play of the game and the title was still riding but the horse — Charley horse, that is — was in bad shape.

Mame had promised to kiss the captain of the winning team, with the result that all the members of both teams elected themselves co-captains. On the first play of the game, the quarterback took the ball, hugged the halfback lovingly, and was thrown for a big loss. This was nothing new to him, though, because Mame had been throwing him for a loss on every play all year. If the truth were known — and I only tell you because you are searchers after truth(?) — Mame had been on the receiving end of more passes than any player in the intercollegiate football loop.

Our little gal divided her time between sitting near the Boos' bench and sitting near the Weans'

Theophrastus Delayed By Cement Slab

Alchemist Theophrastus will be delayed. The alchemist — Theophrastus Bombastus Von Hohenheim — who has been spending the past 300 years in a coffin, sunk in a meditative trance, was to have arrived on the campus today as a special guest of the University for the Homecoming Weekend. Instead, it is fully expected that he will arrive Wednesday instead.

His grave, which was discovered by the S.P.S. surveyors, was to have been unearthed last night by experienced grave diggers. A slab of cement sidewalk over the location foiled their efforts.

Present plans are for the grave diggers to reassemble outside U.C. equipped this time with a pneumatic drill.

Plans are unchanged except for the one day's delay. Theophrastus will arrive at the campus Wednesday at one o'clock to be met by Kallinike.

$50,000 Founds Fellowship For Medical Research

An anonymous donor has founded a graduate medical fellowship with a gift of $50,000 to the University of Toronto, President Sidney Smith revealed yesterday. The fellowship will be awarded annually for the promotion of pathological research.

This award is made in honor of the late Dr. Helen L. Vanderveer.

Dr. Vanderveer, originally from Brooklyn, N.Y., studied medicine in Toronto and later worked three years in pathological work. She herself donated $100,000 in fellowships during her lifetime. An additional $50,000 was provided by her will last year. Dr. Vanderveer resided in King Township.

Beginning this year, University of Toronto medical students will be eligible for travelling scholarships awarded by the Kellogg Foundation, according to Dean of Medicine, J. A. MacFarlane. One or two annual scholarships will be awarded.

The annual presentation of the University of Toronto Chess Championship Cup was made to W. K. Hastings, I Vic.

Memorial Taking Shape

To be ready for the Remembrance Day Service on November 11, the War Memorial outside Hart House is slowly taking shape despite unexpected difficulties with the carving of the stones. The memorial will contain the names of all Varsity men who gave their lives in World War II and is a facsimile of the present memorial to those who died in the previous war. John Dickson and Arthur Richardson, lifting another section into place, are working steadily on the project.

J. B. Salsberg, M.P.P., Principal Debate Speaker

Mr. J. B. Salsberg, L.P.P. member of the Ontario legislature, will be principal speaker at the next University of Toronto Debating Union debate, to take place on Wednesday, November 2nd, at 8 p.m. in the Junior Common Room in University College. All speakers at this debate will be eligible for the American tour at the end of November.

Trials for major speakers of the government and opposition will be held on Wednesday, October 26th at 1 p.m. in Room 8 of University College. The topic for the trials is "Resolved that the United Nations is a failure". Professor L. E. Woodbury will judge the speeches, which are not to exceed five minutes. The resolution for the debate will be announced after the trials.

Announce Appointments For Medical Faculty

Appointment of two full professors in the Faculty of Medicine was announced today by President Smith. They are Dr. R. E. Haist and Dr. Frieda Fraser, both graduates of the University of Toronto engaged in teaching and research.

Dr. Haist, who comes from Hamilton, was appointed to the staff in 1941 and is now professor of Physiology. Dr. Fraser, who is a native of Toronto, joined the staff in 1937 and becomes professor of Hygiene and Preventive Medicine.

Dr. Smith also announced the appointment of three new associate professors: W. H. Brown, H. H. Hyland, and J. L. McDonald; and three assistant professors: C. L. Ash, E. S. Coranson, and F. G. Kergin.

Effective Christianity Made By Philosophy Says Professor Leslie

Being a philosopher would neither make you a Christian nor a non-Christian, but if you were a Christian — philosophy would help you to be a more intelligent, effective one, was the point stressed by Professor C. W. Leslie at the first of a series of panel discussions entitled "Christianity and My Course" held under the sponsorship of the Victoria College Student Christian Movement. In the first group held last Thursday Prof. Leslie spoke on "Philosophy and My Course".

Both Philosophy and Christianity deal with the same fundamental questions: what is real? what is right? and what is true? but with a different emphasis, said the speaker. Philosophy stresses knowledge and insight and religion, commitment and worship. A person cannot have too much respect for knowledge but can put too much faith in learning, said Professor Leslie.

Asked whether it was possible to be a Christian by conviction and yet skeptical philosophically, Professor Leslie replied he believed it was possible to have an open mind and a committed heart.

The panel discussions will be held every Thursday at Victoria College.

Students Solidly Uphold Engineer-Business Course In Hart House Debate

The Engineering Society Debate Club's opening meeting in Hart House yesterday threatened to be a complete fiasco when it appeared no one would speak for the affirmative on the motion "Resolved that the Engineering Business course should be discontinued as Skule".

One Vote For Motion

Debates Club Secretary-Treasurer H. G. Feldberg had to make an impromptu speech in support of the motion in order that the debate might begin. His efforts were not enough to convince more than one of the debaters to vote for the affirmative. No count of the vote was taken.

"I think everyone in Engineering Business was here," Feldberg said after the vote.

The first indication no one was prepared to speak for the affirmative came when Chairman E. D. Predryk announced that all those who intended to support the motion should sit to the right of the Chair. There was a roar of laughter when that side of the Debates Room was completely emptied.

Speaking for the affirmative, Feldberg said, "A person who enters Engineering Business becomes a jack of all trades and master of none. He graduates neither as an engineer nor a businessman."

Jack Pulford, IV Engineering Business, replied for the negative, saying Feldberg was obviously poorly informed.

Quotes Figures

Pulford said Feldberg's claim that Engineering Business graduates know too little engineering is proved false by the fact that 80 per cent of the course consists of training for electrical and mechanical engineering work, and only 20 per cent is spent in the study of business.

In describing the usefulness of the course, he discussed how a knowledge of engineering is essential for selling electrical and mechanical equipment. "In sales work, 'Know your product' is the motto," he said.

Engineering training was also valuable in personnel work. "You must understand the workers' jobs for personnel work," he stated.

Replying for the affirmative, Feldberg said only inborn skill and practical experience prepares a man for sales or personnel work.

Describes Survey

Ryrie Smith, IV Engineering Business, opposed the motion saying there had been a great need for the course. He said the course was begun as the result of a survey of the work being done by SPS grads.

"The survey showed that about 50 per cent of the graduates were doing work that required business training," he added.

Econ. Lecture Fascinates Pooch

A well-mannered dog attended an Economics Lecture at the Museum Theatre yesterday, and when questioned on what he (or she) thought of the lecture countered, "woof, woof".

Proof that the dog was appreciative of the chance to listen to wisdom was his demeanor — he walked uncertainly into the auditorium, got half way up on the stage before discovering that his proper seat was below, refused bluntly to listen to enticing whistles which attempted to lead him to the door, and sat through the whole hour without one bark.

The lecturer wouldn't admit that he wished all his students were as attentive.

New Venture For Law School Seen In Future

With the appointment of two practicing lawyers, to the School of Law, a new venture has been undertaken to bring law school study closer to law practice, Dr. Sidney Smith announced today.

Edson L. Haines, K.C., has been appointed associate in trial practice. In addition to lectures, students will spend three weeks observing actual court work under the supervision of Mr. Haines and other practicing lawyers.

V. Evans Gray, K.C. will be special lecturer in the law of insurance. Mr. Gray is a former superintendent of insurance for Ontario.

Record Player Repaired For Record Hour Today

Gluck's complete opera in three acts, "Orpheus and Euridice" will be the selection played from the Carnegie Record Collection at the regular record hour in the Mechanical Building today at 4:30 p.m.

The program was not previously advertised in The Varsity because of some difficulty with the record player. This player has now been repaired and will be in good condition for today's record hour.

Dice And Deer's Toe

"We Found A Buried Treasure"

By FRASER FAIRLIE

Want to know a good way to tell a piece of ancient pottery from a fossilized deer bone? Taste them. This is the method used by Professor T. F. McIlwraith of the Anthropological and Archaeological Department. He did just that with two of the discoveries found at the week-end "dig" at the pretty Ontario town of Woodbridge.

Setting out with the Professor and his associate, Professor J. N. Emerson, on Friday morning last, nearly 200 Varsity students arrived at the high plateau overlooking Woodbridge by 10 a.m. and proceeded to spend the week-end excavating, in its entirety, the first pre-historic Iroquois longhouse ever approached by archaeologists.

Despite the dull weather that prevailed over most of the week-end, the spirits of the students were as bright as the colour schemes they wore for clothing.

Toe Bone Dice

Hardly had the digging begun when Pre-Med student May Lipman rushed up to Professor McIlwraith with an object she had found. "Unmistakably, a deer's toe bone," exclaimed the smiling Professor, lighting his pipe for the twentieth time: "the Iroquois used them for dice in their poker games." May then hustled back to her 5-foot plot to look for more bones.

A cheer arose at this moment as an army jeep rolled up with the supplies. Archaeologists well know that people can't dig on empty stomachs and had provided for many hungry diggers.

Behind the wheel of the Jeep was none other than Fred Taylor, III Vic, Prof. Emerson's assistant reported to have succumbed to an attack of gastroenitis on the eve before the dig. "Oh, I spent the night at Sunnybrook Hospital all right," he grinned, "but I wouldn't let a little thing like that keep me from the Dig — they let me out this morning." With that he disappeared to see chief chef Alan McDermott, III Arts, about mid-morning coffee!

Back on the plot, things were beginning to take shape as the sod had been raised in five foot squares over a wide area. Professor Emerson had been out a few days before with some associates, and had discovered the general direction of the longhouse. Pegs had been driven to guide the diggers. But what were they looking for? A whole house? Bark walls? A roof? Posts? No. One would be lucky to find more than the marks of holes where poles had been 300 years before. Besides most of the longhouses were burnt down when their owners lit too large a fire. So then, in short, we were looking for circular deposits of ash in the rich sand.

"Hey, look at this big patch of carbon!" yelled Crossan Curry, a visiting student from Hamilton College, New York. "It's too big for a post hole, must be a fire-place." So it was, and so were many other such deposits found in other squares during the day. The value of fire, as the winter winds swirled about outside the bark longhouse, can easily be recognized.

Useful Journal

"Extry," yelled Joan Eddis, Women's Editor of The Varsity, who had appeared on the scene with some 50 copies of the latest issue. "When you're finished reading them you can wrap your samples up in 'em." The idea caught on like wildfire.

In the afternoon, after a most substantial lunch, supplied by a Toronto department store, and local merchants in Woodbridge, the 13 groups of diggers were directed by their group leaders to expand their plots into one large excavation, so an overall picture could be gathered of the shape of the house.

Those not working on the main excavation were having some luck with the test holes being dug. Evidences showed the presence of other longhouses and a stockade!

Eight Countries Represented At First I.S.O. Meet

The International Students Organization held their first social meeting of the year at Cartwright Hall last Thursday. Switzerland, Australia, China, Jamaica and Ethiopia were all well represented. There were fewer Indian students than are usually seen, but India and Pakistan were still in evidence. The turnout of Canadian freshmen was greater this year than it has been at previous first meetings.

The purely social evening consisted mostly of dancing. Guests had their choice of round dancing, square dancing, calypso and rhumba. Towards the end of the evening, coffee and cake were served and the club executive were introduced to the membership.

Prague Like U of T ISS Student Finds

"Rugby is not so rough as in the cinema", was Yarka Pletichova's impression of the first two games she had witnessed. As for the cheerleaders, the brown - eyed, twenty - four - year - old girl said: "You can't see in the whole of Europe anything like it."

Holds ISS Scholarship

At the University of Toronto on an International Students Service scholarship Yarka is surprised to find campus life here so similar to that of the Charles University in Prague. In third year Modern Languages she has fifteen hours a week of lectures — in Prague she would have seventeen.

"But there we are not obliged to go to the lectures. If a professor is good maybe three hundred students attend. Some have only ten or fifteen present."

Athletics in European universities are not so active as here but many students belong to Sokol, the national athletic and cultural organization which meet once or twice weekly.

"Terrible Discussions"

Yarka stated there are few clubs and no fraternities at Charles University. The students entertain in their homes and every faculty has an annual dance.

"Terrible discussions" that last till early morning are common in the politically conscious university at Prague. Unlike the U. of T. students all young Europeans have definite political views and many belong to parties, Yarka stated.

Yarka spoke in almost perfect English, which she had practised under the instruction of refugee professors in a Displaced Persons camp.

Three Mustangs Take House Ec In All Girl Class

London, Ont., Oct. 23—(CUP) — Three Western football stalwarts are training to become happy little homemakers! George Arnott, George Wearring and Bill Ford, all Senior Intercollegiate rugby players are taking a Home Economics Course along with Assistant Coach Mike Yuhasz.

The girls got the shock of their lives the first morning. "Couldn't believe my eyes," and "What will they ever wear to labs?" were on the lips of every girl as the class ended.

The boys' philosophy on the other hand is "if we lose the trophy race we can always be dieticians".

All the boys are in Physical Health and Education, and since they were unable to take any other course in its place, they were forced to register in an all female course.

Fizz Edders Rush

Want Pool And Lunch All In Same Building

New York is noted for its throngs of hurrying people, but if New Yorkers would really like to learn about people in a rush, they could take a lesson from the students in Physical and Health Education. How these students, known by the less awesome name of Fizz Edders, manage to crowd 48 hours' activity into a 24-hour day is one of the mysteries of life (at present under the careful consideration of those in Honor Philosophy. The Medsmen are also giving this problem serious thought as they wonder how can people work so hard, keep so busy and still be so healthy!)

What does a Fizz Edder do that keeps him (or her) constantly on the move? There's the lectures, for one thing, which consist of several Arts subjects such as English and Psychology, plus a heavy dose of scientific and medical subjects such as Physiology, Histology and Anatomy. This is merely one phase of the course; there is still the practical work to consider.

Though all students take lectures together, the sexes split up for practical work. The phrase "practical work" denotes anything from modern dancing to life saving and involves written examinations at the end of the year.

See the World

There is a variety of activities, but not a wide variety of facilities. For the boys, the facilities can all be found under one roof — Hart House. For the girls, the variety of places in which they take these courses is as great as the variety of activities themselves. After trekking from the Margaret Eaton School (on Yonge Street near Gerrard St.) to Varsity Stadium (mind you, they are allotted 10 whole minutes to do it in) an out-of-town girl soon learns her way around Toronto. Instead of joining the navy, the girls enroll in Phys. Ed. and see the world! Though they take the mad dash in their stride and consider it as part of the course, the girls still long for a Women's Building. They want a swimming pool, a gymnasium and a quiet place to eat their lunch, all in the same building.

Speaking of lunches: They have an apple-dispensing machine in the dressing rooms at the Margaret Eaton School — a handy gadget for a hungry co-ed. An apple a day . . ., you know.

Catch Up Saturdays

Saturday morning lectures are scheduled for first year students only, but that does not mean that those in other years can sleep in that morning. They are usually down at school too, catching up on their "practicals" and improving their skill in these fields. Many third year students assist in teaching physical education one evening a week in elementary schools and recreational centres. One wonders how they manage it but the Fizz Edders even have enough energy left after a nine to five day to make a strong showing in the extracurricular sports field.

The secret behind the Fizz Edders' hectic pace must be that, like the person who is too busy to be bored, they don't have time to be tired!

Distaff Side

By ANNE BURTON

Rugby, from the female point of view, can be a joy and a sorrow both. Rugby is a creeping disease, a leprous kind of thing that doesn't seem to be there until all of a sudden it practically kills you.

At first everything is fine. Your afternoon is planned. Joe is meeting you at one o'clock, and together you will brave the blue-and-white hordes massing around the back entrance to the Stadium. Hand in hand you will go. The day is beautiful, your hair is curled, and you (even if you do say so yourself) are looking particularly ravishing. From your seat on the fifty-five yard line —or would you prefer to sit a little nearer to the other goalposts?—you can see every play of the game.

Poor McGill! (Or poor Western!) Score: 75-0 for our Big Blues! And with the game triumphantly over, off you go to a night of wild rejoicing....

BUT. Sister, if you haven't already discovered the bitter, bitter truth, allow us to enlighten you. Your nicely planned afternoon receives its first blow when Joe (you only went with him because at least any man is better than no man) fails to turn up until one-thirty. And as you wend your idyllic way—at a dead run—to the Stadium, you find that you, out of thirteen thousand other students, are the only people who are half an hour late. It was a beautiful day—last week when the team was playing out of town. But today the weather is lowering, and there is a nasty hint of rain in the air.

From your seat at the far end of the field (the far end from where the team is playing, that is) you can occasionally glimpse a flash of blue. Oh well. The band is playing and the cheerleaders cheering and the opposing team seems just as inconspicuous.

By halftime you have developed a surprising case of laryngitis. So has Joe, by the look of things. Didn't you know that alcohol, in any of its many and varied shapes and bottles, is the best remedy for a sore throat? Well, ask Joe. The way he's killing that stuff, his throat must look like a Nicholson file...

Too bad the rain had to start. You may have looked like the bee's knees when you started, but this is rugby and things is tough. Straight hair, plastered close to the head, is the

ART — MUSIC — DRAMA

Ibsen's Ghosts

Henrik Ibsen's grimly realistic "Ghosts" which opened at the Museum Theatre on Friday evening is the third production by the New Play Society this season.

"Ghosts" originally caused much comment in the Victorian theatre because of the social topics with which it deal—topics of the hypocrisies of marriage, venereal disease and its hereditary consequences. These "ghosts" are not as liable to arouse comment in modern theatre. The play is still extremely interesting as the psychological study of a woman who has nurtured a false idea of the father in the son and who is now forced to confess these falsehoods.

Margot Christie gave a superb performance as the widowed mother, Mrs. Alving, who erects an orphanage to the memory of her husband so as to dispel any breath of scandal regarding his life. She showed a comprehensive understanding of her role throughout. Her emotions and tensions were depicted not only by her speeches but also by her body tensions, movements and posture. In her scenes with Oswald, her son, she at times fails to give all the maternal sympathy necessary, but her portrayal at all times showed the depths of her emotional turmoil.

Don Harron, as Oswald the son, did not consistently show the complete despair and despondency of a youth who knows his life is doomed to incurable disease.

Pastor Manders, played by Robert Christie, made the audience aware of his own convictions and beliefs but his naivete was questionable. In his speeches Mr. Christie was given to dropping his voice too low at the ends of sentences and the audience lost much of the text. In the scenes with Margot Christie a sympathetic bond was created betwen the two, and these scenes perhaps were the best for both actors.

Alex McKee as Mr. Engstrand successfully interpreted the conniving carpenters and gave subtle touches to his scheming and patronizing of the gullible Pastor Manders. Pegi Brown, as Regina, aptly revealed the superficiality of her outer character and that her own inner character was of the same type as Engstrand's, her foster father.

A technical fault was the lighting which was at times inadequate. There was no change in the light outside the windows although the time period was from early evening through the night to dawn of the next day.

Miss Glahn is to be complimented on her direction which showed a deep understanding of, and sympathy towards, the play.

Earle Moss

Earle Moss, one of the most competent and mature pianists I have heard for a long time, gave a recital in Eaton Auditorium Saturaday night. He plays with intensity and enthusiasm. Much better than this he knows how to use restraint in performance. This very restraint seems coupled to an unvigorous approach to his subject. He would begin with good attack and then lose this verve about thirty bars later in the piece.

A very well chosen program began with the Sonata in D Major by Galuppi, an Eighteenth Century Venetian. With excellent intonation Earle Moss gave delicacy to this small but very piquant work. His fingerwork, clean and sure, was perfect for the almost mathematical form of this sonata.

The impressionistic style of Debussy was well interpreted by Mr. Moss in his playing of the preludes Voiles, Le Vent Dans la Plaine, and Les Collines d'Anacapri. In Voiles soft, oblique tones conjured an expansive image, while in the last prelude the sweep of harmonics was finely done.

The Chopin B minor Sonata is an example of romanticism at an apex, because of its decadence, and because the intricacy seems to forecast post-romantic music. By playing this Earle Moss shows his interest for the intricate and episodic, rather than the integrated and thematically simple.

The first movement, Allegro maestoso, had a thin tone in the fast passages and the left hand seemed weak. The two middle movements, a short Scherzo, and Largo, were much better, the passage work well-defined and all the nuances brought out.

The Rondo is rhythmic, dynamic and moving. Earle Moss did not capture the rhythm, but his attack was forceful and the tempo even.

Though there were deficiencies, I was impressed by the capable performance of this work. It must be attributed to the very broad and thorough background of the pianist.

The premiere of Bela Bartok's Improvisations was a shock. Earle Moss played it brilliantly: his tone range and dynamics were very good. But the piece seems brittle, disconnected in melodic line, generally chaotic in form.

Catherine Cornell

Radiant and commanding, Princess of the American theatre, renowned Katharine Cornell, amidst magnificent decor, under skilled direction, and supported by a highly competent cast, flashed, in all the dazzling brilliance for which she is so justly famed, in the leading role of a new play, "That Lady", by Kate O'Brien at the Royal Alexandra Theatre last night.

But for all the dazzle and grandeur and the stellar cast, "That Lady" strove to reach Erewhon and took three hours to arrive. As a period play in 16th-century Spain "That Lady" involves a high court intrigue with Katharine Cornell as a widowed Spanish princess, friend of the King (Henry Daniell), and mistress to the Secretary of State. The old themes of honour, love, pride and glory revolve around the eternal triangle in which the above three move.

Conflict between personalities reached high peaks of intensity, but a stronger motive was needed to fire the play into a dramatic whole as a vivid illusion of real life. At no time was the imagination kindled or the emotions aroused by a struggle of living human beings moving in the reality of a Spanish court.

Katharine Cornell was a mirror of reflection — of action and reaction to the emotional concept of her part. From her feet to the crown of her head the actress responded to the intrinsic vitality of her role. Her performance was a rare lesson in the art of listening, in the impression that always precedes expression of the creative task.

As a slice of history, as a series of episodes from the past, "That Lady" succeeds. But as a gripping, stirring, well-knit play, in spite of all the greatness of a star, "That Lady" completely fails. It was a twice-told tale of a princess and a statesman surprised in a bedroom scene whose consequences set a light to the smouldering jealousy of a king who punishes the former with all the inquisitional cruelty of the times.

Although Katharine Cornell was at the helm, her ship did not reach port.

bench. You see, she couldn't decide which captain had the pads that made the best looking shoulders.

The teams were lined up for the final play, with the Big Boos trailing by 4 points and Weans in possession. A cheer went up as Mame headed onto the field, and both teams turned to see her. Just at that moment, Mame slipped on the snowy sod and did the first (and best) cartwheel ever performed at a football game. In the ensuing excitement, the centre for Weans snapped the ball, as well as three vertebrae in his neck and two eye muscles, when Mame's lace-trimmed red flannel snuggies hove into view.

The ball sailed over the Weans' backfield and was forgotten by all players but one linesman of the Big Boos who snaffled it smartly and went over for the winning score. (It was later claimed by Weans that he shouldn't have played because he obviously didn't have a drop of good red blood in his veins.) Investigation, however, proved that this paragon of virtue(?) was in IV Honour Philosophy and therefore not interested in women.

Next time you hear the crowd yell for "cartwheels!", think of Mame, won't you? Or, if you don't approve and would sooner watch the game, you can, like Weans, "blame it all on Mame!" Dogface.

style anyway this year. As for the dress....let us say, you'll know better next time. Perhaps this was Fate...

The Blues (ripartee, rapartee) are still about a mile down the field and you're shortsighted. At least you can see the scoreboard. But what's that? 75-0? Poor Varsity! ("We bin robbed!" says Joe mournful tones to his flack.) And without prompting you know that your marvellous afternoon is a miserable flop...

A million things can still happen to you as you leave. Joe is still sitting there in a stupor, and you are utterly disgusted with him anyway —and incidentally, utterly devoid of a man. You may get caught in the goal post rush. A black eye will make such an interesting topic of conversation before lectures on Monday morning. Or you may get swept away in a snake dance, and collapse somewhere of exhaustion. Or you may even slip on a banana peel. In brief, rest assured that something dire will fall to your lot. Without a doubt, this is Fate...

The moral to this story could be an exhortation to never, ever go to a rugby game. You may wonder why it's worth a fortnight in the hospital just to see your team get the pants beaten off them. But if you do begin to wonder, nip off all such insidious thoughts in the bud. Life from a hospital bed is, after all, not so bad. And the rugby, you'll find is worth it. Why look so startled? We've been there and we know.

There will be a meeting of the all-university Badminton Club in Room 11, U.C., at 1:00 p.m. Wednesday, October 26. All those wishing to play badminton this year are cordially invited to attend.

Buried Treasure

facts" were being found. Pre-Meds John Copeman had un-earthed and was carefully excavating what appeared to be a cooking pot, of poor quality, and it was deduced that the Indians had much to thank the white man for when he arrived with metal utensils. One supervisor commented the French turned out a combination pipe and hatchet, which found wide appeal and undoubtedly brought in many beaver pelts in return.

"We are mainly interested, in this dig, in finding the layout and structure of a longhouse," revealed Professor Emerson, Sunday, "but the objects found are always helpful."

Make Blueprint

Indeed, the structure plan was an eye opener, for the house turned out to be only about 27 feet wide instead of the imagined 30 and much more than the estimated 150 feet long. Supervisors spent most of Sunday making a graph of the house by surveying, measuring, and drawing. Everything larger than a pebble was noted down and sticks marked the innumerable post holes found.

At the end of the "Dig" Professor Emerson sincerely thanked all those who turned out for the important work, adding: "We have now found here evidences of more than a dozen longhouses, besides completely excavating the first one in three days. From this site archaeologists now can make a very accurate census of how many families lived in an Indian village, as well as a wealth of information on how they lived. Precious facts of the early inhabitants of our own province can now be deduced."

then brought in her second run to win the game.

Fiz Edders Win

With no score in the first inning and tied in the second, PHE III finally defeated the hard-playing Meds 8-5 in the third inning of the softball game yesterday at noon.

The skillful pitching of Irene Hain, Meds, was one reason why the Fiz Edders could not tally up more runs. Both teams were well co-ordinated and the game was definitely a touch and go affair.

This win tied the two teams for second place in their league, so another game has been arranged for tomorrow in Varsity Stadium.

Basketball

Vic Sr. and U.C. Sr. started off the basketball games for the evening with a fast-moving game, effectively using the double dribble. The score was 14 to 52 for U.C. Rosanna Kelly and Carol Dunn were high scorers for U.C.

O.T. defeated Vic Freshies "B" by a score of 34 to 14. Joan Gore played a good game for Vic but the rest of the team did not give her the support she required to beat the O.T. team.

The most exciting game of the evening was played by Meds and Nursing. The score was 25 to 22 for Meds and both sides seemed to be evenly matched. At half time the score was tied, 17 all, but Helen Blott of Nursing strained her ankle during the last quarter and that gave Meds a slight edge.

PHE I and Vic Freshies "A" played a very close game with a score of 18 to 16 for Vic. Alma Hatch, PHE, and Joyce Roblin, Vic, both added 10 points to their respective team scores.

Film Review

The Winslow Boy

Concerning the story of this film, little need be said. Cadet Ronald Winslow has been expelled unjustly from his naval academy over an alleged petty theft. The cadet's father sets out to reinstate his son and engages Sir Robert Morton, Edwardian England's top lawyer, to fight the case. By the time the Winslow snowball has rolled to the bottom of the hill, sea-lords, parliamentarians, and judges are set huffing and puffing; ale grows warm in the debate-ridden pubs, and the fourth estate almost runs short of black ink. In the end, British justice once again prevails and Magna Carta emerges just as magna as ever.

"Let Right Be Done"—the opening words of the British Petition of Rights—is the theme of the film, and I think the producers must have taken that unto themselves as a working motto as well. With a story that could easily have been soaked in chicken fat, or at the other extreme, dried out to a mere legal case history, Anatole de Grunwald has turned out a film which fairly exhudes good taste and proper balance. Especially are these characteristics apparent in the acting. Cedric Hardwicke's stern determination to clear his son is relieved by a brittle yet kindly sense of humor. Robert Donat's portrayal of Sir Rober is deliciously hammy yet always inspiring. The others in the cast, including Francis L. Sullivan (whose talent is as mountainous as his hulk), seem to give the utmost to their parts.

The directing and editing provide a flowing tempo. To avoid lags in a movie which is necessarily wordy, its makers have replaced fade-outs with abrupt scenic transitions that are almost kaleidoscopic in effect. Balance again is evident in changes of mood. When we aren't witnessing the exciting give-and-take of courtroom geniuses and Commons backbenchers, we are given the chance to rest in the calm of a well-bred English household.

And the scipt. Ah, the script! Unhackneyed, with a combination of elevated diction and careful elocution that's, by turns, quietly and ringingly symphonic. Yessir, these people actually say grown-up words, and say them as if they were used to it. In fact, it is this adult tone generally which I appreciated most about the film. It's time, I think, that the Hollywood warning "Adult Entertainment" was broadened to include pictures like "The Winslow Boy," even though such productions never show above the ankle.

Our Readers Write

Would Conserve Editors

Editor, The Varsity:

For years critics have been telling us that the world's supply of humorous writers was being rapidly depleted with very little precaution being taken for replacement. Now The Varsity staff is beginning to take action in preserving one of Canada's greatest assets, her fumbling editors.

It seems self-evident that natural means of procreation can no longer supply us with a sufficiency of this fast disappearing breed. If present reproduction trends and methods continue, it is doubtful if Canadian journalism will be able to hold her own as one of the leaders in the field of faux pas.

Obviously, Dr. Chisholm's stock solution is not the answer. Nor would we say is the suggestion of certain disgruntled Varsity readers feasible — sterilization of editors.

What then is the answer? Perhaps the introduction of the forestry conservation bill into the House of Commons will prove to be the first step in the direction of official government interest in the complicated problem. Then future editors will at least be assured of a position upon graduation in the vast lumber fields of the Yukon.

James G. Hamelin, Grad. Studies

Thanks Everyone

Editor, The Varsity:

I wish to publicly acknowledge the co-operation and assistance of everyone who participated in the Red Feather Campaign last week.

The total number of students who helped — the taggers, the hawkers, the performers, the musicians, the money counters, the carpenters, the organizers — must have been well over 200. And the enthusiasm and active support was indeed gratifying. If the city of Toronto is as responsive, the Community Chest will do very well this year.

Thanks also to The Varsity for their splendid coverage.

Jane Hall, Chairman,
Red Feather Campaign.

Answer to Vorres

Editor, the Varsity

What is going on in the Philosophy department this year? I refer to the extraordinary letter written by Mr. Vorres yesterday.

He says that democracy, although it might embrace inconsistencies, "may work admirably well" in some countries. Most Canadians would agree. But he then condemns us for using democratic ideals for judging activities within our democratic state. What else should we judge them by? He says that democracy is but a product of "environmental conditions and a nation's mentality" —so what? Does that in any way invalidate its moral worth?

Secondly, he puts forward the naive assertion that because murder and church attendance are viewed differently in countries with different moral codes, then, all moral codes must be valueless. This is like the proverbial donkey which couldn't make up its mind which carrot to eat first, and consequently died of starvation.

Then, to crown it all, having dismissed the possibility of standards of interpretating life, he proceeds to suggest the adoption of his own pet theory of judging events by "complete criticism and bare existentialist facts" whatever that is.

S.P.S. and Women

Editor, The Varsity

Let me clear up a small delusion that I observed on the Women's Page of Tuesday's Varsity, to whit: "men from the little red house are looking for girls to shake a leg in Skule Night, November 19."

There are a dozen of Canada's choicest queens registered at the time-honored terracotta coliseum, and we ancient, trusty, drouthy cronies of the forty flagons love them all.

As for Skule Night, our own lissome lasses can produce pulchritude aplenty, and we really have no openings for applications or supplications from the northly reaches of the campus.

Now, will you kindly publish a rescinder, so that we can persuade this mob of fleshy hoydens from U.C. and Vic. to cut the cheese cake and leave the Engineering Society Office?

First Vice-President,

Deprecates Review

Editor, The Varsity:

We were intensely pleased to read Mr. Dumbeliuk's profound criticism of the T.S.O. Pops Concert in today's Varsity. It is gratifying to learn that at least one student at our university has attained a cultural level far above the average of the peasants who attend and enjoy Pops Concerts. His heart-rending attempts to force himself to enjoy his evening at Massey Hall tore our uncultured souls in twain. Such torture for the sake of The Varsity is truly a monument of loyalty to art, music and drama. We venture to suggest that, in future, it be your policy to assign such mundane entertainments to a student from the lowly corridors of S.P.S. rather than from the hallowed halls of Trinity.

In utter confidence, we should like to reveal our true sentiments on the subject of Dumbeliuk's criticism. It Stinks!

Forestry Eke Out Close Win Over Dent

UC Boxla Team Default Too Many; 2 Wins For SMC

The U.C. fourths lacrosse team, apparently a fictitious group, failed to show for their scheduled lacrosse game with St. Mike's "C" team yesterday at noon in Hart House. A week or so ago this phantom team defaulted another game. The result of these failures to be present has been expulsion from the league and an automatic penalty of 100 points deducted from U.C.'s total points in the Reed Trophy race. It is to be deplored that a team should enter in a group and then fail to have suffient players present to make a team. Whether the U.C. athletic department is over-zealous in fielding teams in the Reed race, or whether the players involved are not interested the fact remains that the gym space reserved could be be put to better use. The time of the officials is unnecessarily taken up and the opposing team is also wasting valuable time, to say nothing of the trouble incurred in the interfaculty office.

St. Mikes Drub Meds

In the only other scheduled game, St. Mike's 'A' team ran hogwild over Meds Seconds, drubbing them by a score of 12-2. Allen and Gabe Varga were the scorers for Meds, who only had six men out. Pat Duffy of St. Mike's again led his team to victory netting four goals. Chadwick aided the Double Blues' cause with three counters, followed by Rossi with two and Murphy, Joe Prendergast and Bill Ross all with one each. This was the second win for the St. Michael's squad.

Volley Ball

St. Mike's were winners yesterday also in the volley-ball circuit beating SPS sixths (15-13) (15-10). The game featured long and thrilling volleys, with St. Mike's having the edge in good spikers.

In another volley-ball series UC thirds had it all their own way drubbing Junior Vic by scores of (15-6) and (15-1). UC's set-up system worked with telling effect.

Hockey Practice Already

With the football season scarcely a month old already the cry is going up for hockey players. Coach Bill Wade is back as the mentor of the Varsity Junior Bees and is commencing practices this week at the Arena at 5 p.m. Inquiries as to age limits and other details may be made at the Athletic Office. The team plays in the OHA Jr. 'B' group, and last year had a fairly successful season.

VARSITY SPORTS

'Mural Soccer Club To Play Intermediates

Soccer fans will be given a good show Wednesday afternoon when the Intermediate Blues play an exhibition game against last year's Arts Faculty Cup winning Trinity "A's" on the north field of the front campus.

Both the Little Blues and the Trinity squad will be out to win this game, as the two teams played to a tie last year. Trinity "A's" are at present in first place in the first group in intramural competition, and are conceded to be the strongest team on the campus.

Kick-off time is 4 p.m., and all those present will be treated to what will probably be an excellent game.

SOCCER RESULTS

Emmanuel College and Trinity "B's" played off a ragged and ineffectual soccer match on the front campus Monday. Emmanel won 3 to 1, but their standard of play was almost as poor as that of the losers, as play after play was broken up as the players overran the ball or miskicked. Both teams were disorganized and half-hearted in their efforts to get on the score sheet.

Sportswoman

A cold bitter wind thrust itself upon the campus yesterday and thoughts immediately turned to hockey, skiing and taking sports inside. Basketball is already well protected by the sturdy walls of the OCE gym and archery will soon be moving to the Drill Hall.

Softball games go into the semi-final stage this Thursday, while warm waters of both the UTS and Lillian Massey pools are waiting for eager swimmers to take the plunge into intercollegiate and intramural trials.

Joyce Rous, Trinity IV, reports that the ground hockey team will practice tomorrow morning, as well as Thursday morning, to get in trim for the game with McMaster on Friday.

The Badminton Club gets together to-day in Room 11, UC, at 1:00 and all those who are interested in playing badminton this year are urged to turn out to the meeting.

Swimming Schedule

Intercollegiate and intramural swimming try-outs and practices continue tomorrow and Thursday for all women who are interested and from all faculties on the campus.

It is hoped that there will be an enthusiastic response this year, since both the Intercollegiate Meet and Intramural Meets are being held before Christmas.

The UTS pool will be used at 5:30 for Intercollegiate speed, while at 6:30 there will be intramural style. Intramural sped and driving will take place at 7:30.

Intramural synchronized swimming will be held in the Lillian Massey pool at 6:30 and at 7:30 intercollegiate synchronized will start.

Exhibition Game

UC will play Institutional Management to-day in the north-west corner of Trinity field. In the last exhibition softball game with this team a St. Hilda's squad was very badly beaten. However since these girls were unable to get into a league they can only display their tactics when somebody volunteers to take them on.

Vic in Semi-Finals

Vic's 8-7 win over U.C. in the stadium yesterday placed them second in the Women's First League Softball. PHE hold first place.

Both teams played well but a hail storm that started in the second inning made fielding difficult because of cold hands.

The score was tied 7-7 when Joyce Bingleman came to bat for Vic in the third inning. Joyce got on base with a hard single to right field, stole second and third, and

Collict, Austin Standou In Second Forestry Wi Dents Lose 2-1 On Safet

In a game featured by goal line stands, confused offi ing, and some very good football, Forestry eked out second win of the young season when they handed the ing dentistry outfit a 2-1 set-back on the back campus night.

Unimaginative Quartering

The game was at times made sensational by the running of Phil Austin and Fred Collict of the winners and by equally colourful play of Wes (Rabbit) Moore of Dents. The quarterbacking was unimaginative by both teams, with such miscues as passes from behind one's own goal-line, and overuse of the quarter-back sneak Dents were particularly weak in the last mentioned department despite the fact that they had twice as many quarterbacks as Forestry on the field at the same time.

Dents Score First

Dents opened the scoring in the first quarter when Webster kicked a single. The play see-sawed back and forth with both teams having many opportunities to major. The teams were fairly well-matched which made the game a good one to watch.

In the second period, behind the stellar plunging of Fred Collict and Phil Austin, Forestry moved the ball right up to the Dent's 10. Faced by this ground attack threat the Dent's line held magnificently, and the third down thrust, a quarter sneak was easily repulsed. On regaining the ball, Dent's kick from behind their own line was partially blocked and went out of touch on their own 25. Collict then knifed through for six and Forestry tried a field goal. The kick was blocked by the hard-charging Dent line but the ball was recover a Forestry player. As the ba snared behind their own lin estry was penalized 25 yard given the down over. The kick taken on the Dent five and the 15.

Couldn't Major

Once again, Forestry, power Collict and Sheldon and A drove the ball to the Dent 1 in the second half. Again the line was called upon, and again came through. It was at this that Dent's tried their fatal from behind their own line. It intercepted by Austin, on the Forestry could not get the ball for a TD. On the next play the ball scrimmaged from the five, the Forestry line broke thr and downed the Dent quarte a safety.

Dents fought back hard and two chances for field goals, bo which Forestry were fortunate ough to run out, when the atte went wide of the uprights.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

Now that the smoke of battle has cleared we should re-examine the football picture in the intercollegiate league. Varsity has won one and lost two. Western has won all three of their games in close contests.

Unless McGill upsets the apple-cart, it looks like Western will finish on top in the standings. At worst they will end in a tie for first (unless a miracle happens—such as Parry breaking an arm).

If Toronto wins the next three, they will finish in second slot—forcing a play-off with the first team. That's about the best deal the Blues can get, and it's plenty good enough.

They are in the same position as they were last year, and they came through. As we said before, we think the Blues will keep the championship this year; and we have not seen anything to change our opinion.

There is a little man hanging around that every once in a while makes an appearance and whispers something in our inner ear about the team. Last year he showed up when the Blues were playing at Queen's and the Gaels were on the Toronto four yard line with the score at three or four to zero. He told us the Blues would hold, and go on to win the championship. They did.

This morning he showed up and told us the Blues would come through again this year. In other words, we have a feeling Varsity will end up on top after a pretty rough ride.

Johnny Evans will be out for the rest of the season with his broken jaw, but luckily it was cleanly broken so that the docs don't have to wire it up or set it. This will give Johnny a quicker recovery. And don't think the team won't miss him.

Ian Clark will be back next game at inside. Wally London hurt his leg and will be a doubtful starter as will Hadlow with a bad ankle. Joe Errington, who played a swell game Saturday, has the same trouble as Murray, but will likely be used in the next go. And now the clincher—Cummings probably will sit the next one out with his bad knee. It seems that some muscle fluid got into the knee-cap, and will give him a bit of trouble.

Big game this Saturday morning on the front campus. The soccer intermediates play at ten and the seniors take on Western at eleven. Western is Varsity's arch rival in soccer too, so it looks to be a game worth seeing. You know .... it's a funny thing about soccer .... it is not very interesting until you've seen at least four games. And then it's almost as good to watch as football.

Hiya everybody!

We were wondering how many of you missed opportunity last week entitled—

SPORTS—GAMES—SWIMMING

Remember your first year at Varsity when you w given the privilege of one gym class a week and one o class in anything you wanted to choose—from a field suggestions such as badminton, tennis, bowling, archery all the other wonderful sports that Fiz-Edders play at ev day?

Of course this was something that only first year wo could participate in, and when you reached second year was taken away, except the dreary existence of one lecture after another.

However, with an advertisement appearing in last we Varsity, life for women of second, third and fourth y has a considerably brighter prospect.

At last the Department of Physical Education Women has realized our great need and is restoring those hours of fun and sport we shared with our friend first year, by offering instruction in archery, badmin swimming, diving and life saving.

Don't worry if you didn't see this notice, because th is still chance for you to enroll at the Physical Educa Office, situated at 153 Bloor Street West. You should do quickly since classes are being formed and it's always be to get in on a thing from the beginning.

Speaking of classes—they are voluntary and chances for beginners and advanced students. Definitely should be stressed, for there are lots of you who would to learn a sport but never did get around to it and then weren't quite sure about where to go.

Archery classes will be held on Mondays and Thurs at 11:00 and on Tuesdays at 2:00 and 3:00, while badmi takes place on Tuesdays at 10:00 and 3:00.

There will be a gym class and swim on Tuesday 4:00. Time to get headed up and cooled off on the same

You can get your life saving awards, or learn to or even dive at the classes on Mondays at 10:00 and Tuesdays at 9:00 and 2:00, Wednesdays at 9:00, Thurs at 11:00 and Fridays at 12:00.

Here it is—the chance and the times to really accomp something. Soooo, sign up and come on out with the of us, 'cause we're having a wonderful time!

UK Communists Ineffective Declares McNeil

O WHERE IS THE SKULE CANNON GONE — AGAIN?

Labour Govt. Upheld 80-32 In H.H. Debate

The motion that "this House would welcome the return of a Labour Government in England" was upheld by the vote of 80-32, last night in in the Hart House Debate. British Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, Hector McNeil, present as an honorary visitor, said that the Communist Party has "never been as ineffective in Britain as it is today." The Communist Party had contested every election in his riding for the last twenty years, and had not won once, he said.

Speaking for the affirmative, M. K. Hicks, Trinity said that, according to an economic survey of Europe, Britain has the finest recovery record of any European country involved in the war. Sweden's record alone was better, but she was not involved in the war, and had had a Labour Government for the last twenty years. "Britain has increased her exports 56% and decreased her imports 18%", he said. "There has also been an eight per cent increase in production per man."

"We look to Great Britain" said D. C. H. Stanley, Grad., "She has not provided leadership to solid action in Western Europe, but has been instead a stumbling block". E. W. Sopha III UC said that the Labour Party in England provides the "only counter-action to the magnet of Soviet Russia". All the Tories have to offer is Churchill, he said, and "he is no longer needed."

Replying to charges of maladministration in colonial affairs, Mr. McNeil said that "£140,000,000 have ben made available for Colonial development. Mistakes have been made which the Conservatives did not make," he said, "because the Conservative Party did nothing."

"British resources," said Mr. McNeil, "are brains, manpower, and leadership, and the ability to sell these things for the things she needs."

Debates Committee Chairman Prof. G. Bagnani, in introducing Mr. McNeil, remarked that the first debate held in the House was on the same topic. This was Mr. McNeil's second debate in Hart House, having won a debate here in 1932 when he was an undergraduate of Glasgow University.

UN Not Failure, Minister Assails Current Attitude

The tendency to label the United Nations Organization a failure was deplored by the Rt. Hon. Hector McNeil in his address to the International Relations Club yesterday. Recalling the time of the San Francisco conference, when the inexperienced saw in the U.N. a solution to all political problems, Mr. McNeil pointed out that the reaction in the light of recent happenings has been to regard it with undue pessimism. Admitting that morality is not often an effective sanction in international affairs, the speaker expressed the hope that the general assembly could be an instrument for a world conscience.

Not A Structural Weakness

The major deficiency, he said, springs not from a structural weakness but from the nature of the problems that U.N. has to handle. Expanding this point, Mr. McNeil noted that it is unreasonable to expect the U.N. to solve the political problems to which the major countries have found no answer. However the substitution of peaceful negotiation for war in Palestine and Indonesia has demonstrated the efficacy of the U.N. in certain politics questions, he said.

Questioned on the way to heal the East-West gap, he replied that Russia fully comprehends Anglo-American policy, and it is important that we convince her that we are aware of her objective, too.

Mr. McNeil cited the social-economic aspect of world affairs as the most fruitful field for U.N. endeavours. While not receiving much publicity the special committees, such as the International Trade Organization, World Health, have gathered valuable information, and effected many improvements, he said. "It is rash to expect too much of the U.N. and unjustifiable pessimism to expect too little."

Some Of The Goils

Rehearsal time for the UC Follies 1949 version, "Goils and Gargoyles," finds this group of lovelies practising the gyrations of the exotic Aztec Chorus number. If you must know, the names are (l. to r.): John Lyle, Gloria Dow, Eleanor Posen, Grace Kalles, Joyce Sugar, and Sheila Granovsky.

New UC Follies Feature Goils Gargoyles In Revue

This year's version of the UC Follies, scheduled to present eight performances on November 11 and 12, will cost more than three thousand dollars. Plans have been formed to present a bigger-than-ever show with a larger cast than has ever been used before.

Skits for this year's production, to be called "Goils and Gargoyles", have been completed by Susie Davidson, Anne Burton and Mike Hornyansky. The script writers have almost completed their work, the song writers are still plugging away, and the chorus line is beginning to look like a chorus line.

Stars of the show include Ted Fellows of the Straw Hat Players, Doug Stuart, a ballet dancer who studied under Danilova, Sylvia Grant, operatic and musical comedy singer, and Evan Scott.

Arranging and teaching the dancing for the show is Louise Burns, of the Navy Show and assistant choreographer with Olsen and Johnson. Music for the production will be provided by a professional orchestra under the direction of Bernard Tierney, while the show itself will have an all-college cast directed by John Bull and Jane Young.

Varsity Staff Party

Next Friday, Oct. 28, is the date of the first party for staff members of The Varsity. All members planning to attend should put their names on the list in The Varsity news office.

A varied program allowing for the full scope and extent of the talent of The Varsity staffers is being prepared. This party is an excellent opportunity to get to know the "other people" who work on The Varsity on different nights.

Also present will be a delegation of staffers from the Western Gazette.

Godiva Unveiled At SPS Auction

By DAVE ARMOUR

Sex and music punctuated by various species of noises featured the 60th Annual Skule Auction yesterday noon in front of the School of Practical Science. A crowd that covered the Skule lawn and trailed over to the southeast corner of the front campus heckled and hooted as the Engineers presented their yearly sale to publicize the Skule Dinner next Thursday.

Lusty Music at Noon

At 12 o'clock, the Lady Godiva Memorial Band began to parade around the campus making lusty music. The short wait of the crowd at 1 o'clock was enlivened by a deluge of water from the upper windows of the building. However, after a mass investigation of these happenings by the maddened crowd, no further disturbances were forthcoming.

Punctual to the minute arrived Head Auctioneer Sol Friendly, IV Mechanical, a legitimate auctioneer by his own admission. The auction got under way to the strains of Godiva, played soulfully by the Lady Godiva Memorial Band.

Sermon on Evils

Musical highlight was a quartet presentation of the melodic Red Ingle testimonial, "Cigarets, Whusky, and Wild, Wild Women."

The first offering was a piece of Western goal post. The bidding was sluggish at first, until enraged by the taunts of the auctioneer, one foolhardy individual offered one slightly-used lab demonstrator in exchange. The sale was made instantly.

Following a barrage from the Skule cannon and a fanfare from the LGMB, an official and living world was offered and knocked down. Another barrage from the cannon, with another fanfare from the LGMB.

The next item for sale was half a multiplying machine or more commonly, a male rabbit. The cannon's barrage and a fanfare from the LGMB came before the sale was completed.

Godiva Alive

After one Eunuch Drake, magician, had performed, to the accompaniment of a barrage from the Skule cannon and a fanfare from the LGMB, and official and living statute of Lady Godiva was unveiled. The auctioneer welcomed her with a series of soundless but expressive animal-like contortions. The cannon sounded, likewise the LGMB.

A coed was auctioned off in aid of the Red Feather fund. Engineering Society officials were snowed under by a barrage of coins copper and silver. On this note the Auction ended, with a barrage from the cannon and a fanfare from the LGMB.

UC Planned Raid But Not Positive They Have Prize

The Skule Cannon, property of The Engineering Society, was stolen shortly after three p.m. yesterday in a carefully engineered plot. Whisked from the hands of the engineers while Varsity photographer Peter Wade was taking pictures of it, the Cannon was taken from the campus in a car. Its present location is not known.

U.C. Plans Snatch

About 65 students from University College participated in the snatch. Bill Francis, Publicity Director for the U. C. Literary a d Athletic Society told last night how the Cannon had been taken: "We planted spies in The Varsity office to find out when it would be photographed, and learned a photograph would be taken Tuesday afternoon. We organized our band, but unfortunately something went wrong, and our car didn't show up. Another car did arrive however, and after being assured by two guys that it was all right, we made the snatch and sent the Cannon away. We haven't seen those two men or the car since."

Need Cannon For Float

The Engineering Society said last nighft that they would like the return of the Cannon in order that they may complete their Homecoming Parade float for Saturday.

The Skule statement: "This loss comes at rather an awkward time since the Cannon was an integral part of Skule's Float in the Homecoming Parade. We agreed some time ago not to interfere with other floats and we would appreciate having the Cannon returned by Saturday morning.

"The Engineering Society feels that if various faculties find it necessary to keep stealing the Cannon to cover themselves with questionable glory, then we will be very glad to put up for competition a special super-charged model. After vying with one another in at-

Gaelic Melodies For Resurrection Of Dead Guest

The coffin of Theophrastus Bombastus Von Hohenheim, Bachelor of Sorcery, Master of Alchemy, (Oxford class of 1249) will be opened at one o'clock today on the front campus. Plans for reviving the Homecoming Week-end honored guest from his three hundred yearlong meditative trance were announced last night.

On hand for the ceremonies will be Kallinike and the University Pipe Band. The Pipe Band will attempt to rouse Theophrastus from his trance.

The pipers are confident that their Highland music will wake the dead. Should they fail, oxygen equipment will be used.

The coffin was located last week by transit-equipped engineers and an advanced party of grave diggers needed a pneumatic drill to recover the casket. Following successful completion of the dig, the remains are resting in Simcoe Hall prior to the revival ceremonies.

At one o'clock today, the Pipe Band will lead a parade from Simcoe Hall. In their wake will be members of the Amalgamated

White Supremacy

The twentieth century has often been called the "age of enlightenment" but sometimes the brilliance of the light only emphasizes the dark shadows in certain obscure corners. One of these corners received a brief but nauseating mention in last night's press.

The location of this corner is Washington, Mississippi, at the Jefferson Military College and the sickening shadows are but reflections of the minds of the Board of Trustees of the college.

This board has agreed to accept a bequest of fifty million dollars to the school on the stipulation that the school shall teach and practice the "supremacy of the white race."

Monday night the school's business manager, A. J. Armstrong announced that the school had accepted his father's offer of all his mineral rights in Mississippi if the college agreed to "certain conditions." The conditions included the exclusion from the staff of any "instructor or employee who is a known Communist or who has Communist leanings, or who is of African or Asiatic origin."

The conditions specified further that the faculty and student body should be composed primarily of persons of Anglo-Saxon and Latin American antecedents who hold the "true Christian faith." Acceptance of these conditions brings to the school a reward valued at more than fifty million dollars.

May Mr. Armstrong Sr. and the Board of Trustees of the Jefferson Military College, Washington, Mississippi find some source of pleasure in the fact that they represent a kind of moral cowardice and dishonesty not so publicly proclaimed since Adolph Hitler foisted his "Aryan race" on a submissive Germany.

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

The assignment was to review the current exhibition of flower paintings at Eaton's fine Art Gallery, but as I entered the hall leading to the exhibit I was stopped by a compelling row of portraits. They were remarkable for many reasons. They combined the popular appeal of exact likeness to the subject with sincere "painterly" quality and were the work of a group of young Canadian artists who are just beginning their careers

William Kenneth Gee was the original member of the group. His artistic studies in Montreal were interrupted by the war and he returned on D.V.A. to continue his studies at the Ontario College of Art. His work was immediately well liked when Eatons sponsored an exhibition for him last spring before he graduated. Gee paints in a free, flowing, sometimes impressionistic style, using broad pastel tones to catch the softness of youthful flesh.

Another member of the group is June Forbes McCormacks, daughter of Kenneth Forbes. I was most impressed by two winsome portraits of little girls, in which her delicate, sensitive brush catches and emphasizes the "babyishness" of her sitters, a difficult feat in portrait painting. She paints with a clean, sharp realism that makes her subject seem almost to breathe, as best illustrated in her painting of her artist husband.

There was only one painting by the third member, George Adamson. This was a strong, free representation of a vigorous-looking youth. The colours are subdued and the figure in conventional half-shadow, but the bold brush strokes give the painting its personal assertion. James Williamson is the fourth artist. I noticed only his portrait of a hard-looking woman of strong, bony build. The orange tones of her skin serve to emphasize this hardness, but the painter's style is in no other way remarkable.

Eatons has allowed the young artists to convert some rooms in the building to studios where customers can pose.

Meds Offer Reward

The Medical Society, whose "action group", The Femury Gang, last year managed to steal the Cannon, last night extended "congratulations" to those who had "pulled the job." They offered $1.79 and a ticket to Panacea for the weapon. "We showed it could be done, now everyone's doing it. We understand plans were underfoot among the O.T. girls to take it."

Best offer for the Cannon came from Vic. "We had no official plans to steal it, but as an observer I am interested," VCU President Stan Kurisko said last night. "We will give three cheerleaders and a ticket to the Vic Informal to be held Nov. 25 for it. If it turns up here we won't tell anyone about it."

At U.C., Lit President Jack Houlihan claimed he knew nothing about the snatch. "We will be glad to offer five cents for it," he said.

St. Mike's Don't Want It

At St. Mike's they said "We wouldn't want a cannon from S.P.S. We will offer no reward, but would be quite willing to board it if it turns up — for a nominal fee."

Charges by some engineers that The Varsity was responsible for the whole affair were denied last night by Varsity Editor Stan Fillmore. "We haven't time," he said. The charges arose from the fact that a Varsity photographer was present when the Cannon was stolen.

St. Michael's And Victoria Get Wins On Back Campus

Trinity vs. St. Mikes

By MIKE FURLONG

A real 'rhubarb' ended the football game on the back campus yesterday, in which St. Mike's eked out a win over Trinity by the close score of 2-1.

The final play of the game was a flat pass from Andisson to Meredith of Trinity, who was stopped on the 1 foot line. The big snafu seemed to be that the Red and Black boys hadn't been informed that it was to be their last play, because the timer had neglected to let the referee know. On top of all that, the Trinity boys claimed that Meredith had crossed the goal line.

The game itself was featured by running and kicking which did not produce many chances for major scores by either team. The first score of the game was set up by a beautiful punt by Tony Adams which put Trinity back on their five yard line. On the next play Dowling broke through to drop the Trinity ball-carrier behind the goal line for a safety-touch good for two points.

The play ranged back and forth across the mid-field strip then until late in the second quarter. A St. Mike's march, led by the plunging and running of Adams, Washington, Grassi, and Lapettito along with a third down pass from Adams to Ross took the Bay Streeters into scoring territory. A few more plunges and a couple of penalties to Trinity took the Double Blue to the three yard mark. However, the ball was fumbled a yard out on the next play and Trinity recovered. The half ended on the next play.

Washington fumbled a kick at center early in the fourth quarter and Trinity started their march for their only point. Three short passes tossed by Andisson and Wardrop, set up a field-goal attempt by Andisson. The kick was wide but it was good for a single point when St. Mike's could not run the ball out. The stage was then set for the disputed play by a long plunge to St. Mike's 6 yard marker by Wardrop.

Wardrop was outstanding for Trinity along with Sparling, Gray, Andisson and Hunt. St. Mike's main threats were Washington, Adams, Grassi, and Lapettito, while Bud Brennan, Carr, and McKenna were outstanding along the line.

Lineups:

Trinity—Halves—Gray, Wardrop, Meredith, Andisson; quarter, Sparling; ends, Skinner, McIntosh; middles, Hunt, Thomson; insides, McCarter, McLaughlin; snap, Gledhill. Subs—White, Leishman, Rogers, Bell, Griffiths, Hogg, Stevenson, Beatty, Eastmore, Thompson, McDonald, Scrivener.

St. Mike's—Halves, McIntyre, Washington, Lapettito, Grassi; quarter, Adams; end, Carr, Dowling; middles, McRae, O'Keefe; insides, Brennan, McKenna; snap, Kite. Subs, Bergen, Belak, O'Heany, Davin, O'Hara, Ross, Tierney, Weil, Weichornek, Neville, Mauchly.

'Ace' Retires Puck Mentor Is Now Halder

Walter Edwin Halder, better known to hockey fans as Wally, has been appointed the new senior hockey coach of the University of Toronto to take the place of Irwin W. "Ace" Bailey. The Athletic Department reached their decision to appoint Wally last week, but the appointment was not ratified until yesterday by the Board of Governors.

Ace Bailey has transferred his home to the Welland district, and so was not able to continue his duties as coach.

Wally is no stranger to the University; he graduated in 1942 with honors, and returned in '46 to attend O.C.E. In '42 he was undergraduate member of the Athletic Directorate and played senior hockey.

Wally was in the navy for four years, but on coming back in '46 jumped right into athletics. He was captain of the senior Blues Hockey team when they lost the championship to McGill in a hard-fought play-off game. That year he won the Briggs Trophy leadership, sportsmanship, and performance. In the interfaculty league he played rugby, soccer, water-polo, and was on the swimming and track teams.

The last few year, Wally played for Barkers of the Major League at Varsity Arena, and was their outstanding star. He was that league's high scorer, and was voted by the fans the most popular player. He was one of two players drafted for the Canadian Olympic team which took the World Amateur hockey championship in the last competition. He starred in these competitions to bring back the bacon to the land where hockey is a national sport.

Wally is a graduate of Oakwood C.I., and played for the OHA Young Rangers, the Varsity juniors, and Tip Tops before joining Barkers. He is at present a manufacturers agent for a Toronto firm.

Vic vs. Meds

By MAL CRAWFORD

Victoria College won its second straight victory yesterday from Senior Meds on the back campus. Held back throughout most of the first half by a fine defensive display by Meds, the Vicmen put on a 12 point scoring effort in the second, to shut out Meds 19-0.

The play was very tight at the first of the game, little gain being made by either side. Paul Walton's marvellous kicking gradually pushed the Medsmen back till one of them reached the deadline for the first point. Vernon, Rosen, and Anderson, to mention the most outstanding, held back the Scarlet and Gold with fine tackling until the last play of the half.

On the second last play of the half, a Vic lineman was caught clipping after the whistle, resulting in a twenty-five yard penalty. With one play left, Harry Damp threw a long pass to Ralph Newell. A Meds defender seemed to have it blocked, but somehow Newell got it, inches from the sideline, and raced thirty yards for a touchdown. Little kicked the convert.

In the second half, Vic dominated the play as completely as the scoring. Walton started it with a sixty-five yard hoist for a single. Soon afterward, Lorne Lodge intercepted a Meds pass at centre field. Rumbell's pass to Reid put Vic on the twenty-five, and another pass to Howard scored the touchdown.

After this setback, Meds unsuccessfully took to the air and continued to lose on exchanges of kicks. Then on Meds twenty, half the Vic line (which was just missing on blocking kicks all afternoon) got through to block a kick. Bill Allen recovered, and Chuck Fick carried over the major. Little again converted.

In the final moments of play, Meds moved up the field in a last-minute attempt to break the shut-out. John Martyn completed a pass to get the doctors in scoring position but they couldn't put it across.

Actually Meds were not as poor as the score seems to indicate. They played very good defensive ball most of the game, but couldn't get much of an offensive going. Gabe Varga was the best of their backs offensively.

Vic linemen Brad Colbert, Ralph Barfour, Jim Kilgour, ends John Anderson and Ralph Newell, were tops up front for Vic. Four of their seven passes attempted were completed, Harry Damp doing most of the throwing. Damp and Lodge did most of the ball carrying and went for consistent though not long gains.

It's Really Gone . . .

But They Keep Pretending

—Varsity Staff Photos by Peter Wade

University College Literary Society officials claim they have stolen the cannon belonging to the men from the School of Practical Science. The men from the School of Practical Science deny this. At any rate, the question of who has the cannon has assumed huge proportions in the eyes of certain groups on the campus. Shown in the upper picture is the situation that the men from the School of Practical Science are trying to convince everyone is true. The lower picture depicts the situation as the photographer found it to be. Somebody has the cannon but the Mining Engineers are either bluffing or putting on a brave face in an effort to carry along in the old routines.

Book Store Faces Macmillan Boycott Over New Policy

The University of Toronto Press Book Store will discontinue the sale of books published by the Macmillan Company of Canada, it was revealed at the Students' Administrative Council meeting held in the Medical Board Room last night. A letter from University President Sidney Smith informed the Council that Macmillan has refused to sell the bookstore any more books as long as the Press offers its ten percent discount to students.

The council passed a motion "condemning the action of the Macmillan Company of Canada in refusing to supply the Bookstore, and expressing approval of the University authorities in refusing to change their policy in view of the Macmillan action."

In future students will have to go off the campus to buy books produced or distributed by Macmillan, and therefore will not be able to receive the ten percent discount on these books formerly available at the bookstore.

The move by the publishing company follows action of the University administration taken this fall to reduce the present high cost of textbooks to students. A change in management at the Press Bookstore brought a ten percent reduction on all text books bought for cash.

To Aid Students

The Press discount followed investigations made last year by the Toronto Committee of the National Federation of Canadian University students of the high cost of text books. A brief prepared by NFCUS was used by the SAC to present their case to the University Administration, who subsequently took steps to relieve the situation.

"It is a shame that the Macmillan Company has seen fit to sabotage the efforts of the University Press who have been trying to save students money on textbooks," SAC President Bob Hetherington said last night. "We hope that other publishers will not take the same action and that some understanding will be reached between the Press and the publishers."

New Med. School Will Offer Several Different Courses

Vancouver, (CUP)—Minor course changes will be the main difference in pre-medical study when the University of British Columbia's Medical School opens on September 5, 1950.

Most important change in the preliminary studies will be the addition of Embryology instead of taking the course in first-year medicine.

These changes were announced recently by Dr. Myron Weaver, Dean of U.B.C.'s new Faculty of Medicine. He was speaking to a special meeting of pre-medical students.

The new Dean is in the process of arranging teaching facilities, getting staff for the school, and arranging for the screening of students.

The medical school year will be 32 weeks long, starting the first week in September and going through to May.

First class in the school will be composed of 60 students. No student with lower than a high 2nd-class standing will be admitted.

Medical Award Winners Announced By Authorities

F. B. Fallis, I Meds. is first winner of the $500 scholarship established by Famous Players Canadian Corporation at the University of Toronto, it was announced this week. The award goes to the candidate receiving the highest number of marks in five selected subjects during his two pre-medical years.

The Phi Delta Epsilon Medical Fraternity bursary, also being awarded for the first time, goes to S. H. Witzel for his showing in obstetrics and gynaecology during the third year.

Philip Rosen has been awarded the Baptie scholarship and the B'nai B'rith scholarship for his work during the first medical year.

C. D. Anderson, graduate of Windsor - Walkerville Collegiate, has won the Medical Alumni Association scholarship and Miss May Lipman, graduate of Harbord Collegiate, the Samuel Godfrey scholarship.

The Faulkner gold medal has been awarded to Dr. Roberta McQueen, who topped her class in the post-graduate course in psychiatry. Dr. McQueen is now on the staff of the Toronto Psychiatric Hospital.

Joint Committee Sponsors Tours For All Debaters

The U. of T. Debating Union and the Hart House Debates Committee have joined forces for the co-sponsoring of all University debating tours this session, it was announced yesterday by Dave Quigley, IV-SMC, chairman of the newly-formed joint committee.

In meetings of the two groups last week three members were chosen from each organization to sit on the joint sub-committee with power to act on any matter concerning the tours. Each organization appropriated $250, which gives the joint committee a $500 budget for the year.

Besides providing a more ample budget the move, it was felt, will engender a spirit of co-operation between the groups.

On the new committee are Chairman Quigley, Secretary Jack Geller, II-UC, Fred McFadden, IV-Vic, Jeff Pearson, IV-Trinity, Fred Furlong, II-SMC, and Ed Eberle, IV-SMC.

Each University team will be allowed only one graduate member. While women are eligible, no more than one shall be permitted to go on each tour. Team members will be selected from those who have spoken at either the Hart House Debates or those of the U.T.D.U. whether as regular speakers or simply from the floor.

Trials for the first tour will be held on or about Nov. 14 in the form of a debate.

Both Sides Claim Cannon; To Be Fired On Saturday

Violent repercussions are shaking the campus in the wake of the Skule Cannon episode. Kidnappings, counter-attacks, reprisals have been the order of the day as the Engineers have mustered their strength to retrieve their blunderbuss.

Photographer Held

Tuesday night, the Ancient and Honorable Society of Skule Cannoneers, the Mining Engineers who took on the task of guarding the Cannon, made their first bid for recovery of their charge, visiting the home of the photographer who unwittingly made the snatch possible.

Peter Wade, photographer for The Varsity, had made arrangements with the Cannoneers to take pictures of the Cannon, and became an unknowing tool of the UC Lit when one of the Lit spies overheard his assignment for the day.

According to information from the UC Lit, even before Wade had focussed his camera, the first members of the Lit Snatch Squad had assembled, ready to grab the cannon at the first opportunity. While Wade was taking the names of the Cannoneers in the pictures, the Lit men moved in, and before the Cannoneers were aware of their intentions, the cannon was in a get-away car on its way to a secret hideout.

Repulsed by Landlady

Suspicious of the photographer who made them expose their prize to the public eye, the Engineers approached Wade's quarters. There they were repulsed by his landlady who felt, she later told Wade, they could kidnap him at a more decent hour than one in the morning.

Next to be approached by the Engineers was the driver of the car involved in the get-away. Apprehended at home, the driver, Jack McQuarriee, a Blue and White Band member, was taken away for questioning. After a short session, which rewarded them with the satisfaction that the driver had done only what he had been told to, the Engineers released him.

UC Dragon Gone

Early yesterday afternoon, the dragon on the pedestal at the bottom of the stairs near the east entrance to University College was removed and disappeared. This action has been called an Engineer reprisal.

Early Wednesday morning, some Medsmen, masquerading as repor-

Entries Are Numerous As Forestry Seeks Win In Saturday's Parade

The Skule cannon will roar out in defiance on the Engineers' float in the parade to open Saturday's activities of Homecoming Weekend according to Skule officials yesterday. Contrary to reports from other sources the officials state the cannon will be on hand on their float in the parade.

Nineteen entries will attempt to take the trophy away from Forestry who won it last year for having the best float in the parade. Forestry officials say that their float will be hard to beat again this year. The entries of the various faculties and colleges will not be revealed until Saturday morning during the parade.

Campus Hams Organize As Hart House Group

An organizational and membership meeting of the Hart House Amateur Radio Club was held Wednesday evening in the Debates Room, under the chairmanship of Frank Ford, VE3AKO.

Ford told the meeting that the new club was a direct result of the success of the one at Ajax during the past three years. He reviewed its activities and the operation of the club station VE3BPD and announced a membership drive.

Cliff Brown, VE3AGN, gave tentative details of classes in code and radio theory for those wishing to obtain their Department of Transport operators' licenses.

It was voted that the temporary Executive Committee continue in office until a regular committee can be elected at a later date.

Thirty-five members were signed up at the end of the meeting. The club's headquarters is in the Graduate Secretary's office at Hart House.

Objections To Joe College

It would seem that Hollywood may be right. As most moviegoers well know, one of the things common to Hollywood college films is that the educational aspect of a university classes, lectures and such, seems well subjugated to the lighter side of campus life.

To even the most casual reader of The Varsity this year, this hackneyed cinematic proposition may seem well substantiated. In a school year only six weeks old, extra-curricular activity is geared in high, with the addition of more extemporaneous activity like the to-do with a familiar campus symbol this week.

Under ordinary circumstances, the stealing of the Skule Cannon and the subsequent counter-actions would not merit special editorial comment in The Varsity. This type of activity is perhaps as justified in its place in the campus scheme of things as any other. Such "Joe College" antics do serve a purpose if only to provide our more serious students a few moments of welcome relief from their steady grind of studies. Then, too, these antics do serve to provide meat instead of gruel for reminiscent mind-feasts of reminiscence of future graduates.

Particularly while the year is still young, and while the serious intent of education is kept in the minds of those involved, campus mischief, if within sensible limits, can be excused or at least indulgently tolerated. At any rate the responsibility of making the year is an individual one to be put into the laps of the students concerned.

But there are two objections to the current antics that deserve mention. The first is the fear that this intense inter-faculty rivalry may serve to dilute the full-blown display of Varsity spirit demanded for the forthcoming weekend.

An even more vital objection is the tendency for this inter-faculty squabbling to descend to juvenile pettiness. The case in point is the handling of a staff member of The Varsity by one of the factions concerned. The manner of handling smacked of the "someone took my stick of candy so I'm going to push your kiddy car into the mud puddle" attitude.

The motive for this petty action may be traced to the unfounded belief that The Varsity was implicated in the recent plot. Nothing could be farther from the truth.

Time is at a premium with The Varsity and publishing a daily newspaper devours the collective energy of the staff. To accuse The Varsity of engineering an inter-faculty endeavor seems [illegible] cheating the responsible party or parties of rightful credit.

It was announced in the House today that a new Can-Russ Co-op Committee had been established. The members of the committee are to be: Clasik Dochuksy, head of Amtorg Trading Corp., who is to be chairman of the committee; Ilya Stronheim, under-secretary of the Russian consulate; Vladimir Blanchef, president of the National Federation of the Can-Russ Friendship Society; Tania Slarschov, secretary of the same organization, and two plenipotentiary representatives of Russo-Slavic delegations.

In answer to a question from the floor as to why there did not seem to be any Canadians on the committee, the following statement was issued:

It is felt that due to the difficulty of understanding the Russian way of life, it would make things easier all round if all the members of the committee were Russians. In this way there will be no misunderstandings. After all that is the purpose of the committee — to overcome misunderstandings.

In answer to another query as to how emergencies would be met:

It is felt there will be no emergencies. That is the purpose of the committee — to see that no one can ever cause an emergency.

Certain members expressed doubt as to the weight of any decisions reached by such an arbitrarily constructed committee. These doubts were met by the statement:

All decisions of the committee will be binding on the entire populace. Unfortunately there can be no court of appeal, as this would tend to undermine the dignity of the committee's august judgments. After all any decisions will be made in the interests of the people.

It is understood one of the major problems confronting the committee is the berthing of ships in Canadian ports.

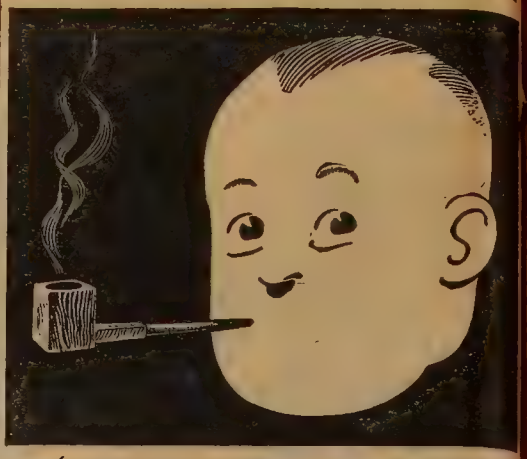
pones the decision until he is better able to decide on the matter."

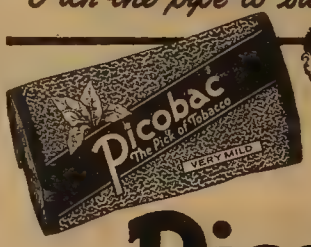
Fraternities Not Indicted

He also said he wished it understood "that this is in no way an indictment of fraternities as such."



Gibson emphasized that the change is most desirable at Trinity, although possibly not necessary in other, larger college.

"The small size of Trinity and the wealth of extra-curricular activities make it a necessary move," he said. "The larger colleges would not feel the effect of attraction of students away from the college activities to those of the fraternities. Trinity is a smaller college where the students can get to know each other if they have the chance."



Initiation Interferes

"The first term is an important one for getting freshmen interested in the College and for allowing senior students to become acquainted with the freshmen. But the amount of time the freshmen must devote to being rushed and initiated prevents these two important processes at the very time when it is most essential that they be carried out."

Trinity Lit Society May Bar Freshmen From Fraternities

A campaign to bar Trinity students from membership in fraternities in their freshman year will get under way next Wednesday night when the topic of the Trinity College Literary Institute meeting will be "Resolved that this House endorses the proposal that Trinity freshmen be not allowed to join fraternities and that this be a condition of entry into the College."

Students to Decide

Trinity Head of Arts, Gord Gibson, said yesterday the debate will arouse interest and discussion in preparation for a motion to bar freshmen from fraternities which he will present to a college meeting in December. He first announced his intention to do this at the first college meeting of this year early this month.

If passed by the students in December, the proposal would be presented to Trinity College officials as a recommendation of the student body. "I think the advice of the students will be accepted if the motion is passed," Gibson said.

Gibson, who will speak in support of the motion next week, said he wants the change made because many Trinity students become engrossed in the activities and interests of their fraternities before they have any opportunity to consider the extra-curricular activities of the college.

Lack Fair Chance

"The College had not had a fair chance to interest the freshmen in the College and the freshmen have not had a fair chance to get to know the College," he explained.

Tom Crerar, III Trinity, who will oppose the motion said, "It's a matter of individual right. I think a person entering university is a mature person and should have the right to choose whether he will join a fraternity or not.

"I also think that it will harm the College because some students will enrol in other colleges in order to be free of the restrictions."

He also expressed a fear that discussion of the matter will get off the point and become a mud-slinging campaign in which the whole question of fraternities will be argued.

Gibson's comment on the question of individual freedom was: "Although this is an infringement on the right of the freshman to decide for himself, I feel it is justified and that it merely post-

Finance Committee To Prepare Brief On Fees Question

The question of raising the Students' Administrative Council fee is being investigated, Finance Committee Chairman Earl Orser announced last night at the SAC meeting held in the Medical Board Room. Because of the increased cost of SAC services, it may be necessary to raise the fee this year.

An investigation of the situation on other campuses is being made, with the co-operation of The National Federation of Canadian University Students, through their central office at McMaster University in Hamilton.

When all of the information on fees has been collected the Finance Committee will prepare a brief for presentation to the council, and eventually to the Board of Governors, who must approve any increase in the SAC fee.

Council last night also:

—Presented the SAC Honor Award to Professor I. M. Pounder, who was a faculty representative on the SAC for many years, in recognition of the service he had rendered as faculty advisor to the Council.

"I consider it a great privilege to have belonged to the Council," Dr. Pounder said last night. "Quite a few members of the faculty have no idea of what goes on in the Council. I consider it a school for democracy — one of the best in the University . . . There is a great deal of work for this Council and future councils to do . . . especially in erecting the Memorial Union . . . I wish you every success."

Dr. Pounder explained to Council that he had not taken on the post again this year because he felt the position should be spread among the faculty.

—Heard there will be no tax charged on All-Varsity Revue tickets, which will cost $1.25 this year to meet the increased costs. The Revue will be staged early in February.

—Referred a request from the Pipe Band to hold a tag day and "drive for funds" to the Finance Committee, who will decide whether to make the Pipe Band a subsidiary of the Council or not.

—Heard a letter from William Thompson, II Law, who last week charged that advertising policy on The Varsity is unfair. Advertising policy was clarified so that "anyone who wants to can place an ad that is not obscene or slanderous."

—Approved the purchase of a tape recording of last year's All Varsity Revue. Cost: $23.80.

Turner Promises Gags, Music, Gals At Grad Welcome

Girls, music, songs, jokes are the principal ingredients of the Blue and White Show in Convocation Hall on Homecoming Saturday night, Blue and White Society chairman Bill Turner announced last night. "The show is made up of what we feel are the best acts on the campus," Turner added. "The show is made up of undergraduate acts, but both undergrads and grads will be welcome. The show will be presented in conjunction with the Roamaround Dance and together they should provide a full evening of first class entertainment."

Headline attractions include Ben Foreman, who will repeat his highly successful "blues" number from last year's All-Varsity Revue; Nipper Benson, who will sing several Gershwin numbers; the "library" skit, one of the biggest laughgetters from last year's All-U Revue; the Lost Chords, a quartette from Vic; Follow the Blues from the Follies; excerpts from "Saint's Alive"; a playlet from St. Mike's; quartettes from Skule and Meds and music by a fifteen piece orchestra conducted by Bill Girvin.

Three performances will be given on Saturday night, said Turner, at 8:00 p.m., 9:15 and 10:30 p.m. Combination show and dance tickets are obtainable across the campus.

"As there will be a limited ticket sale, I suggest that students purchase their tickets early," Turner added.

Bagpipes Raise The Dead Swami Sinks Him Again

Though not recognized by unions as musical instruments, the bagpipes proved their worth yesterday afternoon on the Front Campus. In the skillful hands of pipers George Ford and Bill Powie of the University Pipe Band, these Highland chanters were mainly responsible for the raising from the dead the Homecoming weekend's honoured guest, one Theophrastus Bombastus von Hohenheim, a graduate of the class of 1249 A.D.

Arriving in his recently unearthed cofin, thanks to the famous Greek runner, Kallinike, his host for the weekend, "Theo" was borne to the platform on the Campus by several members of the "tattle-tale grey branch" of the Ku Klux Klan, the "Official" pallbearers.

Also on hand at the "Revival" meeting were members of the Amalgamated Grave Robbers and Resurrectionists Union, Local 1313, the the celebrated Indian mystic RANDI.

Arriving at the platform, Randi, who appears in the "Open Sesame" show, and is President of the International Brotherhood of Magicians, proceeded to revive the long departed graduate, aided and abetted by the skirl of the bagpipes, which moaned continuously throughout.

Glad to be back again, Theophrastus welcomed everyone to participate in the many activities of the HOMECOMING WEEKEND, and programs outlining the activities were then distributed to the many interested spectators who had gathered.

The ceremony concluded with a demonstration of the wonderful magic of RANDI, who placed Theo in his "Temple of Benares' and proceeded to run him through from every direction with sharp swords. The remains were then carried back to their resting place in Convocation Hall.

Fight Continually For Democracy Claim CCF Heads

"Since the formation of the CCF in the depression years, its members have fought continually for a democracy which will be economic as well as political," Jack Robson, III General, told a discussion meeting of the U.C. CCF unit held in room four of U.C. Wednesday at noon.

"Political democracy can have no meaning until the citizens can exercise their right freely," he continued. "The CCF plan of national public ownership definitely is founded on the principle of appropriate boards set up to oversee and control industry only in its broad aspects of production. This national plan is necessary because, if the government does not own the monopolies, the monopolies will own the government. However, while the federal scheme is important, it seems to me that the basis of Socialist planning is on the lower levels of the province and municipality."

Joe Gasse, chairman of the group announced that its next discussion would be held in room four of U.C. at 1 p.m. on November 9, at which Elmer Sopha, IV Poli. Sci. and Ec. would lead a discussion on "The How and Why of Nationalization."

Bells Instead of Bats In Belfry

By MARGARET WORLD

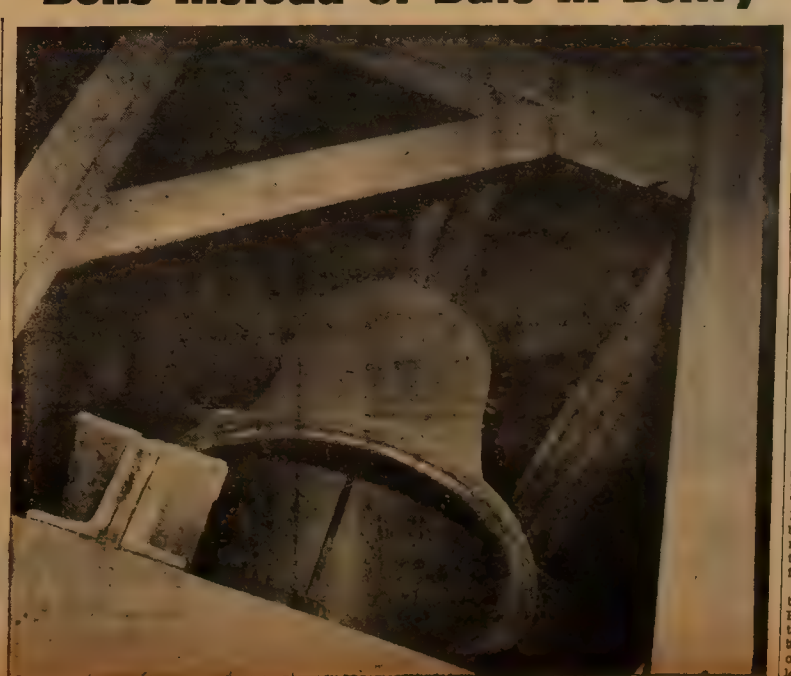
"It's no high-brow stuff", J. Leland Richardson, official carillonneur at the Soldier's Tower, says, concerning the type of music which comes forth from the graceful, old tower adjacent to Hart House. "It's strictly for average people, a simple, plain melody, which everybody understands."

Simple, Not Easy

One of the reasons for the ballads, hymns, and light classicc that you hear is the very small scope of the bells—two octaves—in which to play. Imagine two octaves on a piano and what can be played upon them. Then imagine what improvising has to be done by Mr. Richardson to make a song sound connected and recognizable.

Along with the mental effort, considerable physical strength is required. The smallest bell, highest in pitch, weighs two hundred and thirty-seven pounds and needs a one and one-half pound pressure to make it sound. The farther you go down the scale the harder the keys have to be pressed. The largest bell, weighing five tons, requires twenty-five pounds pressure.

The bells do not swing back and forth like ordinary church bells, but hammers inside, actuated by the keyboard, do the work. There are pedals, as well, which have to be kicked and hammered with the heels. From this you probably get a picture of Mr. Richardson as a kind of jumping acrobat with muscles like balloons and the strength of Atlas. However, it's not quite as gruesome as it sounds.



No Bell-Ringer

As you must have guessed, in doing such a job you have to love the bells, and Mr. Richardson does. Ever since he was ten years old he has been interested in playing and in 1922, when the first Belgian carillon in North America was installed in the Metropolitan Church here in Toronto, he decided he wanted to play it, which he later did after studying at the Belgian National Carillon School. Mr. Richardson would hasten to inform you that he is a carillonneur, not a bell-ringer. His strenuous and unusual hobby keeps him busy outside of his own occupation and he sees it as something creative and interesting. Apparently, there is an art to listening to the carillon as well as playing it. Just try to understand the music as a whole rather than each note separately.

Outdoor Theatre

In the summertime, Mr. Richardson plays the carillon each Sunday evening and often the occupants of between three and four hundred automobiles stop to listen. The campus becomes another world in the heart of a noisy, crowded city. The next big concert will be held on November 11, but if you happen to be around after the game Saturday night about 8 o'clock, you will hear the famous carillon ringing forth for the Homecoming Week-end.

Sunday morning, before and after the service at Convocation Hall Mr. Richardson is going to play the twenty-three bells. This is one of the few opportunities the students of U. of T. have to hear the carillon.

Fitzgerald Bequest

The Fitzgerald Bequest, now on exhibition at the Art Gallery of Toronto, is one of the least controversial shows ever to hang there. With the exception of Pissaro, none of the artists in the collection caused a great outcry with his paintings. There is nothing in the show which will pull the viewer from his seat in amazement, but on the other hand there is nothing to cause him to ask, "How did that get in here?" It will require quite an effort, on the part of the viewer to get into harmony with these pictures, for they have not the hard, calculated nature of so much of modern painting that is on exhibition today.

The pictures with one exception, "Portrait of a Girl", by Verspronck, 17th century Dutch artist, were painted around the end of the last century. The bequest is composed principally of French and Dutch artists, one or two Germans and one Irishman, Sir John Lovery. The lesser impressionists are extremely well represented in this show. There are good examples of Loiseau, Fantin-Latour, Courbet with his odd sized canvases and Pissaro with his distinctive and appealing colour.

The Fitzgerald Bequest gives the Art Gallery an excellent selection of, if not the avant garde shock troops, at least the second wave of Dutch and French painters at the close of the last century. On the matter of framing the exhibition is highly commendable. Somebody has had the rare good sense to grey and blue down the ihghly ornate, glit frames that originally encased the pictures. The result is highly pleasing, as is the whole show.

Philip Creighton.

Dr. Willan

On Monday afternoon, in Convocation Hall, we were privileged to hear the University Organist, Dr. Healey Willan, give the first recital in the current series.

Despite a certain restraint of manner, which came perilously close to the monotonous, it was extremely interesting to hear him play, if only because of his services to Liturgical music in Canada.

The concert was varied; from J. S. Bach to Moussorgsky and Schumann to Karg-Elert, yet this was in no way a detraction in as much as the programme was handled in a way which, we feel, could only have been done by Dr. Healey Willan.

We must confess to a certain astonishment that anything, called "Deck thyself my soul with gladness" could have been so funereal; at all events never, even in our most masochistic moments would we so have maltreated our soul. But who can tell what arrant souls were these.

The Wolf-Ferrari "Dance of the Angels" was originally scored for two harps, pianoforte, strings and drums but somehow the recherche effect that this must create was irretrievably lost when played on the organ.

However we were very happy, and humble to be in the presence of the great again.

Mihail Dumbeliuk.

HART HOUSE QUESTION

Editor, The Varsity:

I have just finished reading the answers gleaned by your inquiring club reporter in The Varsity Oct. 24, re campus life. It seems there are those who do not appreciate the gold-mine they have in Hart House.

I have just come home to Toronto after two enjoyable years at Ajax, where Hart House, Ajax was the hub of campus activity. We of the very small female group were able to share Hart House, Ajax, with our male colleagues; not so Hart House, Toronto.

Once upon a time a club meeting at Hart House (Ajax) was attended by all those interested, be they male or female. Now as the reopening of club activities draws near there is the unhappy realization that many of our former activities will be seriously curtailed if not cut off entirely. For the past two years I have been an interested member of the Ajax Debates Club, attending most of the meetings and entering into most of the open discussions. Unlike my colleagues I cannot graduate to the S.P.S. Debates Club because the Hart House Debates Room is now the centre of their activities. The Mechanical Club and the Student branch of the A.S.M.E. are both holding dinner meetings in Hart House. I am a member of both clubs but under the circumstances I shall not be able to attend the meetings unless their locations are changed.

It is only natural that this awkward situation should arise when Hart House is the best place available for such activities. But there is no necessity for Hart House to be the best place available.

The proposed Students Co-ed Union would solve all of the social and extra-curricular problems of the girls in the so-called professional courses — Engineering, Meds, Dents and Law. It would also serve the problems of the noon hour crush, the lack of browsing library space, the limited facilities for all activities. It also could alleviate the telephone shortage that is so acute at Hart House according to one student polled.

Lois Hutchings,
S.P.S.

LOST HELMET

Editor, The Varsity:

I hope that being an editor has its pleasant side, for it must be anything but enjoyable to receive letters of complaint from half the globe as editors probably do. Realizing this, I assure you, I hesitated before starting this letter. But I have a complaint to make, and I can't think of anyone else to address it to.

My complaint is briefly: someone took my bonnet and I want my bonnet back.

It happened at Western's pep-rallly last Friday night, before the Varsity-Western game here. At the time of the unfortunate occurence I was probably not the personification of sobriety (after all, what do you want at a pep-rally, tea?). Anyway, while lurching across the campus I was affronted by a car load of blue and white boys (and pink elephants) who grabbed my bonnet and drove away, leaving me helplessly standing there shaking my fist at them (and possibly muttering nasty words under my breath).

Now I'm not going to complain about the unfair advantage they took of me—for after all they did outnumber me—especially if you count all the cars and pink elephants. But I would appreciate it if you would put the following notice in a conspicuous place:

LOST: One dark-blue balmoral bonnet, with a blue and white diced band and a red toorie. It has a pair of ribbons at the back and a silver medal over the left eye (when it is on the head of someone who has a left eye) with the inscription "Pc Mare et Terras." Please return it to Donald Dean, University of Western Ontario, London, Ontario.

You see, dear editor, I got the bonnet in the Old Country this summer, so it has a great sentimental value to me Besides, my head is getting darned cold without it.

Thanking you if you will do this thing for me, I am,

Donald Dean—

EDITOR ATTACKED

Editor, The Varsity:

It has come to my attention that Peter Wade, The Varsity Photo Editor, has been attacked, and I really mean attacked, for his so-called "part" in Tuesday's coup d'etat re the Skule Pop-gun. I have been told that Mr. Wade's camera was taken from him, several films destroyed, and he himself was forced to attend several lectures in the engineering building. The mere fact that he was forced to be in the company of engineers for nearly a whole day is bad enough, but to me it is a sign of poor sportsmanship to see that his camera and pictures were tampered with.

Mr. Wade was not involved in our scheme, as I told The Varsity yesterday. Please let's see no more of such "Skule Spirit."

Skule Cannon

ters from The Varsity persuaded UC Lit officials they should be allowed to see the Cannon. After journeying around the city blindfolded, the masquerading Medsmen were led into a basement room where the cannon was on display. Medical Society Bob Hetherington a member of the party, was detailed to grab the cannon, Meds spokesmen said today.

But because the keys for the car in which they had travelled to see the cannon were missing, the Meds group were forced to drop the loot and escape on foot.

When approached today, the Engineers denied the Cannon had ever been stolen. Head Cannoneer Paul La Prairie, IV Mining, said the whole affair was a figment of the imagination "from some artsman's warped brain."

"It will fire as planned at the Homecoming Float Parade," La Prairie promised.

Lit Secretary Dave Rose received the bulletin from the Engineering Society denying the loss of the cannon with the following comment:

"Mr. Paul LaPrairie of Mining Engineering, the Chief Cannoneer, has spent too much time underground in the Hollinger Mine, and has very likely contracted 'silicosis of the brain cells'."

"Hard rock miners are not expected to use their heads in such cases as this."

"We will be finished with the cannon by next Tuesday, and will probably send it back with only a new engraving to adorn its scarred flank."

New events today will probably tell the outcome of the cannon. UC officials seem to be sure that they have it now, and Skule still deny the loss. Meds are still interested in looking after it. Vic will offer sanctuary for the possessor. St. Mike's want no part of it, and St. Hilda's Old Girls Association deny that they had any part in it. Trinity are not suspected, as the affair took place at tea-time.

SKULESPOTS

During my "innerview" up at the drill hall yesterday I had a chance to see the results of the first few lessons of the golf school and speak to Gord Delaat, the instructor. He's quite pleased with the whole effort and has high hopes for the students taking the course. Joe Crysedale, of CKEY fame, also sees the value of the plan, and in fact broadcast a ten-minute recording on his program Tuesday night, all about the school. More about this later.

By the way, the soccer tilt between Sr. SPS and UC has been brought forward one day and will be played this afternoon, Thursday, at four. The installation of Dean Tupper necessitates this move. Now you know.

Any of you who have wandered through the East corridor of ye Scarlet Shrine may have noticed a carpenter busily engaged in constructing a large wooden box. No, it's not a coffin for the disgruntled ex-Skulesman who swiped the cannon last week; it's the new Trophy cabinet for School mementos of past interfaculty triumphs. George Soulis hopes that the cabinet will be ready for the Homecoming Weekend so that the grads will be able to see, for the first time, the collected results of SPS athletic endeavours of the past few decades.

The interfaculty office is still in need of referees for basketball and hockey. The work is easy, they are willing to teach you to be an efficient striped-shirt wearer, and the pay is excellent. As you can see, experience is not necessary, so don't be chicken-hearted; you can see what the dearth of competent officials has done in the past, so get up there and make your abilities felt.

Once again the call goes out for volleyball players. The teams haven't been doing too well lately, chiefly because a few good fellows are carrying the whole load for the school. It's definitely not too late. Why, oh why, must you guys be beseeched on bended knee. There certainly is enough information available, and the game doesn't take any time away from your precious schoolwork. It's the big chance for a bunch of guys who are not doing anything else for school, in any line, that is. Aw, come on fellows!

Also there is the question of cheering sections for the various teams who are engaged in the life-and-death struggle for the honour of SPS. OK, so that's a silly way of putting it. Just the same, you can help a lot if you look up the dates of games and get out to cheer. The support hasn't been too bad for football, but the lacrosse squads could definitely use some vocal support in their next few games.

Placing third, fifth, seventh, and ninth, with nine entries, Skule took the harrier last Saturday with a low score of 24. The exalted ones who helped in the decisive win were, in order, Green, Gray, Findlay and Wesson. Nice work fellows, you made up for the dozens who didn't turn out. As for the other five, who didn't place in the first ten, your efforts are not as obviously rewarding as the heroes', but they will be appreciated when the Reed Trophy standings come out in December.

I hope the second year is feeling happy, having entered a grand total of zero in the race. The third year wasn't much better, with but one. With a half dozen more, we could have overcome our group AA placing, and taken as many points as any other faculty.

That's a big point to remember: we have to enter and win about ten times as many sports as the rest of the university because of the large enrolment. Don't forget it next time you are asked to turn out.

Adios,

BENNY.

Trinity Wins 1-0 From Varsity Club In Soccer Match

By GENE RAYMOND

In a game of penalties Trinity "A" soccer squad gained a 1-0 victory over a strong combination of the Senior and Intermediate Soccer Blues yesterday afternoon. This victory extended their winning streak to eight games.

Though the Blues had the better of exchanges for the greater part of the game their shooting lacked direction. Apart from this, overconfidence was another of their drawbacks. Despite the continuous pressure, Snowden and Wareham put up a stolid defence for Trinity and defied the onslaughts of the goal-hungry Blues' forwards. Pettigrew also acquitted himself creditably, holding shots from all angles whenever they succeeded in reaching the Trinity goal.

In the first half honours were evenly divided. Barton spearheaded most of the Blues' attacks and was a persistent trier. Trinity's Foster and Forbes always looked dangerous when in possession of the ball but lacked finish.

Three penalties were awarded in the second half but only one was converted. The Blues' were awarded the first and Weatherspoon, who took the spot-kick, booted about a foot over the bar. Soon afterwards Foster put Trinity one up when he converted a penalty which was well placed out of Reed's reach. About five minutes before the final whistle Trinity were again awarded a penalty. Britton Foster again took the kick, but this time, shot straight to Reed who held the sphere safely.

The game ended with the Blues' trying to equalize but Trinity's defence held on grimly to their slender lead.

Intermediate Blues In Hamilton Today To Try McMaster

The Varsity Intermediate football Blues will journey to Hamilton today to meet the McMaster Rams at 8 p.m. in the Civic Stadium of that fair city.

This will be the second encounter for these two teams this year, and the Intermediates feel that they will be able to reverse the unfavorable 7-4 decision which they received at the hands of the McMaster squad earlier this year.

Tony Ceccutti, plunging back who played an excellent game against the Western Colts last Friday in Lonodon has been shifted to the Senior Blue squad, but the Intermediates hope that Julie Hansen, who has come down from the Blues, will be able to fill Ceccutti's shoes capably.

Bill Davis, who has been showing a great deal of promise defensively at his secondary position, linemen Bruce Brown, Stan Keiczor, and Whitehead, and newcomer Bob Bazos, now ironing the kinks out of his style in practice sessions, will all be raring to go come game time tonight. Diminutive Johnny Green, the Intermediate drop-kick specialist, will have his educated toe all tuned up.

The Rams of the present are vastly improved over the squad which suffered a humiliating 59-0 defeat at the hands of the Intermediates last fall. The game will be no pushover for either team, but the Blues are set to make it one in their favour.

Lineups:

Ends—Russell, Keiczor, McCaghery, Bullychuck.
Middles—Shay, Whitehead, Howard, McLennan.
Insides—Hyde, Hames, Dowsett, Brown.
Centers—Sutherland, Murray.
1 Backs—Green, Howson.
2 Backs—Davis, Hansen.
3 Backs—J. Hansen, Leeming.
4 Backs—Bazos, Haig.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

The intramural football referees right now could bake about three dozen pies with the rhubarbs they've been getting lately. The results of the games are being discussd less than the refereeing; and most of the beefing is in some way justified. We have watched almost all of the interfac games played so far, and have noticed plenty wrong with decisions and rule interpretations. In fact, the refs have on many occasions shown a most wondrous ignorance of the rules themselves, outside of proper or improper interpretation.

The players, coaches and students have blamed everybody from Warren Stevens to the officials themselves for the poor officiating in the strongest of terms. Things are getting so bad that there will be a meeting today of the powers that be to take care of several official protests. We agree that the refs are not doing what might be termed an efficient job; we agree that many teams are getting robbed; and we agree that the quality should be improved.

But . . . we think that under the peculiar circumstances in effect this year, the intramural league is getting the best available.

The set-up at the athletic office is this: — most of the referees with any experience left last year. The experienced tooters at the univrsity now are getting steady assignments from Harry McBrien of the High School league and are not available for regular interfac allocations.

Fred Sgambati, who is in charge of the referees, saw that since no one with experience was available, the A.D. would have to provide the experience. He instituted a sort of farm system. Several candidates were chosen and were put through a rules clinic and given an examination which they had to pass before being put on the rolls. Most of these are freshmen with several years in the U ahead of them. Fred figures that in future years they will be the referees, and new men will be broken in as linesmen. This year of course will be the toughest, but the system could perpetuate itself and provide good officiating almost always.

So if you are tempted to yell "kill the ref" or "what a Blind Tom" or some other remark complimentary to the refs, just remember that the first reason that students are used is to give them experience. Sure, they'll make mistakes, but these mistakes will get fewer and fewer. And after all, it's only a house league . . . there is no point in getting professional officials (can't afford it anyhow).

* * *

Having to take PT is bad enough, but why does the dept. in charge make the boys buy expensive uniforms ($3.00) when most already have shorts and stuff? It may be all right for first year men, but when a student bought an outfit (white shorts last year) and is forced to pay out a sum equivalent to the athletic fee, it's ridiculous, even if it looks nice on the field.

PHE Holds Lead Vic Girls Next In Softball Loop

Yesterday finished the softball games in each of the four leagues, but the season is by no means at an end.

Despite the cold winds and frozen hands that have made the last few softball games uncomfortable, the semi-finals start today on the Trinity field.

In league I, PHE I holds first place, while Vic is in second position and UC is the runner-up. PHE II took the honours in league II, with St. Mike's second and St. Hilda's II at the end. In league IV, PHE IV are top team, while Vic II came second and St. Hilda's third.

During the semi-finals all the second teams in each league play off to the winner, while the first teams are going through the same procedure. One game of 4 innings is the deciding issue between two teams, except in the event of a tie, when the game will have to be played again.

Thus starting at league IV, PHE IV will play Meds. Although this game was originally scheduled for Friday, it has been postponed until next week. The winner of this struggle meets PHE II and the outcome of this will play PHE I.

Today will see the beginning of the second team semi-finals with Vic II playing PHE III. The winner of this game will play St. Mike's tomorrow, while Vic I attacks the conquerors next week.

Norma Pinnock, President of Softball, has spent a considerable amount of time arranging schedules for all these games so far, and is at last seeing the end of her work, with the event of finals at the end of next week.

After both the second teams and the first teams play off to a winner, the winning second team plays the runner-up of the first team series.

In the finals each game consists of seven innings and this contest is between the winning first team and the outcome of the last semi-final game.

Wild Snapping Hinders Hapless Downey Dozen Valent Sparks Seniors

By MAL CRAWFORD

By wild snapping on third down kicks in their own end and failing to carry the ball across when they got in scoring position, UC squandered the advantage they earned by a superior ground attack, and were edged 5-3 by Senior SPS on the back campus yesterday. Two singles in the first half by Valenti and Weaver, and a field goal by Valenti in the second, gave the Engineers their winning edge.

The game was hard-fought, though somewhat loosely played, fumbles and penalties being quite frequent; freezing wind played havoc with both teams' passing, several of these that were thrown being intercepted.

The Red and White showed more in offensive play, getting twelve first downs to Skule's six, but the Skulemen were the opportunists. They started out strongly, when two pitch-out end runs and a buck by Adare, and a pass by Valentii put them on UC's five yard line. They failed to carry over in their first two downs, and fumbled on their third, and had to be satisfied with a single when UC failed to kick far enough to get out of danger.

UC's attack then started to roll, Bob Walker going for a couple of nice runs, but a bad snap out on third down gave SPS the ball on UC's forty. Valenti attempted a field goal, which was wide and went for a single.

UC started the second half by rolling down the field for five first downs, but were stopped on Skule's goal-line on third down When Jones and Dellenboch piled through to hold them off. A few plays later, a UC receiver was interfered with in the SPS goal area and got a first down on the ten. Again they could not put it over, and settled for a field goal by Mitteff.

Shapiro, who played a swell two-way game right through, intercepted a pass by Adare, at centre field but when he dropped back to kick on third down, the ball was snapped way over his head, Skule recovering on UC's twenty. Valenti kicked the field goal to win the game.

Adare was the Engineers' best ground gainer, and Jones and Firth were outstanding defensively. Firth was in on most of Skule's tackling from his centre secondary position before he had to leave with a gash in his forehead.

The Skulemen played good defensive football in the clutch, but couldn't do much when they had the ball. UC, though lighter, displayed very nice blocking; Barnhill repeatedly kept the end out as Walker tore through off tackle for the biggest gains of the day. The left side of their line with Tom Webb and Duggan was very hard to dent.

Line-ups:

UC—Wingback—Walker, Barnhill; Halfbacks—Shapiro, Miles; Quarter—Mitteff. Centre—P. Webb. Insides—T. Webb, Grasser; Middles—Dugan, Wilson; Ends—Wass, Hynbida. UC alternates—Jewson, Wallace, Davidson, Terry, Cullen, Law, Hrynshyn, Yates, Mckenzie, Tayler, Stott, Steinberg.

SPS—Wingback—Jones. Halfbacks—Crandell, Adare, Brown; Quarter—Valenti. Centre—Firth. Insides—Dellenboch, Rickaby. Middles—Richards, Gordon. Ends—Rowe, Wood. SPS alternates—Follensbee, Hellard, Cole, Britnell, McColm, Watson, Phemister, Laprairie, MacDonald, Weaver, Babcock, James.

Sportswoman

Miss Baxter is still looking for swimmers and there are more trials today in the Lillian Massey and UTS pools. All those who are interested in turning out to these practices are urged to have their medicals, as well as bathing suits and caps.

Splash Party

Medicals are also a must at the Vic Splash Party which is to be held in the L.M. building next Thursday night at 8.00. Joan Dales, Vic's swimming curator, stresses the need for divers for their intramural swim team.

Meds On Top

In a closely contested softball game yesterday between Meds and PHE III, Meds won their league series with a score of 6-3 putting the Fiz Edders in second place.

As usual Irene Hain, Meds, displayed her pitching ability, despite the heckling of the opposing supporters. Pat Montgomery batted the only homer of the game, in which both teams were making every play count.

Last Game

Playing their last softball league game of the season, PHE IV came out from behind to best St. Hilda's III with a score of 17-10. The Saints were leading 10-8 in the first half of the final inning when PHE took the bat and tallied up nine runs to win.

Late basketball games

In a fast well-played game on Tuesday night, PHE II downed St. Hilda's Soph B team with a score of 29-13, while St. Mike's B defeated Vic Soph B squad 15-3, although the game had frequent fouls and the passing was sloppy.

Default

The winter winds blew cold but the OCE gym blazed with lights and resounded with refs' whistles as six lusty basketball teams pounded up and down the floor.

One of the three games was defaulted, however, between Saints Frosh and UC Frosh. Due to a misunderstanding, the refs wish the following point made clear: although there may be any number of players on a team, only ten players may be dressed for a game.

UC Wins

In a rough and tumble contest between Vic Sophs and UC Sophs, there were fouls galore. At half time, with outstanding scoring by Pat Macdonald, Jane Abbot, and Maureen Irwin of UC, the baskets tallied 11-3 for UC.

Credit should also go to Betty Aston and Inge Hanson of the opposing team who scored Vic's first three points. In the second half Vic rallied to raise their total to 8, but UC still held their lead at the end of the game. Final score: 13-8.

Vic's Game

Vic Frosh B, with best basket-grabber Gwyn Griffith, defeated Physio B in the last game of the evening. In spite of a half-time total of 9-2 for Vic, the Physios, with the help of Rusty Hart, managed to net eight more balls. However Vic continued to drive and when the final whistle blew, they held a five point lead. 15-10 was the final tally.

LACROSSE

Vic seconds took the measure of Jr. SPS yesterday in the noon box-la fixture at Hart House by a 4-1 count. Murray was the top contributor for the winners as he drove in three counters with teammate Beckingham supplying the remaining Vic score. Orrel was the lone Skule marksman. He scored on a nice breakaway in the second period.

CAMPUS HAILS GRADS, WESTERN

They Sing Too!

ABOVE — Things are pretty easy for director or pianist of campus shows. At least, that is the impression one would get from seeing scenes such as that shown of the rehearsals of the Blue and White show. Bill Gervin is the man at the piano and besides playing for the beauties, he directs the rest of the show as well. The Blue and White show is being presented this Saturday at 8:00, 9:15, and 10:30 p.m. The campus Roam-Around Dance follows the show.

BELOW—One of the men Bob Masterson is counting on to carry the ball against the strong Western squad tomorrow afternoon at Varsity Stadium is Bill Brewer. Up with the Blues this year, Brewer played last season with the intermediates. After playing outstanding ball all season, Brewer is expected to turn in a sterling performance as a triple threat back.

3.00 p.m. -6.00 p.m.—Receptions and teas.

RIGHT—One of the hardest hitting linemen in last Saturday's game was Fraser "Moose" Mustard. In the scrimmage this week Mustard has had to practice alone because other Blues are afraid of his supercharged activity. (Western papers please copy.)

BELOW—While Varsity Blues are facing the crucial game of the season with numerous injuries, the Western Mustangs are parading to the contest at almost full strength. One of the strong selling points for the Broncos is fleet Don McFarlane.

ABOVE—They might be looking into the future and smiling at what they see. They might be chortling over a victory that seems to be written in the sky. As it happens, Blues Coach, Bob Masterson (left) and assistant coach Don Mitchell are just admiring the blue skies over Lake Couchiching during the fall training camp.

ABOVE—Will he or will he not? That seems to be the big question for Coach Masterson and most of the Varsity supporters. Will Captain Archie Jones be in shape to start at the centre slot for the Blues or will he be forced to sit this this game out too? Archie says that it's far easier sitting on a bench but his fingers itch to clutch the ball.

Varsity Week-End

(The following editorial is reprinted from the Western Gazette, student newspaper of the University of Western Ontario

This week-end, well over a thousand Western students and supporters will converge on Toronto to witness the Western-Varsity tussle Saturday afternoon. With them will go a Trample-Toronto-and-Bounce-the-Blues spirit.

But last weekend, University of Toronto students and rooters came to London with much the same attitude and allowed their exuberance to get the better of them.

School rivalry gives rise to many little incidents, usually quite harmless, but rivalry was no excuse for the near-riot which took place at the Hotel London, Friday night, and the resultant damage to hotel property.

Most of the trouble which took place there, and which required police intervention, was not entirely the fault of U. of T. students. Much of it stemmed from heated arguments between them and Western supporters.

It is expected that students will mix school and alcoholic spirits and create some stir, but it is also expected that university students are sufficiently mature and intelligent to realize that when they go beyond the realm of decency and fail to exercise restraint, they do not only damn themselves but the school with which they are associated.

And that is why, today, many people in London feel a little annoyance at Varsity—and college students in general.

When Western students swarm on Toronto, therefore, it is hoped that they will not give hotels there the opportunity to ban student movement within those buildings, nor to provoke police interference in any of their activities.

It is also hoped that Western students will refrain from any form of petty retaliation comparable to that performed by Toronto students on the campus last Saturday.

On that occasion the visitors succeeded in taking our goal posts. (We aren't complaining—Western took the game.) But it is questioned as to what was achieved by the act. After tearing down the posts, one party of students dumped a section into the Thames River. What wasteful mutilation of university property!

Our activities in Toronto this week-end will determine the degree of welcome given students in the future. It will also determine Western's reputation as a school.

We must remember that as Western supporters, we will not be in Toronto as individuals, but as representatives of a great school, responsible for her name. And it is up to us to remember it at all times.

L.W.H.

The Gazette places responsibility for the good conduct this week-end on the shoulders of the Western supporters. The Varsity thinks that the caution applies as well to all Varsity supporters.

Rugby Team, Jokes, Girls At Pep Rally

Sorcerers, rabble-rousers and comedians will be the rage at tonight's pep rally. It will be "terrific, outstanding and different" promises John Bahen, one of the organizers.

Bob Hetherington, President of the students' Administrative Council, will present the Big Blues to the assembled Varsity rooters and the cheer girls will be all limbered up to leap for the glory of the Blue and White.

The hush-hush program has leaked out and consists, in brief, of an unknown comedian, a famous quartet, faculty skits, a brand new pep song "Follow the Blues" and the brawn laddies of the Pipe Band.

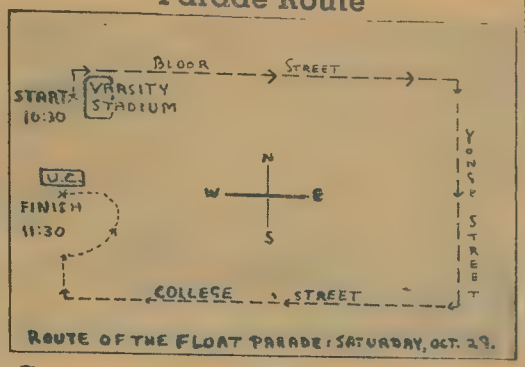
The Ancient and Mystic Conclave of Alchemists and Sorcerers is going to pronounce it's first ritual curse against the doomed Western squad! This will be the first time a curse has been pronounced under scientific conditions and trained observers will watch to see if the Western boys turn green, lose hair etc.

To top off the merriment a snake dance will wiggle its way down St. George and College Streets and bring her to a halt before Convocation Hall for a monstrous street dance. Kallmike will be there!

HMS Ajax Model Given To Young At SPS Dinner

Speaking at the Engineering Society's Annual Dinner last night, Dean C. R. Young told engineers that more scientific work than ever before is awaiting them. He said that the state of engineering fifty years ago was much simpler, and based mainly on the empirical rule of thumbs; that the greatest proportion of engineers were engaged in exploration of primary resources in Canada; that geologists, surveyors and mining engineers were confined to the development of transport and resources.

He continued with the statement that theoretical facts are still to be established on scientific inventions brought about by the war in order to form the basis of laws.



Dave Davis, president of class of '50 presented a scale model of HMS Ajax to Dean Young.

Barney Warren then proposed a toast to the University, to which Prof. Smith replied by stating that SPS was not second to any school at the university, but that the whole university was greater than the sum of its parts, and greater than all of its parts.

If the Skule cannon has been stolen, as I read in The Varsity, I sincerely hope that it will be returned by Saturday afternoon to be

ROUTE OF THE FLOAT PARADE: SATURDAY, OCT. 29.

Spectacular Float Parade Planned For Homecoming

The biggest parade that Toronto has ever seen, outside of the Santa Claus Parade, will take place on Saturday morning at 10:30 a.m., publicity man of the Blue and White Society Paul Break announced tonight. "Final details of the Homecoming Float Parade have been ironed out, and rain or shine, this parade will be one of the most novel events of the campus year," he added.

More than 20 floats have been entered from the various faculties and clubs across the campus. While the nature of the parade is specially directed at the returning alumni, undergraduates will find events of campus interest featured in every float. Accompanying the parade, and lending musical assistance, will be the Blue and White band, the Varsity Pipe Band, the Lady Godiva memorial band of the Skule entry, and bands on the floats from industrial management and the school of music. It is hoped that the band from the University of Western Ontario will also participate.

The shield which is presented annually by the S.A.C. is at present held by Forestry, which is going to make a strong attempt to recapture the trophy.

In the lead car will be Marjorie Erskine, Red Feather Girl of '49, Bill Turner, chairman of the Blue and White Society, and others. The parade will start at 10 30 Saturday morning at Devonshire Place and Bloor St. It will proceed along Bloor St. to Yonge St., down Yonge to College, along College to the Wallburg Memorial Bldg., and up to the loop around the front campus, where it will proceed to the Reviewing Stand in front of U.C.

On the Judging Platform will be President Sidney Smith, W. A. Osborne, President of the Alumni Assn., and Bob Heatherington, SAC President. President Smith will present the trophy to the winning float. It is expected that the parade will take approximately one hour, and the shield will be presented at 11:30 a.m.

The various entries are being assembled today and tonight, and strict secrecy covers the nature of every entry. Rumors that Medsmen would remove an appendix on their float has met with answers of "no comment," while Skule denies that they will have their float built on a Labatt's truck.

U.S. Recants On Entry Ban Grants Visa To Shortliffe

U. S. Attorney General, Howard McGrath, announced last night that following an investigation the temporary ban on the entrance of Dr. Glen Shortliffe, Queen's University French professor, had been removed. Dr. Shortliffe, who earlier in the year had held a temporary U.S. visa, was refused entry to the country last month while en route to a teaching post.

The banning of Dr. Shortliffe caused considerable campus editorial comment in Canada. Dr. Shortliffe, who had sold his house and resigned his Queen's position, has not yet indicated whether he will now accept the U.S. post.

There has been no further statement on the banning of the U of T professor, Dr. Barker Fairley, who was to have gone to Bryn Mawr on a lectureship.

Kingston — (CUP) — Dr. Glen Shortliffe told a meeting of Queen's students that Russia's fear of other world powers accounted for her chip-on-the-shoulder attitude to them. However, Russia was not the only one afraid, he said. "We're afraid too. We've behaved as if we were afraid in Palestine, Greece, and China." This fear is carried into civil life, with a resulting materia "which makes anything possible," he continued.

"Twenty years ago citizens would have risen in their righteous wrath to cry for their elementary democratic rights.' Today, they are almost afraid to protest any abrogation of their human rights."

Hearty Welcome, Gigantic Reception Planned For Grads

Judging by the ticket sales, the Homecoming Week-End will be a gigantic success. This was announced yesterday by Joe Prendergast, Chairman of the Homecoming Committee of the Blue and White Society. About thirteen hundred alumni tickets have been sold already, and this does not include the grads who have season tickets.

Busy Schedule

The week-end opens with the Alumni Association's dinner at Burwash Hall on Friday evening at 6:30 p.m.

At 8:15 there will be a service at University Avenue Synagogue conducted by Rabbis N. Shapiro and A. Kamerling. The symposium theme will be "Moral Values In Higher Education."

For the undergrads, the fun will start with the pep rally to be held at 8:30 on the back campus, where both football teams will be introduced. The Blue and White Band, cheerleaders, skits, songs and fireworks will all be featured.

Saturday morning at 9:30, the executives of the various branches of the alumni association will meet at Sanford Hall.

The Faculty and College Float Parade will take place at 11 00. Nineteen entries will attempt to take the trophy away from Forestry. "The parade promises to be even better than last year," Prendergast said.

The Varsity-Western game is at 2:00, with half-time entertainment by the Blue and White Society.

Further Plans

There will be a reception for the grads and faculty Saturday evening in the big drafting room adjacent to Convocation Hall.

The same evening, the Blue and White Show will be presented in Convocation Hall. There will be three performances, at 8:00, 9:15, and 10:30.

The Roam-Around Dance starts at 8:30 p.m. There will be dancing in Hart House, the Junior Common Room, Trinity College, Victoria College, the COTC Drill Hall, and the Ontario College of Art. Music will be by Mart Kenney, Stanley St. John, Stan Patton, and others.

Sunday morning religious services will be held in Convocation Hall, St. Michael's College, Newman Chapel,

Flight Scheme For Students Discontinued

The Toronto Committee of the National Federation of Canadian University Students approved work done to continue their air transport scheme for students travelling abroad in the summer. Many students made use of the scheme this summer, but the Federation's national organization decided to drop the plan next year, Toronto Committee Chairman Tom Symons explained.

The recent decision of the MacMillan Company of Canada not to supply the University of Toronto Book Store with text books as long as the Press offers its ten percent discount to students will be investigated by NFCUS, the Committee decided at its meeting yesterday in Trinity College Board Room.

Copy SAC Exchange

The investigation will be only part of a study of the whole text price question being made by a special sub-committee, led by Dave Irwin, Forestry representative on the Toronto NFCUS Committee. The sub-committee is collecting statistics on the prices of American books in Canada and in the United States. It is also planning a brief for other local committees of NFCUS suggesting that they might set up book exchanges like that run here by SAC and other such projects to relieve students of high book expenses.

Regarding student exchanges between the University of Toronto and American universities, Symons suggested an attempt to help students to overcome currency difficulties.

A letter was read from UC. Lit President Jack Hoshin suggesting that the Committee try to organize this winter simultaneous seminars here and in Quebec in which students from Quebec and from the University of Toronto will take part. He suggested that 50 students from each province would be able to take part.

Seminar Scheme Out

The concensus of the Committee was that the task would be too great to be carried out this year and it would tend to duplicate the Cara-

STADIUM STAN

At last year's Western-Varsity game here, the students put on a card display at half time. The initials UT were spelled out with cards; blue on one side and white on the other.

The merit of the idea may be judged by the fact that Western students this year saw fit to copy the stunt at London.

This year the Blue and White Society are planning a bigger display. Students who have seats in the South end of the Stadium will find the cards in their seats with instructions on the back.

Instructions for displaying the cards will be shown on a blackboard at half time. The manner of holding them for the best effect is shown at the top of the column. Instructions for reversing the cards will be given during the display.

President of the Blue and White Society, Bill Turner, requests the student card-bearers to keep the cards until the final play of the game.

Art ∞ Music ∞ Drama

TSO — Pierre Fournier

Sir Ernest MacMillan conducted the Toronto Symphony Orchestra in the first of its twin-subscription concerts last night at Massey Hall. Renowned French violoncellist Pierre Fournier was guest artist in Anton Dvorak's "Concerto in B Minor for 'Cello and Orchestra" (Opus 104).

Three major works comprised the program: Handel's Concerto Grosso in G Minor, opus 6, No. 6; the Dvorak concerto, and Sibelius' Symphony in E Minor, No. 1, opus 39.

Handel

Excepting the "Messiah" and the "Water Music" rare are the occasions when works of George Frederick Handel are played in full. This sixth of the composer's Twelve Grand Concertos was stimulating proof of Handel's genius in the string suite form, and of the TSO conductor's competent baton. Astounding was the orchestra's overnight recovery from Friday's Pops (Varsity, October 23). Sections met Sir Ernest's cues with razor-edge precision in the Concerto with its intricate 2nd movement fugue, its sparkling, delicate 5th movement minuet. The conductor's flair for a work of pomp and circumstance was evident in the Handel suite.

Dvorak

Just as Beethoven wrote his Violin Concerto for virtuoso violinist Joachim, so Anton Dvorak composed his B Minor Concerto for Wihan, his 'cellist friend, in 1895.

Insofar as few passages subordinate 'cello to orchestra, the 'cellist's influence appears to pervade the entire piece. But unlike the Chopin concerti, Dvorak's orchestration is far more than rhythmic accompaniment. The TSO-Fournier performance achieved a lyric blending of instrument and orchestra in which neither to the other was subordinated nor subdued.

Pierre Fournier is a master of his craft. His bow was unpretentious and economic in technique, virile and resonant in tone, intensely moving in effect. 'Cellist Fournier created the melodic, impulsive folk themes in movement 1, suspended them in movement 2, and recreated them in the 3rd movement to bring the concerto to a triumphant close.

Sibelius

In respect to Finnish composer Jan Sibelius some listeners divide resolutely to either of two camps—those who like him, and those who don't. As we are in progress from the latter to the former, last night's performance of his E Minor Symphony did not stir this listener as it would one whose taste has resolved.

To us Sibelius' symphony in its harmonic and thematic construction, in its moody up-and-downs bears too intensive a resemblance to the bleak, uninviting wilderness of the composer's native land. Although the TSO rendition was clean-cut and true-to-score, this listener was left somewhat abstracted and unstirred. Whether the cause lay with the composer, the conductor, the orchestra, or the listener, or in a combination of all four, is a conclusion we have not yet been able to reach.

Ashes In The Wind

For its "Wednesday Night" Oct. 26th the C.B.C. presented Max Schoub's "Ashes in the Wind" directed by Rupert Kaplan in Montreal. In the preliminary fifteen minute announcement and chat between author and director there was the somewhat discouraging statement that Max Schoub had taken two months to write a play "to prove once and for all that literature can exist for the radio". More encouraging was the reaction of a reader of the play who was so hurt by it that she wished she had the money to buy up the rights in order to suppress it forever. She thought it came too close to the lives of too many people.

Misleading, was the description of the play first as opening in a state of crisis which is prolonged throughout, and second as concerning four people who react to the same situation with increasing futility. The actual performance proved much better than these semi-critical feints would suggest.

The play is powerful without being subtle. Ideas and feelings go into action — ideas and feelings of our time. It is a tragedy — differing perhaps from earlier conceptions of tragedy in that the catharsis is produced in the characters rather than the audience. This is not accidental, but concerns basic discoveries and techniques of modern science and art.

The techniques of radio drama inevitably draw attention to the fact that to-day we think of the true scene of every drama as inside ourselves. This is an age of inside stories as well as of inter-cellular x-ray photography. The radio play is potentially flexible to an even greater degree than cinema. So that without any strain on credulity it can shift in a few seconds from half-uttered whispers from the inner consciousness to noisy public scenes. Its natural structure therefore tends to be musical, because of the ease with which harmony and counterpoint of various thoughts and feelings can be achieved.

"Ashes in the Wind" takes advantage of some of these possibilities of counterpoint, for example in presenting the intimacies of home-life as affected simultaneously by the illness of Mrs. Crandal in four separate houses. The same event is caught up in several conversations at once, making in the mind of the audience for more inclusive consciousness than was possible in any earlier art form.

The stage cannot approach this inclusiveness and simultaneity without using such dodges as O'Neill's "unseen" voice of conscience — an extension of the Elizabethan "aside" which was also a failure to achieve a genuine convention. The screen can approach this degree of simultaneity but the visual shift is distracting, involving us as it does in an externality of focus by the need to change the set with the scene of action.

One further resource of the radio play is the possibility of historical simultaneity. There is nothing to prevent the audience from accepting, simultaneously, voices from widely separated centuries, provided the themes spoken by those voices are in some sort of musical rapport. This is really to say that the radio approaches the condition of verse itself with its power of swift change of pace, texture, theme, time and place.

Television will probably prove as destructive of these possibilities as sound was fatal for the development of screen technique.

As for the dramatic structure of "Ashes in the Wind" (for which a better title should be found) it is frankly taken from Freud whose works are quoted at opening and close with choric intention and effect. As I remember them the words are: "Suffering comes to man from three sources, from his body, from the hostile physical forces of the outer world and from his relationships with others. Of all kinds of suffering we suffer most in our relations with other people."

It is the mortal and prolonged illness of Mrs. Crandal which produces in her children and relations and also her doctor, sufferings on these three levels. Their health is affected. Their finances (the outer world) are ruined. Their personal relations with one another deteriorate to the point where they express confess murderous impulse without horror and amazement at themselves. And this is their catharsis.

Artistically perhaps it is their open confession of murderous impulse that justifies the play as tragedy or cathartic, suggesting the real desirability of such plays (rather than a supply of Kygmies) since all this distinguishes the action of this play from ordinary existence today is this final stripping of social convention which produces the confession which amazes the protagonists. The abyss opens for a moment, and they are purged, restored. Social convention is renewed and revitalized. It is given a meaning which makes it not only tolerable but necessary.

Tragedy is not possible on Christian or Marxist terms. That is to say it has no theological dimension. But it is "necessary" for Christians and marxists alike simply because it performs a social catharsis. (As such a consistent Marxist should oppose its occurrence in bourgeois territory just as he should at all times be extremely insolent to waiters and menials in this respect it is curious to note that the only tragedy native to the continent is the Hollywood gangster movie. The doomed gangster purges the passions of commercialism Nubris, and since he is the tragic figure we have produced it is to be presumed that we have no other passions. The Hollywood romantic hero, if he is to be of more than adolescent type, has to be imported — Boyer, etc.

Rupert Kaplan's job of direction made the most of modulating the tone of the play from hysteria to quiet reverie, showing genuine mastery in this department.

Herbert Marshall McLuhan.

Fascism in U.S.?

Editor, The Varsity:

As an individual who still believes in democracy and fair play, I think that it is the duty of all freedom-loving Canadians to protest, by writing or wiring President Truman, the disgraceful circumstances surrounding the recent trial of the twelve leaders of the American Communits Party.

It is clear that these men were condemned for their beliefs, and not because of any breach of the law. The subsequent imprisonment of their defense attorneys was an attempt to intimidate those in America who still believe in equality before the law for all citizens.

If we, the people allow these sentences to stand, by remaining silent, then the mass of democratic legal precedent which has been established in America will begin to disappear. The thin edge of the Fascist wedge will have entered the hearts of freedom in North America.

O. M. Grant,
II S.P.S.

Poster Cost High

Editor, The Varsity:

Since the inception of the academic year 1949-50, the U.C. 'Lit', in the course of its duties to date, has been required to have considerable printing duties performed. It has been brought to the attention of the Executive of this Society that there is a severe discrepancy between the rates charged by the University of Toronto Press and those of various Toronto publishing and printing houses.

May we cite one example? Fifteen posters for the U.C. Freshman Initiation Barn Dance, at the U. of T. Press cost $11.21, or over 74½c. each!

Fifty posters for the U.C. Follies, of the same size, color and style, were recently purchased at a local firm giving the best of service and satisfaction for $8.50, or 17c. each.

Of course, the Press charge of 74½c. would, perhaps, be reduced to about 74c. even had the quantity of fifty been purchased, but nevertheless, the outrageous leap in price between 74c. plus, and 17c. for virtually the same thing is hardly plausible... particularly so after the rosy advertising campaign of the Press and Book Store, early this term.

Such discrepancies, we feel, should merit the consideration of university authorities, students and student governments on this campus.

The Executive of the U.C.,
David Rose, Sec.

Bicycle Parking

Editor, The Varsity:

With reference to your article regarding the banning of bicycle parking under the Soldier's Tower, may I be allowed, as a bicycle rider, to point out that this practice is only a symptom of a more basic cause, viz., the lack of covered parking facilities for bicycles anywhere on the campus? To impute the practice to thoughtlessness or to disregard for our brave dead would seem to be sheer emotionalism. Perhaps this is a matter that the recently formed Liaison Committee with the Caput could properly deal with, along with the related problem of parking for motor vehicles. Surely considering the large numbers of cycle riders, it would not be unreasonable to expect that the university should provide some sort of covered parking facilities for those who may wish to use them.

COMING EVENTS

FRESHMEN—VIC SCM

"Philosophy—must it clash?" is the topic for the round-table discussion group, Monday 4 p.m., in Vic. Room 21.

Roamaround Promises Fun Plus Variety

Saturday night those who have bought tickets to the post-game Roamaround Dance will be able to shake a leg through the length and breadth of the campus. If you like you can start out at Hart House where there will be dancing in both the upper and lower gyms with Mart Kenny doing the honors in the upper. Then you can move on to the Drill Hall (Stan Patton and his orchestra).

From there you might try Brennan Hall or the Alumni Hall in Victoria College. Then if your date is still raring to go, you can take her over to Strachan Hall in Trinity College (Stanley St. John) which still leaves you plenty of time for an attack on the J.C.R. By following through the complete itinerary, you will be able to take in the performances of Paul Simmons, Fred Evis and Doug Henderson as well.

"Western is expected to be well represented at the dance and from all indications it promises to be a lively affair," Blue and White publicity directory Paul Break, said last night.

Tickets will be on sale at the Observatory in front of Hart House noon Friday till 10 o'clock Saturday night.

Paul LaPrairie, head cannoneer, then gave a toast to Dean Tupper. In his reply the Dean stated that the reputation of any school or faculty is made by the graduates.

Defense Strategy Against Western Near Completion

Preparations for defence of Varsity Stadium against possible assaults by "foreign" invaders are nearing completion today, so reports Terry Jaeger, Blue and White Society Stadium Defence Committee chairman. Under the lead of Jaeger and his lieutenants, many faculties and colleges have contributed manpower for the night-long vigil.

In a statement last night, Jaeger promised if plans go ahead as they are now set up, Western will not have a chance to get into the stadium either Friday night or Saturday morning before game-time. Due to security reasons, details of the guarding strategy were not available for publication, Jaeger said.

To make the sleepless night less tedious, Occupational Therapy girls are to supply sandwiches, coffee and company for the Friday night shift guards in the Stadium.

Although many students have already offered their time and cars for the Stadium vigil, more students and more cars are needed, chairman Jaeger pointed out. Those who wish to help out between the hours of 7 p.m. Friday evening to 11 a.m. Saturday, should leave their phone numbers and names at the SAC office in Hart House, Jaeger said.

U.C., Not Skule To Fire Cannon In Float Parade

"The attitude of the School of Practical Science at the disappearance of their Pop-gun followed by the declaration by the more noble men of Skule that 'The cannon will go off on schedule in Saturday's Float Parade' has prompted the Lit to take action," UC Lit officials said last night.

"We are going to fire off the skule cannon shortly after one o'clock Friday in front of U.C.," they declared.

A U.C. man disguised as a plumber took part in an emergency discussion last night and learned that Skule expected the cannon to be fired off next Tuesday noon in celebration of the opening of Follies ticket sales. To this end they devised a plan by which the whole of University College would be moved stone by stone to Varsity Stadium.

"Rather than be chickens and fire it off without warning, we are using this means to let the noble men of Skule know their chances. By the way, these chances will be very slim. The U.C. rugby team will be out in full uniform and other U.C. stalwarts of assorted shapes and sizes will be hanging around," stated the Litmen.

SOCCER RESULTS

SPS overcame the strong soccer entry from UC, 2-1, last night in a thrilling tussle on the front campus. Both teams exhibiting great sportsmanship and conditioning, the game was a good one to watch. Moffat and Rigabert were the scorer for Skule while Cullens got the lone UC tally.

bin weekend and the Quebec seminar to be held next summer.

Music Faculty Representative Don McKellar reported progress in plans for the Carabin weekend. He said his sub committee working on the project is now considering financial questions and the selection of students to go to Montreal.

McKellar said the entertainment being planned by the University of Montreal for Toronto students when they visit Montreal will be difficult to match when the "Cabarins" spend their weekend in Toronto.

Each year the University of Montreal entertains Toronto students in Montreal for one weekend and this university does the same for the Montrealers.

Ancient Roman Comedy Plot Still Successful Prof Claims

J. CAMERON

The basic formula for comedy with which the dramatist Terence "wowed" Roman audiences in 300 B.C. has been successful right up to the present day, according to Professor Northrop Frye. Introduced by his colleague, Professor F. Hare, honorary president, he spoke at the monthly meeting of the Victoria College Dramatic Society, at Wymilwood Wednesday evening.

Promising to be "the thinnest possible slice of ham in the sandwich," Professor Frye proceeded to expound this thesis. With boy meeting girl in Act I, the basic comedy progresses through three acts of complications, and ends in Act V with boy getting girl. Moliere, Ben Jonson, Dante, and especially Shakespeare, on whose dramas he has just finished writing a paper, were all cited by the speaker in his humorous address as making use of the formula.

The University Film Society's first production, "As the Twig is Bent", telling the story of the work of the University Settlement House, was shown. Bill Campbell, President of that society, introduced the film.

Marg Smith, IV Vic, demonstrated make-up techniques by practical illustration's on members of the cast of the evening's dramtic presentation.

Under the direction of Ruth Bray, I Pass, George Kelly's play "The Flattering Word" was presented by a group of the members.

Dave Gardner president, reported on the society's production of Arthur Miller's "All 'y Sons" soon to be presented in Hart House Theatre. Original sets for this presentation have been designed by property manager, Bill Milnes.

The program was concluded with a discussion of a soliloquy from Hamlet, interpreted by three men famous in the role: Maurice Evans, John Gielgud, and John Barrymore.

Semi-Final Game

The first game of the semi-final in women's softball was played yesterday on Trinity field. PHE III licked Vic II 22-3.

PHE were strong in the hitting department, chalking up ten runs in the first inning. But Vic had trouble with Gi Corcoran, PHE pitcher, who allowed three only to hit in the first three innings.

First baseman Marg Bell Somerworth, and second baseman Ann Sharpe brought in three runs apiece for PHE as well as playing excellently on grounders and in field flies.

The only strong hitting for Vic during was Jackie Dobson who got three in-field flies at special moments.

Three runners crossed the plate for Vic in the fourth inning but their effort came too late to catch their opponents.

The next game, to be played today, is PHE III vs. St. Mike's with the winner meeting Vic I next week.

Physio A downed Uc Sr. Jr. B's by a score of 20-9. The game was very rough and featured many fumbles.

Barb Bedford and Phil Wilks played well for the winners while Wilma Booty put up a good fight for UC.

In a fast and well-played basketball tilt last night the gals from Meds beat the stuffings out of St. Mike's B team by the score of 49-3. As the score would indicate the female sawbones ran rampant over the inept crew from St. Mike's hooping in basket after basket. Although their defence was terrible the winners high scoring forward duo of Worth and Line made up for this obvious lack as they ran circles around the hapless Mike's Maidens, hooking in shots from all angles. Franny O'Brien played a stalwart game for the losers.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

from the standpoint of the student fun-seekers and (b) give the team some needed support and votes of confidence. We'll be there; will you?

Dick Brown has been calling the plays in practices this week, and will probably be Masterson's field general come Saturday. Cummings looks like he might play, and some of the other injured boys may be back. Heartening news indeed, but the Blues still are plagued with more than their share of injuries.

The importance of the next three games, and especially Saturday's, cannot be overstressed. Varsity must win the next three; if they don't, the Yates cup will change hands. If they do, the league might wind up with a three-team tie for first or a two place tie for second. All of which will put great gobs of badly needed gold in the U.T.A.A. coffers.

So it boils down to this: tomorrow's game can mean hold on the championship and a hold on a new roof for the Arena with it.

LET'S GO BLUES!

Note for engineers: Excerpt from a letter we received from the School of Nursing: ". . . since Skulemen cannot successfully defend our goalposts, we will send two or three of our weaker girls to show them how. We would appreciate it if you would print this letter so that Skulemen will not gather around the posts and get in our way."

Marauders Mauled By Intermediate Blues

Blue Seconds Win First Drubbing McMaster 17-1 Hanson, Howson Sparkle

By BRUCE MacDONALD

Hamilton, Oct. 27—(Staff)—The Varsity Intermediates copped their first win of the season here to-night as they drubbed the McMaster Marauders 17-1 under the lights at Civic Stadium. The junior blues scored in every quarter except the first, with Rich Howson and Julie Hanson playing large roles in the victory.

McMaster Outplayed

Varsity completely outplayed the Hamiltonians as they ran up 17 first downs to McMaster's 11. Completed four out of ten passes behind the good hurling of Bob Bazos, to two for seven for Mac Julie Hanson was the standout of the Blue backfield and Steeves was his counterpart on the Marauder halfline. To win this first game, the Blues really played well-integrated ball and looked able to equal the point output of any other intermediate team in the loop.

The first quarter was uneventful as far as score went, the Blues taking time to get acclimatized to the light in the stadium. In the second period the Blues drove to the Mac two yard line on two occasions, being foiled on the first attempt by the stubborn Marauder line. But the second time they were in scoring position they made no mistakes as Bazos fired to Kleczor for the TD. Convert attempt failed. To end the quarter Hanson made a beautiful quick kick a la Cummings to notch a single.

In the third quarter the seconds pulled away on a touchdown by Hanson after Rich Howson had intercepted a Mac pass and run to the two. Again the convert was missed. An identical touchdown was scored in the last quarter as Howson repeated his intercepting play and again ran to the two. Julie Hanson again obliged by majoring. Gawinski converted. MacMaster got their lone point after a Varsity fumble when Arnott kicked a point from the 25.

Senior Soccer Season Starts Here Saturday

The University of Toronto Soccer Blues, fresh from their recent victory over Ukrainians of the Toronto Senior league, play their first league game of the year on the campus at 11 a.m. to-morrow morning. The Intermediate game, scheduled for 10, will be the first item of a double-header against the formidable Western squads.

Only one change is t obe seen on the Senior line-up from that which has sparkled in their last two games: Wotherspoon replaces Leach at right-half, and it is felt that this will assist in tightening up a shaky defence. Jimmy Wotherspoon hails frae Glasgow, and comes to us straight from Ulster United. The Intermediates, who already have one league win to their credit, show no change.

These two games have been eagerly awaited by fans and players alike, and should provide some fine entertainment for all. The Blues could do with a large cheering-section, and either game will provide a good warm-up for the afternoon football fray.

Teams. Senior: Reed, Moffat, D. Mercer, Wotherspoon, Evans (capt.), Thompson, Kuchkuda, Barton, Antoni, Wyler, Allen. Subs, Leach, Moffat L.

Intermediate: Broadburst, Raymodn; Friele, Moffat, L., Schuler; Wilson, Williams, Rigabert, Delfosse, Comrie. Subs, Horney, Dos Santos.

Rugged Ruggers In Big Cup Tilt

The McTier Cup game will be contested on the back Campus to-morrow at 1:15 p.m., for all the many fans interested in English Rugger. The University team is tackling the strong Toronto Wanderers outfit. The winner of this game go to Montreal where they will play the champions of that city. The winner of that tilt will play the winners of the Maritime League in hat same city. A very tough game is expected and all those fans who aren't going to the football game are in for a new sports thrill if they turn out for this important game.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

It is not our policy of criticising fellow writers from other papers, but there was one item in a recent issue of The Western Gazette that got a snicker out of us. Don Hunt, in his story on the Western game says (and we quote) "Bob Masterson joined the M.B.M. (Murdered By Metras) Club" etc. and etc. Unless one is feeding an undernourished ego, one would hardly think that losing by three points is being murdered. The way the Western fans were sweating blood for the last quarter leaves the question open as to who was murdering whom.

Today marks the beginning of one of the most hectic week-ends ever devised by mankind. Things will get off to a rip-snorting start Friday night when the University will turn out for a MPR (Monster Pep Rally) and street dance. These affairs are looked upon in two different lights. One school of thought loves them; to wit: the students, coaches, players, and newspapers. The other school hates, fears, and in general thinks they're immature. There are the police, T.T.C. inspectors, Bloor Street motorists, and people minding their own business.

Pep Rallies are great things, though. They're a lot of fun for the students, and we believe they do have a good effect on the team. If a team is winning, the rallies have [illegible] on the players' morale, but if they are [illegible] they do help the players' morale. They [illegible] know they're not forgotten. The value of a rally increases proportionately to the number of losses it tears [illegible].

We believe today's rally will (a) be one of the best

Docs Beaten By Dentists; Win Third 21-1

By BOB DNIEPER

Dents yesterday showed their superiority over Meds II when they plowed their way over the Red-and-Blacks to bury them 21-1. Meds were scored on through line strength on the part of the Dentals and through costly bobbles. The fumbles, in addition to being costly, were very entertaining.

Moore Majors

The Tooth tinkerers started their point getting early in the game, when they drove from their own five right down the field to the Meds' three on a varied dish of plays. Moore went over for the first major count.

Several plays later White intercepted a Medical pass to give his team possession. He then proceeded to sweep around the end for a hard forty yard run that paid off with five points.

The Meds quarterback, then pulled the Shovelled-To-The-Wrong-Guy Play when he called a shovel pass and gave the ball to Kidd, left end for Dents, who ran for another five markers.

Blow Chances

Tench of Meds played a hard plunging game, but his fine play was nullified by the teams fumbling.

The Meds drove back far enough for Jones to kick a single when McIntyre caught the ball-carrier behind the Dents' line.

The second half was uneventful, till the last quarter, when the Dents scored their last major. After a sustained passing drive the Dents reached their opponents' 13. Ross McMillan threw a beauty into the hands of Jack Simpson in the end

Sportswoman

Splash parties have become the vogue on the campus this last week. St. Hilda's had one on Tuesday night in the Lillian Massey pool when about 25-30 swimming enthusiasts turned out to an evening of fun and races.

From the many varied events a tentative team of ten people was chosen. Diana Jacob was outstanding in both style and ornamental swimming, while Charlotte Chisholm shone on the diving board.

Both Nancy Sootheran and Mariel Chisholm are also worthy of mention as they were good in all the events. The Sophs won the medley relay, but placed second in the meet with the Juniors at the top, only a slim two points ahead.

Vic will have their swimming get-together next Tuesday at 8:00 in the LM pool. Joan Dales, Vic swim curator, stressed the need for divers and she hopes that a lot will turn out, as this is one way the interfaculty teams are picked.

Ground Hockey

The University of Toronto Women's Ground Hockey Team will play a similar team of II from McMaster University this Saturday morning on the south playing field at Havergal College at 10:00.

SENIOR MEDS AND VIC FIGHT TO LACROSSE TIE

In a rousing rough and ready tilt in the lacrosse league yesterday afternoon, Vic Srs. and Meds battled to an eight-all tie. Vic, lead by the steady playmaking of Hastings and Davidson gave the defending champions a real run for their money. Veteran Axe Halburton of Meds scored three goals to aid the Meds' cause. Ted Beaton with two, Varga, Anderson and Hetherington were the other Meds' scorers.

Masterson Still Mum About Blues' Chances

Word from Bob Masterson continues non-committal to say the least. The coach of the Big Blues had no idea last night as to what his starting line-up would be come Saturday and the important 'do or else' game. If possible, the coach was even more despondent and tight-mouthed than he was at the same time last week.

Perhaps he has reason to be gloomy—Archie Jones, captain of the squad is a doubtful starter as are Boogie Roberts, Joe Errington, Bruce Cummings and Wally London. Al Stevenson is definitely a non-starter. One hope of the coach is that Tony Cecutti, Ex-Meds star, and recently with the Intermediates will provide some new life to the backfield.

Forge is staying up with the Blues as is Norm West. The only good word Masterson had was that Hubie Sinclair would be ready to play. One change in tactics will be that the play calling will be done by Dick Brown, who has a very fine sense of leadership on the field, and knows how to mix his plays up. This fact was demonstrated last year when Dick led the St. Mike's team in the intramural circuit to the Mulock Cup championship.

While the Blues have been weakened since last week, the Mustangs, if anything are stronger, but Toronto will have some advantage in having the game at Varsity where, it will be remembered, they came through so nobly last season to beat the mighty Mustangs on two successive Saturdays. O.K. Blues let's do it again! Now or never.

CHAMPION BLUES TAKE WESTERN

Beautiful Blue Blocking

Here is one of the big reasons why the Blues managed to take Western by the score of 7-0 Saturday afternoon. Note the way Dick Brown is keeping well behind the protective frame of "Jay Jay" Kelly. The Blues made use of their interference as illustrated here most of the afternoon and showed the Mustangs that they have lots more on the ball than a sometimes ineffective passing attack. Kelly made lots of nice blocks such as the one illustrated here on Elmer Quintyn of Western.

Blues In Peak Form Take Mustangs 7-0 To Stay In Running

By BILL ROSS

The University of Toronto Big Blues Saturday shut out the Western Mustangs 7-0 in a close and hard-fought contest that saw only one touchdown scored. The win keeps Blues in the running for the Yates cup, and coupled with Queen's 15-0 win over McGill puts them in a second place tie with the Redmen. A sunny day came up for the game, and a capacity crowd of 21,000 were kept on the edge of their seats till the last play was completed.

Blues Score

The Blues blanked the Mustangs with a touchdown and two singles in a game which featured long marches by both teams and staunch stands by defending teams in their own goal lines which kept the scoring totals in the lower figure. Both lines played exceptionally hard and held well in the tight spots. Pass defences on both sides were tight, and notable was the effectiveness of the Varsity aerial defence which seemed to be their downfall in the first meeting at Western.

The lone major of the contest came in the first period when Mustang plunging half Blake Taylor fumbled after picking up nine yards on his own 14 yard line.

See Pages 3 and 8 For More Pictures Showing How We Walloped Western Saturday Afternoon

Jack Kelly, Varsity quarter, recovered Taylor's untimely bobble and Tony Cecutti circled the left end for five yards. Bruce Cummings tossed to Jack Gray for about eight yards, Gray stepping out of touch on the one yard line. Cecutti was again called upon and delivered the extra yard for the Varsity touchdown right through the middle of the line. Bell's convert attempt was blocked.

Brown's March

Prior to the Varsity TD Dick Brown led a march down to the Western 12 yard marker but the Blues were unable to capitalize until Taylor's miscue. Brown started off with a fake pass which evolved into a neat twenty yard run. He then passed to Bell for another fifteen, following this with a twelve yard advance along the ground ending up on the Western 12. Here Varsity relinquished possession for failure to make yards.

Western came to life near the end

Night Vigil At Stadium Fun But Quiet

"Command to Stadium. Command to Stadium. Dawn is breaking, time is seven-thirty, and no activity at Royal York Hotel. Will now secure."

With this final message the defense corps at the Varsity Stadium turned off their radio sets and began the job of dismantling the intricate system of defense that had enabled a crew of thirty men to squelch all Western efforts to invade the rugby field.

New Turn Up

Severely handicapped by a lack of manpower, Blue and White Defense Chairman Terry Jaeger upheld the honor of U. of T. Instead of the hundred or more men who had promised to come for the night only thirty arrived at the Stadium

Using three ears as spotters, all equipped with two-way radios, and maintaining a control post in the Press Box inside the Stadium, it was possible for the handful of men to do the work of twice their number.

There was no mass attack, and the scattered forays were easily repulsed. At no time was there more attackers than defenders, and when they were spotted by one of the roving cars they were approached and told the cause was lost. This technique worked well, and not one of the Westerners tried to get inside the Stadium.

Most From Trinity

The main band of men who turned up were from Trinity. They came supplied with a car and stayed the whole night. There were some from UC, some from Vic, and four others were from Skule.

The radios were from COTC

Many Grads Came Officials State Deny Tely View

The University of Toronto Homecoming weekend was a success for alumni said campus officials yesterday. This is contrary to the impression that the Homecoming program was more for undergrads than grads given Saturday by Dorothy Howarth of The Telegram in her article on Friday night's activities.

Grads joined undergrads on Saturday to line the streets along the route of the float parade. Then at the game, that wonderful game, ushers report that enthusiastic grads packed the covered stands to capacity.

The campus Roam Around and dance at the Royal York were largely attended by undergrads but grads turned out at the three Blue and White shows presented in Convocation Hall on Saturday evening.

Atomic Energy Authority Installed As SPS Dean

Sooner or later all our useful fuel will be consumed and we will be forced to fall back on our primary energy source. This was the prediction made by Dean Tupper as he was formally installed as the new dean of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering Friday.

"It is a question of time when the fuel supplies run out," said Dean Tupper, "and we will have to rely on substitute fuels to take their place; among them are atomic energy and solar energy."

He went on to add that many new substitute materials will be needed in the field of chemistry as the natural reserves of the earth are steadily used up and recovery costs go up. Cheaper synthetic materials will eventually replace metallic materials, and the qualities of these plastics will become better as time goes on.

Dean Tupper is one of Canada's leading authorities on atomic energy and jet propulsion, and he comes to the University from Chalk River where he had been director of the engineering department division of the Atomic Energy Project since February, 1947.

Dean Tupper graduated in Mechanical Engineering at the University of Toronto in 1929, and later took his Master's degree in aeronautical engineering at the University of Michigan He worked on various assignments for the National Research Council over a 15 year period. During the war he spent much time in England on jet propulsion projects. He has helped design the construct the Aeronautical Research Laboritories at Ottawa and had charge of the Model Testing Basin doing experimental work on aircraft floats and ship hulls.

Architects Best Float

Only One Missing Was Santa

Architecture's "Train of Tomorrow" clanked and tooted away with the Alumni Shield for the best float in the Homecoming Week-end Parade Saturday morning. Exuding violent color, imagination, smoke, soapsuds, beer and coconut cake, more than 30 floats and "exhibits" representing most of the faculties and colleges, made wild confusion in the traffic near the parade route.

Headed by a car containing Miss Red Feather Marjorie Erskine, followed by the Blue and White band, the line of floats wound along Bloor St. from Devonshire Place to Yonge, down Yonge to College, along College to the front Campus circle. On the University College front steps, President Sidney Smith officiated as judge and awarded the prize plaque to bearskin-coated Ian McClennan, train brakeman.

steam whistle blowing constantly; a smoking-car full of cigar-store Indians, a sleeper with newlywed couple, and an observation car equipped with several fur-coated explorers. A full compartment of engineers and brakemen completed the train.

Last year's winner, Forestry, squirted spectators and other floats generously in their demonstration of fire-fighting, without a fire.

An air of gravity accompanied the second-place winner, Trinity's beer-wagon turned into a graveyard. Six draught-horses pulled the depiction of the burial of a Western player, complete with clergymen, coffin, church steeple, and gravediggers. A bevy of Saints from St. Hilda's followed in the wake incanting and intoning with appropriate solemnity.

Self-Annilihation

Under the headline "Schools of Corruption", The Telegram editorial last Saturday expressed disapproval of the fact that existing laws in this country apparently do not permit any branch of government to take legal action against those in charge of the sixteen Communist schools in Toronto.

An honest attempt to analyze the grounds for The Telegram's complaint seems to show that it based on two points.

First, the editorial writer does not believe that a criminal act must be committed before action is taken. Criminal intention is as punishable as criminal execution, he implies. "Yet the law awaits an overt act. Declared, avowed intention is not enough. Communists teach and preach 'that their ends can be attained only by the forcible overthrow of all existing social conditions.' Or in the face of a challenge to its existence is it a tenet of democracy that those who propose to wreak its destructioin should have the freedom to pursue their purpose until they endeavor to achieve it?"

Second, the writer believes that legislation can do what others cannot. "That an idea of evil can be successfully combatted by the mere passive preachment of an idea of good was not the experience of countries where democracy suffered under the attacks of Nazism and Fascism. Only when democracy stood armed did it survive and conquer its enemies.

"The government has enacted legislation banning 'crime comics' which do damage merely to the individual. It can hardly afford to remain inactive where across the country, schools of corruption seek to pervert the youth of the land in a movement aimed at the widespread achievement of a vicious idea."

That avowed criminal intention should be punishable seems at first glance to make sense. Putting such proposal into action, in this case, is self-annilihation. We could defeat the Communits, it is true. But it is also true that in doing so we would destroy democracy and could end up with fascism, much in the way that some say the United States is doing.

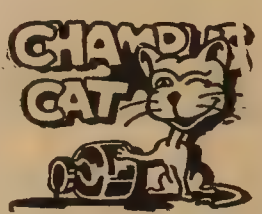
That legislation can do what ideas cannot doesn't even seem to make sense at first glance. Further, that an idea cannot combat an idea is an absurdity. The Telegram writer perhaps is correct when he says "the mere passive preachment" of an idea of good cannot overcome an idea of evil. But that's twisting words. The active living out of the best ideas on which our democracy is founded, and the replacing of not so good ideas with better ones is the way to man's highest goal. Legislation may be a supplement, but thought and action provide the real benefits.

Saints and Sinners

The Western week-end at Toronto is over. The invading Western fans have gone back to London carrying with them a victory to soften the blow of their courageous team's defeat. The Royal York Hotel reports no disturbances. Varsity Stadium was not attacked last Friday night. No attempt was made to remove the goalposts from Varsity's end of the field after the game. The attitude of the Western supporters, generally speaking, was congenial. There was, of course, friendly rivalry; but the emphasis was on the "friendly".

We do not mean to reproach Varsity rooters for last week's fracas. We've done that. The students here at Varsity met the Western fans' congeniality and matched it.

Hats off to all concerned!



Quiet Weekend

Tonight is the eve of All Saints' Day. That is, it's Hallowe'en.

Back in the days when the tradition of celebrating Hallowe'en was initiated, people forgot their cares and indulged in a little harmless revelry for an evening. Then they awakened the next morning, went to church and faithfully observed the more serious side of All Saint's day by praying according to their beliefs.

Today, in many universities and colleges, some students enroll in the course of their choice in September and plunge wholeheartedly into a mess of extra-curricular affairs. They forget their course and indulge in a little harmless revelry for a semester. Then they awake the next term and faithfully observe the more serious side of their curriculam by praying that they will pass the course they have chosen.

Cannon Back Skule Ahead By One Girl

Friday at one o'clock the Skulemen attacked UC with the intention of recapturing their cannon. They came across the Front Campus in a large force, and outnumbered the UC squad who were to fire the cannon.

After a brief skirmish in which the Skulemen used some tear-gas the cannon was seen to be carried across to SPS, where a ceremony was enacted, partly to distract attention from UC where another squad was in the process of abducting one of the UC cheerleaders.

Grab UC Girl

A car drove around the circle, and some of the occupants got out, grabbed Miss Ellis and carried her to the car despite the efforts of UC men.

Saturday the UC Lit handed out bills describing the victim as Miss Joan Ellis, including her height and weight and all the other vital statistics known about her.

Late Sunday night the UC Lit still had no information on her whereabouts. In a statement Jack Hoolihan said that the Lit was shocked at the abduction of Miss Ellis and requests her return as soon as possible.

"She is one of the leading Chorines in the UC Follies, and a cheerleader of our college. In the interests of Miss Ellis, the Follies and UC, and campus men in general we ask the Skulemen to repent and return her at once," he said. He added that UC was also perturbed at the disappearance of its Gargoyle which was to be used in the Follies along with Miss Ellis.

Skule Deny Loss

The Engineering Society has had nothing to say as yet on the abduction of Miss Ellis, but in an interview Friday after the recapture of the cannon, Paul LaPrairie, head Cannoneer again stated that the cannon had never been stolen.

UC Lit Publicity Director Bill Francis refuted the statement that the cannon had never been in UC hands. "How could we have had it engraved with the inscription 'Stolen for UC Follies Oct. 25, 1949' if we had never had it in our possession?"

The UC Lit neglected to tell the Cannoneers who took the cannon from them that it was loaded, and there is a report that one of them was slightly injured when the cannon went off while they were trying to get it into the Skule Building.

The gentleman lugging the ball is Western's ace quarterback George Arnott. Large Harry Wade (50), seems to be assisting Arnott over the prostrate form of Alex Lawson who is couchant on a field of grass. Ed Fisher, who played a terrific game at centre secondary for the Blues is moving up with an evil smile on his face and readying himself to flatten Arnott. The unidentified Western player behind Arnott appears to be gazing into the grandstand, or is he trying to interpret some signal from the despondent Western coach?

'Art Is A Healthy Business'

By HERB WOOD

We listened and talked with Hans Richter in his hotel room yesterday afternoon until the evening seeped in under the partly open window.

Mr. Richter is director-producer of the semi - surrealist movie, Dreams That Money Can Buy, showing at the Museum Theatre.

He was sitting comfortably in an easy chair with feet propped up on a foot-stool, with an empty cup and saucer beside him on the table. "Art isa very healthy business; it may be a disease, but it gets out other diseases," he said.

Modest Dresser

A painter, and producer of the first abstract film Rhythm 21, Mr. Richter didn't present the dishevelled appearance popularly connected with an artist. He was quietly but tastefully dressed with the emphasis on blue, and with carefully combed grey-ish blue hair. While in Hollywood, he developed a taste for a special brand of cigaros and now that he is away, orders them by the thousand.

Mr. Richter has no home life. He is dissolved into his work as black ink dissolves and spreads through water. He portrays himself and this very absorption in the dream Narcissus.

Movies Necessary

This surrealist approach to the movie is the greatest thing since the Renaissance for the scope of expression, he said. It is a new visual art and the field has only been scratched. However, the usual movie is very necessary. People couldn't do without them; they need consolation and help; he said.

With more enthusiasm than money, Mr. Richter and company rented the top floor in an old brownstone house in the heart of New York's garment centre. Interested people flocked to help produce the movie. These people experienced a great creative need, said Hans Richter. The only thing to live for was to be an artist.

Coal Dust Useful

Everyone helped in the washing and cleaning. Mr. Richter ironed shirts and helped build and erect the sets. Under such circumstances there was a great deal of improvisation. In the dream portraying Marcel Duchamp's Nude Descending a Staircase, anthracite dust in discs was used to cover the essential parts of the figure. "It was the handiest and at the same time it had the shiny quality necessary."

Mr. Richter has found his greatest audience among the young people. In New York, the show ran for 13 weeks, and received mixed reception. Two old ladies were heard to exclaim on leaving the theatre. "This is the damndest picture I've ever seen."

Wants Money Back

Another man half way through a showing jumped to his feet shouting, "This is all nonsense, I want my money back." The rest of the audience started a discussion in support of the show. A lively debate developed with people shouting back and forth. The picture was forgotten.

Another old lady said it was the greatest experience she had enjoyed and came back time and again.

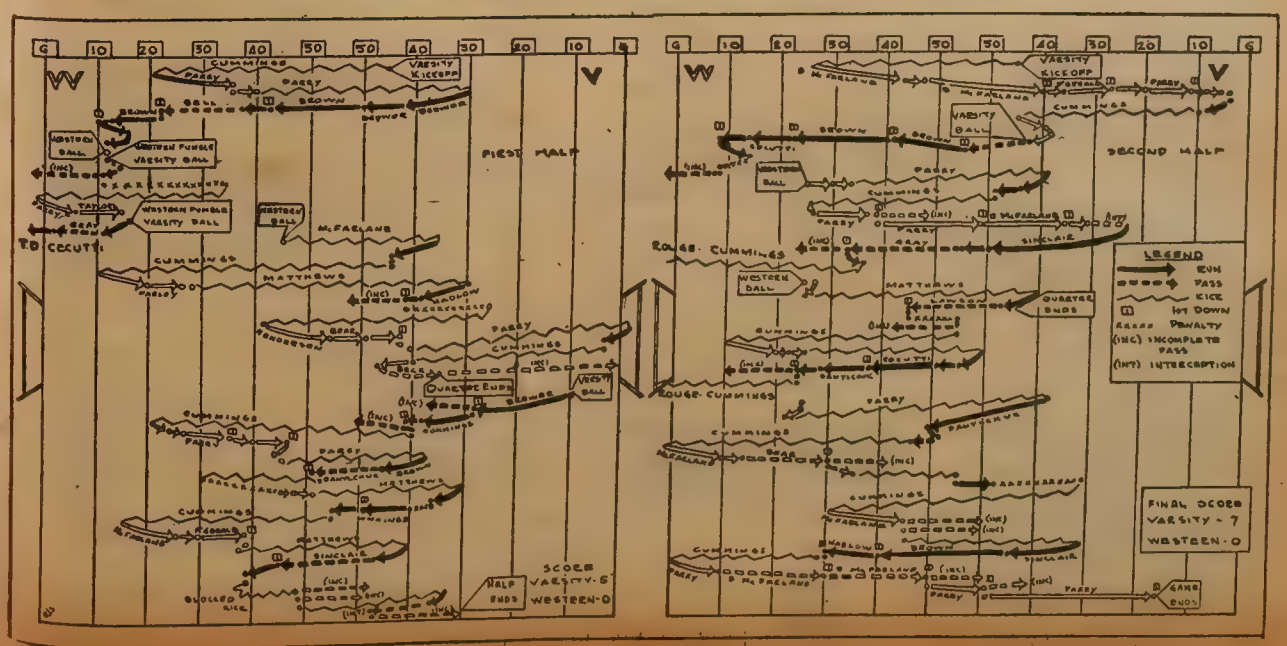
It really isn't a matter of age, and people who are not in a set pattern enjoy the movie best. They are the people who find life mysterious said Mr. Richter. That is why I am still young.

To Stand Pat As Publisher Stops Texts

Although the Macmillan Company of Canada has refused to sell the University of Toronto Press Book Store any more text books as long as the Press sells them to students at a discount, the Book Store still has a large stock of Macmillan texts, the University Press Manager Alex Rankin announced Saturday.

He said he was making the statement to make sure the students have not assumed there are no more Macmillan books because of the publisher's action.

There will be the usual discount on these books.



Comptroller R. E. Spence on Saturday expressed a hope that that the University will be able to reach a settlement with Macmillans before there is again a heavy demand for texts, next autumn.

"Since the Board of Governors has decided to allow a ten percent discount, any action of Macmillan's to prevent this leaves us no alternative but to stick to our policy," the Comptroller said. "We hope they will change their minds, but we do not intend to abandon our policy. We hope that at least by next fall, when the demand for texts will be heavy, we will have been able to clear up this situation."

Two important Macmillan texts the Book Store has not in stock are: Mackenzie's "Fundamentals of Accounting" and Lewis' "Diseases of the Heart".

Some texts still in stock are: Scott and Van Wyck's "Essentials of Obstetrics", Bailey's "Physical Signs in Clinical Surgery", Chamberlain's "Symptoms and Signs in Clinical Medicine" and Baldwin's "Dynamic Aspects of Biochemistry".

ART — MUSIC — DRAMA

Hart House Concert

When Renaissance music edited and directed by an elderly musical historian, and performed on antique instruments is presented, an air of museum mustiness usually prevails. Few concert-goers realize how thrilling and vital this music can be. We suffer from a nineteenth century complex which requires us to expect brilliant display and emotion by the shovelful. Professor Leo Smith of the Faculty of Music showed us on Sunday afternoon at Hart House that the Renaissance offers music which has retained its living qualities to the present day.

Mr. Smith opened the programme with an unaccompanied Prelude for viola da gamba by J. S. Bach. His sensitive performance brought out the many changing poetic moods of the composition, whose harmonically conceived melodic line would have sounded stilted if played in a stricter fashion. Two compositions for two trebles and gamba followed. A Fantasy attributed to Henry VIII can be described only as sublime. Elevated and detached, it gave us a subtle emotional "lift" without recourse to the sentimental. Three songs from Shakespeare's plays, arranged for four voices and gamba by Mr. Smith, while not strictly authentic, were more interesting to a modern audience, especially in the gamba accompaniment. The ensemble singing in this group and in the "Echo Duet" by John Banister was subdued and tasteful, though we felt that the gamba overbalanced the voices at times.

Radio: Stage 50

Last night CBC's "Stage 50" attempted to show the workings of a dying man's mind. The portrayal, while reaching a little far into the fantastic, still had a poignant touch of realism that left me, at least, a little shaken.

The play, "Mr. Arkularis," was a revival of Conrad Aitken's play which last year won an international award at the Oh) State Festival.

The story is that of a man who offers himself as a guinea pig in an experimental operation to cure his rare disease. The mood is effectively set by the hushed stillness of the operating room and the hypnotic voice of the doctor. Three soundings of a gong introduce the work and the living heart becomes a delicate piece of machinery under the expert hands of a master-craftsman.

A few bars of light, pleasant music provide a quick transition into the bright, sparkling weather of a rain-drenched city when the sun has come out. Mr. "A." has supposedly survived. As we later find out in a surprise ending, the events of the play take place only in the patient's mind during the operation.

From here the play reaches somewhat melodramatically into a paradise for psychoanalysts. Mr. "A." is suffering badly from a mother-fixation. First the nurse and then Mr. "A.'s" fellow-voyager aboard ship both remind him strongly of

John Ensor

The Hart House Art Gallery is exhibiting a group of water colour paintings, the work of an English artist, John Ensor. It is a relief to enter a gallery and find work with pictorial value, not of a master, but on the other hand not a miscellany of intense abstracts and paintings of "significance." With these problems out of the way, one can settle down to enjoy oneself.

Mr. Ensor is not a Canadian, but the work on display is all of subjects within the compass of modern Canadian life. War scenes, seascapes, Canadian scenery and industry are pictured, with bold strokes of clear colour. There are a few false starts, schatchy and awkward but, in contrast, there is his "Yacht Club, Ontario," a study in blue and grey, light and shadow; the richness of the foundry scenes; and what is to many of us all too familiar, "Buzz-bomb Defences," drenching rain over a gun position. In these he uses an oil technique, and uses it well. But he can also turn an art school exercise into an interesting and entertaining piece of work, as in "Oil Tanks, Alberta."

Mr. Ensor uses coloured papers with success. His white-backed work is cool and fresh, but it is work on grey, cream or blue papers that draws the eye. Here, he combines brush and pencil. There is only one sample of straight pencil work. I should like to see more, and more of his seascapes, which are full of movement.

The work is uneven, but what is good more than makes up for the occasional slip. He may not be a great artist, but is a competent one.

His remarks on his own work should be worth hearing, and on Thursday, Nov. 3, at 1:30 p.m., he is to lecture in the Hart House Art Gallery on that subject.

TSO Pops

Even with attendance cut by the Pep, the Pops did, as is their custom, what they set out to do; they played light music well. Light music you know, means non-intellectual, not unemotional. The congenial pieces played included the Stix-Ormandy Spielerie, which threatens to become as popular as Pizzicato Polka, Rossini's charming Pas de Six, and the old Liszt program-stopper, Les Preludes, whose deafening romantic climax prepared everyone for the subway construction; assuming you missed the encore which was Boccherini's Minuet. The show suffered generally from lack of chestnuts, Wagner etc., and except for the Liszt there was nothing into which the orchestra could sink their collective musical teeth.

The body of work was thrown on the strings as usual. To Holst's St. Paul's Suite, German's Henry VIII Dances and the familiar Provost Intermezzo the team responded warmly with Mr. Goodman taking special credit. No finger-crossed anticipation with Mr. Goodman. Nor with the soloist. Miss Nan Merriman, who has the richest fullest, most comfortable (mezzo) soprano voice heard here. Even with the orchestra going full tilt she commanded, the house. With her arias, O Mio Fernando and Il est doux, il est bon, she registered handsomely with compelling and resonant expression. Her pre-broadcast choice of songs was unfortunate but that in general was the evening it was. The music selected was uneven in appeal, but played and sung well, with the sobs where they belong; none in the French horns and a couple in the voice. Next week: John Knight.

Only One Missing

Skule entries added to the general lunacy of the morning. The Cannon was audible if not too visible. Geologists staked claims all along the route. The Lady Godiva Memorial Band was in loud attendance, delighting the onlookers with the best of musical variety.

St. Mike's caught all eyes with a spun-glass covered float presided over by Archangel St. Michael in shining armor. Commerce types handed out phony money in business-like fashion. Home Ec students whipped up their cake icing as they pounded onward in the parade.

One mishap was Victoria's giant replica of the Yates Cup which met resistance by trees while moving onto Avenue Road.

I WANT TO KNOW...

what type of insurance is best for me?

THAT'S THE QUESTION a DVA student who was also a father asked a Mutual Life of Canada representative. In his particular case, the Mutual agent recommended an "Ordinary Life" policy which gives the highest protection for the lowest cost of any policy with a savings feature. He also suggested a "family income" clause which, for a very small additional premium, assured the student's family a regular monthly income in the event of his death.

But in life insurance, what is best for one man may not be the answer to another's problem. Individual responsibilities, circumstances, living expenses, must all be carefully studied. Your Mutual Life agent is equipped to do this. He has been specially trained in adapting life insurance to each person's particular needs.

Take advantage of his expert counsel now. Ask him to explain the many advantages of Mutual low-cost life insurance his very pretty but wicked mother. The latter, we learn, had carried on an affair with her brother-in-law and been drowned on one of their romantic excursions.

Thanks to the expert direction of Andrew Allan, suspense is built up very skilfully and the rather fantastic events set the mood. First the steward of the ship informs his passengers and us that there is a corpse aboard. "This," he says, "is a sure indication of bad weather." Strange, too, his keys to the lower parts of the ship had disappeared. From here we are taken through a gruelling series of nightly sleep-walking and brief, somewhat more normal, glimpses of the effect of these events on the travellers and personnel of the ship.

Each night Mr. "A." dreams he is going around the star Polaris. The rhyming of this name with that of the man himself, although quite incredible, is partially explained when one remembers the queer associations the mind falls on, even in daydreams.

The purpose of these nightly promenades is apparently fixed on the coffin wherein lies the corpse. We are to suppose that when Mr. Arkularis reaches the coffin and opens it, the corpse within will be Mr. Arkularis himself.

The portrayal of the title role is done by John Drainie in his usual brilliant fashion. Mr. Drainie has that rare quality of the true actor in changing not only his inflections and characterizations, but even the tone of his voice with each new role. He is excellently supported by the other members of the cast, particularly Mona O'Hearne who plays the nurse, the mother and Miss Dean.

The play is not to be taken too seriously, for few of us spied on our mother's illicit love affairs when we were nine years of age. However, it reminds us how extraordinarily little we know of our minds, and adds another to the gallery of portrayals of a dying man's thoughts. Above all, it proves again the courage and skill of the CBC drama staff in providing us each Sunday with a solid hour of brilliant entertainment.

Movie Review

Louisiana Story

This movie has been described as the adventure story of a "Cajun Huckleberry Finn" in the bayous of Louisiana. More than this it is a drama of the highest order, which took a special prize at the Venice Biennial Exposition of Cinema Arts.

Financed by Standard Oil (whose name does not appear on the film), Robert Flaherty went on location to the Petit Anse Bayou, got to know the people, lived the experience, shot thousands of feet of film and, after careful editing, produced a beautiful movie, selective and intimate in its detail.

Excellent photography shows a wonderful feeling for sunshine and the photogenic qualities of water; for example, sunlit veils of moss on trees and bright green confetti of floating algae.

The sound track provides a sparse commentary, a brilliant score by Virgil Thomson, recorded by Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra, and long stretches of silence broken only by the noises of the action in the picture.

Actually it is difficult to speak about either the sound or photography separately because of the ingenuity with which they are dovetailed. Thomson's musical images are perfectly matched with the visual ones of the rhythmic swell of a barge's wake, the shadows of rustling grass blades on the boy's cheek, and a tug of war with an alligator.

The "actors" are ordinary people playing themselves — or rather being themselves. Advisedly, they don't say much. Consequently, they ring true. The boy (Joseph Boudreaux), unlike Bobby Henrey in "Fallen Idol," is no actor, but he's at home on the bayou and will probably arouse a nostalgia for your barefoot days. (Especially if you were brought up in a swamp.)

The boy's impressions of the drilling operation are vividly effected by a series of contrasts. The thrashing wheels of a tractor beat a path through a static field of dry reeds. A motor launch's wake swamps his dug-out canoe. A mark-in stake in the water is slowly surrounded by the reflection of the magnificent derrick which is to replace it. The boy's awe at the tower's size and strangeness is emphasized by its glitter against the night sky, his fear at its harsh might by the swinging clash of 75-foot lengths of pipe, shot from above at an angle designed to give the earth-bound a severe case of vertigo, and by a powerful close-up of the boy's bare toe curled over the cold edge of a heavy steel girder.

To say that there is never a dull moment would not be quite accurate. And if you look hard enough you may spot the technical "clinkers" that seem to be the inevitable result of shooting continuous screen action at different times and interspersing shots from different angles. But this movie could have a lot more wrong with it and still command the fussiest viewer's attention.

P.S. In case you like animals, this picture is crawling with them.

Doug Davidson.

Industrial Film Twice Weekly For Engineers

The Engineering Society will present a one hour film program twice weekly. These showings will take place in Room 1035 of the Wallberg (Chemical Engineering) building from 1 to 2 p.m. every Tuesday and Thursday.

Since there is a large number of engineering students who bring their lunches, and since there have not been very many industrial films shown, it was decided to present a program of films featuring an industrial film of general engineering interest.

In giving his consent to use the room, Professor R. R. McLaughlin said that he thought the idea was sound. He stressed the necessity of leaving the room absolutely clean as classes would be held in the room following the program of films. Students eating their lunches during the program will be required to leave the room in a clean state. Failure to meet this requirement will result in the discontinuation of the film showing.

Mac Cliff will arrange the programs and will handle the technical operation of the projector. He has had a good deal of experience in handling films and a high standard is expected.

The first program will be held on Tuesday, November 1st, at 1 p.m. The films will be: "Ski Skill," "Prescription For Rubber," and "Unlocking Canada's Treasure Trove."

VIC SPLASH PARTY

The Vic Splash Party will be held Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the Lillian Massey Pool.

grads varied. Miss Marian B. Ferguson who poured tea at the University College reception in Croft Chapter House reports that attendance was far in excess of numbers anticipated. St. Michael's open house at Brennan Hall was well attended while few guests were present at the Royal Conservatory of Music and the Engineering Building.

The best indication of the number of grads who came for Homecoming Weekend could be gained by any casual stroller on the campus. Hundreds of those who came back didn't go to the dances or shows but came back on Sunday to walk the familiar paths, listen to the chiming of the carillon and look at the buildings new and old.

of the initial quarter when a Parry to Beck pass went for sixteen yards. Parry's next attempt in the air was intercepted by Bill Brewer and Varsity took over on its own ten yard line. Brewer broke around left end, shaking the entire Western team and went all the way down the field for what looked like a touchdown. The play was called back to the Varsity 26 where it was ruled that he stepped out of touch.

The second quarter play seesawed back and forth with Varsity having a slight advantage but not enough to raise the score. Jack Kelly and Ed Fisher stood out definsively for the Blues in this period while Brown, Cummings, Danylchuk and Sinclair carried the load on the offense.

Western Threatens

Western threatened early in the third quarter when they worked the ball up to the Varsity five yard line but failed to make yards at this point. Gerry Fitzgerald made a fine run from the Varsity 39 to 26 and Bob MacFarlane brought it down to the 20. Jack Parry almost broke clear but was hauled down on the Varsity ten. Parry took a lateral and worked his way to the five. Arnott tried the same play and was stopped on the three where Varsity took over possession.

Varsity had a chance in the third quarter when Western had over twelve men on the field. They were penalized one-half the distance to the goal and the loss of one player for three minutes. Kelly was stopped on the six and Brown gambled on a last down pass which went incomplete in the end zone.

Parry and Bob MacFarlane worked the ball up to the Varsity thirty-four from where Mathews picked up four yards. Hubie Sinclair intercepted a Parry pass on his own ten and ran all the way back to the Varsity fifty where he was downed by Jack Parry. A Brown to Gray pass took the ball to the Mustang thirty-four where Cummings kicked over the goal-line and a wave of Blue tacklers stopped Henderson for a rouge.

Tony Cecutti started a fourth quarter drive with a neat twelve drive giving Varsity a first down on the Western 36. Danylchuk and Cummings combined for another first down from where Bruce booted to the deadline for the final Varsity single.

Last Minute Drive

With about three minutes to go Jack Parry passed to Bill Ford for twenty yards. Bob MacFarlane picked up another twenty yards off the arm of Jack Parry setting the ball on the Mustang fifty. The same pass play this time to George Arnott just missed, as Arnott missed what looked for sure like a touchdown pass. Parry elected to run and got down to the Varsity 48 where Ed Fisher knocked down another Parry pass. On the last play of the game, Parry unable to find a receiver ran through the broken field and got as far as the Varsity fifteen where he was pushed out of bounds.

Bruce Cummings and Dick Brown proved to be fine running-mates as their combined efforts and those of the terrific Varsity line wrapped up the game on the offense. Kelly and Fisher were outstanding in the tackling department as was Pete Bennett. Parry and Bob MacFarlane along with Gerry Fitzgerald excelled in the Western backfield while Reg. Ort, Elmer Quintyn and George Wearring were the standouts on the purple front wall.

although he won't admit it) had plenty to do with the win. The boys themselves played great ball; Western had one goal-plated scoring chance on Varsity's four, but after holding for two downs, the Blue line smashed through to nail Western for a loss.

Sure, the Blues were lucky; they recovered all of their own fumbles and some of Western's too. But if they weren't on the ball every second, it would have been Western that was lucky. And anyhow, the Mustangs were pretty lucky too, as when Brewer was running for a major only to be called back because he was one inch out of touch.

Everbody played well, but we think that Ed "Let's-Have-A-Song" Fisher deserves special commendation. Fisher played most of the game with an extemely painful hip, but turned in a wonderful performance. The Blues were a very, very tired lot near the end of the game, and if it had gone two more minutes, might have lost.

When Parry started completing those last minute passes, we knew the Blues had won. Varsity then figured "Let him complete the passes, but don't let a man get between us and the goal line." That, my friends, is why Western could make those long gains at the end of the game, and not earlier. Anyhow, a loud and resounding Rah! for the Blues.

part of the game, but when the Knox men got organized the game was in the bag. Wally Welch scored the first goal following a nice passing routine up the field. Bill Belch tallied in another quick goal in a standout passing play. The Knox team had it all over the Dents in team work, and were in scoring position again and again. The general opinion seems to be that team work and sportsmanship were lacking. After all it is just a game of soccer — not life and death odds.

Clowns, Cops, Float Provide Game Color

Color? Yes Sir! Great gobs of it. Saturday was one of the most colorful days in the Toronto year, and Varsity put on a wonderful show that started in the morning and ended when the goal posts were carted away by Varsity men for safe-keeping. A float parade, half time acts, chariot races, and the usual quota of gals and bands made it a day to remember.

Varsity did a repeat on their card trick of last year (which Western copied) doing it better than ever. It was really striking, what with the changing colors and all. The Architects had their prize-winning float at the game and exhibited it in all its glory. It was just about the biggest thing put on a rugby field for the entertainment of the spectators, and was it ever funny!

Students got a preview of the coming chariot race when two teams of charioteers raced down the field, but it was declared no contest. One of the chariots (?) turned over and dumped its driver. Nothing serious, though. The chariots were attended by a congregation of cops, clowns, and assorted personnel that made the football game into more of a circus than anything else.

The Varsity band gave out with the story of their life in pantomime, ending with a red-hot display of stick and torso swinging by Stella. And you should have seen the photographers snapping her as she twirled! There must have been a hundred of them in front of her, with more running up. Three new red-clad majorettes were introduced, and will be a part of the Blue Band from now on. Ver-r-r-y pretty!

But the joint was really packed, and if one more person had tried to get in, they would have had to use a shoe horn. Western students crowded the north end, but failed to get the goal posts. They didn't even put up a fight for them. Several Westerners got the cross-bar on the undefended south posts, but were soon dispatched by Varsityites and the posts taken into storage for the McGill game next week.

SPS Take Trinity Move Into First After 7-1 Win

In the only scheduled football encounter on the back campus Friday night Junior SPS eased past Trinity by the score of 7-1. The game was closely contested with neither team having any marked advantage. Buck Rogers, for Trinity, kicked the only point for the Crumpeteers. Wardrop and Hogg played brilliantly for Trinity as did Sparling and Macintosh.

Mowatt of Skule got a major for his team in the first half that was not converted. Both Buck and Prendergast kicked singles in the second half to account for the total. The win put Skule in first place in Group Two with six points.

Line-ups:

Jr. Skule

Halves, Beattie, Perry, Campbell. Kerr; Q.B., Cohen; ends, Wansborough, Stoyan; middles, Royce, Hotchkiss; insides, Riddell, Slattery; centre, Fleury. Alternates: Laubitz, Prendergast, Pullan, Carr, Mowatt, Bush, Barnhardt, Macpherson, Dimock, Mulrhead, Snider, Brown.

Trinity

Halves, White, Hunt, Linklater, Skibner; Q.B., Gledhill; ends, Hall, Macintosh; middles, Wardrop, Meredith; insides, T. Thompson, M. Thompson; centre, Scrivener. Alternates: McCarter, Sparling, Macdonald, Beattie, Rogers, Hogg, Leischman, Andison, McLaughlin, Bell, Greey, Griffiths.

McTier Trophy To Wanderers In Rugger Game

By ALEC DOUGLAS

Toronto Wanderers won on penalties and injuries last Saturday as they converted two penalties and Varsity scored through a sixty yard run by Jack Gibbs. Collecting a fumble by Wanderers' fast right wing, "Rory" Grant, Gibbs beat his man and ran around the opposing full-back giving Varsity three valuable points. Don Glen was injured in the first moments of the game and was carried off. Later Varsity lost Cavallini but managed to hold off several dangerous and powerful attacks with two men short.

Grand Spirit

There was grand spirit throughout the game on both teams but Toronto's mistakes were their undoing. Time after time penalties were given to the city club within scoring distance, when Varsity kept picking up the ball in the scrum—a direct infringement of the rules which is easily avoided. Don Anderson, replacing Glen as full-back, played a very steady game, and saved at least one "try" (touchdown) by his spectacular tackling. Toronto's back line played magnificently in the face of heavier opposition, but the presence of the captain, Glen, was sorely missed. The extra man would have given Varsity, strong even without this support, the necessary advatnage to overwhelm Wanderers' weaker defence. As usual Wanderers' scrum never ceased to drive against their lighter opponents and will be the deciding factor in the semi-finals at Montreal. We wish them the best of luck . . . but next year they will need more than that.

Interfaculty Action In Lacrosse, Soccer

Lacrosse

In one of the hardest fought lacrosse games seen at Hart House this year, UC II and Meds II battled to a five all tie. The game was marked with intense rivalry which was revealed by the number of penalties handed out. Shepherd of UC played a stalwart game but had the misfortune of dislocating a couple of fingers, after he had scored one goal. Cummings got two for the winners and Keigan and Stuckey tallied one each.

Cosens and Allen led the Meds scorers with two each with Gabe Varga netting the remaining goal.

Western Outclassed 7-1 In Senior Soccer Game; Seconds Win Easily 3-0

By BILL LEACH

Senior Game

Brian Barton and Bob Antoni were two names that spelt trouble to the Western Senior Soccer team here Saturday. Between them these two boys scored five goals, as the Varsity squad coasted to a 7-1 victory over the gallant Mustangs. Western only managed to score from a penalty awarded for hands, and they were somewhat fortunate to get such a lucky break.

The outstanding factor of the bright game was the sportsmanship of the Western team as a whole, and praise is due to Ref. Bobby Aulds for his fine handling of the match. Only a handful of frees were awarded, and the entire game was a treat to watch. Western were completely outplayed and outclassed, but kept on trying the whole time. One goal down after two minutes of play, and 4-0 after 25 minutes, Gillespie, stalwart of the Western defence, was heard to comment how good it was to play against such a wonderful team.

Barton Brilliant

Barton was indeed brilliant as his three goals would indicate. He proved to be the dynamo of the finest offensive machine yet to be seen in Intercollegiate competition. Antoni played a great game, as did Wyler and Kuchkuda. If we hesitate to mention others that is only because such mention must include the whole team, as each and all were brilliant.

The scorers, in order, were Barton, Kuchkuda, Barton, Antoni, Barton, Antoni, Wyler. Most of the goals came as a result of smooth inter-passing by the whole forward line, splitting the Western defence wide open. An exception was the fifth, when Barton trapped a clearance from the Western goalie and booted it home from thirty yards before anyone could blink an eyelash.

The chief criticism which could be made of the Varsity team is that they inclined to dribble at times when a quick pass would have been more effective; this was particularly true in the second half, Kuchkuda being the chief offender, with Barton being not entirely free of guilt. However, although they had consolation from a well-taken penalty goal, Western were not in the same class as a Varsity team whose forward line was artistic and incisive.

Intermediate Game

The Varsity Intermediate Soccer Blues chalked up their second victory of the season when they defeated the Western Intermediates 3 nil on Saturday morning.

The game was a one-sided affair and the Blues kept the ball in the opponents' area for practically the whole game. As a result, the Blues goal-keeper and backs were spectators for the duration of the game. Throughout play the Blues' halves kept their forwards well supplied with passes, besides putting up an impregnable defence. In this respect Moffat and Schuler were particularly outstanding.

The first half was one of lost opportunities. The Blues' forwards after repeatedly reaching within shooting range of Western's goal did everything else but score. The majority of their goal-ward movements were climaxed with either inaccurate or tame shots. About ten minutes before lemon-time, however, a scorcher from Rigabert was intercepted by Krayacick's hands and a penalty was awarded the Blues. Broadhurst took the spot-kick and scored with a high shot which grazed the roof of the cross-bar before entering the nets.

New Life Infused

In the second half new life was infused into the Blues' forward line, Hornby replacing Wilson on the right wing and Oschaduk replacing dos Santos at inner right. This change proved effective as five minutes after the resumption of play, Rigabert converted with a well-placed header from a corner-kick by Hornby on the right flank.

The Blues' halves defied the Western attack to cross the centre of the field and actually ventured into the Western territory to take shots at their goal. Delfosse registered the third item with a well-placed "bullet" from a high pass by Hornby about midway in the session. The Blues kept up their relentless attack but failed to capitalize on the several goal-scoring opportunities that came their way. The game thus ended with the score 3-0 in favour of the Blues.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

Not even one single little point did they get! Bob Masterson must have really tightened up the Blues' defence formations. Anyhow, the Blues have again bolted their membership in the "Murdered by Metras" Club and we hear they are forming a club of their own. Get the hint, Hunt? (Ed. note: Don Hunt is the sports editor of our Western contemporary. He made a big thing out of the Blues' loss in London, playing up Western's MBM Club)

The Blues had their whole pile riding on this game, and they threw a natural—7-0. As a matter of fact, the Varsity sports machine was raking in pots all over the place over the week-end; and Western was the heavy loser. The intermediate soccer squad trounced Western 3-0, and the senior boot-it boys followed suit with a 7-1 varnishing when they showed the Purple-and-Whiters how to play soccer.

Thursday night our rugby intermediates got rolling to smear McMaster 17-1; and just to make it a clean sweep, Varsity's Harrier Team snatched the intercollegiate harrier championship at the University of Buffalo. What a week-end! Our fingernails will never be the same!

The Big Blues' win does not surprise us; we had confidence in the team and in the coach. But they sure fooled others. London, Jones, Chorestecki, McFadden, and Stevenson, all regulars, were not dressed. The majority of the rest had injuries of varying degrees; the club was patched up and the positions were shuffled up. The Mustangs, on the other hand, were at top strength, and were in perfect shape. All this led people to give Varsity a small chance, but the Blues came through.

Bob Masterson said "The boys did it; they played like a real ball club, and they played football every second of the time they were out there." We think that Bob's coaching

Nice Straight-Arm!

Our favourite photog must like following the fortunes of Dick Brown because here is a shot similar to the one taken in London a week ago. You can easily see the determination written on Dick's face as he carefully tries to re-arrange the features of Western's George Arnott. This was only one of many spectacular runs made by Brown.

Sportswoman

This week sees softball semi-final games, basketball, swimming tryouts and practices, as well as splash parties for various faculties.

The ground hockey struggle between McMaster and Varsity Saturday morning ended in a tie with the score 1-1. Practices for all ground hockey players will be tomorrow and Thursday at 8:00 on Trinity field to get ready for the game this Friday with Havergal College.

There is an urgent call for more swimmers at the trials and practices today, Wednesday and Thursday. This applies to both intramural and intercollegiate sections of the sport.

Those who have not turned out as yet will be interested in the following schedule:

UTS pool:
5:30—Intercollegiate speed.
6:30—Intercollegiate diving. Intramural style.
7:30—Intramural speed and diving.
Lillian Massey pool:
6:30—Intramural synchronized.
7:30—Intercollegiate synchronized.

The Intramural Meet will be held on Wednesday, November 16. All anyone wanting to compete should turn out to at least 5 of the remaining 7 practices.

Another reminder is the big Splash Party that will be held tomorrow night in the LM pool.

St. Mike's whipped P.H.E. 16-7 plus, in a very one-sided game on Friday. The Saints' walk-away was so complete that they batted only three innings, while the muscle gals batted a fourth to no avail.

The St. Mike's teamwork was terrific, but they'll need it next week, when they meet Vic I, runners-up in League I.

LPP Forum On US Trial No Decision

Pros and cons of the recent trial of U.S. Communist leaders were expressed at the LPP Forum yesterday in University College, on the topic: "Should we protest the trial of American Communists?"

Charging the recent trial as "unfair and unjust," forum chairman Norm Endicott, IV Philosophy, suggested as reasons: the jury was hand-picked, and at least two jury members admitted prejudiced opinion against the defendants. Endicott also stated bail is being refused while an appeal is pending, and several of the defence lawyers have been jailed for contempt of court.

Communists At Fault

"Communists bring this trouble themselves by continuing to advocate such measures as overthrow of governments by force and violence," said another forum member.

Keith Davey, Graduate Studies, said the trial brought forth definite evidence that American Communists consider use of force in political controversy possible and under certain conditions desirable.

Communists do not advocate the attempt of a minority group to force opinions on others, another speaker protested. "It would be sheer suicide for a small minority of Communists to do this." He said Canadian Communists would work for a majority following.

An American student pointed out Communists have been brought to trial in the U.S. before this, but were acquitted; the only reason he could see for the change was a lack of desire on the part of the authorities concerned to see justice done now.

Dictatorship of Majority

"Did Marx advocate a dictatorship of the proletariat?" it was asked. The democratic system is a dictatorship of the majority, according to a remark made in answer.

Why did the American government put the Communists on trial? The intention, suggested chairman Endicott, was to intimidate the mass of party followers; the result of the trial means any Communist in the U.S. is legally punishable for his political beliefs.

Differing from this view, another speaker said the American people and government were genuinely afraid that the Communist Party would seek to overthrow the lawful government.

Christmas Exams Out President Announces At U of New Brunswick

Fredericton, Oct. 24—(CUP)—The University of New Brunswick has announced that Christmas Examinations in all full year subjects will be cancelled. Reasons given for this departure from previous years were that Christmas exams cut two full weeks off teaching schedules; that "Cramming" would be cut down; and finally "one of the main tasks of the student is to learn to work and think independently, not for the sake of passing examinations", according to a statement issued by the University President, A. W. Trueman.

The Brunswickian, undergrad newspaper, has just completed a poll that shows 71% of the students are against the abolition of Christmas examinations.

Manitoban Refutes Ban On German Exchanges By Dominion Government

University of Manitoba (CUP) Oct. 21.—One of the highlights of the Student's Council meeting was the resolution by Murray Smith, editor of the undergrad newspaper "The Manitoban", to the effect that NFCUS be asked to approach the Dominion government on the question of removing the ban preventing the entrance of German students on exchange study plans. Canada is the only western country which has such a ban.

What! No Anaesthetic!

The Medical Society contribution to the Blue and White show held in Convocation Hall on Saturday night was in pantomime, luckily for the patient who wasn't there. Picture shows the over-enthusiastic "surgeon" performing a delicate operation and removing a goodly portion of the sound entrails of the "patient" in the process.

Abductors To Return Coed Blonde Enjoys Capture

UC cheerleader Joan Ellis who disappeared last Friday noon will be released today at one o'clock it was announced last night in a statement from Skule.

"Due to the fact that Skule does not want to put a crimp in an already seriously crimped show by retaining one of their Follines we have decided to return the Goll and Gargoyle at 1:00 p.m. on Tuesday across the front campus. The ceremony should be colorful and unique.

"The Goll has been a model prisoner according to her thoroughly respectable captors and is enthusiastic about her treatment from the engineers. She claims to be very fortunate in having been the one selected for the 'ordeal'."

This statement was signed by the Publicity Director for the Engineering Society, Barney Warren, and came as a follow-up of a previous release received Sunday night.

The earlier release was confined to corrections of the statistics given in the handbill distributed by the UC Lit. The new figures were taken to three-place accuracy, and included a comprehensive study of the freckles on Miss Ellis.

A telegram from Art Whaley, I UC, was received on Sunday evening. "Am thoroughly disgusted", it read, "by Skule tactics. They kidnapped my date for rugby and roamaround. Spent week end waiting and hunting for Skule to give her up, even had to go to Casino instead of Saturday night dance. Please help

St. Mike's Students Ask Professor Ban On Macmillan Texts

St. Michael's College students have recommended through their Students Administrative Council that the College faculty "be advised to remove from reading lists as far as possible all Macmillan books and that (the College) take any further action it deems fitting to support the policy of the University book store."

Promises Support

In reply to this request from St. Mike's SAC President Dave Quigley, Rev. L. J. Bondy, Superior of the College, wrote: "We shall do all we can to support the University in this matter."

When asked in an interview yesterday to explain what his college's policy would be, Father Bondy said: "I expect that all the colleges will work together under President Smith in this matter."

The students' action is a result of the recent announcement that the Macmillan Company of Canada refuses to sell any more texts to the University of Toronto Press Book Store if they are to be sold at a discount to the students. The Toronto Committee of the National Federation of Canadian University Students is studying the situation. The Committee works under the University SAC.

The St. Mike's students voted Thursday to have Quigley send their request to the College authorities.

Explains Request

Quigley wrote:

"As a result of the stand taken by the Macmillan Company in regard to stopping the supply of its books to the University Book Store, until its policy of a ten per cent discount on all student books is rescinded, we recommend that the faculty of St. Michael's College be advised to remove from reading lists as far as possible all Macmillan books, and take any further action it deems fitting to support the policy of the University Book Store.

"The ten per cent reduction was a benefit to all students, and we feel that its policy of continuing the discount despite the action of this company has the interest of the students at heart, and deserves the full support of the St. Michael's Faculty and Students."

Queen's Opens Student Union Cost $850,000

Kingston.—(CUP)—Queen's showed that they are ahead of Varsity in one respect at least when Viscount Alexander officially opened the new Student Memorial Union at Kingston on Sunday morning. The opening of the Union was the climax of a red-letter week for the Gaels, as the rugby team defeated the promising McGill redmen 15-0, and the University conferred an Honorary Degree of Doctor of Laws on the Rt. Hon. Philip Noel-Baker, British secretary of state for commonwealth relations.

The new Union, completed this fall at a cost of $850,000, is a grey limestone building built on Gothic lines and four storeys high. Dedicated to the 362 Queen's men killed in the two world wars, it was made possible partly by subscriptions and partly by the $3,000,000 public campaign for Queen's.

Viscount Alexander was greeted by Principal Wallace, Chancellor C. A. Dunning, and J. M. Macdonnell, M.P., chairman of the Queen's board of trustees. After a short reception His Excellency unveiled the bronze memorial tablet in the main hall of the Union, and later he also unveiled several oil paintings depicting typical men and women of the Canadian Armed Forces by Marion Long of Toronto. These paintings hang in a memorial room of the Union. The distinguished visitor toured the new building before returning to Ottawa.

Trinity, UC And St. Mike's To Stage Plays Tonight

The U. of T. Drama Committee will present its first bill of non-competitive plays tonight at 8:15 in Hart House. The first bill is presented by Trinity, University College and St. Michael's College.

Trinity will stage "Eros at Breakfast", University College offers "Love of Annunciatta" and St. Mike's will complete the bill with a comedy of Mexico "Sunday Costs Five Pesos".

The past history of the Drama Committee promises that this evening of plays will be well worth attending. Since 1936 when the Cody Award was offered as an incentive to the colleges to put on plays of hight artistic and enthertainment calibre, the art colleges have yearly produced three bills of one act plays. Last year, with the expiration of the Award, it was decided that the standard of undergraduate stagework was high enough to no longer require the competitive stimulus.
